THE PREFACE TO THE READER.

COURTEOUS READER,

THough what I offer to thy peruſal is the reſult of fifteen years ſtudy, yet have I found it deficient in two things eſpecially;

1. In an exact and particular account of all the places mentioned in this commentary, and eſpecially in the acts of the apoſtles; and this defect I have endeavoured to ſupply by a map of them drawn by a kind friend of great ability in thoſe matters, and by an alphabetical table of them, with ſome brief remarks, relating chiefly to the New Teſtament.

And finding a chronology of the New Teſtament done to my hand by a very exact and learned prelate of our church, from which my commentary no where differs; I have added that alſo for the reader's uſe.

2. Whereas it may be deemed a defect in this commentary, that I have ſaid nothing of the two great controverſies concerning the genealogy of St Luke:

1. Whether Cainan did originally belong to it, or indeed ought to do ſo?

2. Whether St Luke intended there to give us the genealogy of Joſeph from Nathan, as St Matthew had given it from his brother Solomon, or rather the genealogy of the Virgin Mary from her father Heli, as is of late imagined?

I do ingenuouſly confeſs, with (a) Venerable Bede, that I declined theſe controverſies, and more eſpecially the firſt, propter ingenii tarditatem, for I had ſeen this controverſy handled with exact judgment, and great variety of learning, by the Reverend Dr Mills upon the place; and knowing that I muſt not be permitted to blow upon his book, I deſpaired of doing it ſo well as he hath done, and ſo declined the doing it at all, till that very valuable book ſhould be made public; which being not yet done, I ſhall preſent the reader with my preſent thoughts upon the two forementioned queſtions.

1. "Whether Cainan was originally in the genealogy of St Luke, or ought to be accounted a part of it?" and becauſe the deciſion of this queſtion depends much upon another, whether this Cainan (who is not to be found in the Hebrew copies, either in the 10th or 11th chapters of Geneſis, or in 1 Chron. 1. or in any of the Jewiſh Targums, or owned by any Jewiſh writer of that time) was to be found in the exacteſt copies of the ſeventy interpreters from the beginning, or rather was wanting in the firſt and the beſt copies of the Septuagint, as well as in all Hebrew copies? I ſhall begin with the diſcuſſion of that controverſy. And that he was not originally there, or was deſignedly put in there, will be made probable from theſe conſiderations.

1. That Joſephus declares that Sem had only five ſons, (Σὴμ πέντε γίνονται παῖδες, Antiq. l. 1. c. 7.), and not ſix, as he muſt have had, if Cainan were his ſon. He adds, that (b) Abraham was the tenth from Noah; and that Beroſus, who lived before the ſeventy interpreters, ſpake of him as of one born (c) δεκάτῃ γενεᾷ, in the tenth generation from the flood. Eupolemus in (d) Euſebius aſſerts the ſame thing; and (e) Philo adds, that as Noah was the tenth from Adam, ſo Abraham was δέκατος, the tenth from Noah; whereas if Cainan be to be reckoned betwixt Arphaxad and Salah, Abraham muſt be the eleventh generation from the flood. Whence it is eaſy to collect, that neither the Jews of Jeruſalem, nor of Alexandria, though they uſed the Greek verſion, owned this Cainan; but, by their received computation that Abraham was the tenth from Noah, and was born 292 years after the flood, muſt exclude him: and that, ſeeing both Philo and Joſephus uſually follow the Septuagint in other matters, and yet ſo plainly depart from them in this, we have cauſe to believe, that they who thought this Cainan was not to be inſerted betwixt Arphaxad and Salah, found him not ſo inſerted in the exacteſt copies of the Septuagint, or knew that he was put in by deſign.

2. The Chronicon of Euſebius gives a particular account of the ſons of Sem from Africanus, from the Septuagint, and from the Samaritan tranſlation, and this account runs thus, (f) Arphaxad being 135 years old, ſay Africanus and the Septuagint, 130 ſaith the Samaritan tranſlation, begat Sala. And (g) Theophilus, who underſtood only Greek, and ſo muſt have his account from the Septuagint, ſays, Arphaxad being 135 years old, ἐγέννησε Σαλλὰ, begat Sala, taking no notice of Cainan in the Greek, though he is inſerted into the Latin tranſlation: whence alſo we may reaſonably infer, that Theophilus, Africanus, Euſebius, living among the Jews, the one at Antioch, the ſecond at Nicopolis, the third at Cæſarea in Paleſtine, either found him not in the exacter copies of the Septuagint, or found reaſon to believe he ſhould not have been there. Moreover, St Jerom, in his book of (h) Hebrew traditions, ſaith, "The ſons of Sem were Elam, Aſſur, Ar-"phaxad, Lud, and Aram, and that Arphaxad begat Sala," making no mention of Cainan: whence alſo I infer, he either did not find him in the Septuagint, or thought he ſhould not have been there, but rather, that as the Septuagint added ſo many hundred years to the account which Moſes had given of the age of the world before and after the flood, ſo alſo did they deſignedly add this Cainan to ſwell up the account, and make it to accord the better with the large computations given of it by the Egyptians and Chaldeans. Add to this,

3. That as this Cainan is not to be found in all the Old Teſtament, either in the Targums, or in any verſion beſides that of the Septuagint, nor in the Samaritan, the Vulgar, the Syriac, or Arabic; ſo neither is he to be found in the recapitulation of theſe genealogies, 1 Chron. 1. in any copies of the Septuagint, ſave only that of Alexandria: now, if the authors of theſe verſions had believed that Moſes had put in this Cainan in Geneſis, why do they always leave him out, both there and in this recapitulation? And why is he left out in the tranſlation of the Septuagint in this recapitulation? This, as it ſeems to intimate, that the tranſlation of this recapitulation was made by another hand from that which gave us the Greek verſion of the five books of Moſes, ſo alſo to confirm the truth of the remark made by (i) Procopius Gazæus, that the Hebrew hath it thus, "Arphaxad begat Sala," and that quæ deinde in medio ponuntur obeliſco notata viſuntur, "the "Cainan put between them in ſome copies of the Septuagint, was marked with an obeliſk," or with a note of reprobation.

Now, hence it follows, that St Luke could have no reaſon to inſert this Cainan into his genealogy, becauſe he found it in the Septuagint, it being not found in the Samaritan verſion, though it follows the Septuagint in ſpeaking of the age of Araphaxad, Sala, and others, before they begat children, nor in the copies of the Septuagint owned by Philo or Joſephus, who follow them in other matters, and being noted with a mark of reprobation, where it was found, to intimate that it was deſignedly put in by them.

But then the Jews muſt have had a conſiderable objection againſt the veracity of St Luke, had he ſo plainly added to their ſcriptures, and their moſt ancient Targums, and their received genealogies, which ſurely muſt agree with their own ſcriptures. And ſeeing neither the Alexandrian Jews, nor their own prieſt Joſephus, nor any other Jew we read of, owned this Cainan in our Saviour's days, it muſt be a great ſtumbling-block to them to ſee that owned by a writer pretending to divine inſpiration under the New Teſtament, which two of their inſpired writers ſo plainly had diſowned and reprobated.

Moreover, the two firſt Chriſtian authors which deſignedly give us an account of this matter, are Theophilus, biſhop of Antioch, and Julius Africanus, bred up at Alexandria, and living afterwards at Emaus, or Nicopolis in Paleſtine; and they both ſhew by their chronology, that they owned not this Cainan; though doubtleſs neither of them could be ignorant of what St Luke had ſaid concerning him, ſeeing the latter hath a ſet diſcourſe of the difference which ſeemed to be betwixt the genealogies of St Matthew and St Luke; and therefore had St Luke canonized this Cainan, and rendered him authentic in his genealogy, they could not (we may reaſonably ſuppoſe) have thus varied from what this evangeliſt had delivered, without ſome mention of St Luke, or ſome reaſon aſſigned why they thus differed from him. And,

3. (k) Irenæus, who alſo lived in the ſecond century, not only ſaith, that "the genealogy of St Luke containeth ſeventy-"two generations," for that this is the true reading appeareth, againſt Iſaac Voſſius, not only from the note of Mr Grabe upon the place, but alſo from the reaſon following, viz. That this was done, "according to the ſeventy-two languages of "all nations, which Chriſt recapitulated in himſelf;" this being, as Mr Grabe there notes, the received opinion, that the languages then uſed in the world, were ſeventy-two. Now, if you ſo compute this genealogy as to exclude, ver. 24. Matthan and Levi, and ver. 26. Cainan, or to exclude Jeſus and Adam, as St Peter doth Adam and Noah, when he ſaith, 2 Pet. 2. 5. that Noah was the eighth from Adam, the generations mentioned in this genealogy will be juſt 72; whereas if Cainan be inſerted, they muſt be 73 or 75.

But then how this Cainan ſhould ſo come into the text of St Luke, as to be found, though not in all MSS. there being ſeveral, ſaith (l) Grotius, which owned him not, yet in all verſions from the Greek, is very difficult to conjecture; though, if we may credit able critics, it neither is without example, nor without probability that it might be ſo.

It is not without example: for, if we may credit the great (m) Bochart, ſome like unſkilful hand, inſtead of Jacob, (who bought the field near Sychem, Gen. 33. 18. 19.), hath put in Abraham, Acts 7. 16. which criticiſm being allowed, the whole difficulty of that text is removed, and the diſagreement of it with the records of the Old Teſtament is taken away.

Nor doth it want its probability: for ſeeing the Chriſtians generally from the ſecond century went into that falſe opinion, that the tranſlation of the Septuagint was made by divine inſpiration, as hath been ſhewed in the preface to St Matthew, they finding this Cainan in the vulgar editions of the Septuagint, might put him in the margin, and afterwards inſert him into the genealogy of St Luke. Nor will this leſſen the authority of the New Teſtament in other places in which we cannot have the like reaſon to ſuſpect any alteration.

To proceed now to the ſecond queſtion, "Whether St Luke gives us the genealogy of Joſeph from Nathan, as Matthew "had given it from his brother Solomon, viz. the genealogy of Joſeph from Heli his legal father, or rather the genealogy "of Mary from her father Heli?" To which I anſwer by theſe conſiderations.

1. That an account of a genealogy, which gives the plain and literal ſenſe of the author's words, deſerveth much to be preferred before another which puts a manifeſt force upon them. Now, if you make this of St Luke a genealogy not of Joſeph, but only of the Virgin Mary by her ſuppoſed father Heli, you put a manifeſt force upon his words, for then Chriſt was ὡς ἐνομίζετο υἱὸς Ἰωσὴφ τοῦ Ἡλὶ, as was ſuppoſed the ſon of Joſeph who was the ſon of Heli, muſt be thus filled up, ὢν ὄντως δὲ τῆς Μαρίας τῆς θυγατρὸς τοῦ Ἡλὶ, but was indeed the ſon of Mary, the daughter of Heli: now, is it probable, that if St Luke had intended to ſignify all this to his reader, ſo exact a Grecian as he was ſhould have done it ſo obſcurely, and ſo unintelligibly from his words, that totius antiquitatis opinio, "the whole ſtream of antiquity," ſaith (n) Maldonate, ſhould with a full conſent follow the contrary opinion of Africanus, that this was the genealogy of Joſeph by his legal father, according to which interpretation the ſenſe of St Luke's words is plain and literal? Add to this, that the words ὢν ὡς ἐνομίζετο, may be well rendered thus, being as the law allows, or in the ſenſe of the law, the ſon of Joſeph, (as I have proved in the note upon theſe words, ὃ ἐνομίζετο προσευχὴ εἶναι, Acts 16. 13.). Now, thus Chriſt was aſſuredly the ſon of Joſeph, all law allowing the fruit of the wife's womb, if it be male, to be reputed and (o) called the ſon of the huſband; and then St Luke will accord exactly with St Matthew in declaring Chriſt to be the ſon of Joſeph, becauſe he was the huſband of Mary, of whom was born Jeſus called Chriſt, Matth. 1. 16.

And, 2*dly*, Whereas it is ſaid that the genealogy of Joſeph is nothing to the purpoſe, ſince that will not avail at all to prove that Chriſt was of the ſeed of David; I anſwer, that this objection ſeems neither true nor well grounded.

1. It is not true: for both the evangeliſts do in effect declare, that they intended only to give us the legal, or ſuppoſed genealogy of Chriſt from Joſeph, by virtue of his being the huſband of Mary, of whom Chriſt was born; and therefore though Matthew ſays, Jacob begat Joſeph, he does not ſay, and Joſeph begat Jeſus who is called Chriſt, but only that he was the huſband of Mary of whom Chriſt was born; and Luke ſaith he was, as was ſuppoſed, or in conſtruction of law, the ſon of Joſeph: if then all this be nothing to the purpoſe, both theſe inſpired writers muſt have been moved by the Holy Ghoſt to write that which was nothing to the purpoſe. Again, it was taken for granted by all the Jews, that Joſeph was as truly the father of Chriſt, as Mary was his mother, as we learn from Matth. 13. 55. Luke 4. 22. John 6. 42. What then could be more to the purpoſe of the authors of theſe genealogies, than to prove, that, according to their apprehenſions of him, he might be, yea he muſt be the ſon of David, as Joſeph was; eſpecially ſince they well knew the Jews would never grant or aver to invalidate this argument, that Chriſt was miraculouſly born of a virgin, ſince that muſt prove he was the Son of God, and their Meſſiah, and ſo by certain and avowed conſequence the ſon of David?

2. I add, that this objection ſeems not to be well grounded; for though it be commonly ſuppoſed, theſe genealogies were deſigned to prove that Jeſus was the ſon of David according to the fleſh, I ſee no cogent reaſon to believe or grant that ſuppoſition. For,

1. It is certain, that theſe genealogies could never be deſigned to prove that which they do not prove; for then theſe ſacred writers muſt have failed in their deſign; if then they do not prove this, but only that Jeſus was the ſon of Joſeph by being the ſon of his wife Mary, they could not be deſigned to prove more. Moreover, the genealogy of St Matthew could never prove this to the Jews, unleſs they owned that Mary was of the family of David: and if this was then owned by the Jews, what need was there to prove that to them which ſo infallibly followed from it, that the fruit of her womb was of the ſame family? The genealogy of St Luke doth not prove it, becauſe there is not one word of Mary, or any other woman in it; nor would the expreſs ſaying in it, that Mary the mother of Jeſus was the daughter of Heli, prove it, unleſs they owned her ſo to be; which had they done, (as the proof of this to them would have been needleſs, ſo) why is it that the kindred of our Lord delivered a contrary tradition to this? Why do Africanus, (p) Euſebius, (q) Epiphanius, (r) St Jerom, all born or living in Paleſtine, run into that opinion which is ſo inconſiſtent with it, viz. that Joſeph himſelf was only in conſtruction of law the ſon of Heli? Why is it that none of the ancient Chriſtians ever owned it? To oppoſe againſt this tradition and unanimous conſent of Chriſtians, an impious and lying viſion of the Talmud, of a doubtful conſtruction, as Dr Lightfoot confeſſeth; is, as if I ſhould oppoſe to the tradition of all Chriſtians, that our Saviour was born of a virgin, the blaſphemous tales of the ſame Talmud, (s) That "Mary was a whore, and that Chriſt was the baſtard of one Pandeira."

2. There was no need to prove this by genealogies, becauſe it was more fully and demonſtratively done by thoſe miracles to which our Saviour ſtill appealed, as the great evidence that he was the Meſſiah promiſed to the Jews; for the Jews owned this as evident from ſcripture, by ſaying, Hath not the ſcripture ſaid, that Chriſt cometh of the ſeed of David? John 7. 42. Hence, ſay the ſcribes and Phariſees dogmatically, Chriſt is the Son of David, Matth. 22. 42. Nor was any thing more notorious to the Jews; whence the blind men cry out, Jeſus, thou ſon of David, have mercy on us, Mark 10. 47. 48. So doth the woman of Canaan, Matth. 15. 22. So did the multitude, ſinging at Chriſt's entrance into Jeruſalem, Hoſanna to the ſon of David, Matth. 21. 9. 15. Wherefore thoſe miracles which demonſtrated Chriſt was the true Meſſiah promiſed to the Jews, muſt as effectually prove to them, that he was the ſon of David according to the fleſh.

3. The Jews confeſſed, that Mary was the mother of Jeſus, Matth. 12. 46.—13. 55. John 6. 42. and that Joſeph was his father; if therefore they had then certain genealogical tables of the family of Joſeph and Mary, they muſt ſufficiently ſhew to them of what family Chriſt was; if they had not, why do St Matthew and St Luke appeal to them to prove the family of Joſeph? Hence doth St Peter, in his diſcourſe to the men of Iſrael, take this for granted, that Chriſt was the fruit of the loins of David, Acts 2. 30. 31. and St Paul twice aſſerts it, Rom. 1. 3. 2 Tim. 2. 8. Nor do we find that this aſſertion met with the leaſt contradiction, from the mouth of ſcribe, or Phariſee, or any other Jew; for though they ſay, Doth not the ſcripture teach, that Chriſt cometh of the ſeed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem? John 7. 42. they ſay not one word againſt our Saviour's being the Chriſt upon the firſt account, and thereby tacitly confeſs, that they could not deny it, but only doubt he was not of Bethlehem, but came out of Galilee, whence aroſe no prophet, ver. 41. 52. Indeed, all that the latter Jews ſay againſt this, they argue from theſe very genealogies, as being either not ſufficient to prove it, or inconſiſtent the one with the other.

Add to this, 1ſt, That it is certain from the ſcripture, to the Chriſtian, that Mary of whom Chriſt was born, was of the family of David; for thus the angel ſpeaks to her, Luke 1. 31. 32. Thou ſhalt bear a ſon, and ſhalt call his name Jeſus, and the Lord ſhall give him the throne of his father David; now ſhe muſt be a daughter of the houſe of David, of whoſe ſon David was the father. The inſpired hymn of Zacharias declares, that God, by giving them this ſon of Mary, had raiſed up for them a horn of ſalvation in the houſe of his ſervant David, ver. 69. This ſon of Mary was therefore of the houſe of David. 2dly, All the fathers, ſaith (t) Maldonate, do with one mouth aſſert, that Joſeph and Mary were of the ſame tribe and family; and this the Jews never gainſaid, though they muſt, by their genealogical tables, know the truth or falſehood of it: Now, this being once granted, nothing could be farther wanting, when it was proved that Joſeph was the ſon of David, to prove, if that were the deſign of theſe ſacred writers, that our Lord ſprang from Abraham and David according to the fleſh; nor is it to be wondered, that they ſhould rather give us the genealogy of Joſeph than of Mary, if either of them proved the ſame thing, and genealogies among the Jews were never made from women, but always from the men.

And, laſtly, Whereas it is repreſented, (in oppoſition to the account which Africanus, and from him all the ancients, give us of the conciliation of theſe genealogies), as a thing highly improbable, and even next to impoſſible, that at ſo great a diſtance of time as was from Solomon and Nathan to Jacob and Heli, that Jacob and Heli ſhould be brethren; I anſwer, that as none of the ancient Chriſtians, who generally followed Africanus, perceived this impoſſibility, ſo doth (u) Africanus himſelf ſufficiently clear his opinion from it, by ſaying, as it were in anſwer to it, That the families from Solomon and Nathan were ſo mixed, partly by ſecond marriages, partly by raiſing up the name of the dead, (according to the law, Lev. 25. 24. 25. Ruth 4. 5.), and partly by raiſing up ſeed to the dead, (according to the law, Deut. 25. 5.), that we may reaſonably conceive the ſame perſons might be brethren in both.

CONCERNING

CONTENTS.

The general propoſition, That the apoſtles and evangeliſts indited theſe ſcriptures by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt. This propoſition is explained by a compariſon of this aſſiſtance with the giſt of prophecy vouchſafed to the penmen of the Old Teſtament, § I. How far this aſſiſtance is aſſerted, as to an inſpiration of ſuggeſtion, and as to an inſpiration of direction, § II. No ſlips of memory, no determination of matters of practice from human wiſdom only, without the intendence or direction of the Holy Spirit, no arguments that are unconcluſive, muſt be admitted in theſe ſacred writings, § III. This divine aſſiſtance is proved, 1. From what they do aſſert concerning their own writings, doctrines, and directions, § IV. 2. From the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt vouchſafed to them, § V. 3. From our Lord's promiſe to lead them by this Spirit into all truth, § VI. 4. From the end for which they were indited to be a rule of faith and manners to all ages, § VII. 5. From the teſtimony of the Chriſtians of the firſt ages, who ſtill owned and received them as ſuch, § VIII. In confirmation of the truth of Chriſtianity, it is alledged, 1. That if a Meſſiah was to come from Judea at that time, according to the general expectation of the eaſt, he muſt be our Meſſiah. 2. That no reaſonable perſon, who was not the true Meſſiah, would have undertaken to fulfil the prophecies of the Old Teſtament concerning the Meſſiah. 3. That none but the true Meſſiah could accompliſh the things declared in the New Teſtament to be the characters of the Meſſiah, § IX. (2.) This is argued from what is ſaid in the New Teſtament, of what Chriſt, and what his apoſtles, and thoſe who believed in him, ſhould do in his name; where is ſhewed the vanity of all that is offered by way of compariſon of what was done by others, with what was done by Chriſt and his diſciples; and alſo, of the pretence that Chriſtians did the things which they performed by the art of magic, § X. (3.) From the truth and certainty of our Lord's reſurrection from the dead, § XI. (4.) From the manifold predictions of our Lord, exactly verified; and eſpecially from thoſe which concerned the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the judgments which ſhould come upon the Jewiſh nation for their infidelity, § XII. and XIII.

THAT theſe ſacred writings may have their due effect and influence upon us, I ſhall endeavour, as well as I am able,

1*ſt*, To eſtabliſh their divine authority: whence it will follow,

2*dly*, That the doctrines and inſtructions delivered in them, are to be owned as the rules and doctrines of our Lord, and ſo are neceſſary to be believed and practiſed by all that bear the name of Chriſtians. My firſt aſſertion therefore is,

§ I. That the apoſtles and evangeliſts indited theſe ſcriptures by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt, and that, as the immediate ſucceeding ages did, ſo we at preſent ſecurely may rely upon them as a rule of faith. And here I ſhall conſider,

1. How this aſſiſtance may fitly be explained.
2. How far it is neceſſary or reaſonable to aſſert it.
3. What evidence may be offered to confirm it.

For explication of this divine aſſiſtance, let it be conſidered,

1. That prophecy is ſometimes repreſented as the word of the Lord, and he is ſaid to ſpeak to the prophet; and ſuitably to this metaphor, ſome illuſtration of the aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit may be made from the analogy it bears to human converſation, thus, that as we convey our thoughts one to another by ſuch words, as, by the organs of hearing, make ſuch a motion on their brain, to whom we ſpeak, as gives them an idea of the words we utter, and by them of the things which by thoſe words are ſignified; and ſo it is the impreſſion made upon their brain which doth communicate our thoughts to them; ſo when it pleaſeth God to reveal his will to any perſon, it ſeemeth only neceſſary that he talk inwardly with them, that is, that he make ſuch a motion on their brains, as giveth them a deep and clear idea of that which he intended to make known unto them; only the impreſſion muſt be then made in ſuch a manner and degree, and with ſuch circumſtances as may make it certain to the inſpired perſon, that it derives from God. Now, ſeeing, when we hear the voice of any one, or receive a letter from him, we may be certain from the knowledge we have of his voice, or his hand-writing, that it is he indeed who ſpeaks or writeth to us; we may very well conceive, that God can eaſily give ſuch diſtinctive marks of what he inwardly ſpeaks to us, or writes upon the tables of our hearts, as ſhall enable us to diſcern what he imprints upon them, from any impreſſion that ſhall otherwiſe be made upon them.

2. Sometimes the prophet is in ſcripture ſtyled a ſeer, and his word a viſion; and then the parallel, or the analogy, runs thus: As we ſee, by virtue of a light reflecting the ſpecies of things upon the retina of the eye, and thence deriving a peculiar motion to, and making a diſtinct impreſſion on the brain; ſo may the prophet be ſuppoſed to ſee what God reveals unto him, by a like motion of the Holy Spirit made upon his brain concerning it. And as it is as eaſy to propoſe a material object to the view, as to deſcribe it by our words, ſo muſt it be as eaſy for God to dart ſuch an impreſſion or inward light upon the brain of the prophet, or ſpiritual man, as ſhall give him a more bright and ſenſible idea of things, than if he did perceive them by the ear, or even view them by the eye. And as we more exactly diſcern a ſenſible object by the view, than we know it by a deſcription of it without that view; ſo the Jews ſay, that prophecy בְּמַרְאֶה in viſion, is more excellent than that which comes only בַּחֲלוֹם by dream, or in a dream, in which we ſeem to hear one talking with us.

Now, though this impreſſion may be ſufficient to convince the prophet and inſpired perſon, that his revelation did indeed derive from God, yet, ſince this revelation was intended not for himſelf, but for the uſe of others, he, with the revelation, muſt be enabled, by ſome convincing proof, to evidence to thoſe who were concerned to embrace it, that he was ſent indeed by God with ſuch a meſſage to them. Now, of this they only could be ſatisfied by ſome outward marks or notes, of which they, by their ſenſes, were enabled to judge, viz. the miracles wrought for confirmation of his teſtimony, or ſome prophetical prediction of ſomething future and contingent, exactly verified in the event. And thus, ſaith the apoſtle, was their preaching confirmed to the world; God bearing witneſs to them, both with ſigns and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, according to his will, Heb. 2. 4.

The ways of prophecy under the Old Teſtament ſeem to be comprehended under theſe four heads, viz. Either the prophets received their revelation in a dream or trance, or in a viſion, or by a voice from heaven, or by the ſecret ſuggeſtions of the Holy Ghoſt.

Now, ſome of the apoſtles had their viſions either by day, as Peter; for an eeſtaſy fell upon him, and he ſaw the heavens opened, and he heard a voice ſaying to him, Ariſe, Peter, kill, and eat, Acts 10. 11. and this is called ὅραμα, a viſion, ver. 17. And, by this, ſaith he, God taught me to call no man common or unclean, ver. 28. or by night: thus, a viſion of the night was ſeen by Paul, and a man ſpeaking to him in the viſion of the night, Acts 16. 9. They had alſo the Spirit ſpeaking to them; for the Spirit ſaid to Peter, Behold, three men ſeek thee: ariſe therefore, and go with them, nothing doubting, for I have ſent them, Acts 10. 20. 21. And ſometimes they had viſions and revelations of the Lord, either by way of rapture to them, 2 Cor. 12. 2. or of converſe with them; as, when Chriſt ſaid to St Paul, My grace is ſufficient for thee, ver. 9. Here then are three kinds of revelation granted to the apoſtles; but then theſe things were moſtly occaſional and accidental to them, in reſpect of their apoſtolical function.

Only, the caſe of the apoſtle Paul muſt here admit of an exception; for it being neceſſary for an apoſtle, that is, a witneſs of Chriſt's reſurrection, to have ſeen the Lord riſen from the dead, according to thoſe words, Am I not an apoſtle? Have I not ſeen the Lord? 1 Cor. 9. 1.; and for an apoſtle, not of man, neither by man, but by Jeſus Chriſt, Gal. 1. 1. to receive his meſſage immediately from the Lord Jeſus, Chriſt ſpeaks thus to him, I have appeared unto thee for this purpoſe, to make thee a miniſter, and a witneſs, both of thoſe things which thou haſt ſeen, and of theſe things in the which I will appear unto thee, Acts 26. 16. Which words contain a promiſe of an immediate inſtruction from Chriſt in his apoſtolical function: whence this apoſtle declares, confirming that his declaration with an oath, the goſpel which was preached by me, was not after man, for I neither received it of man, neither was I taught (by man,) but (only) by the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, Gal. 1. 11. 12. He therefore had his meſſage from Chriſt, as Moſes had from God, Chriſt ſpeaking to him mouth to mouth, &c. Numb. 12. 7.

But yet that which enabled them for the inditing of theſe writings, as a rule of faith to all ſucceeding ages, was the internal and powerful aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit.

§ II. To proceed then to the ſecond inquiry, how far it is neceſſary or reaſonable to aſſert the divine aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit, or his inſpiration to theſe ſacred writers. To this I ſhall anſwer, by premiſing a diſtinction of the Jews, between thoſe ſacred writers, who were prophets properly ſo called, and the Chetubim or holy writers, who penned their compoſitions by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt.

To the prophets properly ſo called, they aſcribe an immediate ſuggeſtion and repreſentation in their fancy and imaginations of the things which they delivered as from the mouth, and in the name of God, he keeping ſtill alive upon them the images and reſemblances of the viſions which they ſaw, till they were penned, and imprinting on their memories the meſſages which they delivered by his command to the people. Hence, when the roll of Jeremy was burnt, he was enabled to dictate again to Baruch the ſame words, chap. 36. 32. And this I believe to be true, concerning all the viſions they declare they ſaw, and all the meſſages they deliver with this preface, Thus ſaith the Lord; or, The word of the Lord came to N. N. ſaying; but I do not think it neceſſary, with reference to the hiſtorical things related in the writings of Joſhua, Judges, Samuel, Kings, which the Jews ſtyle the former prophets, or with reſpect to the hiſtorical relations contained in the prophecies of Iſaiah, Jeremiah, &c.

To the Chetubim, or holy writers, who penned their writings by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit, they aſcribe,

1*ſt*, An impulſe from God to write or to compoſe them, but ſuch as left them to the uſe of their own words, and to the exerciſe of their reaſons.

2*dly*, A ſuperintendency of the Holy Spirit over them, and a divine aſſiſtance ſtill cleaving to them in thoſe compoſitions, ſo that they ſhould not be obnoxious to any error or miſtake in what they did indite; that aſſiſtance which they aſcribe to their prophets, by later writers is called an inſpiration of ſuggeſtion; the ſecond, or the aſſiſtance of the Chetubim, an inſpiration of direction only.

And this aſſiſtance was thought inferior to that of prophecy, not as to the certainty of the revelation, or the ſubject-matter, but only as to the degree and meaſure of it; for, becauſe there was in theſe compoſitions no viſum propheticum, i. e. no viſion exhibited, nor did they ſpeak in this high ſtrain, Thus ſaith the Lord, therefore they thought they were not to be ſtyled prophets in the proper acceptation of the word. And I conjecture, that it is for this latter reaſon only, that they put the prophet Daniel not among the prophets, but the Hagiographi, or ſacred writers, becauſe he never uſeth theſe expreſſions, Thus ſaith the Lord, or ſaith, The word of the Lord came unto me; ſince otherwiſe, in viſions, he was ſcarce inferior to any of the other prophets. Nor is it eaſy to conjecture in what this way, whether of revelation, or divine aſſiſtance, and inſpiration by the Holy Ghoſt, ſhould be inferior to the former. For,

1*ſt*, Sure it is no diſparagement to this way, that perſons acted by it do not expreſs themſelves in (a) parables, ſimilitudes, and riddles, but uſe a more familiar language, and appear in a more ſimple undiſguiſing dreſs, and ſo more advantageouſly condeſcend to the capacity of the reader. Nor,

2*dly*, That it doth not act ſo much on the (b) imagination and the fancy, but is principally ſeated in the higher and purer faculties of the ſoul, which is the ſecond difference aſſigned between them. Nor,

3*dly*, That it chiefly (c) moveth the inſpired perſon to dictate matters of true piety, and goodneſs, of virtue, wiſdom, and prudence; theſe differences, if aſſigned truly, ſeem to me to be advantages of this aſſiſtance, above that which uſually was afforded to the ancient prophets, rather than tokens that it was really inferior to the inſpiration they enjoyed.

And this will be more evident, if we compare this aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit with that gradus Moſaicus, which the Jews generally account the higheſt, or ſupreme degree of prophecy, and is recorded in theſe words, If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myſelf known to him in a viſion, and will ſpeak to him in a dream. My ſervant Moſes is not ſo, who is faithful in all my houſe; with him will I ſpeak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark ſpeeches, and the ſimilitude of the Lord ſhall he behold, Numb. 12. 6. 7. 8. Whence the Jews gather theſe ſeveral excellencies of the prophetic gift of Moſes, above what is vouchſafed to the other prophets, viz.

1*ſt*, That all other (d) prophets propheſied by dream or by viſion, but Moſes propheſied when he was waking, and ſtanding. Now, this alſo did the ſpiritual perſon, moved by the Holy Ghoſt.

2*dly*, That other (e) prophets propheſied by the hand of an angel, and therefore ſaw what they ſaw in (f) parables and dark ſpeeches; but Moſes ſpake immediately from the mouth of God, and without parables, or dark ſpeeches; and ſo alſo did the ſpiritual perſon ſpeak under the goſpel-diſpenſation, not by an angel, but by that Spirit which ſearcheth the deep things of God; not in parables, and dark riddles, but with great plainneſs of ſpeech.

3*dly*, That all the prophets were afraid, and troubled, and fainted, but Moſes was not ſo: nor was it ſo with our apoſtles. Moreover, there was ſtrength, ſay they, in Moſes, to underſtand the words of the prophecy; and ſo was there alſo in the prophets to underſtand the revelations of the Spirit. So that you ſee, this way of aſſiſtance gave to the penmen of the New Teſtament, all theſe prerogatives of Moſes above the other prophets; and ſo I know not why it ſhould be reckoned inferior to their way of prophecy, upon thoſe very accounts for which the way of prophecy vouchſafed to Moſes is preferred above them, eſpecially if we conſider that St Peter lays this as the true foundation of their credibility, that they ſpake as they were moved by the Holy Ghoſt, 2 Pet. 1. 21.

But it is of no great moment to inſiſt on this compariſon, ſince the ſacred writers of the ſecond order, ſtyled Hagiographi, are ſaid to be ſo far attended with the divine aſſiſtance in their compoſitions, as that they could not be obnoxious in them to error or miſtake in what they writ; which is abundantly ſufficient to render all their compoſitions a certain and unerring rule of faith, in what they have delivered as the object of it.

To proceed then to the conſideration of the diſtinction hinted before, viz. Of inſpiration by ſuggeſtion, and inſpiration of direction only: I ſay then,

1*ſt*, That where there is no antecedent idea or knowledge of the things written for the good of others, to be obtained from reaſon, or a former revelation, an inſpiration of ſuggeſtion muſt be vouchſafed to the apoſtles, to enable them to make them

known unto the world. But where there is an antecedent knowledge of the things to be indited, it can only be neceſſary, that God ſhould either immediately, or by ſome ſpecial occaſions, excite them to indite thoſe things, and ſhould ſo carefully preſide over, and direct their minds whilſt writing, as to ſuggeſt, or bring into their memories, ſuch things as his wiſdom thought fit to be written, and ſhould not ſuffer them to err in the delivery of what was thus indited in his name, or as apoſtles of God the Father, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And therefore,

2*dly*, In all their revelations of myſteries, or things which could not otherwiſe be made known to them, either by natural reaſon, or antecedent revelation, they muſt be acknowledged to have had them by an immediate ſuggeſtion of the Holy Spirit. Hence of theſe things the apoſtle ſays negatively, that the natural man (who only judges of things by his natural reaſon) cannot know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 Cor. 2. 14. i. e. they being myſteries, can only be diſcerned by the revelation of the Spirit; and poſitively, that they ſpake the wiſdom of God in a myſtery, even the wiſdom hid from former ages, which eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard, nor had it entered into the heart of man to conceive, 1 Cor. 2. 7. and that becauſe God had revealed theſe things to them by his Spirit, ver. 9. they having received the Spirit of God, that they might know the things which are freely given to us of God, ver. 10. Thus was the myſtery of the calling of the Gentiles into an equality of privileges with the believing Jews, made known unto them; for God, by revelation, ſaith St Paul, made known to me the myſtery of Chriſt, which in other ages was not made known, as it is now revealed to his holy apoſtles and prophets by the Spirit, that the Gentiles ſhould be fellow-heirs, and of the ſame body, and partakers of his promiſe in Chriſt by the goſpel, Eph. 3. 3. 4. 5. 6. chap. 1. 9. — 6. 19. Col. 1. 26. 27. — 2. 2. — 4. 3. 4. So they knew the myſtery of the recalling of the Jews, Rom. 11. 25. 26. the myſtery of the reſurrection, i. e. the quality of the bodies to be raiſed, and the order of it, with all the other ſpecial circumſtances mentioned, 1 Cor. 15. 1 Theſſ. 4. and the apoſtaſy of the latter times; for the Spirit ſpeaketh expreſsly, ſaith the apoſtle, that in the latter days men ſhall depart from the faith, 1 Tim. 4. 1. This inſpiration of ſuggeſtion muſt alſo be allowed to St John the author of the Revelation; for he ſpeaking only what was repreſented to him in viſions, or by angelical diſcourſes, or apparitions, muſt have that aſſiſtance which ſuggeſted theſe ideas to him. But,

3*dly*, As for thoſe things which they did know already, either by natural reaſon, education, or antecedent revelation, they needed only ſuch an aſſiſtance or direction in them, as would ſecure them from error in their reaſonings, or in their confirmation of their doctrines by paſſages contained in the Old Teſtament; and therefore a continual ſuggeſtion muſt be here unneceſſary. And indeed one great work they had upon their hands both in preaching the goſpel, and writing theſe goſpels and epiſtles, being to convince the unbelieving Jew, or to confirm the wavering Jew, or rectify the errors of the Judaizing Chriſtian, the gift of knowledge of the ſcriptures of the Old Teſtament was very neceſſary to them, and therefore is deſervedly reckoned among the primary gifts of the Holy Ghoſt; and being ſo, we have reaſon to believe, that either the Holy Ghoſt ſuggeſted to their memory thoſe ſcriptures which they uſed in theſe ſacred writings to convince them, or elſe preſided ſo over them, as not to ſuffer them to make any inferences from them, which were not agreeable to the true intent and meaning of them; though, at this diſtance of time, we may not always be able to diſcern the ſtrength and clearneſs of the conſequence. And,

4*thly*, In writing the hiſtorical parts of the New Teſtament, or matters of fact relating to themſelves, or others, it is only neceſſary, that what is there delivered as matter of fact, ſhould truly be performed, as it is ſaid to have been done; but it is not neceſſary that they ſhould be related in that order of time in which they were performed, unleſs that alſo be affirmed of them; for this muſt be ſufficient to aſſure us of the truth of what they thus delivered.

Moreover, in writing the diſcourſes contained in theſe books, it is not neceſſary that the very words ſhould be ſuggeſted, or recorded in which they were firſt ſpoken, but only that the true intent and meaning of them ſhould be related, though in diverſity of words. Though the promiſe made to the apoſtles by our Lord, that the Holy Spirit ſhould bring to their remembrance πάντα, all things which he had ſaid unto them, John 14. 26. doth fairly plead for this exactneſs in what they have delivered of our Saviour's ſermons; it being ſcarce imaginable their memory, without divine aſſiſtance, ſhould exactly give us all that was ſpoken in ſuch long diſcourſes.

And hence we may account for the objections againſt this divine aſſiſtance, ariſing from the 7th of the Acts; for, though I have ſhewed in the note on ver. 15. 16. that there is no real miſtake in the words of the protomartyr, yet were it granted, that there is an error in his account of the ſepulchres of the patriarchs, yet that affects not the authority of St Luke at all, provided he hath exactly related what was then ſaid by St Stephen, who was not choſen to be a penman of the holy ſcriptures.

Laſtly, From what is thus diſcourſed, it may appear, that I contend only for ſuch an inſpiration, or divine aſſiſtance, of the ſacred writers of the New Teſtament, as will aſſure us of the truth of what they writ, whether by inſpiration of ſuggeſtion, or direction only; but not for ſuch an inſpiration as implies, that even their words were dictated, or their phraſes ſuggeſted to them by the Holy Ghoſt. This, in ſome matters of great moment, might be ſo, St Paul declaring, that they ſpake the things which were given them of God in the words which the Holy Ghoſt teacheth, 1 Cor. 2. 13. if that relate not to what the Holy Ghoſt had taught them out of the Old Teſtament. But that it was not always ſo, is evident, both from the conſideration that they were hagiographers, who are ſuppoſed to be left to the uſe of their own words, and from the variety of the ſtyle in which they write, and from the ſoleciſms which are ſometimes viſible in their compoſitions; and more eſpecially from their own words, which manifeſtly ſhew, that in ſome caſes they had no ſuch ſuggeſtions from the Holy Ghoſt, as doth imply, that he had dictated thoſe words unto them. For inſtance, when St Paul declares his will or purpoſe to do what he was hindered by the providence of God from doing; as, when he ſaith to the Romans, When I go into Spain, I will come to you, chap. 15. 24. I will come by you into Spain, ver. 28. For though he might, after his enlargement, go into the weſt, where (g) St Clemens ſaith, he preached; and even into Spain, as (h) Cyril, (i) Epiphanius, and (k) Theodoret ſay he did: yet it is certain he did not deſignedly go to Rome, in order to an intended journey into Spain: And when he ſaith to the Corinthians, I will come to you when I paſs through Macedonia, 1 Cor. 16. 5. and yet confeſſeth in his ſecond epiſtle, 2 Cor. 1. 15. 16. 17. that he did not perform that journey; for it is not to be thought the Holy Ghoſt ſhould incite him to promiſe, or even purpoſe what he knew he would not perform. This alſo we learn from all thoſe places in which they do expreſs their ignorance, or doubtfulneſs of that which they are ſpeaking of; as, when St Paul ſaith, I know not whether I baptized any other, 1 Cor. 1. 16. And again, τυχὸν παραμενῶ, Perhaps I will abide, yea, and winter with you, 1 Cor. 16. 6. And, when St Peter ſaith, By Sylvanus, a faithful brother, as I ſuppoſe, have I written to you, 1 Pet. 5. 12. For theſe words plainly ſhew, that in all theſe things they had no inſpiration or divine aſſiſtance. This, laſtly, may be gathered from all thoſe places in which they only do expreſs their hope, and that conditionally, of doing this or that; as in theſe words, I hope to ſee you in my journey, Rom. 15. 24. I will come unto you quickly, if the Lord will, 1 Cor. 4. 19. I hope to ſtay ſome time with you, if the Lord permit, 1 Cor. 16. 7. I hope in the Lord Jeſus to ſend Timothy quickly to you, Phil. 2. 19. 23. And, I truſt that I myſelf alſo ſhall come quickly, ver. 24. Theſe things I write, hoping to come to thee quickly; but if I ſhould tarry, that thou mayſt know how to behave thyſelf in the church of God, 1 Tim. 3. 14. 15. I hope by your prayers to be given to you, Phil. ver. 22. This will we do if the Lord permit, Heb. 6. 3. I hope to come to you, St John, ep. 2. 12. ep. 3. ver. 14. For, 1. Spes eſt incertæ rei nomen, the word hope implieth an uncertainty; whereas the Holy Spirit cannot be uncertain of any thing; nor can we think he would inſpire men to ſpeak ſo uncertainly. And, 2. There can be no neceſſity, or even uſe of a divine aſſiſtance to enable a man to expreſs his hopes, ſeeing all men do by natural reflection know them.

§ III. And having thus declared what I do allow, I now proceed to ſhew what in this matter I cannot admit of.

1*ſt*, Then, I can by no means grant any ſlips of memory in the compilers of theſe ſacred books of the New Teſtament; for though theſe are allowed by (l) ſome in matters of ſmall conſequence, as they are pleaſed to ſtyle them, yet is it of great conſequence that we do not own them: For, if you grant they have thus ſlipt at all, by what rules can we be aſſured they have not ſlipt above an hundred times, or even in moſt of their hiſtorical relations? For inſtance, if St Matthew could ſlip in citing the words of the prophet Jeremiah by a miſtake, for the words of Zechariah, Matth. 27. 9. why not alſo in citing the words of the prophet Iſaiah, or of any other prophet? If one of thoſe ſacred writers might be ſubject to theſe ſlips, why not all? If once, why not often? And can we think it no prejudice to the divine authority of theſe ſacred writings, that they ſhould ſo oft be ſubject to falſe citations, and produce falſe ſtories, contradicting the truth of the Old Teſtament? Would not this yield a great advantage againſt our rule of faith, both to the unbelieving Jews, and to the Sceptics, and Antiſcripturiſts, which too much abound among us? Nor,

2*dly*, Can I grant that the apoſtles determined any matters of practice merely from rules of human prudence, without the guidance and direction of the Holy Spirit. It is pretended this is done by St Paul in theſe words, To the reſt ſpeak I, not the Lord, 1 Cor. 7. 12. And again in theſe, Concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord, but I give my judgment, or advice, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be found faithful: I judge therefore this to be good for the preſent neceſſity, ver. 25. 26. And, a third time, She is happier if ſhe ſo remain, after my judgment, and I think alſo that I have the Spirit of God, ver. 40. This is not, (m) ſaith one, ſpoken with the authority of a teacher ſent from God, or an apoſtle, but in ſuch a ſtyle as implies only an ordinary aſſiſtance, ſuch as any pious ſkilful paſtor may expect.

Anſ. To this I anſwer, 1. That what the apoſtle ſpeaks of here, from ver. 12. to the 24th, ſeemeth to be no ſlight matter, but of great importance to the good of ſocieties, and to the honour of Chriſtianity; for, ſure, it would have been a ſignal blemiſh to the Chriſtian faith, ſhould it have tended to diſſolve the bonds of matrimony, or given men or women licence to quit that ſacred tie, purely becauſe they were turned Chriſtians. And hence, we find that the apoſtle had taken eſpecial care to prevent this imputation every where, by ordaining the very ſame thing in all other churches, which he here preſcribes to the Corinthians; though then he who had ſaid before, To the married ſpeak not I, but the Lord, 1 Cor. 7. 17. becauſe that caſe had been particularly decided by Chriſt, Matth. 19. 9. ſays afterwards, To the reſt ſay I, not the Lord; he ſays not this to intimate that this direction only was given by him as a man uſing his natural reaſon, only to direct them to what he thought beſt, but not as delivering the mind of Chriſt, for he had before declared the contrary by ſaying, We have the mind of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 2. 16. and after doth it in theſe words, If any man think himſelf a prophet, or ſpiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord, chap. 14. 37. but only to declare, our Lord, in his diſcourſe of divorce, had not decided the caſe de imparibus conjugiis, of the marriage of a believer with an infidel, but had left this to the deciſion of thoſe apoſtles to whom he had promiſed the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt to lead them into all truth, John 16. 13.

Anſ. 2. In the words cited with relation to the caſe of virgins, though the apoſtle owns he had no particular commandment of the Lord, as he had in the caſe of married perſons, yet doth he ſay ſufficient to convince us that he adviſed in that matter, not only as a man aſſiſted by his natural reaſon, but alſo as one aſſiſted by the Spirit of God. For,

1*ſt*,

1*ſt*, Though, ſaith he, as to this, I have no particular command, I give my advice in it as one who hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be found faithful, (in the diſcharge of my apoſtolical office). Now, this, ſaith he, is all that is required of a miniſter of Chriſt, and ſteward of his myſteries, that he be found faithful in adminiſtering the grace of his apoſtleſhip, 1 Cor. 4. 1. 2. And this fidelity was ſtill attended with the power of Chriſt aſſiſting them, as appears from theſe words, I thank Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the miniſtry, 1 Tim. 1. 12. So that this phraſe doth not imply that the apoſtle had only an ordinary aſſiſtance in this advice, ſuch as any ſkilful pious paſtor may expect. And this is ſtill more evident in thoſe words, She is happier if ſhe ſo abide, after my judgment; and I think I have the Spirit of God (enabling me to form that judgment); for they who ſay, this is not ſpoken with the authority of an apoſtle, or a teacher ſent from God, ſeem not to have conſidered that the apoſtle was writing to them who were apt to queſtion his apoſtleſhip, and required a proof of Chriſt ſpeaking in him, 2 Cor. 13. 3. and to them it was proper to ſay, Whatſoever you may conceive of me, I ſuppoſe I have the Spirit of God, i. e. the Spirit of wiſdom and knowledge to enable me to make this advice. Moreover, the words δοκῶ ἔχειν may be rendered, I have the Spirit of God; ſo in this epiſtle, ὁ δοκῶν εἶναι φιλόνικος is he that is contentious, chap. 11. 16. and εἴ τις δοκεῖ προφήτης, if any man be a prophet. See the note there. Nor,

3*dly*, Do I grant that St Paul any where implies that he doth not always uſe the beſt arguments, but ſometimes ſuch as are beſt fitted to the capacities and notions of thoſe he writes to; for, if ſo, by what rules ſhall we be able to diſtinguiſh betwixt his arguments, on which we may ſafely rely, as being abſolutely true, and thoſe which only are accommodated to the notions of thoſe with whom he had to do? St Paul doth indeed ſay, ἀνθρώπινον λέγω, I ſpeak after the manner of men, or what is common to men, becauſe of the infirmity of your fleſh, Rom. 6. 19. but he ſpeaks not this by way of excuſe for not uſing the beſt argument he could in this affair; but he ſpeaks this by way of illuſtration of his argument, or exhortation. The ſenſe which the ancients put upon theſe words is this, τῇ φύσει μετρῶ τὴν παραίνεσιν, I frame my exhortation with a due conſideration of the infirmity of your fleſh, requiring only that you ſhould do that ſervice now to God, which you have formerly done to ſin. I rather think the apoſtle diſcourſeth to this effect: In this diſcourſe of their being ſervants formerly to ſin, and their obligation now to be ſervants to righteouſneſs, I ſpeak that which all natural men muſt have had experience of by reaſon of the infirmity of the fleſh, and of which they may thence take a juſt idea, requiring only that as they have formerly yielded their members inſtruments to ſin, ſo they would now yield them inſtruments to righteouſneſs.

As for the arguments they uſe ad hominem, as they are very few, ſo is it only requiſite that they ſhould truly be convincing upon the principles which ſuch men owned and received, there being nothing more intended by them, than to convince them that ſuch an inference doth naturally follow from their principle, and that they muſt either quit the tenet, or admit the inference. For inſtance, when the apoſtle ſaith, Elſe what ſhall they do who are baptized for the dead? 1 Cor. 15. 29. He is there diſputing againſt ſome of the Corinthians, who ſaid, There is no reſurrection of the dead. Now, here he all along diſputeth ad hominem, and on ſuppoſition; as v. g. Then is Chriſt not riſen from the dead, ver. 13. Then are we falſe witneſſes of God, ver. 15. Then is your faith vain, ver. 17. Then they that ſleep in Chriſt are periſhed, ver. 18. Then are Chriſtians of all men the moſt miſerable, ver. 19. &c. All which ſuppoſitions are really falſe, but then they follow from the foreſaid tenet of thoſe Corinthians; ſo that all this diſcourſe is only an argument ab abſurdo. But that the apoſtles any where uſe ſuch arguments ad hominem, as proceed only on ſuch principles as were generally admitted in their age, without conſidering whether they were true or falſe, I utterly deny.

§ II. Having thus premiſed theſe things for the right ſtating and explication of the controverſy, I proceed to lay down the arguments, which prove, that in theſe writings the apoſtles were aſſiſted and preſerved from error by the Spirit of God, and therefore were enabled to deliver to us an unerring rule of faith.

And, 1*ſt*, I argue for the divine aſſiſtance of the inditers of theſe ſacred records, from what they do aſſert concerning their own writings, and what they ſay touching the declarations made, the doctrines delivered, and the directions given in them. And,

As for the writers of the goſpels, St Luke declares, he writes his goſpel to Theophilus, that he might know the certainty of thoſe things in which he had been inſtructed; and St John declares, his goſpel was written, that they might believe that Jeſus was the Chriſt, the Son of God. Now, it is plain, that neither Theophilus could be certain of the truth of what he had been taught by any writing which was not abſolutely certain in itſelf; nor could others be induced by what St John had written, to believe that Jeſus was the Chriſt, unleſs they could be certain that he ſpake the truth throughout his goſpel: now, if we do conſider how many things contained in the beginning of St Luke's goſpel he muſt have by hearſay; and how long diſcourſes, both he, St Matthew, and St John deliver, as ſpoken by our Lord and others; of which we can have no aſſurance, after ſo many years before the writing of them, on the mere ſtrength of human memory, ſo as to ground an article of divine faith upon the very words in which they are delivered, we muſt be forced to conclude, that, upon this account, we cannot depend upon the very letter and minute circumſtances of every diſcourſe related by them, unleſs, according to Chriſt's promiſe, they had the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt to bring theſe things to their remembrance: wherefore this promiſe is made to them in very general and comprehenſive terms, viz. The Holy Ghoſt ſhall bring all things to your remembrance whatſoever I have ſaid unto you, John 14. 26. And then there being nothing conſiderable in St Mark, which is not alſo in St Matthew, or St Luke, or both, the certainty of all that is contained in them, muſt make us alſo certain of the truth of what St Mark delivers in his goſpel. Moreover, the word ſpoken and indited by them, is ſtyled the word God. Men, ſaith the apoſtle, could not believe the goſpel unleſs they heard it preached to them; nor could they hear it preached, unleſs ſome were commiſſionated to preach the goſpel; for faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God, Rom. 10. 14. 15. 16. 17. And, for this cauſe, ſaith he, thank we God without ceaſing, ſing, becauſe, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth the word of God, 1 Theſſ. 2. 13. I am made a miniſter of Chriſt, ſaith he, according to the diſpenſation of God which is given to me to fulfil (i. e. fully to preach) the word of God, Col. 1. 25. 2. It is called the commandment of God; for my goſpel, ſaith St Paul, and the preaching of Jeſus Chriſt, is made manifeſt, and according to the commandment of the everlaſting God, made known unto you for the obedience of faith, Rom. 16. 25. 26. which faith is always built on a divine teſtimony. And again, If any man be a prophet, or ſpiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you, are the commandments of the Lord, 1 Cor. 14. 37. 3. It is declared to be the wiſdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 24. For we preach Chriſt to you that are called, both Jews and Greeks, the power of God, and the wiſdom of God; we ſpeak the wiſdom of God in a myſtery, even that wiſdom which God hath revealed to us by his Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 7. 10. 4. It is the teſtimony of God; for I came not to you, ſaith he, in excellency of ſpeech, declaring to you the teſtimony of God, 1 Cor. 2. 1. 5. It is the goſpel of God: for St Paul ſtyles himſelf the miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt to the Gentiles miniſtering the goſpel of God to them, Rom. 15. 16. We preach, ſaith he, the goſpel of God freely, 2 Cor. 11. 7. We were bold to preach to you the goſpel of God; we were willing to have imparted to you not the goſpel of God only, but alſo our own lives, 1 Theſſ. 2. 2. 8. 9. even the glorious goſpel of the bleſſed God committed to my truſt, 1 Tim. 1. 10. 6. It is the goſpel of Chriſt: For I came, ſaith he, to Troas to preach Chriſt's goſpel, 2 Cor. 2. 12. We ſent Timotheus our fellow-labourer in the goſpel of Chriſt, 1 Theſſ. 3. 2. 7. It is the myſtery of his will, Eph. 1. 9.; the myſtery of God the Father, and of Chriſt, Col. 2. 2.; the mind of Chriſt made known to the apoſtles, 1 Cor. 2. 16.; and the word of Chriſt which muſt dwell richly in believers, Col. 3. 16.

Now, ſure, it cannot rationally be conceived, that the apoſtles ſhould be ignorant of that aſſiſtance by which they were enabled to indite theſe records; if then they were aſſured of that aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit which they challenged, then muſt the goſpel which they both preached and indited, be received as the word of God and Chriſt, the mind of Chriſt, the goſpel of God and Chriſt, the myſtery of God the Father, and of Chriſt, the commandment and the teſtimony of God; which is the thing I am concerned to make good; and then it highly muſt concern all perſons to be mindful of the commandments of the apoſtles of our Lord and Saviour, 2 Pet. 3. 2. If they had no ſuch aſſurance of the aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit, they groſsly did impoſe upon the world, in thus pretending, that they preached the goſpel by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit ſent down from heaven. If they were not aſſured that in thoſe writings they delivered only thoſe doctrines which God required all men to believe, thoſe precepts he required them to do, they muſt be very confident, in daring to make this the preface to ſome of their epiſtles, Paul an apoſtle according to the will and the commandment of God, 1 Cor. 1. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 1. Eph. 1. 1. Col. 1. 1. 1 Tim. 1. 1. 2 Tim. 1. 1. and ſaying with ſo much aſſurance, If any be a prophet, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of God, 1 Cor. 14. 37. and much more, in declaring to all Chriſtians thus: We are of God; he that knoweth God, heareth us; he that is not of God, heareth not us; by this we know the Spirit of truth, and the ſpirit of error, 1 John 4. 6. For this ſeems equal to what their Maſter himſelf ſaid in the like words, Why do you not believe me? He that is of God heareth the words of God; you therefore hear them not, becauſe you are not of God, John 8. 46. 47. Yea, they muſt be falſe witneſſes of God, by ſtyling human writings, the word, the goſpel, the command, the teſtimony, the mind, the myſtery of God and Chriſt, and by requiring others to receive it, not as the word of man, but as the word of God, even that word by which they muſt be judged at the laſt day, Rom. 2. 16. which again runs as high as thoſe words of Chriſt, The words that I have ſpoken, ſhall judge him that believes it not, at the laſt day, John 12. 48.

If here it be replied, that theſe things are rather ſaid of the goſpel which they preached, than of the goſpels and the epiſtles which they writ: I anſwer,

1. That St Peter ſaith of all St Paul's epiſtles, that they were written according to the wiſdom given to him, 2 Pet. 3. 15. 16. even that wiſdom which he ſtyles the wiſdom of God, and aſcribes to the apoſtles in the general, ſaying, We ſpeak the wiſdom of God, &c. 1 Cor. 2. 6. 7. that St Paul himſelf requires all ſpiritual perſons to acknowledge the things he writ unto them, were the commandments of the Lord.

2. I aſk, whether the doctrines of faith and rules of life delivered in theſe goſpels and epiſtles, be not as much a part of the goſpel, or the law of Chriſt, as any thing they preached? If they be a part of it, all theſe aſſertions muſt equally be true of their goſpels and epiſtles written, and their ſermons preached: if they be not, where ſhall we find, and how ſhall we be aſſured, that we have the goſpel of our Lord, ſince we know nothing of it but from what is left on record in that New Teſtament, which contains all we have left of their preaching after the Spirit promiſed to lead them into all truth was fallen upon them? Or, why did all Chriſtians, of that and the ſucceeding ages, depend upon them as their rule of faith? Moreover, that the apoſtles were aſſiſted as fully by the Holy Ghoſt in what they writ, as what they preached, will be apparent from the conſideration of their office, they having this aſſiſtance as being Chriſt's apoſtles, his ambaſſadors, the miniſters of Chriſt, and ſtewards of the myſteries of God. Now, in the preface to their epiſtles, they take care to let the reader know, they who ſent theſe epiſtles were apoſtles, and miniſters of Chriſt, according to the will, and the commandment of God, 2 Tim. 1. 1. for (declaration of) the promiſe of life which is in Chriſt Jeſus, for the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging the truth which is after godlineſs, Tit. 1. 1. If therefore they had this aſſiſtance, becauſe they were the meſſengers of Chriſt, the teachers of the Jew and Gentile in faith and verity; men who received grace and apoſtleſhip from Chriſt to the obedience of faith, and had the word of God committed to them according to the commandment of our God and Saviour; and they were truly diſcharging their office as well when they indited as when they preached the goſpel; they muſt be equally aſſiſted in both.

This,

This, laſtly, will be evident from the conſideration of the common end and deſign both of their writing and preaching: for the reaſon why this aſſiſtance attended them in preaching, was the benefit and education of the church, the building her up in her moſt holy faith, the perfecting the ſaints, the edifying of the body of Chriſt, till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man; for to this end Chriſt gave ſome apoſtles, ſome prophets and evangeliſts, Eph. 4. 11. 12. 13. Now, do not all theſe reaſons equally belong to their writings? Were they not alſo intended, and uſed for theſe very ends in all ſucceeding ages of the church? Did they not in them write the ſame things which they had preached, becauſe this was for their ſafety? Phil. 3. 1. that, after their deceaſe, they might have theſe things always in remembrance, 2 Pet. 1. 15. and that they might be mindful of the commandments of the apoſtles of our Lord, chap. 3. 1. 2. Had they not the promiſe of the Spirit to aſſiſt them in their preaching, that they might guide their hearers into all truth? And doth not the ſame reaſon hold more ſtrongly for their writings, partly becauſe they were to remain when the apoſtles were dead, and could not be conſulted as they might be whilſt living, when any ſcruple did ariſe touching their doctrine, and ſerve for the inſtruction not of one age only, as their preaching did, but of all ages of the Chriſtian world? And, indeed, their preaching without writing, could not have anſwered the deſign of propagating the Chriſtian faith to future ages; experience having taught us, that what is handed only by tradition to us, is ſubject to the greateſt change and innovations; it being the pretended traditions of the Jewiſh church, which corrupted and made void the commandments of God, Matth. 15. 6. and the pretended traditions of the Romiſh church which have turned their Chriſtianity into a ſyſtem of ſuperſtition and idolatry: for, as it is truly obſerved by (n) Origen, "That which only is delivered by "word of mouth, quickly vaniſheth, as being of no certainty." So that if our bleſſed Lord deſigned the continuance of his goſpel to the end of the world, he alſo muſt deſign the aſſiſtance of his apoſtles in the writing of it.

Now, from this argument we may return an anſwer to that cavil which ſome have made againſt the inſpiration of the writings of the New Teſtament, that we meet not in them, as we do frequently in the Old, theſe words, Thus ſaith the Lord, or, The word of the Lord, by ſuch or ſuch a prophet. For,

1. We meet not with theſe words in all the Chetubim, or the Hagiographa, which yet all the Jews acknowledge to be written by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt. Moreover, our Lord ſpeaks of prophets ſent by him, Matth. 23. 34.; which implies, that they muſt be aſſiſted in delivering their meſſage by the Holy Ghoſt, as the prophets were.

2. When we meet with it in the prophets of the Old Teſtament, it is chiefly, if not only, when theſe prophets have a meſſage from the Lord to the people: and when Chriſt ſends his meſſage to the ſeven churches, we find words of like import ſtill repeated, viz. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit ſaith to the churches, Rev. 2. 7.—3. 22. which whole phraſe occurs not elſewhere, but only in the Revelations, or the words of the prophecy of St John.

3. It is ſurely of like import to ſay, This I write to you by the word of the Lord, 1 Theſſ. 4. 15. The word you received from us, is not the word of man, but God, chap. 2. 13. And I who preach it, am his miniſter to fulfil the word of God, Col. 1. 25. The word made known unto you for the obedience of faith, is the command of the everlaſting God, Rom. 16. 25. 26. The things I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord, 1 Cor. 14. 37. For the phraſe ἐν λόγῳ Κυρίου, is the phraſe uſed by the prophets of the Old Teſtament, viz. The prophet ſaid unto him ἐν λόγῳ Κυρίου, by the word of the Lord, Smite me, 1 Kings 20. 35. See chap. 13. 1. 2. 5. 32. and equivalent to it are theſe ſayings. In fine, we read of John the Baptiſt, that the word of God came to him, and he went forth preaching the baptiſm of repentance, Luke 3. 2. 3. which is the very phraſe uſed of the prophets of the Old Teſtament. See the note there. Seeing then our Lord hath taught us, that though he was the greateſt of the prophets before Chriſt, yet the leaſt of the prophets in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he, Matth. 11. 11. can we reaſonably conceive, that this forerunner of the Meſſiah ſhould ſpeak the word of God, as did the prophets of the Old Teſtament; and that the prophets and apoſtles of the New Teſtament, on whom the Holy Ghoſt deſcended, to enable them to teach the mind of Chriſt to all future ages of the church, ſhould not ſpeak and write what they delivered as the rule of faith by like divine aſſiſtances?

§ V. Arg. 2. They who, when they indited theſe writings, were aſſiſted by the Holy Ghoſt, the Spirit of truth, indited theſe records by divine aſſiſtance; for the things God ſpake to his ſervants the prophets, are ſtyled the things which I commanded in τῷ πνεύματί μου, by my Spirit, Zech. 1. 6. But the apoſtles were thus aſſiſted, this they in terms, or by juſt conſequence, aſſert. For St Peter ſaith of them all in general, that they preached the goſpel by the Holy Ghoſt ſent down from heaven, 1 Pet. 1. 12. And is not this as much as he ſaid of the prophets of the Old Teſtament, when he declares, they ſpake as they were moved by the Holy Ghoſt? 2 Pet. 1. 1. St Paul aſſerts in the ſame general expreſſions, that thoſe great things belonging to the goſpel, which neither eye had ſeen, nor ear had heard, nor heart was able to conceive, God had revealed to them by the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 10.; that they had received not the ſpirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that they might know the things which were freely given to Chriſtians of God; and that theſe things they taught not in the words which man's wiſdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghoſt teacheth, comparing ſpiritual things with ſpiritual, ver. 12. 13. In which place, the very deſign of the apoſtle is to prove, againſt the Greek philoſophers, how unreaſonable it was to reject the goſpel, becauſe it came not in the way of demonſtration to human reaſon, but by way of revelation from God, and ſo requireth faith; as of neceſſity it muſt do, ſince it contained ſuch things concerning the deſign of Chriſt's ſalutary paſſion, his reſurrection, aſcenſion, and a future judgment at the general reſurrection, which no natural man could know by the utmoſt improvement of his human reaſon, and ſuch diſcoveries of the counſel of God concerning man's juſtification, which depended upon his good pleaſure, which was known only to that Holy Spirit which ſearcheth all things, even the deep things of God. It is this Spirit, ſaith he, that we have received, and by this Spirit hath God revealed theſe things unto us, and we accordingly do teach them to the world, not in the words which human wiſdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghoſt teacheth, comparing the revelations made to us by the Spirit, with the revelations made to the prophets in the Old Teſtament by the ſame Spirit, and finding that the revelations made to us do far exceed what was diſcovered to them; for what the eye of thoſe prophets had not ſeen in viſion, or their ear heard in dreams, nor can the heart of man conceive without a revelation, even theſe things hath God revealed to us by his Spirit. Thus did they ſpeak the word of God in demonſtration of the Spirit: whence he declares, that if any man deſpiſe their teſtimony or inſtructions, he deſpiſed not man only, but God alſo, who had given them his Spirit, 1 Theſſ. 4. 8. they being not ſufficient for this work of themſelves, but their ſufficiency was of God, who, by this miniſtration of the Spirit, had made them able miniſters of the New Teſtament, 2 Cor. 3. 5. 6. And thus, ſaith he, that God who commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſs, (and who illuminated the prophets, by ſhining upon their imaginations and their underſtandings), hath ſhined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Cor. 4. 6. In his epiſtle to the Epheſians, he declares, that the myſtery of Chriſt was made known to him by immediate revelation, and not to him only, but to the reſt of the apoſtles and prophets of the New Teſtament; for God, ſaith he, hath made known this revelation to us the apoſtles and prophets by the Spirit, Eph. 3. 3. 5. And hence he ſpeaks to the Corinthians in this language, If any man be a prophet, or ſpiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of God, 1 Cor. 14. 37. Here then the argument runs thus:

They who had a like aſſiſtance to that of the prophets under the Old Teſtament, muſt write by the direction of the Holy Ghoſt; for holy men of old ſpake as they were moved by the Holy Ghoſt, and the ſcripture they indited was of divine inſpiration; and their words are cited in the New Teſtament, as ſpoken by the Holy Ghoſt: but the apoſtles had a like aſſiſtance; for, in the words now cited, they ſtyle themſelves apoſtles and prophets; they challenge a like illumination, or ſhining of God upon their hearts, a like revelation of their goſpel by the Holy Spirit; and they pretend to teach it to others in words taught them by the Holy Ghoſt. In all which ſayings they muſt be guilty of a falſe teſtimony concerning God, and muſt impoſe upon the church of Chriſt, if no ſuch aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit was imparted to them.

§ VI. A third argument for the infallible aſſiſtance of the apoſtles in delivering the truth of the goſpel to poſterity, is taken from our Saviour's promiſe to them, he having engaged, Firſt, To ſend the Comforter to be for ever with them, in theſe words: I will aſk the Father, and he ſhall give you another Comforter to be for ever with you, John 14. 16.; and to be always with them when they were executing his commiſſion to make diſciples in all nations, teaching them to obſerve whatever he had commanded them, Matth. 28. 19. 20. Ye, ſaith he, ſhall be my witneſſes of theſe things; and that you may be qualified to be ſo, behold, I ſend the promiſe of my Father upon you, Luke 24. 48. 49. Hence I infer, that they had always the aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit with them in the diſcharge of their apoſtleſhip.

Secondly, He adds, that this Spirit that ſhould thus abide with them, was the Spirit of truth which the world could not receive, John 14. 16. 17. Now, why doth he chuſe to characteriſe him by this epithet, but to inform them, that they might expect from him the certain knowledge of that whole doctrine they were, as his apoſtles, to declare unto the world, and leave to future generations as the rule of faith? That this is indeed the reaſon, we learn from theſe following words, ver. 26. But the Comforter, the Holy Ghoſt, whom the Father ſhall ſend in my name, he ſhall teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all things which I have ſaid unto you; i. e. the things I have commanded you to teach, he ſhall faithfully bring to your remembrance; and as for thoſe many things I have to ſay unto you, which now ye cannot bear, he ſhall teach them all. That this is the true import of this promiſe, we learn from the enſuing words, chap. 16. 12. 13. I have yet many things to ſay unto you, but ye cannot bear them now; but when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he ſhall guide you into all truth, and he ſhall ſhew you things to come: he ſhall guide you into, and therefore ſhall ſecure you from erring from, or going out of the way of truth: he ſhall thus guide you into all truth, which it concerns you, as his apoſtles, to deliver to the Chriſtian church, or any of her members to know, in order to the performance of their duty, or the obtaining the end of their faith, the ſalvation of their ſouls. Hence then, 1*ſt*, We may be ſure, that all the ſermons or diſcourſes of our Lord to his diſciples, recorded in the evangeliſts, are faithfully delivered by his apoſtles, as to the ſenſe and genuine import of them; for otherwiſe, the Holy Spirit did not bring to their remembrance all things which he had ſaid unto them, but ſuffered them to record ſome of his ſayings otherwiſe than he delivered them; nor were they faithful in execution of the charge committed to them, which was to teach all nations all things which he had commanded them. 2*dly*, Hence alſo we may reſt aſſured, that what the apoſtles taught in any of the epiſtles directed to the Chriſtian churches, they taught by the direction and guidance of the Holy Spirit; for ſince they were indited by them as the apoſtles of the Lord, for the inſtruction of the church, of that and the ſucceeding ages, if the Spirit of truth did not guide them into all truth, but ſuffered them to err in the compoſing of them, then was not this promiſe of our Lord fulfilled unto them; no, not then, when they undertook to be teachers of the church in faith and verity, and ſo were more eſpecially concerned to have this guidance of the Holy Spirit. Moreover, Chriſt declares, that he who heareth them, heareth him, Luke 10. 16. he that receiveth them, receiveth him, Matth. 10. 40. Now, to receive the apoſtles even as Chriſt Jeſus, Gal. 4. 14. no man could be obliged, unleſs they were entirely aſſiſted by the Spirit promiſed, to lead them into all truth in the diſcharge of their apoſtleſhip. And this ſeems plainly to be the import of Chriſt's addreſs to his Father, John 17. 17.

Sanctify

Sanctify them in or by thy truth; thy word is truth; for as he himself was sanctified by the Holy Spirit to his prophetic office, Luke 4. 18. John 10. 36. so must they who were apostles and prophets sent by him, Matth. 23. 34. Luke 11. 49. and therefore he saith, As the Father hath sent me, so send I you; receive the Holy Ghost, John 20. 21. 22. and prays, that they may have the same Spirit, that the world might believe, and know the Father had sent him, and had loved them, as he had loved him, chap. 17. 21. 23. See the note there.

§ VII. Arg. 4. These sacred records which were indited to be a standing rule of faith to Christians throughout all ages of the world, the gospel contained in these scriptures being made known to all nations for the obedience of faith, Rom. 16. 26. they must, in all things propounded in them to our faith, contain a divine testimony, or a revelation of the will of God. For as human faith depends upon the testimony of man, so divine faith is that which depends on the testimony of God: and as obedience to men consists in doing the will of men, so our obedience to God consists in conformity to the will of God. Again, if we must all be judged by this law of liberty, James 2. 12. if Christ at the last day will judge the secrets of mens hearts, according to the gospel of St Paul, Rom. 2. 16. if he will come in flaming fire, taking vengeance of all that obey not his gospel, then must this gospel, and this law of liberty, be a rule of faith until Christ's second coming: for, upon that account alone, can men be bound under this dreadful penalty, to yield obedience to it, and be judged by it.

§ VIII. Arg. 5. Lastly, That the apostles, and writers of the books of the New Testament, were assisted both in their preaching and writing by the Spirit of God, the Christians of all ages from the beginning do attest. (o) St Clemens in his epistle to the Corinthians saith, "That the apostle delivered the gospel to us from our Lord Jesus Christ, and Christ from "God; and that being filled with the Spirit, and having the word of God committed to them, they went out preaching "the kingdom of God." He adds, (p) "That the scriptures are the true words of the Holy Spirit: and that St Paul writ to "them by the Spirit, touching himself, and Cephas, and Apollo." (q) Polycarp tells his Philippians, "That none could "attain to the wisdom of St Paul who had writ epistles to them, by looking into which they might be built up in the faith "delivered to them." In (r) Justin's time, the gospels were known by the name of εὐαγγέλια, both to Jew and Gentile; and they were read in their assemblies as the holy prophets, as being writ by men μετοῦς πνύματος ἁγίου, full of the divine Spirit. Dial. cum Tryph. p. 226. 227.

(s) Irenæus informs us, "That the Lord of all things gave to the apostles authority to preach the gospel, and that by "them we have known the truth, that is, the doctrine of the Son of God; to whom he said, He that heareth you, heareth "me: that this gospel they preached, and after, by the will of God, committed to writing, to be the foundation and pillar "of our faith;" and adds, that "all the apostles knew the truth by revelation as well as Paul: (t) for as St Paul was an "apostle not of men, neither by men, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, so were they."

(u) Theophilus declares the consent there is betwixt the things spoken by the prophets, and in the gospels, "because "they both spake by the same Spirit."

(x) Clemens of Alexandria, speaking of the woman who anointed our Saviour's feet with ointment, saith, "This may "be a symbol τῆς διδασκαλίας τῆς κυριακῆς, of our Lord's doctrine: for the feet anointed with sweet smelling ointment, "signify θείαν διδασκαλίαν, the divine doctrine: for the apostles partaking of the Holy Spirit, betokened by the ointment of "sweet odour, are the feet of our Lord anointed." The apostles are, with him, "the disciples of the Spirit." And (y) "we may well call them prophets," saith he, "the prophets and apostles being both acted by one and the same "Spirit." And, (z) "we who have the scriptures are taught of God, being instructed by that Son of God." He adds, "That the scriptures which we have believed are ἐξ αὐθεντίας αὐτοκρατορικῆς, established by God's authority." Strom. 4.

(a) Origen is moſt expreſs, that the ſacred books are not the writings of men, but proceed from the afflatus of the Holy Ghoſt, and came to us by the will of the Father through Jeſus Chriſt. "To them," ſaith he, "that believe this, and ad- "here to the canon of the heavenly church of Jeſus Chriſt, by ſucceſſion from the apoſtles, we ſhall ſhew the appearing "ways, viz. of diſtinguiſhing betwixt the Spirit and the letter." (b) "It becomes us," ſaith he, "to believe, that in "the holy ſcripture there is not one tittle void of the wiſdom of God; for the prophets ſpeak, receiving from his fulneſs; "and there is nothing in prophecy, or the law, or the goſpel, or the apoſtles, which is not from the fulneſs." He adds, (c) "That there is nothing unequal or diſtorted in the oracles of God, but a ſweet harmony of the old ſcriptures with the "new, of the legal ſcriptures with the prophetical, the evangelical with the apoſtolical." He adds, (d) "That we muſt "either ſay as the infidels do, that becauſe they are not uſeful, they are not divinely inſpired; or as the faithful do, that "becauſe they are profitable, they alſo are divinely inſpired." In particular, he places the goſpels in the number of writings, (e) ἐν πάσαις ἐκκλησίαις Θεῷ πιστευομένων εἶναι θείων, received as divine by the whole church of God, and that they were στοιχεῖα τῆς πίστεως τῆς ἐκκλησίας, the principles of the church's faith. But it is needleſs to cite more paſſages from the fathers of the firſt three centuries, ſince by them they are conſtantly ſtyled, (f) The divine ſcriptures, the oracles of God, the wiſdom of God, the voice of God, the divine oracles; they ſay, "that all the ſcriptures are the perfect and well-tuned "organ of God, giving from differing ſounds one ſaving voice to thoſe who are willing to learn."

2. They add, "That (g) both the prophets of the Old, and the writers of the New Teſtament, ſpake by one and the "ſame ſpirit; the Holy Spirit by the providence of God, through the divine word, enlightening theſe miniſters of truth, "the prophets, and the apoſtles."

3. They not only read thoſe writings from the beginning, on the Lord's day, for the inſtruction of the people, but made their (h) inferences and exhortations from them to all Chriſtian duties, and very early made their comments on them.

4. They proved all their (i) doctrines from theſe ſcriptures, and thence inferred, that they retained the true rule of faith, becauſe they delivered only what was conſonant to the doctrine contained in the evangeliſts, and the epiſtles of the apoſtles, as is evident from all their writings.

5. From theſe ſcriptures of the New Teſtament, they remonſtrated againſt, and confuted all the (k) heretics which aroſe in thoſe times, declaring, that they were later than thoſe apoſtles who delivered to them the rule of faith, and that they taught things contrary to, or alien from the doctrine delivered by the apoſtles of our Lord.

Laſtly, That the ſcriptures of the New Teſtament were divinely inſpired, was a truth ſo received by all Chriſtians, that even ſome of the heretics durſt not deny it; and they who did, were looked upon as infidels, ſay Origen, and others. Thus, ſpeaking of the diſciples of Theodotus Coriarius, who corrupted the ſcriptures, "What wickedneſs," ſaith an ancient author, "is this? (l) For either they believe not the holy ſcriptures to be divinely inſpired, and then they are infidels; or "they pretend to be wiſer than the Holy Ghoſt, and then they are mad, or poſſeſſed."

Now, if perſons ſo near to the times of the apoſtles, that ſome of them converſed with them, ſome of them were themſelves inſpired with ſpiritual gifts, ſome of them were acquainted with the immediate ſucceſſors of the apoſtles; if the churches which received theſe writings from the very hands of the apoſtles, and kept ſtill the original, or the authentic copies of them, did ſo unqueſtionably receive them as inſpired writings, and own them as the rule, pillar, and ground of their whole faith; if they read them together with thoſe writings of the prophets, which were on all hands owned as the word of God, proved from them all the doctrines of the Chriſtian faith, received them as the perfect rule of Chriſtian duty, confuted all hereſies, and erroneous doctrines from them, and repreſented thoſe as infidels, who queſtioned or denied their inſpiration by the Holy Ghoſt; they doubtleſs muſt be well aſſured they were delivered to them as ſuch by the apoſtles, or the ſacred penmen of them; and then what reaſon can theſe latter ages have to queſtion what was ſo univerſally acknowledged by thoſe who lived in that very age in which thoſe books were written, and ſent to the churches of Chriſt; or, who received them under that character from men, who in that very age had owned them as written by the conduct and aſſiſtance of the Spirit of God?

§ IX. Having thus eſtabliſhed the divine authority of theſe ſacred records of the Chriſtian faith, I ſhould proceed to ſhew,

1. The truth and certainty of Chriſtian faith:

2. The ſeaſonableneſs and the neceſſity of that revelation: upon which two heads I have gathered ſo many obſervations as cannot be compriſed in a preface; and my eyes failing, I cannot promiſe that I ſhall ever perfect that great work. I therefore ſhall at preſent only mention ſome few peculiarities concerning the Lord Jeſus, and the doctrine taught by him, and propagated through the world by his diſciples, which may conduce to the eſtabliſhment of the truth of Chriſtian faith. And,

1. It may deſerve to be conſidered, that if a Meſſiah were to come when our Lord did, he could be no other than our Jeſus; for even the Jews pretend not that any other who aſſumed that title, was the Meſſiah promiſed to them.

Now, that a Meſſiah was, according to the prophecies of the Old Teſtament, to come about that time, we learn from the raiſed expectation of him, not only in the whole Jewiſh nation, but alſo through all thoſe eaſtern nations among whom they were diſperſed: for they were then expecting that the kingdom of God ſhould immediately appear, Luke 19. 11.; they were looking for the conſolation of Iſrael, Luke 2. 38. Their own (m) Joſephus doth confeſs there was a prophecy found in their ſcriptures, ὡς κατ' ἐκεῖνον καιρὸν, that "about that time one of their country ſhould reign over the earth," and that this animated them πρὸς πόλεμον, to enter upon the war againſt the Romans; and that (n) πολλοὺς βασιλεῖα ὁ καιρὸς ἀνῄρειτο, the time perſuaded many to take upon them the title of king. And as their Meſſiah is by the prophet Haggai ſtyled, the deſire of all nations, chap. 2. 7. ſo we find the wiſe men of the eaſt, at the birth of our Jeſus, coming to inquire, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? Matth. 2. 2. For, as (o) Suetonius doth inform us, "a conſtant, and an old opinion had "obtained, that about that time" Judæa profecti rerum potirentur, that "ſome from Judea ſhould obtain the govern-"ment." It was, ſaith (p) Tacitus, another Roman hiſtorian, a perſuaſion which had obtained among many, that this thing was contained antiquis ſacerdotum literis, in the ancient writings of the prieſts. And this opinion was ſo rooted in the Jewiſh nation, viz. That their Meſſiah was to come about that time, that when they rejected our Jeſus, they fell into one of theſe two opinions; either that their Meſſiah was then come, and lay concealed, according to the words of the (q) Targum on Micah 4. 8. or, that the time of his coming was deferred by reaſon of their ſins; both which opinions are hinted by (r) Trypho, in his dialogue with Juſtin M. declaring, "that either Meſſiah was not yet born, or at leaſt it was "not known where he was." This therefore is the firſt thing peculiar to our Jeſus;

That no other pretended prophet ever came at a time when there was ſuch a general expectation, ariſing from a long ſucceſſion of pretended prophecies both among Jews and Gentiles, that ſuch a prophet was then to come into the world.

2. Conſider, that whoever came into the world as a Meſſiah, muſt come as the Meſſiah of the Jews, becauſe no other nation did expect, or pretend to the promiſe of a Meſſiah. Moreover, whoever came as the Meſſiah of the Jews, muſt at the leaſt pretend to anſwer the characters of their Meſſiah, plainly delivered by the prophets of the Jews in their authentic records, becauſe they being by the Jews received as divine oracles, they could admit no perſon as their promiſed Meſſiah, who anſwered not thoſe characters.

3. No man of reaſon, beſides the true Meſſiah, would have pretended to have anſwered theſe characters, or could have long ſupported that pretence, they being ſuch as required he ſhould open the eyes of the blind, uniſtop the ears of the deaf; that he ſhould make the lame man leap as the hart, and the tongue of the dumb to ſing, Iſ. 42. 7.; 55. 5. 6. and yet that he ſhould be deſpiſed and rejected, Iſ. 53. 3. ſhould pour out his ſoul unto death, and be numbered with the tranſgreſſors, ver. 12. that after this he ſhould riſe again; for his life was not to be left in the grave, nor was his body to ſee corruption, Pſal. 41. 10. And then he was to erect an everlaſting kingdom, ſo that the Heathen ſhould be given to him for his inheritance, and the utmoſt parts of the earth for his poſſeſſion, Pſal. 2. 8.; 22. 27. He was to famiſh all the gods of the earth, ſo that all the iſles of the Heathen ſhould worſhip the true God, Zeph. 2. 11. and from the riſing of the ſun, to the going down of the ſame, his name ſhould be great among the Gentiles, Mal. 1. 11. and that a kingdom, and dominion, and glory ſhould be given to him, ſo that all people, and nations, and languages ſhould ſerve him, Dan. 7. 14. ſo that if Chriſt were not an idiot, he muſt be the Meſſiah promiſed to the Jews.

4. No man beſides the true Meſſiah, were he ever ſo willing, could have anſwered thoſe characters which the ſcriptures of the New Teſtament have repreſented as the characters of the Meſſiah delivered in the Old Teſtament. For he was, ſay theſe writers of his life, to be born of a pure virgin, Matth. 1. 22. 23. of the ſeed of David, and in the town of Bethlehem, John 7. 42.; he was to be betrayed by one that did eat bread with him, John 13. 18. and to be delivered up to the chief prieſts, and elders, and ſcribes, and by them to be condemned, and given up to the Gentiles; he was to be mocked, ſcourged, ſpit upon, buffetted, and crucified by them, Mark 10. 33. 34. Luke 18. 31. 32. 33. to have his hands, feet, and heart pierced, John 19. 37. riſe again the third day, Luke 24. 46. to aſcend into heaven, ver. 26. to draw all men after him, John 12. 32. to caſt the devil out of his kingdom, ver. 31. and chap. 16. 11. to baptize them who believed in him, with the Holy Ghoſt, Matth. 3. 11. Acts 1. 5. and to erect his own kingdom by the preaching of the goſpel through the then known world, Matth. 24. 14.; 26. 13. Here then are theſe things peculiar to the holy Jeſus.

1*ſt*, That it was never foretold by any prophet of the Jews, or by any pretended prophet of the Gentiles, that ſuch a man ſhould be born at ſuch a time, in ſuch a city, who ſhould do great miracles, and yet ſhould be deſpiſed, and rejected, condemned, and die as a deceiver, by the means of thoſe very perſons to whom he came, and among whom he did his miracles; and who ſhould after three days riſe again, and then be owned as the Lord and Saviour of the world through all the earth.

2*dly*, Much leſs was it ever known, that any one pretending to be a prophet, laid the foundation of the truth of his pretenſions upon his being deſpiſed and rejected, and even crucified as a deceiver by them to whom he was ſent, and among whom he performed all his miracles, and upon what ſhould be done by others at his death, as to the manner, and the particular circumſtances of it, and upon what ſhould not be done to him when dead, though it were uſually done to others dying as he did. And,

3*dly*, Upon what he would do after his reſurrection, not by himſelf, but by the preaching of others in his name, to draw thoſe very people to an acknowledgment of him, and make himſelf to be adored and owned as their Lord and Saviour throughout all nations. (s) Maimonides, I confeſs, informs us of one who appeared in Arabia in the twelfth century, pretending to be the forerunner of the Meſſiah, and upon that account to act by a divine commiſſion, of whom the King of Arabia, demanding a ſign or a miracle, in proof of his commiſſion, he anſwered, Cut off my head, and I will riſe again, and live as before; this the king did, and the impoſture ended with his life, no man pretending that he ever roſe again: whereas the reſurrection of our Jeſus, was not atteſted only by twelve apoſtles, by five hundred witneſſes, by St Paul, a bitter enemy of the Chriſtian faith, converted to it by the appearance of this Jeſus to him, but the truth of it was preſently believed by many thouſand Jews who lived upon the place, where they had ſeen him crucified, and many myriads of Gentiles, who gave ſo firm a credit to it, that they confirmed it with the loſs of life, and all the comforts of it.

4*thly*, As for the characters of the Meſſiah delivered in the goſpels, and the great works he promiſed that his diſciples ſhould perform, it ſeemeth neceſſary to ſuppoſe that almoſt all theſe things were done before they were indited. For the tradition of the church runs thus, that St Matthew wrote his goſpel eight, St Mark ten, St Luke fifteen, St John thirty-two years after our Lord's aſcenſion; and therefore had not the things contained in theſe writings been performed before, they muſt have miniſtered to all conſidering perſons a ſtrong objection againſt the truth of what they ſaw recorded in them. For inſtance, had not the apoſtles been filled with the Holy Ghoſt before, they could not have begun their teſtimony, their Lord having engaged that they ſhould be endued with power from on high, not many days after his own aſcenſion, and commanded them to ſtay at Jeruſalem till this was accompliſhed. Had not believers, which then were very numerous, been both enabled and accuſtomed to caſt out devils, heal diſeaſes, and to ſpeak with tongues, it would have been natural to inquire why their Lord's promiſe was not made good to them. There could have been no truth in all the Acts of the apoſtles, had they not been before enabled to do the greateſt wonders, even ſuch as had not been performed by our Lord, viz. the converſion of thouſands by one ſermon, the giving of the Holy Ghoſt by impoſition of hands, the healing diſeaſes by their ſhadow, and by cloaths ſent from them. But yet let theſe things be as falſe as any infidel can imagine, ſince they are all recorded of our Jeſus by his own witneſſes, and are contained in thoſe hiſtories which they delivered to the world, as the true records of his words and actions, they muſt ſtand bound to make them good, and perſuade all believers they were certain truths, or be convinced from their own words that their Jeſus failed of what he promiſed and foretold, and therefore was not a true prophet.

Now, peruſe the records of all nations, and ſhew me one impoſtor who ever did pretend that ſuch things ſhould be done by his diſciples after his death: or what diſciples of the moſt ſubtile cheat ever obliged themſelves by ſuch experiments to teſtify the truth of what their maſter did pretend to? And if never any impoſtor in his wits, or if not one abettor of them ever pretended to ſuch things, we have great reaſon to believe this Jeſus and his followers were no impoſtors. Should any one have ſaid, when Chriſt was nailed to the croſs, that many thouſands of his bloody murderers ſhould in few days become his converts, and venture all their preſent and eternal intereſts upon the truth of his pretended reſurrection; ſhould they have ſaid, that throughout all the Roman empire he ſhould be owned as that King to whom all power both in heaven and earth was given, and as that Jeſus who alone could give ſalvation; ſhould they have added that all this ſhould be done in ſpite of all the powers of wit and policy, of eloquence and of the ſword, the intereſts and luſts, the ſuperſtitions and corrupt opinions, and the reputed wiſdom of mankind, by a few mean unſkilful men, who were the hatred and deriſion of the place they lived in, becauſe God would bear witneſs to their doctrines by mighty ſigns and wonders, and diſtributions of the Holy Ghoſt; I ſay, ſhould a thing ſeeming ſo extravagant been then vented, it would ſurely have paſſed for an idle brain-ſick dream, as little to be heeded, as that twelve cripples ſhould beſiege, ſtorm, plunder, and deſtroy the ſtrongeſt and beſt peopled city. And yet the apoſtles, in effect, not only ſaid much more, but ſo confirmed their ſayings, as that the records in which they were contained, have ever ſince obtained as the faith of Chriſtians, and been the rule of their whole lives.

§ X. Let us paſs on to the conſideration of the miracles performed by the holy Jeſus. Now, they are repreſented in theſe records,

1. As exceeding many, even ſo many that the chief prieſts and Phariſees, who bore the greateſt diſaffection to him, are forced to confeſs, this man doth many miracles, inſomuch that if we let him alone, all men will believe in him, John 11. 47. 48. and the multitude cry out, When Chriſt cometh, will he do more miracles than this man hath done? John 7. 31. See note on John 21. 25.

2. His miracles, as they were very many, ſo were they alſo very great and powerful, and ſo aſſuredly performed by the finger of God; even Herod ſtyles them mighty works, Mark 6. 14. Nicodemus, when he had only begun to do them, acknowledges, that no man could do ſuch works as he did, except God were with him, John 3. 2. And he himſelf ſaith, If I had not done among the Jews thoſe works which never man did, they had not had ſin, John 15. 24.

3. The apoſtles do with greateſt confidence avow to Jew and Gentile, that this Jeſus had done great wonders to confirm his doctrine, and that this was a thing well known to them, and by theſe ſayings they converted thoſe that heard them. Thus, in that ſermon of St Peter's which added to the church three thouſand ſouls, Jeſus of Nazareth is ſaid to have been a man approved among them by miracles, wonders, and ſigns which God did by him in the midſt of them; for which he preſently appeals to their own conſciences, ſaying, This ye yourſelves know, Acts 2. 24.; and the ſame apoſtle appealeth in like manner to the knowledge of this by the centurion and his friends, ſaying, Ye know the thing done throughout all Judea, how Jeſus being anointed with the Holy Ghoſt, and with power, went about doing good, and healing all that were oppreſſed of the devil, for God was with him, Acts 10. 37. 38. Now, here theſe things may be obſerved,

1*ſt*, That theſe records, contained in the firſt three goſpels, being writ, ſaith tradition, within fifteen years after our Lord's aſcenſion, or at the leaſt before that deſtruction of Jeruſalem, of which they all ſpeak as future, and before which it is probable they died; many of thoſe nine thouſand who were miraculouſly fed with a few loaves, and two little fiſhes, and many who were healed in every city, where Chriſt and his diſciples came, muſt be ſurviving witneſſes of the truth or falſehood of theſe writings.

2*dly*, That, notwithſtanding this, we find not one thing delivered by them, as done by Chriſt or his apoſtles, either among Jew or Gentile, which they ever proved, or even declared to be falſe. We find indeed in theſe records the Phariſees declaring that he caſt out devils by Beelzebub, Matth. 9. 34.; 12. 24. and ſaying in their own writings, that (t) "by virtue "of the name Shem Hamephoraſh, which he ſtole out of the temple, he raiſed the dead, and walked upon the waters, "and cured the lame, and cleanſed the lepers." The wiſer Heathens, Celſus, Porphyry, Hierocles, and Julian, confeſſed that our Lord did miracles, that he healed the blind and the lame, and caſt out devils; but then they add, that he did theſe things "by that art of magic which he had learned from the Egyptians, and by ſome names of powerful an-"gels he had learned in Egypt;" and the ſame they affirmed of his diſciples: The Chriſtians, ſaith (u) Celſus, ſeem to prevail δαιμόνων τίνων ὀνόμασι καὶ κλήσεσι, by virtue of the name and invocation of ſome demons. And, becauſe St Paul was more eſpecially enabled by mighty ſigns and wonders, and gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, to make the Gentiles obedient in word and deed, Rom. 15. 18. 19. (x) Julian ſays of him, that he did ὑπερεβάλλετο πάσας παλαιὰς τὰς πάνυ γοήτας, καὶ ἀπατεῶνας, exceed every way all the cheats and jugglers which ever were. Which, by the way, demonſtrates, that neither the malicious Jew, nor ſubtile Heathen were able to confute the facts contained in the goſpels, or the Acts; for had they been able to have ſhewn the falſehood of them in one point, they would have had no cauſe to fly unto this artifice, it being ſufficient for their purpoſe to have ſhewed the falſehood of any thing delivered in theſe records of the Chriſtian faith; whereas they only did pretend to balance the miracles of Chriſt, and his apoſtles, and the cures performed by them, (as Pharaoh did the miracles of Moſes), by oppoſing to them the miracles done by Pythagoras and Apollonius; and the cures done by their gods, and the Heathen exorciſts. Now, here conſider,

(.) That Chriſt not only did theſe miracles himſelf; but, whilſt he was with them, he ſent out firſt the twelve,

(t) Raym. pug. fid. p. 290. (u) Apud Orig. p. 7. (x) Apud Cyril. Alex. l. 3. p. 100.

and, after them, the ſeventy diſciples, to heal all manner of diſeaſes, and caſt out devils in his name, Matth. 10. Luke 10.

(2.) He engaged his truth, that, after his departure from them, his apoſtles ſhould do greater works than theſe, becauſe he went unto the Father, John 14. 12.

(3.) He promiſed that theſe ſigns ſhould follow them that believed, In his name they ſhould caſt out devils, heal diſeaſes, and ſpeak with new tongues, Mark 16. 17. 18.

In anſwer to what the Heathens offer to invalidate the ſtrength of this argument,

1. It is confeſſed, that both Jews and Heathens pretended to the power of caſting out devils, as truly as the Chriſtians did, and both had their exorciſts for that very purpoſe; but then we find not one of them who ever promiſed, or pretended, that thoſe who would believe in them, ſhould do this in their name, as did our Jeſus; not one who ever attempted to ſilence them at their oracles, and expel them from their temples, and force them to confeſs, before thoſe very men who worſhipped them as gods, that they were but devils; and yet, from Theophilus to Euſebius, i. e. from the ſecond to the fourth century, the Chriſtians triumph in this argument, and promiſe, upon pain of death, to extort this confeſſion from them, and ſpeak of it as thing known even to the very Heathens: Hæc omnia ſciunt plerique, pars veſtrum, ipſos dæmonas de ſeipſis confiteri, "that the devils are forced by us thus to confeſs what they are, moſt know, and even ſome of you," ſaith Minutius. Credite illis quum verum de ſe loquuntur, qui mentientibus creditis, "You, who believe their lies, believe them ſpeaking thus the truth againſt themſelves," ſaith Tertullian.

2. It is confeſſed, that many Heathens did plead, in anſwer to the Chriſtians triumphing in the gift of healing, conferred upon the meaneſt Chriſtians by their Lord, that their gods alſo did multorum hominum morbos valetudineſque ſanare, heal the diſeaſes of many: but never any ſent their diſciples, as our Jeſus did his apoſtles, and afterwards the ſeventy diſciples by two and two, through all the cities of Judea, or any other country, to cure all diſeaſes in his name, as it is recorded by St Luke's goſpel, writ within fifteen years after the thing was done, and ſo whilſt myriads of Jews were living to teſtify the truth or falſehood of this thing, yea many who had actually been healed by them. Never did any promiſe, as our Saviour did, that they who would believe in him ſhould do the ſame, and that his own apoſtles ſhould do greater works than he. Never did any enable others to beſtow this gift upon believers by impoſition of their hands, or by baptizing them in this all-powerful name, as the apoſtles did. This then is ſuch an eminent demonſtration of the truth of Chriſtian faith as hath no parallel.

3. It is confeſſed, that many of the Heathen Magi pretended to work many miracles. And hence, Pythagoras, by Porphyry and Jamblicus; Apollonius Tyanæus, by Hierocles; and Apuleius is by others compared to our Jeſus. But then,

1*ſt*, All their pretended miracles were done to none, or evil purpoſes, as being done to eſtabliſh the barbarous, obſcene, and fooliſh rites of Heathen ſuperſtition, which was the grand deſign of Apollonius, and alſo of Pythagoras, who taught all men, ſaith Jamblicus, τὸ μένειν ἐν τοῖς πατρίοις ἔθεσι καὶ νομίμοις, to continue in the rites and cuſtoms of their country; and this we learn from his golden verſes; and conſequently it is certain that an holy God could never countenance what was ſo oppoſite both to his nature and his honour; but it was the concernment of the devil thus to endeavour to confirm that bruiſh and idolatrous worſhip by which his kingdom was upheld and propagated, and to oppoſe the prevalence of Chriſtian faith: Whereas the miracles of Chriſt and his apoſtles were all ſalutary and highly beneficial, and were deſigned to advance the knowledge of the true God upon the ruins of idolatry, to turn men from Satan to God, to teach them to excel in purity and virtue, in piety to God, in truth and juſtice, charity and mercy towards others; and ſo was worthy of the concernment of a pure and holy God, as being the moſt lively tranſcript of his own perfections.

2*dly*, All the great things aſcribed to theſe perſons have ſuddenly been blaſted, and they, like comets, have blazed for a while, to the amazement of the world, and preſently have ſet in darkneſs; which is a pregnant evidence that they derived from the prince of darkneſs, and only feigned a commiſſion from that King of heaven, who neither wanteth power nor wiſdom to accompliſh his deſigns; whilſt Chriſtianity was like the riſing ſun, which ſhineth more and more unto the perfect day. St Paul informs the church of Rome and Coloſſe, that in the ſpace of thirty years the goſpel had been preached throughout the world, and brought forth fruit in every nation, on which account it quickly did obtain the name of ἡ κρατοῦσα διδαχὴ, or, the prevailing doctrine, as Porphyry and Julian do confeſs. Now, ſurely, to aboliſh all idolatry, to reform the vices of the world, and to enable a few illiterate perſons, by mighty ſigns and wonders, by admirable gifts and diſpenſations of the Holy Ghoſt, to ſubdue the world to the belief of the whole Chriſtian faith, and to the worſhip of a man, condemned by his own nation as a falſe prophet, and a malefactor, as the God and Saviour of the world, muſt be a vain attempt, though managed by the moſt ſubtile and improved impoſtor. But,

3*dly*, None of theſe perſons ever pretended to tranſmit this power which they vaunted of to any other perſon, as our Saviour did; or to leave behind them thoſe, who, by like actions, ſhould atteſt the truth of what they did deliver in his name, or ſuffer for the cauſe they owned. The demon in the ſtatue of Apollonius did for a little while, by uttering oracles, perſuade men to worſhip Apollonius as a god; but the ſame (y) author adds, that God αὐτὸν τὸν δαίμονα ἐφίμωσε, κατηξήσας αὐτῷ τὰς μαντείας, ſtruck dumb this demon, making void, or aboliſhing his oracles: whereas this power was not only imparted by our Lord to his apoſtles, and promiſed to thoſe who ſhould believe in him, but alſo was, by the impoſition of the hands of theſe apoſtles, or by their baptiſm in the name of Jeſus, conferred upon them, and promiſed to them; as in those words of Peter, Repent, and be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, and ye shall receive the Holy Ghost. And hence Arnobius, having summed up the miracles our Jesus did, adds, that he not only did them by his power, but, which was more sublime, multis aliis facere sui nominis cum adjectione permisit, "impowered many others to do them "in his name, nor did he any of those miracles which raised astonishment in others, which he enabled not his little ones, "and even rustics, to perform;" and then he triumphs over the Heathens thus, "What say you, oh ye stiff and incredu- "lous minds, alicuine mortalium Jupiter ille Capitolinus hujusmodi potestatem dedit? Did ever that Jupiter, whom "the Romans worship in the Capitol, give the like power to any mortal?" and then most rationally concludes, that "to transfer this miraculous power to a man, and to give authority and strength to a creature, to do that which by their "power alone can be done, super omnia sitæ est potestatis, is an evidence of one whose power presideth over all things, "and who hath all the creatures at his beck."

And, lastly, to the pretence that Christ and his apostles did all their miracles by magic arts; I will not answer as Origen doth to Celsus, that all who ever did converse with Christians know this to be a lie, not any of them finding that they ever used, but that they constantly abhorred these arts; nor yet inquire with Arnobius, potestis aliquem nobis demonstrare ex omnibus illis magis, qui unquam fecere per secula, consimile aliquid Christo, millesima ex parte qui fecerit? Nor will I represent it as an absurdity to think our Lord could learn these arts in Egypt when he was but two years old: nor will I ask, whether these Christians were assisted in these arts by good or evil spirits, it being as improbable that evil spirits should promote Christianity to the destruction of their kingdom, as that good angels should promote a lie, or countenance a wicked cheat: I only ask, how came these Christians to convert the Egyptians, and even those magi from whom they are supposed to have learned these arts? (2.) Seeing the art of magic was then at the height in Ephesus, Samaria, Judea, and through the Heathen world, by what means came those Christians, who, by the Heathens, were still called idiots and mechanics, to be so dexterous in these infernal arts, that all the skill and learning of the world could neither equal nor detect their subtilty? Seeing the Jews swarmed both in Ephesus and Egypt, why did none of them ever attain to the like skill? How is it none of the Egyptian sorcerers did ever contend with Christ or his apostles, as they did of old with Moses, or manifest these sleights to the deceived world, with which they were so well acquainted? How is it that those many who did desert the Christian faith, did never once confess their skill in magic, or discover one book, or one instruction they had learned from Christ or his apostles, to produce such wonderful effects? Lastly, the apostles, and first Christians, could not be deceivers, but others who did embrace, and successively promote and spread their doctrine, must know that they were so, and be instructed in the same arts of falsehood by them; for they could never propagate their cheats without great falsehood and hypocrisy, nor prevail on any that were not willing to be their confederates, and learn their artifices for the imposing of this faith on others. Now, how incredible is it, that so many myriads, throughout three ages, in which these miracles were done, should all conspire in an unprofitable and known lie, from whence they did, and could reap nothing but loss and poverty, persecutions, imprisonments, and death, and not one single person be induced to divulge the cheat, let any reasonable person judge; especially, if we consider that the only motives which Christianity did offer to engage men to perseverance in that faith, were the inward consolations of the Holy Spirit, and a future recompense, neither of which could belong to, or reasonably be expected by men who knew themselves promoters of a vile pernicious lie.

Hence, therefore, we may argue thus:

They who neither had, nor could have any motive to believe, continue in, promote, or suffer for the Christian faith, besides the inward consolations of the Holy Ghost, and the expectations of the blessings promised in the life to come, cannot reasonably be supposed to be wilful cheats; the reason is, because the Spirit of God could not give any inward consolations to those who were promoting a notorious falsehood by infernal arts; nor was it possible that they who knew they used these arts, should expect on that account to be for ever happy in the enjoyment of that holy God who loveth truth in the inward parts, or to be raised by him to an inheritance undefiled; seeing then even the light of nature, and reason of mankind assures us, that not one of, much less all, those myriads which believed Christianity could do it without any motive; since the light of scripture doth assure us, they could then have no other motive to believe, than those of the internal consolations of the Holy Spirit at present, and the hopes of a blessed resurrection to eternal life. Seeing, 3dly, the attributes of God, and the nature of the Holy Ghost assure us, that they who propagated an imposture by magic, and infernal arts, or by delusions, should never have these inward consolations of the Holy Ghost, or expectations of eternal happiness, as the reward of their impostures or delusions, it is impossible they should be cheats.

In fine, the wonders which accompanied our Saviour's death, were as remarkable and glorious as were the actions of his life; for, when the traitor Judas came to apprehend him, he did but say unto them, I am Jesus, and straightway both the traitor, and all that did attend him, were stricken down to the ground, John 18. 6. and when Peter had stricken off the ear of Malchus, he healed it with a touch, Luke 22. 51.; even when he hung upon the cross, and when he had given up his Spirit, the heavens were overspread with darkness at noon-day, which is a thing observed by the very Heathens, and from their records handed down to us; the earth quaked, the rocks split, the veil of the temple was rent, the graves were opened, and many that were dead arose, and came into the city, and appeared to many, Matth. 27. 51. 52. 53. Now, we read nothing of this nature concerning either Pythagoras, or Apollonius, though Philostratus tells us, that Apollonius died not, but was translated into heaven.

§ XI. Again, as our Lord frequently foretold, that being dead, after three days he would rise again, so have we certain demonstration that he arose accordingly, from the consideration of the persons engaged to attest it, and the absurdity of thinking they should all conspire to attest a lie. For,

1. The dead body of our Lord could not continue in the grave after three days; for, had it viſibly lain dead there after that time, this had been ſufficient to have proved our Saviour a falſe prophet, becauſe he promiſed ſo oft that he would riſe again the third day, Acts 10. 40. 1 Cor. 15. 3. Luke 24. 46.; yet, if our Lord was not then riſen from the dead, his body muſt continue there, or be conveyed thence by ſome body.

2. It is not reaſonable to believe that perſons unconcerned for this Jeſus, or who believed not well of him, ſhould remove his body thence, ſince no man can imagine why they ſhould attempt it, or what motive they could have to do it; and therefore this never was pretended, or affirmed by Jew or Gentile. Moreover, either they did this without acquainting Chriſt's diſciples of their enterpriſe, and then how eaſy was it for them, by producing the dead body, to confute the teſtimony of his diſciples, and how unlikely was it that theſe diſciples would have begun to teſtify a thing which might, for any thing they could know to the contrary, be preſently confuted by producing that very body they ſaid was riſen from the dead? Or, 2dly, They acquainted Chriſt's diſciples with the fact, became confederates with them, and engaged to conceal the body, and then upon the ſtrength of this confederacy and promiſe, muſt depend all the hopes which Chriſt's diſciples had, that they ſhould be ſucceſsful in this teſtimony, and not be proved cheats by ocular demonſtration. Now, is it reaſonable to conceive, that in this matter they ſhould truſt to the fidelity of thoſe men, who in this very buſineſs, in which their ſilence could alone befriend them, were the worſt of cheats? It is, laſtly, more incredible, that perſons of this temper ſhould ſtill go on to ſtifle and conceal the matter, and not be tempted by the pleaſure of the thing, the ſervice they might do to their religion, the hopes of a conſiderable reward, or by the hatred of a cheat ſo groſs and palpable, to manifeſt the ſhame and infamy of thoſe who forged it. Or,

3. His dead body within that time muſt be conveyed from the ſepulchre by Chriſt's diſciples, as the Jews ſaid it was. Now, againſt this vain pretenſion of the Jews, we have the ſtrongeſt evidence imaginable; the evangeliſts and ſacred writers having ſo contrived this teſtimony, that it was incredible they ſhould attempt, and in the nature of the thing, impoſſible they ſhould effect it, had it been a lie, or a contrivance of thoſe men who had their Lord's dead body in their hands.

For, 1ſt, The teſtimony they delivered was this, That the ſame Jeſus whom the Jews had crucified as a falſe prophet, was declared to be the Son of God by the reſurrection of his body from the dead. Now, it hath been ſhewn, note on 1 Cor. 15. 35. that the reſurrection of the dead was by the Gentiles deemed a thing incredible: The reſurrection of that very perſon whom the Jews had ſo lately condemned and crucified as an impoſtor, was that which they, of all men, would be moſt unwilling to believe, ſeeing it was a teſtimony which not only did acquit this Jeſus from all the calumnies and falſe aſperſions of the Jews, but alſo pronounced their greateſt rabbi's an evil brood of hypocrites, fools, and blind, ſerpents and vipers, a wicked and adulterous generation, a deviliſh damned crew, nay, their whole nation guilty of the moſt horrid crime that could be charged upon man, even the murder of the Lord of life, and which aſſured them there was no ſalvation to be hoped for but from that very perſon whom they had taken, and by wicked hands had crucified and ſlain, and that all power both in heaven and earth was given to him; and therefore it was not to be expected it ſhould gain credit among Jews or Gentiles, unleſs it was confirmed by the greateſt miracles.

2dly, As our Lord often told, not only his diſciples, but the Jews alſo, that he would ſhortly return to his Father, that he ſhould aſcend up where he was before, John 6. 62. and go to him that ſent him, John 7. 33. 34. that, within a while, they ſhould ſee the Son of man ſitting on the right hand of power, Matth. 26. 64. and that he would come in the glory of his Father, and reward every man according to his works; ſo doth this teſtimony declare, that he was now exalted to the right hand of God, and that God had made him Lord of all things, Acts 2. 36. that he had exalted him to be a prince and a Saviour, Acts 5. 31. nor was ſalvation to be expected by any other, Acts 4. 12. and, laſtly, that by this reſurrection he had demonſtrated that he was to be the judge of the quick and the dead, Acts 17. 31. Now, it ſeemed fooliſhneſs both to Jew and Gentile, that ſuch a one who ſeemed to them to be without all form or comelineſs, all outward ſplendor or grandeur, one branded for a rebel and impoſtor by his own nation, and as ſuch condemned by ſo great a power, ſhould be declared to be the Son of God, the Lord of all things, the author of ſalvation to all men, the ſovereign object of their adoration. And,

3dly, As an immediate conſequence of this, it was a teſtimony which never could be owned in any part of the whole Heathen world, but they muſt thereupon renounce all the religion eſtabliſhed among them by law and cuſtom, diſcard the gods which they and their forefathers had ſo long worſhipped, as devils, and dumb idols, and own the God of Iſrael as the only true god, and ſubmit to thoſe doctrines of the holy Jeſus which required them ſo entirely to renounce their ſinful pleaſures, which were ſo grateful to the fleſh, and all thoſe vices to which they had ſo long indulged, and henceforth live a life of higheſt purity and ſeparation from the pleaſures and enjoyments of this world to be employed in acts of ſelf-denial and mortification, in taking up the croſs, and ſuffering patiently the worſt of temporal evils, only in hopes of future bleſſings from a crucified Jeſus, and a reward to be conferred upon them by him, after a more incredible reſurrection of their bodies from the grave. Now, it is certain, from reaſon and experience, that a new doctrine, which ſtands obnoxious to a great many prejudices both of the judgment and affections, and which contains many things that ſeem to render it incredible to the one, and many more which render it unpleaſant to the other, is moſt unlikely to prevail upon the world, in oppoſition to all other doctrines. (2.) That men are not eaſily induced to reject thoſe principles which they received from their education, but ſtill are backward to admit new faith, to confeſs their errors, and condemn themſelves, and paſs hard ſentences upon the ſtate of their beloved friends, relations, and anceſtors. (3.) That men are naturally wedded to their luſts, and bear a paſſionate affection to the pleaſures and enjoyments of the world; and therefore, that which ſuddenly prevails upon them to renounce them all, muſt be of greater power, and of more prevailing efficacy than the temptations of the world. (4.) That it is not eaſy to prevail upon the world to quit a preſent and important intereſt, only in hopes of future good, or to expoſe themſelves to the worſt of ſufferings in confirmation and purſuance of thoſe hopes, without the moſt concluding grounds of hope, much leſs in contradiction to them. (5.) That men of the loweſt birth and education, and ſuch as were great ſufferers both in their reputation and their perſons, were men unlikely to prevail upon perſons of all ſorts and conditions whatſoever, to quit their religion, and their habitual luſts, their worldly intereſts, and their alluring pleaſures, and their eſpouſed tenets, much more their lives, and deareſt relatives, and to expoſe themſelves to thoſe evils which are moſt contrary to the deſires of human nature, and to the deſigns of mere natural men.

Again, They tell us, they were ſent to preach this teſtimony to all nations, and to baptize them into the faith thus preached, to publiſh it to the Jews, Samaritans, and to the uttermoſt parts of the earth, Acts 1. 8. Now, could they convert great numbers of all nations from darkneſs unto light, perſuade them to diſcard their own religion they had ſo long embraced, quit all the worſhip and the rites they had received from their forefathers, renounce all the evil cuſtoms and manners they had ſo long indulged to, only to worſhip and expect ſalvation by one condemned by his own nation, where his pretended miracles were wrought, as a falſe prophet, and a vile impoſtor? They were to turn them from the power of Satan unto God, and therefore were to deſtroy that ſtrong man armed, to overthrow his kingdom, to ſtop the mouth of his oracles, deſtroy his temples and his worſhip, to caſt out devils where they came, and make his kingdom fall like lightning; now, could they convert thoſe nations whoſe languages they underſtood not, without the gift of tongues; which, if they wanted, they muſt ſtand mute among them, without one word to ſay in propagation of this teſtimony? How could they work ſo great a change upon them, or prevail with them to ſuffer ſo much, as their converts, by their own confeſſion, were obliged to do, for the ſake of this their teſtimony, without the greateſt evidence, that what they told them was a certain truth? And how could they afford this evidence to any without a conſluence of miracles to confirm their ſayings? Hence,

4*thly*, They ſo often tell us, that their Lord promiſed to enable them, in confirmation of this teſtimony, to work greater miracles than he himſelf had done, John 14. 12. and that they who believed this teſtimony, ſhould be enabled to heal the ſick, to caſt out devils, and ſpeak with new tongues; that, for the propagation of this teſtimony, he would give them a mouth and wiſdom which all their adverſaries ſhould not be able to gainſay; that they ſhould have no need when they were before princes and rulers on the account of this teſtimony, to premeditate, becauſe the Holy Ghoſt would teach them in that hour what to ſay, Luke 12. 12.; 21. 15. That he promiſed, that they ſhould be enabled for this work by the power of the Holy Ghoſt deſcending on them, and convincing the world of their ſin who believed not in him, and of his righteouſneſs, becauſe he went unto the Father, and of a future judgment, becauſe the prince of the world ſhould by them be condemned, and caſt out of his kingdom, John 16. 8.—11. They introduce him praying to his Father, that they might thus be aſſiſted by this Holy Spirit, that the world might believe that he had ſent him; ſee the note on John 17. 21. 22. 23. and promiſing the Holy Ghoſt to them that would believe in him, John 7. 37.—39. Whence it muſt neceſſarily follow from their own words, that they muſt have received this miraculous aſſiſtance, and theſe diſtributions of the Holy Ghoſt, for confirmation of this teſtimony; or elſe that Jeſus, whoſe reſurrection they proclaimed, muſt be a falſe prophet. Hence it is evident beyond all contradiction,

1*ſt*, That a power of doing mighty miracles, and of exerciſing and diſtributing the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt to believers, was abſolutely neceſſary, in places where they came, for confirmation of this teſtimony, and planting any Chriſtian church in any nation; it being abſolutely neceſſary to make this teſtimony effectual, that both the apoſtles who gave in this teſtimony, and they who did believe it, ſhould be aſſiſted by the power of miracles, and be endowed with the miraculous gifts and diſtributions of the Holy Ghoſt; and yet,

2*dly*, It is as certain, that if this Jeſus was not riſen, or being riſen, had failed in all his promiſes of ſuch miraculous aſſiſtance, that his diſciples could have no motive to begin this teſtimony, or never could be able thus to confirm what they affirmed.

1. They could have then no motive to begin this teſtimony: for, if he were not riſen, or if he failed in all theſe promiſes, they muſt conclude him an impoſtor; and then, what motives could they have to publiſh him the Saviour of the world, who, after he had called them to leave all, and follow him, and made ſuch ample promiſes unto them, of judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael, Matth. 19. 28. left them ſo ſadly in the lurch, expoſed to ſhame and infamy? How could they hope, by mighty ſigns and wonders, by gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, great and numerous, to give in evidence to his reſurrection, (as they confidently pretended they were impowered to do), had he been ſtill reſerved under the power of death, and only by his own, or others arts, removed from his ſepulchre? How is it, that they never thought within themſelves, he could not ſave himſelf, and whence ſhall we expect ſalvation? He could not, by his miracles of power and goodneſs, prevail upon one nation to believe his doctrine; and can we, though deſtitute of all that power which reſided in him, think to reduce the world into obedience, or to impart the Holy Ghoſt to others, when we ourſelves have the ſpirit of deluſion only? Who can imagine, were this ſo, they would have ſaid ſo boldly at the firſt entrance on this teſtimony, to men who wondered at them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of the Lord Jeſus, and you ſhall receive (theſe gifts of) the Holy Ghoſt; for the promiſe (of the Holy Ghoſt, recorded by the prophet Joel) is (made) to you, and to your children, and to as many as the Lord your God ſhall call; or ſay ſo confidently before the Jewiſh ſanhedrim, their mortal enemies, We are witneſſes of theſe things, and ſo is the Holy Ghoſt which God hath given to thoſe that believe, Acts 5. 32. if there were no ſuch thing?

Nor, 2. Could they confirm their teſtimony by any miracles, or divine aſſiſtance; for, if their teſtimony were a lie, they had no reaſon to expect the leaſt aſſiſtance for the propagation of it, but had juſt reaſon to conceive, that all the powers both in earth and heaven ſhould be engaged to confound it; for ſure they could expect no help from him whom they declared to be riſen, if in their conſciences they knew he was ſtill under the power of death; they rather had great reaſon to expect that God ſhould croſs them in thoſe deſigns which they profanely vented in his name, making him witneſs to a lie; they could not hope to be aſſiſted by the powers of darkneſs, ſeeing their doctrine did ſo plainly tend to the ſubverſion of Satan's kingdom; they could not rationally hope, that either Jew or Gentile would befriend them in the promotion of a cheat, which they were both concerned in intereſt and honour to detect: What therefore could embolden them to enter upon the propagation of this cheat, in oppoſition to all the powers both of heaven and earth?

To ſtrengthen this argument, let us conſider the ſucceſs of this teſtimony. Our Lord had declared, that after he had been lifted up, he would draw all men after him, John 12. 32. and that then his kingdom, from a ſmall beginning, ſhould increaſe as a grain of muſtard-ſeed, and be like leaven leavening the whole lump, Luke 13. 19. 21. Accordingly, we find that this teſtimony, when it was firſt declared to the world on the day of Pentecoſt, prevailed at one ſermon over three thouſand, and at another on five thouſand, of thoſe very perſons who had ſeen him crucified, to believe that he was riſen from the dead. He ſent them forth to preach this doctrine to the world, with a promiſe that he would be with them, Matth. 28. 20. And accordingly it is ſaid, They went forth preaching this doctrine every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with ſigns following, Mark 16. 20. and that with great power gave the apoſtles witneſs to the reſurrection of the Lord Jeſus, Acts 4. 33. and that God bare witneſs to the word of his grace, both with ſigns and wonders, and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, Heb. 2. 4.; and of the truth of this, the Acts of the Apoſtles, the epiſtles written to the churches planted by them, the miracles done by many myriads of Chriſtians, and the gifts daily exerciſed in their aſſemblies, are a demonſtration; yea, the ſpeedy and wonderful ſucceſs and prevalency of this teſtimony, confirms the truth of what they delivered; for, if men were not then infatuated, how could it come to paſs, that ſo great a part of the world as was ſo ſuddenly converted by their teſtimony, ſhould, without any proof, or other evidence, than the bare relation of ſuch ignorant unlearned perſons, give credit to their fiction; or, that perſons of all ranks and conditions, ſhould not only yield a firm aſſent to ſuch a proofleſs fable, but readily ſhould ſacrifice their lives and fortunes to maintain that faith?

For farther demonſtration of the truth of this teſtimony, let us reflect a little upon the perſons commiſſioned by Chriſt to preach it to the world; and we ſhall find,

1. That they were perſons who had no advantages of birth, wealth, or worldly intereſts, which might enable them to manage, or promote this work, no wiſdom to contrive, no policy to carry on ſuch cunningly-deviſed fables, as being both according to their own report, and the objection of the Heathen world, ἀγράμματοι, καὶ ἰδιῶται, illiterate and ſimple men; and is it eaſy to conceive, that men ſo few, ſo meanly qualified as to condition, endowments, or ability of mind, without all ſupernatural aſſiſtance, ſhould ſo ſkilfully contrive, ſo courageouſly maintain, and ſo ſucceſsfully manage ſuch a ſtory, as quickly to engage the faith of many myriads to yield a firm aſſent unto it?

2. They could have no motive from any worldly intereſts to propagate this lie throughout the world, but they had all imaginable reaſons to decline it, if it were not true; for all thoſe things which the allurements of the world can ſignify, they willingly abandoned for the ſake of this one teſtimony, incurring both the loſs of honour, pleaſure, and of all worldly intereſts in proſecution of it: nay, they declared, that this very Jeſus, whoſe reſurrection they atteſted, had foretold that this ſhould be their portion, that in this world they ſhould have tribulation, that they ſhould be hated of all nations for his name's ſake, that they ſhould be delivered up to be afflicted, and even killed for this teſtimony; ſo that they could not poſſibly avoid theſe evils, but they muſt by ſo doing overthrow their own teſtimony, and prove this Jeſus a falſe prophet; and much leſs had they reaſon to expect any bleſſings in the world to come for propagating ſuch a lie, by falſe pretences of divine aſſiſtance, to the diſhonour of almighty God, and the deſtruction of ſo many myriads deceived by them. Since, then, the moraliſts conclude, that it is impoſſible for men to act without appearance of ſome good to be procured by that action; ſince love of life, and a deſire of ſelf-preſervation, is common to us with the very brutes; and it is natural to them and us, to avoid miſery and torments; the apoſtles could not thus abandon all the enjoyments and expectations of the bleſſings, both of this and of another world, and wilfully ſubject themſelves to all the miſeries and torments which creatures could endure, in propagation of a teſtimony from which they could expect no profit or advantage, but they muſt be bereft of common ſenſe, renounce the natural inſtincts of mankind, and be in love with ruin and deſtruction. I confeſs, it is poſſible for men to lay down their lives for falſe opinions, provided they believe them to be true; but, if the apoſtles were guilty of any cheat at all, they muſt be guilty of a known impoſture, and ſo muſt ſacrifice their lives for falſehood, i. e. for that from which they could expect no good at all; which ſeems ſo inconſiſtent with the principles of common reaſon and ſelf-love, that nothing can be more incredible.

3. Conſider, that they continued conſtant in this teſtimony, and never could be moved by any checks of conſcience, any hopes of gain, or any fears or ſenſe of ſufferings to diſavow this teſtimony, or to detect the falſehod of it. Now, that ſo many perſons ſhould perſevere immoveably in an extravagant reſolution to maintain a lie, ſo that no threats, no perils, no pains or troubles from without, no regret or diſſatisfaction from within, ſhould drive them from it; but that they ſhould die with it in their mouths, is ſo incredible, that nothing can be more: it muſt be therefore truth alone that could uphold them ſteady in the profeſſion of this thing; ſo unanimous a conſent, ſo clear a confidence, ſo firm a reſolution, ſo inſuperable conſtancy and patience, nothing but the ſenſe of truth could inſpire them with, nothing but a perfectly good conſcience could ſuſtain. Conſider,

4. That

4. That they were persons who professed to all their converts, great sincerity in what they did, declaring, that they had renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, not handling the word of God deceitfully, but by manifestation of the truth, commending themselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God. Moreover, in their writings, they frequently condemned all falsehood, craft, hypocrisy, commanding us to lay aside all guile, hypocrisy, to put away all lying, to speak every man truth with his neighbour, denouncing hell and damnation against those who loved, and made a lie: and yet if they indeed promoted a cunningly-devised fable, they whom they spake and wrote to, could not be ignorant of their hypocrisy and lying, when they speak so much of their own miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost received by believers, and of the gifts of healing, casting out of devils, and of tongues, promised and vouchsafed to them; for these things they still mention in their epistles directed to their converts, as things frequently done by, and exercised among them. Now, if their converts did enjoy these admirable gifts, it is not to be doubted, but God himself, who is the only author of them, did set his seal to the apostles testimony; if they did not enjoy them, they must then know, that the apostles who made these promises, and who indited these epistles, were guilty of notorious untruths, and so could have no motive to believe, but rather to detest their doctrine.

5. Consider, that the doctrine they delivered in the name of this holy Jesus, was such as highly tended to the promotion of piety and virtue in the world; for none who are acquainted with this doctrine, can deny, that they do evidently tend to the advancement of true goodness, righteousness, love, charity, peace, quietness, and mercy: now, can it reasonably be conceived, that men should in the same design be guilty of the greatest virtue and the greatest villany in the world; that the same men should die martyrs to the worst imposture, and the best institution in the world; that they should sacrifice their lives to the interest of holiness and virtue, and the credit of blasphemy and imposture? It is common, I confess, for men of bad designs to make very good pretences; but still they do this to carry on designs far different from their pretences; but we have shewed, that the apostles could have no designs in propagating their doctrine, but that it should be believed; and there, if they did not really design to make men believe the doctrines they taught for the advancement of the interests of piety and virtue, they could have no end at all, in losing both their lives and fortunes to promote those doctrines, which contradicts the principles of human nature.

He then who doubts of the sincerity of these assertors of our Lord's resurrection, must be forced to admit what is much more incredible, as being more repugnant to human nature, and the course of things, viz. he must believe that persons, otherwise through their whole lives blameless, and strictly virtuous in their conversations, as the apostles were, men who appealed to their proselytes, how holily, and justly, and unblameably, they had behaved themselves amongst them, should yet, against the clearest dictates of their conscience, commit so great a villany as this imposture doth imply; that men, all whose discourses and demeanors did evidently tend to the advancement of God's glory and the promotion of true goodness, should in their hearts defy God, and detest all goodness, as they must do if they were wilful cheats; that they who otherwise did teach these doctrines, and practise those things which shewed the greatest kindness and good-will to men, were only striving to abuse and betray them by false promises and hopes into the worst of miseries; that men of so great wisdom as they shewed, both in their writings, and the success of their attempts, should zealously drive on a vain and senseless project, with more unwearied industry labouring to maintain and disperse a lie, than any men besides did ever use for confirmation of the greatest truth; he must believe, that men in all respects so impotent, should be so strangely prevalent without the least assistance, as to cause the world to run in to them, that naked weakness should overthrow the strongest might, that pure simplicity should baffle even the sharpest wits, the subtilest policy and deepest learning, that rude speech, void of all strength and ornament, should even force men to embrace an uncouth and unpleasant story, against the finest rhetoric backed with the force of truth: he must believe, that a crew of vile persons should so inseparably be linked together only by the bonds of fraud, no truth, no virtue, no real interest uniting them, that nothing could unty the knot: Lastly, he must believe, that men of sense should for no end, no visible advantage here, no future hopes, voluntarily embrace, and patiently endure all that can be distasteful unto human nature, freely exposing themselves, they knew not why, to all the fury upon earth, and all the flames of hell, eagerly sacrificing their fortunes, credits, lives, and souls themselves, to the ghost of a condemned malefactor, and false prophet. And if so, why doth philosophy inform us, that self-preservation, the love of life and ease, is rooted in the very principles of human nature, and that it is not possible for any man deliberately to chuse to be miserable, or to refuse to be happy, or not desire so to be? To conclude, if this relation were untrue, either the apostles were beside their senses when they did believe it, or besides their wits when they affirmed, and did endeavour to confirm what they did not believe with loss of life and fortunes; and if so, what shall we say to that vast multitude of Christians, who, notwithstanding all temptations to the contrary, so readily embraced, so stedfastly believed the doctrine of those men who had so little reason to believe themselves.

§ XII. Let us consider lastly the predictions of our Lord, relating partly to his own disciples, and what they were to do after his resurrection, and partly to the Jewish nation, and what was to befal them for their infidelity, and their rejecting and condemning their Messiah. As for his disciples,

1. He promised, and foretold, that not only the twelve apostles should be endued with power from on high, and should receive the promise of the Holy Ghost, but also that they who believed in him should be baptized with the Holy Ghost, should receive him, and be enabled by him to speak with tongues, Matth. 3. 11. Mark 16. 17. 18. Luke 24. 49. John 7. 37. 38. Acts 1. 8. and that this promise was admirably fulfilled not only by the gifts of tongues, and prophecy, conferred on the apostles at the day of Pentecost, and by their baptism, preaching, and laying on of hands on others, but by the gifts of prophecy, and tongues, with the interpretation of them, and by the gift of discerning spirits, and knowing things secret exercised erciſed in all Chriſtian churches, hath been fully proved in the preface to the epiſtles, from § I. to the ſixth, and from the eleventh to the fourteenth.

2. He foretold that the kingdom of Satan ſhould be caſt down by them, and ſhould fall like lightning before them, and ſaid, Behold, I give you power over all the power of the enemy, Luke 10. 18. 19. and how glorioully he fulfilled this promiſe, and made good this prediction, hath fully been demonſtrated in the ſame general preface, § X.

3. He foretold that the goſpel of the kingdom ſhould be preached by them throughout the world, Matth. 26. 13. yea that it ſhould be preached to all nations within the ſpace of forty years, or before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, Matth. 24. 14. that the increaſe of his kingdom ſhould be like that of a grain of muſtard ſeed, Mark 4. 32. and that he being lifted up would draw all men after him, John 12. 32. which came to paſs ſo wonderfully, that in the ſpace of twenty-four years after Chriſt's paſſion, St Paul, in his epiſtle to the Romans, ſaith, the ſound of it was gone out into the uttermoſt parts of the world, chap. 10. 18. and in the epiſtle to the Coloſſians writ twenty-nine years after that it was preached to every creature under heaven, chap. 1. 6. 23. " We ſee," ſaith (z) Clemens Romanus, " the world beyond the ocean," i. e. the Britiſh iſlands, " ſubject to the commands of Jeſus :" " The contagion of this ſuperſtition," ſaith (a) Pliny in his epiſtle to Trojan, writ in the cloſe of the firſt century, " hath ſpread itſelf not only over cities, but even villages and fields :" " There is no rank of " men," ſaith (b) Juſtin M. " whether Grecians, or Barbarians, or called by any other name, in which praiſe and thankſ- " givings are not offered up to the Father in the name of Chriſt crucified ;" ſo that " an whole race of Chriſtian nations " ſeemeth," ſaith (c) Origen, " to be born at once, and who," ſaith he, " will not admire the prediction of our Lord, " when he ſees it thus fulfilled in every nation under heaven, Greeks and Barbarians, the wiſe and unwiſe, and " all mankind being overcome by it, ſo that there is no kind of men by whom this doctrine is not received ?" l. 2. p. 68. 69.

The predictions which concerned the Jewiſh nation were theſe following,

1. That the kingdom of God ſhould be taken from them, and given to another nation, bringing forth the fruits thereof, Matth. 21. 43. and that the things which did belong to their peace, ſhould be ſhortly hid from their eyes, Luke 13. 28. 29. ; 19. 42. ; that many ſhould come from the eaſt, and from the weſt, and ſhould ſit down with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of God, but the children of the kingdom ſhall be caſt out, Matth. 8. 11. 13. and that all theſe things ſhould come upon that generation. Accordingly we find the apoſtle Paul, in his epiſtle to the Romans, ſadly bewailing that ſpirit of ſlumber which was come upon them, Rom. 11. 8. ſpeaking of their rejection, ver. 15. the breaking of theſe branches off through unbelief, ver. 19. 20. their blindneſs, ver. 25. and ſaying, that God had concluded them all in unbelief.

2. Our Lord foretold, that Satan, caſt out from them, ſhould return with ſeven devils more wicked than himſelf ; and that he did ſo, the hiſtory of Joſephus will not ſuffer us to doubt, for he declares, that ſoon after our Saviour's time, they were become the worſt of men. See note on Rom. 2. 2.

§ XIII. Laſtly, The things which Chriſt foretold concerning the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the calamities which ſhortly were to happen to that nation, were of that ſignal nature, and mentioned ſuch various events, then future and contingent, and yet were ſo exactly and ſo particularly fulfilled, as to afford us a moſt pregnant demonſtration of the truth of Chriſt's prophetic office. And, 1ſt, Our bleſſed Lord foretelleth the deſtruction of the Jewiſh temple, after it had ſtood well nigh 500 years, in theſe words, Seeſt thou theſe great buildings ? there ſhall not be left one ſtone upon another which ſhall not be thrown down ; to complete which prediction, Titus commands his ſoldiers, ſaith (d) Joſephus, τὴν τε πόλιν ἅπασαν, καὶ τὸν νεὼν κατασκάπτειν, to dig up the foundations both of the temple and of the city ; and both the (e) Jewiſh Talmud, and (f) Maimonides add, " That Terentius Rufus, the captain of his army, did with a ploughſhare tear up the foundations of the temple," and ſo more ſignally fulfil thoſe words of Micah, chap. 3. 12. Therefore ſhall Zion, for your ſakes, be ploughed as a field, and Jeruſalem ſhall become heaps, and the mountain of the Lord as the high places of the foreſt. And here two things ſeem worthy of our obſervation, viz.

1. The exact time when this was done, viz. on the ſame month and day on which it formerly was burnt by Nebuzaradan, the captain of the King of Babylon, which therefore by Maimonides is ſtyled, the fatal day of vengeance, and which is by (g) Joſephus reckoned to be a matter of juſt admiration, and a plain indication, that this ſo happened by divine appointment.

2. That this deſtruction and conflagration of the temple happened againſt the will, command, and the endeavours of Titus to prevent it, for he calls heaven and earth to witneſs that he would never violate that ſacred place, unleſs the Jews compelled him ſo to do ; yea, ſaith he, (h) " I will preſerve your temple againſt your own wills ;" when his own generals declared it neceſſary to deſtroy that temple, he anſwers, " I will never ſuffer ſuch a ſtructure to be deſtroyed by the " flames ;"

" flames;" and when the fire began to ſeize upon it, he calls, he beckoneth to, yea he commands his ſoldiers to extinguiſh it, but they not hearkening to his commands, do animate one another to the burning of it: " Thus," ſaith (i) Joſephus, " was the temple burnt againſt the will of Cæſar, God himſelf aſſiſting with the Romans to the ruin of it;" that ſo the words of Chriſt might be verified, He will ſend forth his armies and deſtroy thoſe murderers, and burn up their city.

3. Obſerve, that they who had (k) accuſed our Saviour and his diſciples of polluting, and of deſigning to deſtroy this temple, were the very men who did horribly pollute it with the blood of Jews and Gentiles, and even forced the Romans to deſtroy it; " they haſtened the ſlow fire," ſaith their own (l) Joſephus, " and even drew it to the temple;" the inflammation of it, ſaith he, " had both the cauſe, and the beginning of it from themſelves:" the providence of God ſtill ordering matters ſo, that they ſhould bring upon themſelves thoſe evils of which they falſely did accuſe our Lord, and his apoſtles.

2*dly*, Our Lord foretels, with like exactneſs and particularity, the ruin of their famous city, declaring, Luke 21. 24. that Jeruſalem ſhould be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And again, The days, ſaith he, ſhall come upon thee, that thine enemies ſhall caſt a trench about thee, and compaſs thee round, and keep thee in on every ſide, and ſhall lay thee even with the ground, and ſhall not leave in thee one ſtone upon another, Luke 19. 43. 44. Now, that the event completely anſwered to theſe plain predictions, is evident from their own hiſtorian, who doth expreſsly ſay, that (m) " Titus having commanded his ſoldiers to dig up the city, and the temple, this was ſo fully done, " by levelling the whole compaſs of the city, except three towers, that they who came to ſee it were perſuaded it never " would be built again." The ſame (n) hiſtorian informs us, " that when Veſpaſian beſieged Jeruſalem, his army com- " paſſed the city round about, and kept them in on every ſide;" and though it was judged a great, and almoſt an impracticable work to compaſs the whole city with a wall, " yet Titus animating his ſoldiers to attempt it, they in three days " built a wall of 39 furlongs, having 13 caſtles on it, and ſo cut off all hopes that any of the Jews within the city ſhould " eſcape."

3*dly*, Whereas our Saviour ſaith, Jeruſalem ſhould be trodden down, πατουμένη, poſſeſſed, and trodden by the feet of the Gentiles, this ſo exactly came to paſs, that (o) Veſpaſian, (1.) commands the whole land of Judea to be ſold to thoſe Gentiles that would buy it; and, (2.) (p) Hadrian, about ſixty-three years after, makes a law, " That no Jew ſhould come " into the region round about Jeruſalem," as Ariſto Pellæus, who was himſelf a Jew, and flouriſhed in the very times of Hadrian, relates; " thus," ſaith (q) Euſebius, " it came to paſs that the Jews being baniſhed thence, and there being a " conflux thither ἀλλοφύλων γένους, of aliens, it became a city and colony of the Romans, and was in honour of the Emperor " named Ælia." (3.) Jeruſalem, ſaith Chriſt, ſhall be thus trodden down, or ſubject to the Gentiles, till the time of the Gentiles be fulfilled, that is, till, by converſion of the Jews unto the Chriſtian faith, the fulneſs of the Gentiles, to be converted to it, ſhould come in with them; for blindneſs, ſaith the apoſtle, hath happened to the Jews, till πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν, the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall come in, and then all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved, Rom. 11. 25. 26. and with them alſo the yet Heathen Gentiles; for if, ſaith he, ver. 15. the caſting away of the Jews was the reconciling of the world, what ſhall the receiving of them be to it, but even life from the dead? And again, If the fall of them were the riches of the world, ver. 12. and the diminiſhing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more ſhall their fulneſs be the fulneſs of the Gentiles? Now here it is eſpecially obſervable, that Julian the Apoſtate, deſigning to defeat this prophecy of Chriſt, reſolved on the rebuilding of the city, and temple of Jeruſalem in its old ſtation, which was till his time left in its ruin, Ælia being built without the circuit of it; for in his (r) epiſtle to the community of the Jews, he writes thus, " The holy " city of Jeruſalem, which you have ſo long deſired to ſee inhabited, rebuilding by my own labours, I will dwell in." This he began, with an endeavour to build that temple, in which alone the Jews would offer up their prayers and ſacrifices; but the immediate hand of providence ſoon forced the workmen to deſiſt from that unhappy enterpriſe. linus an Heathen, who lived in those very times, gives us the story thus, "That Julian endeavoured to rebuild the temple "at Jerusalem with vast expenses, and gave it in charge to Alypius of Antioch to hasten the work, and to the rector of the "province to assist him in it; in which work, when Alypius was earnestly employed, and the rector of the province was "assisting, terrible balls of flame bursting forth near the foundations with frequent insults, and burning divers times the "workmen, rendered the place inaccessible; and thus the fire obstinately repelling them, the work ceased." The story is very signal and remarkable for many circumstances, as v. g.

1. The persons that relate it, Ammianus Marcellinus an Heathen, Zemuch David a Jew, who confesseth that Julian was divinitus impeditus, "hindered by God in this attempt:" Nazianzen and Chrysostom among the Greeks, St Ambrose and Russinus among the Latins, who flourished at the very time when this was done: Theodoret and Sozomen orthodox historians, Philostorgius an Arian, Socrates a favourer of the Novatians, who writ the story within the space of fifty years after the thing was done, and whilst the eye-witnesses of the fact were yet surviving.

2. The time when it was performed, not in the reign of Christian emperors, but of the most bitter enemies of Christians, when they were forced to hide, and had not liberty of speaking for themselves. Observe,

3. With what confidence the Christians urge this matter of fact against the Jews, as a convincing demonstration of the expiration of their legal worship, and of the certainty of Christian faith against the Heathen philosophers, inquiring (t) "what "the wise men of the world can say to these things," and against the (u) Emperor Theodosius, to deter him from requiring them to rebuild a synagogue which had been lately burnt by a Christian bishop.

4. And lastly, the unquestionable evidence of the thing; this, say the Christians (x), "all men freely do believe and speak "of; it is in the mouths of all men, and is not denied even by the Atheists themselves; and if it seem yet incredible to any "one, he may repair for the truth of it both to witnesses of it yet living, and to them who have heard it from their "mouths; yea they may view the foundations lying still bare and naked; (y) and if you ask the reason, you will meet with "no other account besides that which I have given; and of this all we Christians are witnesses, these things being done not "long since in our own time." So St Chrysostom.

3*dly*, Our blessed Lord is as express and circumstantial in the prediction of the miseries which should befal that sinful nation. For,

1. He in the general foretells that their calamities shall be so great as to admit no parallel; there shall be, saith he, great tribulation, such as never happened from the beginning of the world to this (present) time, Matth. 24. 21. which words (z) Josephus seems to have transcribed, when he saith, "that never any nation was more wicked, μήτε πόλις ἄλλην τοιαῦτα πεπονθέναι, "nor ever did a city suffer as they did." He was no stranger to the history of the destruction of the old world by water, or of Sodom and Gomorrah, by fire from heaven, or to the sufferings of his own nation under Antiochus Epiphanes; and yet he scruples not to say, that (a) "all the miseries which all mankind had suffered from the begin- "ning of the world, were not to be compared with those the Jewish nation did then suffer."

2. Our Saviour adds, that in those days the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken, Mark 13. 14. These, I confess, are metaphorical expressions occurring often in the prophets, but still in the same sense, viz. to signify an utter desolation, and terrible havock and destruction brought upon a nation: for in this language the prophet Isaiah speaks of the destruction of Babylon, saying, chap. 13. 9. 10. The day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate, and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it; for the stars of heaven, and the constellations thereof shall not give their light, the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. Of the destruction of Idumæa he speaks thus, chap. 34. 2. 5. The indignation of the Lord is upon all nations, he hath utterly destroyed them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter, the mountains shall be melted with their blood, and all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heaven shall be rolled together as a scroll, and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth from the vine.

The

the deſtruction of Egypt is repreſented by Ezekiel in theſe words, chap. 32. 7. 8. I will cover the heaven, and make the ſtars thereof dark, I will cover the ſun with a cloud, and the moon ſhall not give her light, and the bright lights of heaven will I make dark over thee: " This therefore," ſaith (b) Maimonides, " is a proverbial expreſſion, importing the " deſtruction and utter ruin of a nation." " The ſun darkened, or turned into blood, and the ſtars falling or diſappearing," ſaith (c) Artemidorus, " import the deſtruction of many people." Now, in this ſenſe it is almoſt incredible which their hiſtorian relates of the deſtruction of the Jews; for he informs us, that (d) " eleven hundred thouſand periſhed in that " ſiege;" and it is ſtill more incredible which their Talmud and other Jewiſh writers mention of the ſlaughter which (e) Hadrian's army made of them fifty-two years after, when they rebelled under Barchochebas, and were beſieged in the city Bitter, the moſt modeſt computation being quatuor mille myriadas, and the moſt extravagant, octoginta mille myriadas. And yet our Saviour having further ſaid, that where-ever the carcaſe was, i. e. the nation of the Jews, rejected now, and loathed by God as a dead carcaſe, there would the eagles, i. e. the Roman army, be gathered together to prey upon them, Matth. 24. 28. Luke 17. 37. they were accordingly haraſſed and deſtroyed throughout the Roman Empire; when, ſaith Joſephus, the Romans had no enemies left in Judea, the ſenſe and danger reached πολλοῖς καὶ τῶν ἀπωτάτω κατοικόντων, to many of them living the remoteſt from it; for many of them periſhed at (f) Alexandria, at Cyrene, and in other cities of Egypt, to the number of ſixty thouſand, in all the cities of Syria; in a word, (g) Eleazar in Joſephus, having reckoned many places where they were cruelly ſlaughtered, concludes thus, μακρὸν ἂν εἴη τῶν ἰδίᾳ περὶ ἑκάστων λέγειν, it would be too long to ſpeak of all theſe places in particular.

Again, our Saviour adds, that they ſhould be led captives into all nations, Luke 21. 24. Accordingly (h) Joſephus doth inform us, that " the number of their captives was ninety-ſeven thouſand, that of them Titus ſent many to Egypt, and moſt " of them he deſperſed into the Roman provinces," and ſo exactly fulfilled this prediction.

4thly, Our Lord foretells the many ſigns preceding this deſtruction, declaring that there ſhould be φοβητρὰ, fearful events, or ſights, earthquakes, and ſigns from heaven, Luke 21. 11. Now, to omit the frequent earthquakes which happened in other places in the times of Claudius and Nero; (i) Joſephus doth inform us, that there happened in Judea, and Jeruſalem, " an immenſe tempeſt, and vehement winds, with rain, and frequent lightnings, and dreadful thundering, and " extreme roarings of the quaking earth, which manifeſted to all that the world was diſturbed at the deſtruction of men," and that theſe prodigies portended no ſmall miſchiefs. (k) Joſephus hath a ſelect chapter of the manifeſt ſigns of their approaching deſolation, which (l) Tacitus, a Roman hiſtorian of that age, doth almoſt thus epitomize: " Armies ſeemed " to meet in the clouds, and glittering weapons were there ſeen, the temple ſeemed to be in a flame with fire iſſuing from " the clouds, and a divine voice was heard, that the Deity was quitting the place, and a great motion as of his depart- " ing;" theſe ſeem plain tokens of God's departing from them, of the burning of the temple, and their own deſolation by the Roman army. Joſephus adds, what Tacitus doth alſo touch upon, that the great gate of the temple, which twenty men could ſcarcely ſhut, and which was made faſt with bolts and bars, was ſeen αὐτομάτως ἀνεῳγμένη, to open of its own accord, to let in their enemies, for ſo their wiſe men conſtrued the omen, ſaith Joſephus. He farther ſaith, that " (m) a ſword ſeemed to hang over the city, and a comet with its fiery tail pointed down upon it for a whole year, which " plainly ſeemed to portend their ruin by the ſword." And that (n) " before the ſun went down, there were ſeen in the " clouds armies in battle-array, and chariots compaſſing the country, and inveſting the cities; a thing ſo ſtrange," ſaith he, " that it would paſs for a fable, were there not ſtill men living to atteſt it:" ſo expreſsly have we an account of the fearful ſights and ſigns from heaven, mentioned by our Lord, and of the ſign of the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, μετὰ δυνάμεως καὶ δόξης, with a glorious hoſt, or with power and glory; according to our Lord's prediction, Matth. 24. 30.

2*dly*, Our Lord proceeds to ſay, that falſe chriſts and falſe prophets ſhould ariſe, and that many ſhould come in his name, ſaying, I am Chriſt, and ſhould deceive many, Matth. 24. 5. 11. Mark 13. 6.; 21. 22. Luke 21. 8. Falſe chriſts are they who falſely would pretend to be the Chriſt or the Meſſiah promiſed to the Jews: Now, ſuch were, (1.) (o) Simon Magus, who declared, that he was the perſon who among the Jews appeared as the Son of God, and was conceived to have ſuffered in Judea; and (p) he prevailed for a time, to deceive ſome with his magical operations. (2.) (q) Doſitheus, contemporary with him, who ſaid, he was the Chriſt foretold by Moſes, and the Son of God, and he alſo found diſciples; and is, by Origen, reckoned among them who performed wonderful things: From theſe, ſaith Hegeſippus, came falſe chriſts, and falſe prophets. There aroſe, ſaith (r) Hippolitus, "ſome ſaying, I am Chriſt, as Simon Magus, and the reſt, whoſe names "I have not time to reckon up;" and theſe all, ſaith (s) Irenæus, magias perficiunt, exorciſmis & incantationibus utuntur, "uſe magical operations, exorciſms, and incantations." Our Lord alſo foretold of another that ſhould come in his own name, John 5. 43. that is, without authority from God, and be received by the Jews as their Meſſiah: Accordingly, Barchochebas did actually thus come; as appears both from the event and deſtruction of him and his followers by Hadrian's army, and by the confeſſion of the Jews, who, when they found themſelves deceived by him, called him Bar Choziba, the ſon of a lie. And that he was generally received by them, we learn from their own hiſtories, declaring, that their great R. Akiba, who had 24,000 diſciples, ſaid at the ſight of him, "Behold, this is the Meſſiah;" and that then the Jews in the city Bitter crowned him, and choſe him for their king, and ſhook off the Roman government, killing an innumerable multitude of Greeks and Romans in Egypt, Alexandria, Cyprus, and thereabouts, till Trajan ſent Hadrian againſt them, who ſlew more of them, ſay they, than Titus had done in the preceding wars. See Buxterf in voce Bar Choziba.

As for the falſe prophets, (t) Joſephus tells us of an "Egyptian falſe prophet and magician, who gathered together about "thirty thouſand of the Jews, whom he had deceived;" and of one (u) "Theudas, a magician, who, declaring himſelf "a prophet, deceived many;" of (x) another prophet, "who bid them go into the temple, where God would ſhew them "manifeſt ſigns of a deliverance," adding, that there were then πολλοὶ προφῆται, many prophets who taught them even to the laſt, to expect help from God. Our Saviour had foretold, that they ſhould then ſay, Behold, he is in the deſert, Matth. 24. 26. pointing to the very place where theſe falſe chriſts and prophets ſhould appear, or whither they ſhould lead their followers: Accordingly, (y) Joſephus ſaith, "that many impoſtors and magicians perſuaded the people to follow them in-"to the wilderneſs, where they promiſed to ſhew them manifeſt ſigns and wonders done by God," pretending a divine impulſe, and promiſing deliverance from evils, if they would follow them into the wilderneſs.

3*dly*, Our Lord foretells, that his goſpel ſhould be firſt preached throughout the world, i. e. throughout the Roman empire, ſtyled οἰκουμένη, or in all places whither the Jews were diſperſed; for, ſaith he, the goſpel of this kingdom ſhall be firſt preached in all the world for a witneſs to all nations, and then ſhall the end come, Matth. 24. 14. Accordingly, St Paul declares of them who preached the goſpel of peace, that their ſound had gone forth into all the earth, Rom. 10. 18. and their words εἰς πέρατα τῆς οἰκουμένης, to the ends of the earth. He tells the church of Rome, that their faith was ſpoken of throughout the whole world, Rom. 1. 8. The church of Coloſſe, that the truth of the goſpel was come, not to them only, but to all the world, and preached to every creature, chap. 1. 6. 23. (z) St Clemens, who was biſhop of Rome in the twelfth year of Domitian, ſaith, "that the nations beyond the ocean were governed ταῖς ἐπιλογαῖς τοῦ Δεσπότου, by the precepts of the Lord. (a) Origen ſpeaks of the Chriſtians as of a nation born all at once. (b) Euſebius ſaith, "the "word of God ſhone ſuddenly upon the world as a ray of the ſun, and was, on that account, ſtyled by the very Hea-

4*thly*, He mentions the eſpecial care he would then have of his own faithful ſervants, declaring, that they who endured to the end ſhould be ſaved, Matth. 24. 13. and that not one hair of their heads ſhould periſh, Luke 21. 18. i. e. that none of them ſhould be involved in that ruin which was to come upon the unbelieving Jews: Accordingly, (d) Euſebius, and (e) Epiphanius have left it upon record, that "before the beginning of the war, when the city was ready to be taken, the "diſciples of our Lord were admoniſhed by an angel, or by an oracle, to depart from the city, and to fly beyond Jordan, "to the city Pella, in the region of Peræa, where they were preſerved." This refers to the time when Ceſtius came to Jeruſalem, and took the lower city, and, ſaith Joſephus, "might have taken the upper city, and have preſently put an end "to the war;" and ſo punctually agrees with our Lord's premonition, When you ſee Jeruſalem compaſſed about with armies, and the abomination of deſolation ſtanding where it ought not, viz. in the holy city, then let them that are in Judea flee to the mountains, Matth. 24. 15. Mark 13. 14. Luke 21. 20. 21. But, that the Chriſtians might have time to fly and be preſerved, he ſuddenly quits the ſiege without any viſible cauſe, and ſo gives the Chriſtians leave to depart: and even (f) Joſephus notes, that "then many fled out of the city as from a ſinking ſhip;" and of that number, doubtleſs, the Chriſtians made a part. That they then fled into the mountains, may alſo be obſerved from Joſephus; for, of Peræa, whither they are ſaid to fly, he ſaith, that it was (g) ἔρημος καὶ τραχεῖα τὸ πλέον, moſtly mountainous and a deſert; and being beyond Jordan, and under the government of King Agrippa, was free from war.

Laſtly, Our Saviour fixeth the period of time within which all theſe things ſhould happen in theſe words, Verily, I ſay unto you, this generation ſhall not paſs away till all theſe things be fulfilled, Matth. 24. 34. Accordingly, they were all fulfilled within leſs than forty years after they had been ſpoken. In fine, he hath ſpecified the very reaſon why all theſe things ſhould come upon Jeruſalem, viz. becauſe ſhe knew not the time of her viſitation, the things which did belong unto her peace, Luke 19. 42. 44. becauſe ſhe killed the prophets, and ſtoned them that were ſent to her, chap. 13. 34. becauſe they killed the Son of God, Matth. 20. 38. This hath been gathered by the primitive fathers; 1*ſt*, From the continuance of this deſolation, by which wrath ſeemeth to be come upon them to the uttermoſt: For, whereas they wandered in the wilderneſs but forty years, and their captivity in Babylon continued but ſeventy years, ſince the rejection of our Jeſus, they have been viſibly caſt off by God for ſixteen hundred years and upwards. 2*dly*, From the nature of the puniſhments they ſuffered: for God having ſo long time laid waſte that temple to which their worſhip was confined, and was the place in which he dwelt among them, and from which he bleſſed them, and ſo deprived them of thoſe ſacrifices by which they made atonement for their ſins, and were purified from their uncleanneſs, and baniſhed them out of the land of promiſe, hath, by theſe diſpenſations, fully ſhewed, that he no longer doth allow that way of worſhip which was confined to that nation, and that temple. 3*dly*, From the conſequence of theſe judgments, and from their ignorance of any time of reſpite and deliverance from them. For God, by his prophets, was pleaſed to foretel the meaſure and duration of their former judgments, and when they ſhould give place to mercy; that their Egyptian thraldom ſhould expire in two hundred and fifteen years after their going down to Egypt, that after ſeventy years they ſhould return from Babylon, that three years and an half would work deliverance from the more cruel fury of Antiochus Epiphanes; but of their deliverance from the calamities they now lie under, by any other way than that of turning to the Lord, there is no word of prophecy: In a word, they are utterly deprived of their Shechinah, their prophets, and all the other tokens of God's peculiar preſence with them; after this ſin, God did entirely deſert them, and tranſfer his Holy Spirit, his prophets, his revelations, his miracles, to thoſe aſſemblies which embraced that Jeſus as their Saviour, whom they had wickedly condemned as an impoſtor; which ſhews their church and temple were deſtroyed to give place to Chriſtianity. Moreover, that, after their rejecting our Meſſiah, they were by God appointed to deſtruction; they who were the great promoters, or were eye-witneſſes of the war which brought upon them theſe calamities, were forced to confeſs: (h) Eleazar, one of their great captains, declared that God had eſtabliſhed this decree againſt them, that they ſhould not live; that he had laid a neceſſity upon them, that they ſhould die; and that they might not only conjecture, but even know by what they ſuffered, that God had condemned his once beloved nation to deſtruction. (i) Joſephus is frequent in this obſervation: When Ceſtius beſieged them, "he might have taken the city," ſaith he, "and put an end to the war, but that διὰ τὰς παλαιὰς ἁμαρτίας "μένος ὁ Θεὸς, God, being angry with them for the wicked, hindered it." When he was perſuading them to yield to the Romans, he concludes thus: (k) "Why do I perſuade them againſt their fate, οἷς τοὺς ὑπὸ Θεοῦ βιάζομαι καθικέτης σώζειν, "and ſtrive to ſave them who are condemned of God;" for who knows not the writings of the old prophets, οἷς τὸν ἐπὶ-βίπτοιτο τῇ ἑλούσῃ πόλει χειμὼν ἤδη ἐπιοῦσα, " and the oracle impendent on the miserable city, to be instant? Θεὸς ἄρα Θεὸς " αὐτὸς ἐπάγει, God, even God himself, brings upon them this purging fire, and with it burns up the city so full of wick- " edness: (l) God," saith he, " had condemned their city to the fire; they attended not," saith he, " nor gave credit, " (m) τοῖς ἐναργέσι, καὶ προσημαίνουσι τὴν μέλλουσαν ἐρημίαν τέρασιν, to the manifest signs portending their future desolation." And he brings in Titus speaking to his soldiers thus, (n) that " God favoured them in the war against the Jews;" their famine, sedition, and the fall of their walls without any machine, being nothing else but Θεοῦ μῆνις, a demonstration of the wrath of God against them. Now, our Lord having so expressly said, that God would " miserably destroy those husbandmen, for casting his Son out of the vineyard, and slaying him, Matth. 21. 37.—42. and that the guilt of the blood of all his prophets, from righteous Abel to that generation, should be charged upon them, because they would persecute and kill those apostles, prophets, and wise men he would send unto them, and so fill up the measure of their sins, Matth. 23. 32.—36. We Christians cannot doubt, but that these dreadful judgments came upon them on this account.

This also may be farther argued from the exactness of the parallel betwixt the punishments which they inflicted on the holy Jesus, and those they after suffered for so doing, and betwixt the crimes for which they did condemn our blessed Lord, and those which they themselves were after guilty of, and for which tremendous judgments fell upon them. For,

1. Whereas they, by their clamours to Pontius Pilate, crucified the Lord of life, they, many of them, perished by the same kind of death; for many Jews of the equestrian order, and of Roman dignity, were treated thus by (o) Florus, saith their own historian; and Titus crucified so many of them, that he at last could find no more crosses for their bodies.

2. They crucified him at the feast of the passover; and, being the true paschal lamb, he expired, though not on the same day, yet at the very hour when the paschal lamb was to be slain: but then, their own (p) Josephus hath observed, that, " at that very feast, the whole nation was inclosed in Jerusalem, and that the war compassed the city when it was thus stuff- " ed with men, and so the slaughter of them became incredibly great. God's providence," which he styles fate, " so or- " dering matters," saith (q) Eusebius, " that at that time, when they had crucified the holy Jesus, they being shut up " all as in one prison, should receive the punishment of that iniquity."

3. They not only chose a thief, a murderer, and a seditious person before Christ, but also crucified him between two thieves; and many of them, saith Josephus, " were miserably harassed and destroyed by the λῃστικὸν τάγμα, (r) band of " thieves which rose up among them:" And when Felix had destroyed these thieves, then, saith he, " there sprang up a- " mong them ἕτερον εἶδος λῃστῶν, another kind of thieves, called the Sicarii, who slew many of their fellow Jews at broad " day, in the middle of the city, and especially at the feasts;" and these thieves also were seditious, as well as murderers, threatening death to them who obeyed the Romans; and of them, one Jesus was the leader.

4. They condemned our Lord as worthy to die, Mark 14. 64. and they themselves were forced to confess, that God had condemned their whole nation to death, as hath been proved before.

5. They say of Christ, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, John 19. 7.; and they were so infatuated as to conceive, that by their law they ought to die rather than yield to the Romans. (s) Josephus doth himself confess it, saying to Vespasian, " I am not ignorant of the Jewish law, καὶ πῶς ἁλῶσιν ἀποτίνουσι πρέπει, and how our commanders ought to " die;" and when he refused to die with his companions, they cry out, Ὦ πατρῷοι νόμοι! (t) " What is now become of our " laws!" Eleazar exhorting them to kill themselves rather than fall into the hands of the Romans, cries out, Ταῦτ' ἡμᾶς οἱ νόμοι κελεύουσι, (u) Our laws command us to do this.

6. They condemned him as an enemy to Cæsar, and they themselves all perished for that crime; for Josephus, speaking of the sect of Judas Gaulonites, who allowed μόνον ἡγεμόνα καὶ δεσπότην Θεὸν, and chose rather to die than acknowledge Cæsar, he saith, (x) " they laid the foundation of all the calamities which fell upon their nation; they indeed instigated the people, and even forced them to that war by which they were destroyed.

7. They condemned him as a false prophet, and a deceiver of the people; and their own (y) Josephus often testifies, that their false prophets and deceivers were the very causes of their ruin.

8. They

8. They laid their accuſations againſt him and his followers, as perſons who profaned, and who deſigned to deſtroy their temple; and they themſelves, as hath been ſhewn already, firſt horribly profaned it with the blood of Jews and Gentiles, and then forced the Romans to deſtroy it; they "haſtened the ſlow fire," ſaith Joſephus, "and even drew it to the temple."

They thought it expedient he ſhould be put to death, leſt the Romans ſhould come and take away their place and nation; and this expedient brought upon them thoſe very Romans, who took away their temple and their city, ſold πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν, their whole land, ſaith (z) Joſephus, and would not ſuffer them ſo much as to come into Judea, or to the ruins of Jeruſalem. (a) Joſephus doth inform us, that "they had a prophecy that one of their country ſhould then reign over the whole earth; "that this cauſed many to take upon them to be kings, and animated the people to that war which brought this ruin on their "nation."

Laſtly, They rejected that Jeſus who came with the glad tidings of ſalvation to them, and would not hear him preaching the words of life unto them; and they were forced, about ſeven years together, to hear another Jeſus ſounding forth continually, Ζυθρωπὴ ἡ κληδών, Sad is the omen which I bring from God unto you. Joſephus, ſpeaking of the dreadful prodigies, or, as he ſtyles them, τῶν τῷ Θεῷ κηρυγμάτων, God's warnings of their approaching deſolation, concludes with this as τὸ τέτων φοβερώτερον, the moſt terrible of all, that four years before the war, when the city was in peace, and plenty, "one Jeſus began at the feaſt of tabernacles to cry, φωνὴ ἐπὶ Ἱεροσόλυμα καὶ τὸν ναὸν, φωνὴ ἐπὶ τὸν λαὸν πάντα, a voice a-"gainſt Jeruſalem, and the temple, and againſt all the people; and thus he went about the city, crying day and night; "and being whipped, ſo that his fleſh was torn to the very bones, he neither wept, nor begged mercy, but at every laſh "cried out, (b) Αἰ αἰ Ἱεροσολύμοις, Wo, wo to Jeruſalem, the temple, and the people; and that crying thus above ſeven "years, he never waxed hoarſe nor weary:" whence, even (c) Joſephus concludes thus, "If any man conſiders, he will "find that God, by many ways, ſhews to men the things which do belong to their peace, eſpecially to our nation, but that "they periſhed through their own madneſs, and their wilful ſins." Now, hence we learn,

That Chriſt was certainly a prophet ſent from God, even that prophet, who, according to the predictions of all the Jewiſh records, was to come into the world. Againſt many other proofs brought to confirm this truth, the Sceptics of our age object, that they are founded on records made by the followers of Chriſt, or the profeſſors of Chriſtianity; and ſo by perſons who might be tempted in honour of their Lord, and for the credit and advantage of Chriſtianity, to magnify the things which they related; but here the argument is almoſt wholly built upon records and teſtimonies of Jews and Gentiles, the two great enemies of Chriſtian faith, and ſo will not admit of this evaſion. Will they then ſay, as Porphyry did of the prophecies of Daniel, "Surely the book was written after the things were done?" It is manifeſt from hiſtory, that the three evangeliſts, who writ the hiſtory of theſe predictions of our Lord, were dead before the deſolation of Jeruſalem; which ſurely is ſufficient to exclude that only refuge they can fly unto.

A PREFATORY DISCOURSE,

Concerning the Four Gospels in general, and the Gospel according to St Matthew in particular.

CONTENTS.

The tradition of the church from the beginning of the second century shews that the gospels then received were only the four gospels which we own, § I. The other gospels mentioned in church-history do not invalidate, but rather strengthen this tradition, they being only mentioned after these were received, and that as gospels not authentic, not received by the church, or as composed by heretics, § II. Other considerations offered to strengthen this tradition, § III. That these gospels have been handed down to future generations uncorrupted in the substantials of faith and manners, § IV. Concerning the gospel of St Matthew it is inquired, whether it was originally writ by him in Hebrew, or in Greek: reasons to suspect the tradition, that it was first writ in Hebrew only, and afterwards translated into Greek: 1st, From what is delivered by the chief authors of it, § V. 2dly, From the tradition itself, § VI. An objection answered, § VII.

CONcerning the authority of the four gospels (a) unquestionably owned as sacred scriptures indited by those apostles and evangelists whose names they bear; and the reason why they, and they only have obtained to be received as the authentic records of what our Saviour did and spake, let it be noted,

1. That (b) Irenæus informs us concerning Polycarp, that he was made bishop of Smyrna by the apostles, and conversed with many who had seen the Lord: now, from him (c) Victor Capuanus cites a passage, in which we have the names of these four gospels as we at present do receive them, and the beginning of their several gospels.

2. That (d) Justin Martyr, who, saith (e) Eusebius, lived μετ' ὀ πολὺ τῶν ἀποστόλων, not long after the apostles, shews that these books were then well known by the name of gospels, and such as were read by Christians in their assemblies every Lord's day; yea we learn from him, that they were read by Jews, and might be read by Heathens; and that we may not doubt that by "the memoirs of the apostles, which," saith he, "we call gospels," he meant these four received then in the church, he cites passages out of every one of them, declaring that they contained the words of Christ.

3. That (f) Irenæus, in the same century, not only cites them all by name, but declares that there were "neither

" more nor leſs" received by the church, and that they were of ſuch authority, that though the heretics of his time complained of their obſcurity, depraved them, and leſſened their authority, ſaying, " they were written in hypocriſy, and in " compliance with the errors of thoſe to whom they wrote, " and with whom they converſed," yet durſt they not wholly diſown them, or deny them to be the writings of thoſe apoſtles whoſe names they bore. Moreover, he cites paſſages from every chapter of St Matthew, and St Luke, from fourteen chapters of St Mark, and from twenty chapters of St John.

4. That (g) Clemens of Alexandria, having cited a paſſage from the goſpel according to the Egyptians, informs his reader, that " it was not to be found in the four goſpels de- " livered by the church."

5. That (h) Tatianus, who flouriſhed in the ſame century, and before Irenæus, wrote ζυνάφειαν τινα ἢ ζυναγωγὴν τῶν ἐυαγγελίων, a catena, or harmony of the goſpels, which he named, τὸ διὰ τεσσάρων, the goſpel gathered out of the four goſpels. And that the apoſtolical conſtitutions name them all, and (i) command " that they be read in the church, the " people ſtanding up at the reading of them.

6. That theſe goſpels, " being written," ſaith Irenæus, " by the will of God, to be the pillars and foundation of " the Chriſtian faith," the immediate ſucceſſors of the apoſtles, who, ſaith (k) Euſebius, did great miracles by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt, as they performed the work of evangeliſts in preaching Chriſt to thoſe who had not yet heard the word, made it their buſineſs, when they had laid the foundations of that faith among them, τὴν τῶν τῶν ἐυαγγελίων παραδίδοναι γραφὴν, to deliver to them in writing the holy goſpels.

§ II. The mention of other goſpels bearing the names of other apoſtles, or of goſpels uſed by other nations, is ſo far from being derogatory from, or tending to diminiſh the tradition of the church concerning theſe four goſpels, that it tends highly to eſtabliſh and confirm it, as will be evident from theſe conſiderations:

1. That we find no mention of any of theſe goſpels till the cloſe of the ſecond century, and of few of them till the third, or the fourth century, i. e. not till long after the general reception of theſe four goſpels by the whole church of Chriſt. For Juſtin Martyr, and Irenæus, who cite large paſſages from theſe four goſpels, make not the leaſt mention of any other goſpels mentioned either by the heretics, or by the orthodox.

2. They who ſpeak of them in the cloſe of the ſecond, or in the following centuries, do it ſtill with this remark, that " the goſpels received by the tradition of the church " were only four," and that theſe belonged not to them, nor to the evangelical canon, v. g. (l) Clemens of Alexandria is the firſt eccleſiaſtical writer who cites " the goſpel according " to the Egyptians," and he doth it with this note, that the words cited thence " are not to be found in the four goſpels." In the ſame book he cites another paſſage quoted by the heretics, as he conjectures from the ſame goſpel; but then he adds, theſe things they cite οἱ πάντα μᾶλλον ἢ τῷ κατὰ ἀλήθειαν ἐυαγγελικῷ ςοιχήσαντες κανόνι, who had rather follow any thing than the true evangelical canon, ibid. p. 453. D. (m) Origen is the next that makes mention of them, and he doth it with this cenſure, that they were " the " goſpels not of the church, but of the heretics;" among theſe he reckons, " the goſpel according to the Egyptians, " the goſpel of the twelve apoſtles, the goſpel according to " St Thomas, and Matthias, and others;" but, ſaith he, " there are only four, from whence we are to confirm our " doctrine, nor do I approve of any other." Whence we may learn, that though he often cites " the goſpel to the " Hebrews," which, ſaith St Jerom, was the ſame with that according to the twelve apoſtles, and the goſpel according to St Peter, yet he approved of none of them.

(n) Euſebius is the next eccleſiaſtical writer who ſpeaks of other goſpels, viz. " The goſpel according to St Peter, " St Thomas and Matthias, and alſo of the acts of Andrew, " St John, and other apoſtles;" but then as Origen had told us, that the heretics only had them, ſo he ſaith, that " they were publiſhed by them, and that they had no teſti- " mony from thoſe eccleſiaſtical perſons who continued down " the other goſpels in a ſucceſſion to them, and that the doc- " trine contained in them was much different from the catho- " lic doctrine;" whence he concludes, that " they are the " inventions of heretics, and are not ſo much as to be ranked " among ſpurious books, but are to be rejected as wicked " and abſurd." And,

1. To begin with the goſpel of St Peter, " It was," ſaith Euſebius, " publiſhed by the heretics, and is by no means " to be placed among the catholic goſpels." " It is mani-

" feſt," ſaith (o) Seraphion, " that we received it not from " our anceſtors, but thoſe who learned and read it, were the " Docetæ, and the Marcionites who ſprang from them."
" It was the goſpel uſed by the Nazarenes," ſaith (p) Theodoret.

2. The goſpel according to St Thomas, mentioned by Origen and Euſebius, " was," ſaith (q) St Cyril, " the " work not of St Thomas the apoſtle, but of another Tho" mas, who was a Manichean heretic;" on which account he deſires all Chriſtians not to read it.

3. From the ſame heretics proceeded " the goſpel ac" cording to St Philip," ſaith (r) Leontius. " It was the fic" tion of the Gnoſtics," ſaith (s) Epiphanius.

4. The goſpel of Matthias " was," as (t) Clemens of Alexandria intimates, " the work of the Baſilidians, or Car-
" pocratians."

5. The " Proto evangelium of St James" is firſt mentioned by (u) Pope Innocent the Firſt, among the goſpels feigned by Lucius the heretic; this he doth in a decree, in which he condemns all theſe falſe goſpels, and declares who were the authors of them.

Laſtly, The goſpel of the twelve apoſtles, according to St Jerom, is the ſame with the goſpel according to the Hebrews, of which we are to ſpeak hereafter.

Seeing then theſe four goſpels were received without all doubting, or contradiction by all Chriſtians from the beginning, as the writings of thoſe apoſtles and evangeliſts whoſe names they bear, and they both owned, and (x) teſtified that they were delivered to them by " the apoſtles as the pillars, " foundations, and elements of their faith" and divine writings, even by thoſe who preached that very goſpel to them which in theſe writings they delivered, or rather by that God that enabled them to preach, and directed them to indite theſe goſpels for that end. 2. Seeing they were delivered by the immediate ſucceſſors of the apoſtles to all the churches they converted or eſtabliſhed, as a rule of faith. 3. Seeing they were read from the beginning, as Juſtin M. teſtifies, in all aſſemblies of Chriſtians, and that not as ſome other eccleſiaſtical writings were in ſome aſſemblies upon ſome certain days, but in all Chriſtian aſſemblies on the Lord's day, and ſo muſt early be tranſlated into thoſe languages in which alone they could be underſtood by ſome churches, viz. the Syriac and Latin. 4. Seeing they were generally cited in the ſecond century for the confirmation of this faith, and the conviction of heretics, and the preſident of the aſſembly exhorted thoſe who heard them, to do and imitate what they heard. 5. Seeing we never hear of any other goſpels till the cloſe of the ſecond century, and then hear only of them with a mark of reprobation, or a declaration that they were ψευδεπίγραφα falſely impoſed upon the apoſtles, that they belonged not to the evangelical canon, or to the goſpels delivered to the churches by ſucceſſion of eccleſiaſtical perſons, or to thoſe goſpels which they approved, or from which they confirmed their doctrines, but were to be rejected as wicked and abſurd, and the inventions of rank heretics; all theſe conſiderations muſt afford us a ſufficient demonſtration, that all Chriſtians then had an unqueſtionable evidence that they were the genuine works of thoſe apoſtles and evangeliſts whoſe names they bore, and ſo were worthy to be received as the records of their faith: and then what reaſon can any perſons of ſucceeding ages have to queſtion what was ſo univerſally acknowledged by thoſe who lived ſo near to that very age in which theſe goſpels were indited, and who received them under the character of the holy and divine ſcriptures?

§ III. And yet even to this general and uncontrolled tradition we may add farther ſtrength from theſe conſiderations:

1. That ſince our Jeſus was a prophet, or a teacher ſent from God, he muſt have left unto his church ſome records of his Father's will; this King Meſſiah being to reign for ever, muſt have ſome laws by which his ſubjects muſt be for ever governed; this Saviour of the world muſt have delivered to the world the terms on which they may obtain the great ſalvation purchaſed by him; or he muſt be in vain a Prophet, King, and Saviour; and ſo ſome certain records of thoſe laws, and thoſe conditions of ſalvation muſt be extant. Now, unleſs theſe goſpels, and other ſcriptures of the New Teſtament, contain theſe laws, they muſt be wholly loſt, and we muſt all be left under a manifeſt impoſſibility of knowing, and ſo of doing his will, and of obtaining thoſe bleſſings he hath promiſed to them that do it. For to ſay tradition might ſupply the want of writing, is to contradict experience, ſince the traditions of the Jews made void that word of God they had received in writing, and then how reaſonable is it to believe they would have much more done it, had no ſuch writing been delivered? Moreover, our bleſſed Lord ſpake many things which were not written; he taught the multitude by the ſea, Mark 2. 13. beyond Jordan, Mark 10. 1. in the ſynagogues of Galilee, Luke 4. 15. at Nazareth, ver. 22. at Capernaum, ver. 31. out of Simon's ſhip, Luke 5. 3. and very often in the temple, John 7. 14.; 8. 2. He interpreted to the two diſciples going to Emmaus, throughout all the ſcriptures, the things concerning him, Luke 24. 27. He diſcourſed to his diſciples, after his reſurrection, touching the things of the kingdom of God, Acts 1. 3. St John aſſures us there were exceeding many miracles that Jeſus did which were not written, chap. 20. 30. Now, whereas all thoſe miracles and ſermons which were written are entirely preſerved, and firmly believed, tradition hath not preſerved one miracle or ſermon to us which was never written, and therefore can be no ſure record of the doctrine or the laws of Chriſt. In a word, it is evident that even the church catholic hath loſt a tradition delivered to her by St Paul; for in his ſecond epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, chap. 2. 5. 6. he ſaith, I told you theſe things (concerning antichriſt) when I was with you, and now ye know what letteth, or hindereth his appearance; he alſo intimates in this epiſtle, and by his exhortation to hold faſt theſe traditions, ver. 15. that they were of great moment to be known, and be retained; and yet theſe traditions have neither been retained by the Roman, nor by the catholic church; and it is confeſſed by (y) Anſelm, and by Eſthius on the place, "that though the Theſſalonians knew it, yet we know it not;" ſo that the tradition which the church received from this apoſtle touching this matter is wholly loſt; how therefore can ſhe be relied on as a ſure preſerver, and a true teacher of traditions, which hath confeſſedly loſt one of great moment depoſited with the Theſſalonians, and the primitive church?

2. That it was neceſſary that the Chriſtian doctrine, or revelation ſhould be preſerved in ſome writing, may fairly be concluded from the holy ſcriptures; for if St Paul thought it neceſſary to write to the church of Rome, to put them in remembrance of the grace given to them, Rom. 15. 15. as alſo to ſend to his Corinthians in writing, the things they had heard, and did acknowledge, 2 Cor. 1. 13. and to write the ſame things which he had taught to his Philippians, chap. 3. 1. If St Peter thought it needful to write to the Jewiſh converts, to teſtify to them that it was the grace of God in which they ſtood, 1 Pet. 5. 12. and to ſtir up their ſincere minds by way of remembrance, that they might be mindful of the commands of the apoſtles of our Lord and Saviour, 2 Pet. 3. 1. 2. though they at preſent knew them, and were eſtabliſhed in the truth, 2 Pet. 1. 12. 13. and St Jude to write to the ſame perſons, to mind them of the common ſalvation, ver. 3.; if the beloved evangeliſt cloſeth his goſpel with theſe words, Theſe things were written, that ye might believe that Jeſus is the Chriſt, and believing might have life through his name; ſurely theſe perſons could not but think it neceſſary that the eſſential doctrines of Chriſtianity ſhould be written, and yet we are ſure they only have been written in thoſe goſpels, and other ſcriptures contained in the canon of the books of the New Teſtament, and therefore we cannot reaſonably doubt of their authority. Add to this,

That the apoſtles, and that Holy Spirit who did aſſiſt them in the inditing of theſe goſpels for the churches uſe, could not be wanting in cauſing them to be tranſmitted to thoſe Chriſtians for whoſe uſe they were indited, becauſe they could not be wanting to purſue the end for which they were indited; for they being therefore written that they might know the certainty of thoſe things in which they had been inſtructed, Luke 1. 4. and partly to engage them more firmly to believe that Jeſus was the Chriſt, they muſt very early commit them to thoſe churches for whoſe ſake they were written.

3. It is evident, that the immediate ſucceeding age could not be ignorant of what was thus delivered to them by the church from the apoſtles, as the pillar and the ground of faith; nor is it eaſy to conceive that either they would have thus received them, had the apoſtles given them no ſufficient indication of them, or that they would have been eſteemed ſo preſently the charters of the Chriſtian faith, had not the apoſtles delivered them unto the churches under that character.

Laſtly, We have good reaſon to ſuppoſe that the providence of God which was ſo highly intereſted in the propagation of the Chriſtian faith, and making of it known to the world, would not permit falſe records of that faith to be ſo early, and ſo generally impoſed upon the Chriſtian world.

§ IV. From the ſame tradition we, with the ſtrongeſt evidence of reaſon, may conclude, that theſe four goſpels, and the other ſcriptures received then without doubt or contradiction by the church, were handed down unto them uncorrupted in the ſubſtantials of faith and manners. For, 1. Theſe records being once ſo generally diſperſed through all Chriſtian churches, though at great diſtance from each other, from the beginning of the ſecond century: 2. They being ſo univerſally acknowledged and conſented to by men of curious parts, and different perſuaſions: 3. They being preſerved in their originals in the apoſtolical churches, among whom ſaith (z) Tertullian, authenticæ eorum literæ recitantur, "their original letters are recited," it being not to be doubted but they who received the originals from the apoſtles, and who had authentic copies of them given to them by their immediate ſucceſſors, would carefully preſerve them to poſterity: 4. They being multiplied into divers verſions almoſt from the beginning, as we may rationally conclude, becauſe the church of Rome, and other churches which underſtood not the original Greek, being founded in the apoſtles days, could not be rationally ſuppoſed to be long without a verſion of thoſe ſcriptures which were to be read by them in public and in private: 5. They being eſteemed by them as digeſta noſtra, "their law-books," ſaith (a) Tertullian, libri deifici, deificæ ſcripturæ, "books which inſtructed them to lead "a divine life," ſay the martyrs, and believed by all Chriſtians to be θεῖαι γραφαὶ, divine ſcriptures, ſaith (b) Origen, and therefore as the records of their hopes and fears: 6. They being ſo conſtantly rehearſed in their aſſemblies by men whoſe work it was to read and preach, and to exhort to the performance of the duties they injoined: 7. They being ſo diligently read by Chriſtians, and ſo rivetted in their memories, that (c) Euſebius mentions ſome who had them all by heart: 8. They being, laſtly, ſo frequent in their writings, and ſo often cited by Irenæus, Clemens of Alexandria, and Origen, as now we have them; it muſt be certain from theſe conſiderations that they were handed down to ſucceeding generations pure and uncorrupt.

And indeed theſe things render us more ſecure, that the ſcriptures were preſerved entire from deſigned corruption, than any man can be that the ſtatutes of the land, or any other writings, hiſtories, or records whatſoever have been ſo preſerved, becauſe the evidence of it depends upon more perſons, and they more holy, and ſo leſs ſubject to deceive, and more concerned that they ſhould not be corrupted, than men have cauſe to be concerned for other records; and ſo we muſt renounce all certainty of any record, or grant that it is certain theſe are genuine records of the Chriſtian faith. Moreover, this ſuppoſed corruption of the word of God, or ſubſtitution of any other doctrine than what hath been delivered by the apoſtles, could not be done by any part or ſect of Chriſtians, but they who had embraced the faith, and uſed the true copies of the word of God, in other churches of the Chriſtian world, muſt have found out the cheat; and therefore this corruption, if it were at all effected, muſt be the work of the whole bulk of Chriſtians; whereas it cannot rationally be ſuppoſed, that the immediate ſucceeding ages ſhould univerſally conſpire to ſubſtitute their own inventions for the word of God, and yet continue ſtedfaſt in, and ſuffer ſo much for that faith which denounced the ſevereſt judgments againſt them who did corrupt this word, or that ſo many men ſhould, with the hazard of their lives and fortunes, avouch the goſpel, and at the ſame time make ſuch a change even in the frame and conſtitution of his doctrine, as made it ineffectual both to themſelves and their poſterity; nor can it reaſonably be thought that they ſhould venture upon that which, were the goſpel true or falſe, muſt needs expoſe them to the greateſt evils whilſt they continued abettors of it. Laſtly, That theſe ſacred records of the word of God have not been ſo corrupted as to ceaſe to be a rule of faith and manners, we argue from the providence of God; for nothing ſeems more inconſiſtent with the wiſdom and goodneſs of God, than to inſpire his ſervants to write the ſcriptures for a rule of faith and manners for all future ages, and to require the belief of the doctrine, and the practice of the rules of life plainly contained in it, and yet to ſuffer this divinely-inſpired rule to be inſenſibly corrupted in things neceſſary to faith or practice. Who can imagine, that that God who ſent his Son out of his boſom to declare this doctrine, and his apoſtles by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit to indite and preach it, and by ſo many miracles confirmed it to the world, ſhould ſuffer any wicked perſons to corrupt and alter any of thoſe terms on which the happineſs of mankind depended? This, ſure, can be eſteemed rational by none but ſuch as think it not abſurd to ſay that God repented of his good-will and kindneſs to mankind in the vouchſafing of the goſpel to them, or that he ſo far maligned the good of future generations, that he ſuffered wicked men to rob them of all the good intended to them by this declaration of his will; for ſince thoſe very ſcriptures which have been received as the word of God, and uſed by the church as ſuch from the firſt ages of it, pretend to be the terms of our ſalvation, ſcriptures indited by men commiſſionated from Chriſt, and ſuch as did avouch themſelves apoſtles by the will of God, and his command, for the delivery of the faith of God's elect, and for the knowledge of the truth which is after godlineſs, in hope of life eternal, they muſt be in reality the word of God, or providence muſt have permitted ſuch a forgery as rendereth it impoſſible for us to perform our duty in order to ſalvation; for if the ſcriptures of the New Teſtament ſhould be corrupted in any eſſential requiſite of faith or manners, it muſt ceaſe to make us wiſe unto ſalvation, and ſo God muſt have loſt the end which he intended in inditing it. The objections which the Papiſts make on account of the various lections, I preſume are fully anſwered by Dr Mills, and can be anſwered by him alone, ſince others muſt not be allowed to blow upon his learned book upon that ſubject.

§ V. And this is all which I think neceſſary to be ſaid concerning the four goſpels in the general. I proceed now to the conſideration of that great queſtion, "Whether the goſpel of St Matthew was by him writ in Hebrew, or in the "Syriac language, and only was by others afterwards tranſlated into Greek?"

(d) Mr Du Pin informs us, that all the ancients with one conſent aſſure us, "that he wrote in Hebrew;" Papias, St Irenæus, Origen, Euſebius, St Cyril of Jeruſalem, Epiphanius, St Jerom, St Auſtin, St Chryſoſtom, the author of the Latin commentary on St Matthew, which is aſcribed to St Chryſoſtom, and the author of the ſynopſis of the ſcripture which bears the name of Athanaſius, "are a cloud of witneſſes who depoſe that St Matthew wrote his goſpel in "Hebrew:" But then he adds, "that the original Hebrew "of the goſpel according to St Matthew was loſt; and after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Titus, becoming uſeleſs, there was no care taken to preſerve it." And ſaith, p. 36. "It is certain, that the Greek verſion we have is as "ancient as the times of the apoſtles, that it was publiſhed "from the beginning of the church in all Chriſtian nations, "that it was looked upon as good as an original by the "Greeks and Latins, that it was preſerved without any alteration, and always looked upon as authentic and canonical, whereas the original Hebrew continued not long the "ſame that it was left by St Matthew."

Now, as for this cloud of witneſſes, I ſhall, 1ſt, Conſider the chief of them apart, and then diſcourſe of this ſuppoſed tradition in the bulk. Now,

The firſt witneſs is Papias, that man of fables, ſaith (e) Euſebius, who voucheth, that "St Matthew writ his

"oracles

" oracles in the Hebrew tongue, ἡρμήνευσε δὲ αὐτὰ ἕκαστος ὡς " ἐδύνατο, and every one interpreted them as he was able." From which words it is evident, that he knew nothing of any authentic version of this gospel approved by the apostles, and looked upon as authentic and canonical by the church; for, after that, every one could not be left to interpret the Hebrew as he could. He also plainly in this passage doth suppose, that the Hebrew copy of St Matthew was neither then lost, nor adulterated and corrupted by additions, defalcations, or interpolations, or must own that every one then used a copy so corrupted; and if he could be ignorant or mistaken in matters of so great importance, why might he not be so in saying this gospel was first written in a language he understood not?

(f) Irenæus is the second witness, who saith, that " St " Matthew put forth his gospel among the Hebrews, τῇ " ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ αὐτῶν, in their own tongue;" and that the Ebionites used eo evangelio quod est secundum Matthæum, " that very gospel according to St Matthew, which was writ " in Hebrew;" this he saith (g) twice, without any intimation that it was interpolated or corrupted by them. Now here, saith the learned (h) Mr Grabe, the Nazarenes and Ebionites easily imposed upon Irenæus, and other fathers, who understood not the Hebrew tongue. But, after more mature consideration of the matter, he saith, ' He thinks with I- " renæus, that the Ebionites did use the gospel of St Mat- " thew, though not entire and uncorrupted; and finds, that " Eusebius, and St Jerom, and our modern writers, were " mistaken in making the gospel to the Hebrews which the " Nazarenes used, and the gospel which the Ebionites abu- " sed, one and the same." And yet (i) Epiphanius expressly saith of the Ebionites, " they used only the gospel " of St Matthew, and called it the gospel according to the " Hebrews, as it truly is." So that either Eusebius, Epiphanius, and St Jerom, must be mistaken in this matter, which is sufficient to invalidate their testimony; or Irenæus must be himself mistaken; and then he much more might be so in speaking of a language that he understood not.

(k) Origen is the third witness, who indeed said, that " the " first gospel was writ by St Matthew, and that he gave it " to the ewish converts composed in the Hebrew tongue;" but he doth not say, it was written either first, or only in that tongue. Thus therefore I am willing to compound the matter, that the gospel of St Matthew being written for all nations in the Greek, as a tongue common to most of them, was also given for the use of those Jews who only understood their mother-tongue, in Hebrew.

(l) Eusebius is the next witness, who saith, that " Mat- " thew delivered his gospel to the Jews in their own " tongue;" but then, that the gospel then retained in Hebrew, was indeed the gospel according to the Hebrews, or the same gospel of St Matthew, which the Ebionites used, and called the gospel according to St Matthew, is plain, from (m) comparing the words of Eusebius and Theodoret, with those of Irenæus: though, I confess, Theodoret seems to make a distinction betwixt the Ebionites, who held, that our Lord was born of Joseph and Mary, who used the gospel according to the Hebrews, i. e. that gospel of the Nazarenes, from which, saith (n) Epiphanius, they had cut off the genealogy of St Matthew, and the Ebionites, who held, that Christ was born of a virgin; and saith, they used the gospel according to St Matthew: And yet of this distinction Irenæus saith nothing, and Eusebius plainly contradicts it, such a confusion and conflict is there among the ancients in this matter. (p) Eusebius proceeds to tell us, " that they of the Jews who received Christ, chiefly embra- " ced τὸ καθ' Ἑβραίους εὐαγγέλιον, the gospel according to the " Hebrews: and that Hegesippus, a man of the first succes- " sion from the apostles, cited passages (o) ἐκ τοῦ καθ' Ἑβραίους " εὐαγγελίου, from the gospel according to the Hebrews." Now, these things shew, that though he knew this gospel contained many things which were not in the Greek copy of St Matthew, yet was it free from any additions which did corrupt the faith; for otherwise he could not have spoke so honourably of Hegesippus, or so mildly of those other Christians which made use of it: And therefore, though he saith, that " some put the gospel according to the Hebrews amongst " the books contradicted," as they did also the revelation of St John, yet, by saying this, he plainly insinuates, that other ecclesiastical writers owned it; nor doth he rank it among (q) τὰς ὑπ' ὀνόματι ἀποστόλων πρὸς τῶν αἱρετικῶν προφερομένας, the scriptures introduced by the heretics under the name of the apostles, as he doth the gospels of St Peter, St Thomas, and Matthias; as knowing what St Jerom doth assure us, that it was called or esteemed by most men, the gospel according to St Matthew.

(r) Epiphanius is another witness, who saith, " the go- " spel of St Matthew was writ in Hebrew;" but then he adds, " that the Nazarenes had the fullest copy of it, and " kept it till his time as it was first written, in the Hebrew

" tongue."

" tongue." Now, be it, as Mr Grabe and Petavius affirm, that in this he was deceived by them, and that it was the fault of it to be ſo full; yet, as this ſhews, that it paſſed then under the name of St Matthew's goſpel, ſo doth it alſo ſhew how eaſy it was for theſe witneſſes to be impoſed on in this matter.

(*) St Jerom is another witneſs, that " the goſpel of St " Matthew was writ in Hebrew words and letters:" And then he adds,

1*ſt*, " That it was (in his time) uncertain who tranſlated " it into Greek."

2*dly*, That " the very manuſcript was, till his time, pre- " ſerved in the Cæſarean library, gathered by Pamphilus the " martyr; and that the Nazarenes, who uſed it at Beræa, " gave him the liberty to tranſcribe it, and that this very " book was by moſt thought to be the goſpel according " to St Matthew."

3*dly*, " That the ſcriptures cited in this goſpel, both in " the perſon of the evangeliſt and of our Lord, were ex- " actly according to the Hebrew, and not according to the " Septuagint," as it might reaſonably be expected it would be in an Hebrew goſpel, writ for the uſe of them who only owned the Hebrew Bible as authentic."

4*thly*, That " he himſelf not only tranſcribed it from " the Cæſarean copy, but after, turned it into Greek and " Latin."

5*thly*, From this Hebrew goſpel he cites theſe paſſages, 1*ſt*, " The mother of our Lord, and his brethren, ſaid to him, " John the Baptiſt baptizeth for the remiſſion of ſins, let us " go and be baptized of him; and he anſwered, In what " have I ſinned, that I ſhould go and be baptized of him?" 2*dly*, " The man who came to Chriſt with the withered " hand, was a maſon, and ſaid to Chriſt, I am a maſon who " get my living by my labour; I pray thee heal me, that I " may not be conſtrained to beg." 3*dly*, That " the apo- " ſtle James had ſworn, after he had received the ſacrament " from the hands of Chriſt, that he would not eat bread till " he had ſeen Chriſt riſen from the dead; and that therefore " our Lord appeared to him." 4*thly*, That in this goſpel " it was reckoned amongſt the higheſt crimes, to make ſad " the heart of our brother." 5*thly*, That in this goſpel it was ſaid, " not only that the vail of the temple was rent at our " Lord's death, but alſo that the lintel over the temple, be- " ing very great, was broken." In fine, he ſaith, that " Jeſus being come out of the water, the ſource of the Ho- " ly Ghoſt deſcended upon him, reſted on him, and ſays " to him, My Son, I expected you in all the prophets, to " the end, that being come, I might reſt upon you; for " you are my reſt, and my firſt-born Son, who reigns for " ever." Now, this is the only place which ſeems to vary from the doctrine of the church; and this Origen expounds, Com. in Job. p. 58. D. The other fathers which ſeem to avouch this tradition, come too late, and are not conſiderable enough to be examined apart: I therefore ſhall only make ſome remarks on what St Jerom hath delivered. And,

1*ſt*, Whereas, he ſays, " it was uncertain who tranſlated " this goſpel of St Matthew, writ in Hebrew, into Greek;" hence we obſerve, that there is little reaſon to depend on what later writers have ſaid in this matter; and therefore Mr Du Pin freely confeſſes, p. 36. that, whereas it is ſaid in the abridgment of the ſcriptures aſcribed to Athanaſius, that it was made by St James, biſhop of Jeruſalem; by (†) Theophylact, is aſcribed to St John; and by Anaſtaſius the Sinaite, is aſcribed to St Luke and St Paul; all this is ſpoken without ground.

2*dly*, Whereas he ſays, " this was the copy which the " Nazarenes and the Ebionites uſed, and that moſt perſons " did eſteem it the goſpel, and the authentic copy of St Mat- " thew:" Hence it muſt follow, that they had then a copy which then paſſed commonly under the name of the goſpel according to St Matthew.

3*dly*, Whereas he citeth from this goſpel many paſſages which are not, as he cites them, to be found in the goſpel of St Matthew approved by the church; hence it muſt follow, they had added to St Matthew's goſpel many things from tradition, which were not recorded in the authentic goſpel of St Matthew; and this ſeems probably to be the thing Euſebius intended, when he ſaid, that "Hegeſippus cited many "things from the Hebrew goſpel, and from the unwrit-"ten traditions of the Jews;" ſo that this goſpel according to the Hebrews ſeems not to me, as (u) Mr Grabe and Du Pin do conjecture, to have been a goſpel wholly different from that of St Matthew, writ, or tranſlated by him into Hebrew, for their uſe, as were, ſaith (x) Epiphanius, the goſpel of St John, and the Acts of the apoſtles, but only the goſpel of St Matthew, uſed by the Ebionites, who denied that Chriſt was born of a pure virgin, and therefore ſtruck out the genealogy of St Matthew; and the ſame goſpel uſed by the Nazarenes, with many additions they had received from tradition, and upon that account placed by many eccleſiaſtical writers among the writings contradicted, and in thoſe matters in which it differed from the Greek and authentic copy, was of no authority in matters which concerned the Chriſtian faith.

§ VI. To proceed therefore to the conſideration of this tradition in the bulk, let it be noted,

1*ſt*, That this is a tradition that an inſpired apoſtle writ a large goſpel by the afflatus of the Holy Ghoſt in Hebrew, and yet that providence which hath preſerved all the other canonical books both of the Old and of the New Teſtament in their original languages, and that church which hath handed down all the other books of the New Teſtament, even thoſe which are compriſed in one ſingle chapter in the ſame language, have ſuffered the original of this large goſpel to be loſt within forty years, ſaith Mr Du Pin, after it was written, as if it had been only written to be buried in the tomb of Barnabas, according to the tale of (y) Theodorus Lector, in the ſixth century; or to be carried by (z) St Bartholomew into the Indies, on that account more fortunate than other Chriſtians, and yet unfortunate in this, that when they had it, they underſtood not a word of it; whence, even Du Pin ſaith, there is no appearance of truth in that ſtory, p. 32.

2*dly*, It is a tradition of a goſpel written in Hebrew by inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt, for the uſe of the converted Jews; and yet, after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, it became uſeleſs, ſaith Du Pin, and ſo no care was taken to preſerve it: Yea, it was a goſpel written for their uſe, and to ſupply the abſence of St Matthew; and yet, as far as doth appear, none of them ever had, or uſed it, unleſs it alſo was the goſpel according to the Hebrews; for the converted Jews uſed that goſpel, ſaith Euſebius; and Hegeſippus appears, ſaith he, "to have been one of the Jewiſh converts, becauſe he cites "all his paſſages out of the goſpel according to the He-"brews." The Ebionites, ſay Euſebius, Epiphanius, and Theodoret, uſed only the goſpel according to the Hebrews; this was the goſpel, ſaith St Jerom, which the Nazarenes read, and which both they and the Ebionites uſed: and yet this goſpel is put among the books contradicted by Euſebius, "It is of "no authority to prove any matter of faith," ſaith (a) Origen, and may be received, or not. To avoid theſe conſequences, Du Pin and Mr Grabe contend, that the goſpel according to the Hebrews was diſtinct from the goſpel according to St Matthew; but this is evidently to contradict the teſtimonies of Irenæus and Theodoret, who ſay, the Ebionites uſed the goſpel of St Matthew; and of Epiphanius, who ſays, they uſed the goſpel according to the Hebrews, and called it the goſpel according to St Matthew; and of St Jerom, who ſaith, it was by moſt reputed the goſpel according to St Matthew. It was not indeed the true authentic goſpel of St Matthew, received without contradiction by the church, for that was only the Greek copy; it was not a copy of St Matthew's goſpel, free from additions and interpolations, which they had put into it from tradition, which is all that the arguments of Du Pin and others prove; but yet, I ſay, it was that very goſpel which the Nazarenes read, and which was kept in the Cæſarean library as the goſpel according to St Matthew, and which the Ebionites uſed as ſuch; nor can any man prove from antiquity, that either the Chriſtian fathers knew of, or that the Jewiſh converts ever uſed any other Hebrew goſpel according to St Matthew.

(b) Epiphanius indeed ſaith, "that the Nazarenes had "the goſpel according to St Matthew, πληρέστατον Ἑβραϊστί, "moſt full in Hebrew, and that they had preſerved it from "the beginning as it was writ in Hebrew, till his time:" But (c) Petavius truly notes that this was his miſtake, "that "goſpel not being pure, but depraved, and was indeed no "other than the goſpel according to the Hebrews;" and that this was ſo, is evident, partly from his own confeſſion, that, "for any thing he knew to the contrary, the "Nazarenes had cut off from it the genealogy from Abra-"ham to Chriſt;" and partly from the additional paſſages ſo often cited by St Jerom, from that goſpel which the Nazarenes read, and uſed. And this alſo confutes another falſe, which ſome have invented, by a diſtinction, which, without ground, they make betwixt the goſpel according to the Hebrews, and the goſpel according to the Nazarenes.

Now, from what I have thus diſcourſed, I argue thus, either the goſpel of St Matthew, ſuppoſed to be originally writ in Hebrew, contained in it the paſſages cited from the goſpel of the Nazarenes, or the goſpel according to the Hebrews, or it did not; if it did not, then it is certain, that the goſpel retained in Hebrew by the Nazarenes and Ebionites, as the goſpel according to St Matthew, was not the ſame with his original goſpel. Then, 2*dly*, Seeing St Jerom twice informs us, that it was the very authentic copy of St Matthew, and was by moſt judged to be ſo; and, Euſebius ſaith, that this goſpel according to the Hebrews, was only by ſome rejected, as alſo was the Revelation of St John; it follows, that moſt Chriſtians, as to the matter, muſt be then miſtaken.

But, if the original goſpel of St Matthew did contain theſe paſſages, then it is certain, that the Greek copy, approved by the apoſtles, and received by the univerſal church, cannot be the true or authentic goſpel of St Matthew, ſeeing it muſt be then deficient in many things contained in the true Hebrew goſpel; and ſo it muſt be granted, that the apoſtles approved, and the church received a goſpel which wanted many paſſages contained in the original, according to St Matthew, writ by the aſſiſtance or inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt.

3*dly*, It was written in Hebrew, ſaith this tradition, for the uſe of the circumciſion, and yet it was not written by St James the biſhop of the circumciſion, nor by St Peter, or St John, the apoſtles of the circumciſion, but by St Matthew the publican; yea, it was writ in Hebrew for them for whom both their own biſhop, and theſe apoſtles of the circumciſion, writ in Greek.

4*thly*, It was written, ſaith this tradition, by the direction of the Holy Ghoſt, and interpreted, ſaith the pretended Athanaſius, by James the brother of our Lord; ſaith Anaſtaſius Sinaita by St Luke; by St John, ſaith Theophylact upon hearſay, and all of them without ground, ſaith Du Pin, p. 36. "It is unknown by whom it was tranſlated," ſaith St Jerom; "it was not tranſlated," ſaith Papias, but every "one interpreted it as he could;" and yet that of (d) Baronius is certain, that "if the Hebrew alone was the origi-"nal of St Matthew, we cannot ſay the Greek is the true "copy of St Matthew, but by our aſſurance that it agrees "with the original." Now, if it were not at all tranſlated, as Papias ſaith, or were tranſlated only by an unknown hand, as St Jerom ſaith; or if we have only one ſingle perſon of a later date who aſcribes this verſion to an apoſtolical perſon, and he both doth it without ground, and is contradicted by two who attribute this verſion to another, can this be any ſure foundation that we have any copy which agrees with the original?

It is ſaid indeed that the apoſtles approved of the Greek verſion; I anſwer, that they and the whole church approved of the "Greek goſpel of St Matthew," I believe; but what ſingle authors, ſay they, approved of any verſion? yea, what author before St Jerom and the falſe Athanaſius ſpeaks of any verſion from the Hebrew? All antiquity cite this goſpel according to the Greek, and ſpeak of the goſpel "according "to the Hebrews" as a thing not of authority, or not received without contradiction; but I knew not one who ſaith, "the goſpel uſed by the church was a verſion from the He-"brew;" and from this long ſilence, and from the diſcord and ungrounded ſayings of thoſe ſingle witneſſes, who after the fourth century ſpeak of a verſion, I conclude the Greek we now have was no verſion, but the original goſpel of St Matthew writ by him for the uſe of the whole church of God, and that the Hebrew copy, if he writ any, was written for the uſe of the circumciſion only, ſo that it being in the hands of the Jews only, and underſtood by them alone, and they being, ſaith (e) Juſtin M. "the worſt ſort of Chriſtians," i. e. retainers of Judaiſm with Chriſtianity, and they in whoſe hands the goſpel chiefly was, being Nazarenes, and Ebionites, might, from the traditions which obtained among them, add to it, or from their principles be induced to change, and to corrupt it. Or,

Laſtly, To ſpeak freely what I conceive moſt probable, as the canonical books of the Old Teſtament were written originally in Hebrew, but when the pure Hebrew became unintelligible to the vulgar, and when the diſperſions of the Jews had diſtinguiſhed them into Hebrews which uſed their mother-tongue, and Helleniſts who underſtood only the Greek tongue, the Chaldee verſion was uſed in the ſynagogues of the Hebrews, and the Greek by the Helleniſts; ſo this diſtinction continuing after Chriſt's aſcenſion, ſome of the ſcriptures written originally in the Greek for the uſe both of Jew or Gentile, were tranſlated into the mixed Hebrew, and as they had, ſaith (f) Epiphanius, "the goſpel "of St John, and the Acts of the apoſtles in Hebrew;" ſo had they before the goſpel of St Matthew turned into the ſame language, and perhaps with the ſame liberty of making additions to it from tradition, which we find in the Chaldee Paraphraſt, and the tranſlation of the Septuagint; which verſion the primitive Chriſtians among the Gentiles who were ignorant of that language finding in their hands, they, from the likeneſs of the thing, and the pretenſions of the Jews, might think it an original written for their uſe. Thus ſome of them upon the ſame account inform us, that "the "epiſtle to the Hebrews was firſt written in Hebrew, and "was tranſlated into Greek by (g) Clemens, or St Luke;" and yet that in this matter they were miſtaken, we learn from (h) St Jerom, telling us for certain, "that the whole "New Teſtament, excepting only the goſpel of St Matthew, "was firſt writ in Greek." For,

1. St Jerom and Epiphanius are the only perſons who ſpeak of this "authentic Hebrew goſpel, kept till their time "by the Nazarenes;" which that it was not the original goſpel of St Matthew, hath been fully proved.

2. St Jerom ſaith of this Hebrew copy which he received from them, and tranſlated into Greek and Latin, that "the "citations contained in it when the evangeliſt ſpake in his "own perſon, or in the perſon of our Lord were exactly ac- "cording to the Hebrew, and not according to the Septu- "agint;" and yet it is certain this is not true of the Greek copy we now have, as appears from chap. 2. 6. 18.; 3. 3.; 4. 15.; 5. 21. 31. 43.; 11. 10.; 12. 20. 21.; 13. 14.; 15. 8. 9.; 26. 31.; 27. 9.

§ VII. If it be here objected, that by calling in queſtion a thing ſo generally aſſerted by ſo many fathers, I weaken the tradition of the church concerning the canon of the ſcriptures, and other matters handed down to us by tradition:

I anſwer, that I have ſufficiently obviated this objection in a particular (i) diſcourſe upon this ſubject, in which I have ſhewed what traditions are to be received, and what may rationally be queſtioned, and that we have ſufficient ground from reaſon to rely on the tradition of the canon of the Old and the New Teſtament.

2. (k) I have ſhewed that the fathers have been impoſed upon by the Jews in other things received from them by tradition, and aſſerted by more teſtimonies of ancient fathers than are avouched to prove that the goſpel according to St Matthew was firſt written in Hebrew; as v. g. 1ſt, In the ſtory of the cells of the Seventy, in which they who tranſlated the Old Teſtament, are ſaid to have been ſeverally placed; or, as Epiphanius will have it, two together, when they tranſlated the Old Teſtament from Hebrew into Greek, and yet by inſpiration, or prophetical impulſe, to have performed this tranſlation all in the ſame words; theſe things, ſaith (l) Juſtin M. "we report to "you, Gentiles, not as fables, or feigned ſtories, ἀλλὰ παρ' αὐτῶν ἐκεῖ ὡς τὰ πάτρια παρειλῆφότων ἀκριβῶς ταῦτα παρα- γίνεσθαι, "but as a received tradition delivered to us from "the inhabitants of the place." The ſame tradition touching the cells is delivered as certain by (m) Irenæus, by Clemens of Alexandria, Strom. 1. p. 342. by (n) Cyril of Jeruſalem, and by Epiphanius, de ponderibus et menſ. p. 160. 161. 162. and by St Auſtin, de civ. Dei, l. 16. c. 42. 43.

And as all theſe fathers confirm the ſtory of the cells, and conſequently ſpeak of this performance as done θείᾳ δυνάμει καὶ ἐπιπνοίᾳ Θεοῦ, ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου, "by the power and "afflatus of the Holy Spirit, or by that Spirit who ſpake "theſe things by the prophets," ſo doth (o) Tertullian ſpeak de ſententiæ communione, of "their conſpiring in "their ſentiments:" (p) Euſebius ſaith, that it was θεοθὲν οἰκονομηθέντα ἑρμήνευμα, "an interpretation ordered by God: it "was done by them," ſaith (q) St Hilary, ſpirituali et cæleſti ſcientia, "with ſpiritual and heavenly knowledge: μὴ ἄνευ τῆς θείας ἐπιπνοίας, "not without divine inſpiration," ſaith (r) Theodoret: and this they ſay by reaſon of the great ſympathy which was in their interpretation; and yet (s) Bellarmine ſaith, "that in this the Jews impoſed on Juſtin M. "and the ſucceeding fathers might give credit to Juſtin." (t) Du Pin, that it is "a fiction of the Jews," and that "it "is well known how frivolous and uncertain theſe pretended "popular traditions are, and eſpecially among the Jews:" (u) F. Simon ſaith, "We muſt not here ſo much conſider "what the fathers ſaid, as what reaſon they had to ſay ſo," and that (x) St Jerom gives them all the lie. And to the other pretence of their inſpiration, he anſwers, p. 115. de rebus ſibi incognitis quidquam certi definire non potuerunt, "they could ſay nothing certain of things unknown to them- "ſelves," and therefore could ſay nothing certain in the caſe before us.

2. The appearance of Elias the Tiſbite in perſon, before the ſecond coming of Chriſt, is delivered by the fathers unanimouſly as a tradition of the church; but this they did partly from the tradition of the Jews, partly from the miſtaken ſenſe of the words of Chriſt, and partly from the authority of the Septuagint, without all ground, as hath been fully proved. Treat. of trad. chap. 5. § 1.—5.

3. They generally taught for four centuries together, that the good angels, ſtyled the ſons of God, Gen. 6. "were "tranſported with the love of women, and begat of them "giants and evil ſpirits;" this is taught by Juſtin M. Irenæus, Clemens of Alexandria, and Athenagoras, in the ſecond century; by Tertullian, Minucius, St Cyprian, and Methodius, in the third; by Lactantius, and Sulpicius, in the fourth; and this they did from the traditional interpretation of the Jews recorded in (y) Joſephus, and in (z) Philo, and in the firſt book of Enoch, de egregoris: and yet in the fifth century the authors of this opinion are repreſented by (a) Chryſoſtom, and Theodoret, as "ſtupid, teachers of fables, and "blaſphemers," (b) as hath been proved: and if in theſe things the fathers were ſo eaſily impoſed on by the Jews, why might they not be impoſed on likewiſe in ſaying that the goſpel according to St Matthew was written in a language that they underſtood nothing of, and of which they could ſay nothing certain from their own knowledge?

Notwithſtanding, if any man like not this opinion, he may compound the matter with the fathers thus; that St Matthew might deliver that goſpel which he writ as well in Hebrew to the Jews who underſtood that language only, as in Greek to the Helleniſtic Jews, and to the Gentile converts. And ſince it is agreed on all hands, that he left Judea to preach to the Gentiles, what is more reaſonable than to conceive he left that goſpel he had preached to them, and writ by the aſſiſtance of the Spirit as a rule of faith to all nations, in a language which thoſe nations underſtood?

DR WHITBY'S PARAPHRASE and COMMENTARY on the NEW TESTAMENT, is ſo well known, and ſo juſtly eſteemed, both in England and Scotland, that it is quite ſuperfluous to ſay any thing relating to the merit of the work. It ſhall only ſuffice to obſerve, that it is reckoned, by proper judges, the beſt commentary that has yet appeared.

The book has already paſſed through ſix editions in England; and the editor now offers a ſeventh to the public, at a very moderate price, hoping it will not be found inferior to any of thoſe which have gone before it.

The editor takes this occaſion to offer his ſincereſt thanks to thoſe who have kindly encouraged this work: And at the ſame time, he thinks it not improper to give notice, that if any of theſe ſubſcribers, or others, ſhall ſignify their deſire to have a PARAPHRASE and COMMENTARY on the OLD TESTAMENT, he may perhaps be induced to undertake an edition of a celebrated expoſition of that part of the ſacred writings.

A PARAPHRASE WITH ANNOTATIONS ON THE GOSPEL of ST. MATTHEW.

CHAP. I.

1. [a] THE book of the generation of Jeſus Chriſt, (who was according to the fleſh, Rom. 9. 5.) the ſon of [b] David, (Acts 2. 30. and) the ſon of Abraham, (is on this wiſe.)

2. Abraham begat Iſaac, and Iſaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat Judas and his [c] brethren,

3. And Judas begat Phares, and [d] Zara of [e] Thamar, and Phares begat Eſrom, and Eſrom begat Aram,

4. And Aram begat Aminadab, and Aminadab begat Naaſſon, and Naaſſon begat Salmon,

5. And Salmon begat Booz of [f] Rahab, (the Harlot,) and Booz begat Obed of Ruth, (the Moabiteſs,) and Obed begat Jeſſe,

6. And Jeſſe begat [g] David the King, and David the King begat Solomon of [h] her that had been the wife of Uriah,

7. And Solomon begat Roboam, and Roboam begat Abiah, and Abiah begat Aſa,

8. And Aſa begat Joſaphat, and Joſaphat begat Joram, and Joram begat [i] Ozias,

9. And Ozias begat Joatham, and Joatham begat Achas, and Achas begat Ezekias,

10. And Ezekias begat Manaſſes, and Manaſſes begat Amon, and Amon begat Joſias,

11. And [k] Joſias begat Jechonias and his brethren, about the time they were carried away into Babylon;

12. And after they were brought to Babylon, Jechonias begat Salathiel, and Salathiel begat Zorobabel,

13. And [l] Zorobabel begat Abihud, and Abihud begat Eliakim, and Eliakim begat Azor,

14. And [m] Azor begat Sadoc, and Sadoc begat Achim, and Achim begat Eliud,

15. And Eliud begat Eleazar, and Eleazar begat Matthan, and Matthan begat Jacob,

16. And Jacob begat [n] Joſeph, the huſband of Mary, of whom was born Jeſus, who is called Chriſt.

17. So [o] all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations, and from David till the carrying away into Babylon, are (reckoned up by me) fourteen generations, and from the carrying away into Babylon to Chriſt (incluſively) are (alſo) fourteen generations.

18. Now the birth of Jeſus Chriſt was on this wiſe, (or after this extraordinary manner;) when as his mother Mary was eſpouſed to Joſeph, before they came together, ſhe was found with child (by the power) of the Holy Ghoſt, (overſhadowing her, Luke 1. 35. of which thing Joſeph knew nothing.)

19. Then Joſeph her (eſpouſed) huſband being a juſt man, and (therefore one who durſt not retain her, whom he eſteem'd an adultereſs, and yet being) not willing to make her (whom he loved) a publick example, was minded to (give her a bill of divorce, and ſo to) [p] put her away privily.

20. But while he thought on theſe things, behold the (an) angel of the Lord appeared to him in a dream, ſaying, Joſeph, thou ſon of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy (eſpouſed) wife, (tho' found with child,) for that which is conceived in her is (not the fruit of whoredom or adultery, but) of the Holy Ghoſt.

21. And ſhe ſhall bring forth a ſon, and thou ſhalt call his name Jeſus, (i. e. the Saviour,) for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſins.

22. Now all this was done (by the Holy Ghoſt overſhadowing this virgin,) that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken of the Lord by the Prophet (Iſaias,) ſaying, (Chap. 7. 14.)

23. Behold a [q] virgin ſhall be with child, and ſhall bring forth a ſon, and [r] they ſhall call his name (or his name ſhall be called) Immanuel, which being interpreted, is, God with us.

24. Then Joſeph being raiſed from ſleep, (and perceiving that the dream was from God,) did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him (Mary) his wife.

25. And (but he) knew her not [s] until ſhe had brought forth her firſt-born ſon, and he called his name Jeſus.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. I.

Ver. 1. [a] ΒΙΒΛΟΣ ΓΕΝΕΣΕΩΣ, the book of the generation,] i. e. as the Syriack well expreſſes it, the writing, narrative or rehearſal of the generation or birth, ver. 18. of Jeſus; for tho' the word γένεσις is elſewhere of that latitude, as to compriſe alſo the hiſtory of our Lord's life, and death, and reſurrection, yet it is here to be reſtrained to the birth of Chriſt, as appears, 1*ſt*, From the parallel phraſe, αὕτη ἡ βίβλος γενέσεως ἀνθρώπων, this is the book or the rehearſal of the generation of men from Adam to Noah, Gen. 5. 1. 2*dly*, From the deſign of the Apoſtle here, which is to ſet down the deſcent of Chriſt from Abraham, and his alliance to King David by his father Joſeph: And, 3*dly*, From the 18th verſe, which, after this narrative of it, proceeds to ſhew the manner of his birth, by ſaying, Now ἡ γένεσις the birth of Jeſus Chriſt was on this wiſe.

Ibid. [b] The ſon of David, the ſon of Abraham,] i. e. the ſon of both, as Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, (and) the daughter of Zibeon, Gen. 36. 2. This ſenſe being moſt ſuitable to the deſign of the Apoſtle, which is to prove, Chriſt was the ſon of both, and that in him were fulfilled the promiſes made to both. And David is firſt named, firſt, Becauſe the promiſe to him was freſher in memory, more plain, and more explicite; God had promiſed to Abraham, in general words, That in his ſeed ſhould all the families of the earth be bleſſed, Gen. 12. 3.——22. 18. And that this Seed was Chriſt, we learn from the Apoſtle Peter, Acts 3. 25, 26. and from St. Paul, Gal. 3. 16. But to David God promiſed, That in his ſeed would he eſtabliſh the throne of his kingdom for ever, 2 Sam. 7. 16. that his ſeed would he eſtabliſh for ever, and build up his throne to all generations, Pſal. 89. 4. Now this being a promiſe, that of the fruit of his body he would raiſe up Chriſt to ſit upon his throne, Acts 2. 30. was more ſuitable to the notions of the Jewiſh nation, touching the King Meſſiah, and to their inclinations. The Prophets alſo propheſie of him, as one to ſit upon the throne of David for ever, Iſa. 9. 7. that he ſhall be a righteous Branch raiſed up to David, and a King that ſhall reign and proſper, in whoſe days Judah ſhall dwell ſafely, Jer. 23. 5, 6. that they ſhould dwell in the land for ever, and David ſhall be their Prince for ever, Ezek. 37. 24, 25. See Iſa. 55. 11. Amos 9. 11. Accordingly, the angel ſpeaketh of one who ſhould reign on the throne of his father David, over the houſe of Jacob for ever, Luke 1. 33. And the Jews pray to him thus, Jeſus, thou Son of David, have mercy on us, Matth. 9. 27.— 15. 22.— 20. 30. and make their acclamations to him thus, Hoſanna to the Son of David. Others add, that Abraham is put after David, becauſe the Apoſtle was to begin his catalogue from Abraham.

Ver. 2. [c] Καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ, and his brethren.] Perhaps interpreters might ſave themſelves the trouble of giving a reaſon of many things contained in this catalogue, by ſaying, St. Matthew here recites it, as he found it in the authentick copies of the Jews, who doubtleſs had preſerved ſome known, and approved genealogy of their deſcent from Abraham, the father of their nation, in whom they ſo much gloried, and from whoſe loins they expected the promiſed Meſſiah. Thus, for inſtance, when it is ſaid Salathiel begat Zorobabel, it may be ſufficient to juſtify the Apoſtle in this, That the Jews do ſtill repreſent Zorobabel not as the ſon of Pedajah, but of Salathiel. So we read of Zorobabel, the ſon of Shealtiel, Neh. 12. 1. Hag. 1. 12, 14. ch. 2. 21, 23. Ezra 3. 2, 8. and ch. 5. 2. (a) Joſephus likewiſe ſays, the Captain of the people was ὁ Σαλαθιήλου παῖς Ζοροβαβήλ, Zorobabel the ſon of Shealtiel, and with great reaſon muſt he follow the ſentiments of three perſons of ſo great authority, as Ezra, Nehemiah, and the Prophet Haggah, the contemporaries of Zorobabel. So alſo may we ſay, that the Kings, left out in this genealogy, were therefore fore omitted by St. Matthew, becauſe he found them omitted in the genealogy uſed by the Jews, and that theſe words and his brethren, are added, as being alſo added in their genealogy. But to omit this, his brethren may be added to comfort the diſperſed tribes, which were not yet ſo fully returned out of captivity, as Judah was, in their equal intereſt in the bleſſing of the Seed of Abraham, they being all adopted children of God, which is not true of Iſmael or Eſau, the brethren of Iſaac and Jacob: Moreover, theſe brethren of Judas might well be mentioned as being Patriarchs, heirs of the promiſe, and heads of that people, whence the Meſſiah was to proceed; and therefore Stephen alſo ſpeaks thus of them, Abraham begat Iſaac, and Iſaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat the twelve Patriarchs, Acts 7. 8.

Ver. 3. [d] And Zara,] mentioned with Phares, as being born at the ſame time, and ſtriving with him for primogeniture, Gen. 38. 28, 29, 30.

Ibid. [e] Of Thamar.] It is obſerved here by ſome, that only four women are mentioned in this genealogy, till he comes to Joſeph, and all of them noted for ſome infamy, as Thamar for inceſt, Rahab for being an harlot, Ruth for Heatheniſm, Bathſheba for adultery; nor were they thus mentioned becauſe ſinners, to teach us that Chriſt came to ſave ſuch, or to be born of ſuch; for, why then were the three deſcents of Ahaziah, Joaſh and Amaziah omitted? But, becauſe in them only that law was departed from, which was given generally to the heirs of the promiſed bleſſing, that they ſhould take them wives of their neareſt kindred; and perhaps to obviate the cavils of the Jews againſt the mean condition of the mother of our Lord, their anceſtors being deſcended of women, whoſe qualities rendered them meaner than ſhe was.

Ver. 4. [f] Of Rahab.] That Rahab was married to ſome Prince of Iſrael, the tradition of the Jews aſſures us; but whereas, in contradiction to St. Matthew, they ſay, that ſhe was married to Joſhua; this is ſaid in flat oppoſition to their own tradition, that Rahab was the mother of eight Prieſts and Prophets; for Joſhua was neither of the tribe of Judah nor of Levi, but of the tribe of Ephraim, Num. 13. 8. That Rahab was one of the idolatrous nations with which they were forbidden to marry, Exod. 34. 16. Deut. 7. 3. hinders not this marriage of Salmon with Rahab, ſhe being firſt made a Proſelyte of Juſtice; the reaſon of that law being this, leſt they ſhould tempt them to idolatry; which reaſon ceaſed, when they once owned the God of Iſrael; whence we find that Booz married Ruth, Chap. 4. 13. and thought himſelf obliged ſo to do, and David married Maachah, the daughter of the King of Geſhur, 2 Sam. 3. 3. But here ſeems to be a great objection both againſt Salmon and againſt Obed, how it can be true, that only Booz, Obed and Jeſſe, ſhould intercede betwixt Salmon and David, when the time betwixt them muſt be at leaſt 300 years in the mildeſt computation; and ſo Salmon muſt be 100 years old when he begat Boaz, Booz as old when he begat Obed, and Obed as old when he begat Jeſſe; whereas it is looked upon as miraculous, that Abraham at 100 years ſhould beget Iſaac, Gen. 17. 17.—21. 5. To this objection it may be anſwered from the Targum upon Ruth, that theſe three were men of an extraordinary character for juſtice and piety; Salmon is ſtiled Salmon the juſt, of whom it is ſaid, that his works and the works of his children were very excellent; that Booz was a righteous perſon, by whoſe righteouſneſs the people of Iſrael were delivered from the hands of their enemies, and by whoſe prayers the famine ceaſed from the land of Iſrael; that Obed ſerved the Lord with a perfect heart, and that he begat Jeſſe, in whom was found no iniquity or corruption for which he ſhould be delivered to the angel of death, and he lived many days, and only died at laſt by reaſon of the ſentence paſſed upon Adam for eating the forbidden fruit. God therefore might vouchſafe to men of ſuch extraordinary piety, a longer life than ordinary, and ſtrength to beget children in their old age. Thus Caleb at 85, and Moſes at 120, had not their natural ſtrength abated, Deut. 34. 7. Joſh. 14. 11. whereas Abraham's body was then dead, Rom. 4. 19. See Additions N. 2.

Ver. 6. [g] David the King,] to whom the promiſe was made of the King Meſſiah to ſtabliſh his throne for ever, Ezek. 37. 25. and from him the kingdom is ſtiled the houſe of David, and the kingly throne, the throne of the houſe of David, Pſal. 122. 5.

Ibid. [h] Of her that had been the wife of Urias,] to ſhew that that crime of David being repented of, was ſo far from hindring the promiſe God made to him, that it pleaſed God, by this very woman, to fulfil it.

Ver. 8. [i] Joram begat Ozias.] It is certain from the hiſtory of the Kings and Chronicles, that Ozias was the ſon of Amaziah, 2 Chron. 26. 1. Amaziah of Joaſh, ch. 24. 27. Joaſh of Azariah, ch. 22. 11. Azariah of Joram, ver. 1. But, according to the language of the Hebrews, and their maxims relating to this matter, the children of children are reputed the children, not only of their immediate parents, but of their anceſtors, and theſe anceſtors are ſaid to beget thoſe who are removed ſome generations from them; ſo Iſaiah ſaith to Hezekiah, ch. 39. 7. Of thy ſons which ſhall iſſue from thee, which thou ſhalt beget, ſhall they take away; and they ſhall be eunuchs in the palace of the King of Babylon; which prediction was fulfilled only in the days of Jeconias, long after the days of Hezekiah. But the great queſtion here is, why Azariah, Joaſh, and Amaziah, are left out of the catalogue of the Kings of Judah? To this it is anſwered, 1. Negatively, that the reaſon could not be, becauſe they were great ſinners, ſince Manaſſeh and Amon, who were greater ſinners, were retained in this catalogue, ver. 10. It therefore may be ſaid,

1*ſt*, That the Jews had their Tabulæ cenſuales, in which the ſtems of the Kingly family of David were written; and in theſe catalogues theſe three Kings might be left out. That even to the time of Chriſt, they had ſuch tables even of their families and tribes, is evident from (b) Joſephus, who having given us the genealogy of his family, ſaith, Τὸν μὲν ἐν τῷ γένει ἡμῶν διαδοχὴν ὡς ἐν ταῖς δημοσίαις ἀναγραφαῖς εὗρον ὅτως ἀποτίθεμαι· I give you this ſucceſſion of our family as I found it written in the publick tables; and if ſo, the Jews, not the Apoſtle, are to account for this omiſſion. 2*dly*, It is no new thing to find the like omiſſions in the books of the Old Teſtament; thus Cain and his whole poſterity, are omitted in the book of Chronicles; Simeon is omitted in the bleſſing of Moſes, Deut. 33. for his cruelty at Sychem. The writer of the book of Chronicles, reckons up all the ſons of Jacob; but in the account of their poſterity, he omits the account of Zebulon and Dan; and when he begins with the ſons of Judah, he omits Zerah, 1 Chron. 2. 3.——ch. 4. 1. The pen-man of the books of Samuel, when he recounts the worthies of David, omits Joab, becauſe of his bloodineſs to Amaſa and Abner. In the book of Ezra, there are reckoned from Serajah to Aaron, only ſixteen generations, ch. 7. whereas in the book of Chronicles, from Aaron to the ſame Serajah, are reckoned twenty two, 1 Chron. 6. ſo that ſix muſt be omitted in Ezra: So that there is no more reaſon to ſuſpect the Evangeliſt, than the Jews have to queſtion their own ſcriptures on this account. But ſtill it may be enquired, why theſe three in particular are omitted? And to this it is anſwered, (1.) That the omitting theſe three, cannot in the leaſt concern the chief deſign of the Apoſtle, which was to ſhew, that Jeſus was of the lineage of David; ſince by paſſing from Joram to Ozias, he keeps ſtill in the ſame line, and ſo ſufficiently ſhews, that Jeſus was of the houſe and family of David. (2.) The reaſon why theſe three are paſſed by rather than others, ſeems probably to be this, That they are the poſterity of Joram an idolater, and one who married the daughter of Ahab, 2 Kings 8. 18. and ſo was joined to an idolatrous family, and by this provoked God to have deſtroyed his family, had he not preſerved it becauſe of the covenant made with David, 2 Chron. 21. 7. God therefore cuts off all theſe three, omitted here, by an unnatural and untimely death, to puniſh the idolatry of this King, and of the houſe of Ahab in his poſterity to the third generation, according to his threat in the ſecond commandment; and for this reaſon, theſe three Kings might be here paſſed over in ſilence. It is by others farther ſaid, That St. Matthew finding the generations in the firſt period exactly 14, he paſſed over ſome in his ſecond account, to make that to anſwer to the firſt; but this will by no means pleaſe Mr. Cl. who firſt, againſt all reaſon, talks of ten omitted out of the number of fifty, to make the diviſions into fourteens; and then adds a bold conjecture, "That St. Matthew met "with a genealogical book of David's family "that was defective, and accidentally obſerving "there three claſſes of fourteen generations be-"tween theſe three great periods of time, viz. "before the ſetting up of the regal government, "during its continuance, and after its fall, was "thereby moved to make ſuch a diviſion in the "account of Chriſt's lineage, which he would not "ſo much as have thought of, if he had made uſe "of an entire book; nor, ſaith he, (in the name "of his friend,) is it to be wondered, that a ge-"nealogical book ſhould be corrupted, becauſe "a very great and conſiderable error that had "perplexed the ancients, had crept into the 11th "verſe of St. Matthew's text itſelf." Now as for his imaginary error in the 11th verſe, I ſhall account for it there; but to make a divine author, aſſiſted by the Holy Ghoſt, as St. Matthew was always eſteemed by all Chriſtians, in a matter of ſo great import as the true deſcent of the Meſſiah, take up with a defective and corrupt book, and give to all Chriſtian ages a catalogue thus liable to the exception of the Jews, becauſe he accidentally did light on ſuch a one, and knew not of a better, is plainly to accuſe the ignorance, ſuſpect the care, and weaken the authority of this great Apoſtle; it had therefore been better to have concealed this wild conjecture of his friend, than to have offered it to an age unhappily diſpoſed to depreciate the ſacred writings.

Ver. 11. [k] Ἰωσίας δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰεχονίαν, καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ· And Joſias begat Jechonias and his brethren.] Againſt this it is objected, That Joſias did did not beget Jechonias, who was the ſon of Jehojakim: And to this it is anſwered, that Jechonias, in the 11th verſe, is not the ſame perſon with Jechonias verſe 12th, but is indeed Jehojachim, the ſon of Joſias, and his firſt-born. For tho' the people of the land made Jehoahaz, the ſecond ſon of Joſias, King after his father, yet that the kingdom by birth-right belonged to Jehojakim, is evident, becauſe Jehoahaz was only 23 years old when he began to reign, and reigned but three months; whereas Jehojakim, who immediately ſucceeded after his depoſition, was 25 years old when he began to reign, 2 Kings 23. 31, 36. Hence (e) Joſephus ſaith of Pharaoh Necho, who made him King, and changed his name from Eliachim to Jehojachim, Πρεσβύτερῳ αὐτὸ ἀδελφῷ ὁμοπατρίῳ ὄντι ἡ Βασιλείαν ἔδωκεν He gave the kingdom to Eliakim, his eldeſt brother by the ſame father. Hence doth St. Matthew take no notice of Jehoahaz, becauſe he reigned only three months, and that by uſurpation of the kingdom: That this firſt Jechonias was indeed Jehojakim, is proved, (1*ſt*,) From theſe words, Joſias begat Jeconias and his brethren; now Jehojakim indeed had two brethren begot by Joſias, viz. Jehoahaz, who reigned before him, and Zedekiah, who reigned after him; and therefore being Kings, were fit to be thus mentioned by St. Matthew: But it appears not, that Jechonias, the father of Shealtiel, had any brethren; and if he had, they muſt be begotten not by Joſias, but by Jehojakim his father; nor is there any reaſon why they ſhould be thus mentioned, ver. 12. when then we read, that Joſias begat Jeconias and his brethren; this can belong to none but Jehojakim: And when we read that Jeconias begat Salathiel, this muſt be underſtood of Jechonias the ſon of Jehojakim; for this agrees with the Old Teſtament, 1 Chron. 3. 15, 16, 17. (2*dly*,) This interpretation makes up the 14 generations exactly in the ſecond and third ſeries; whereas, they who make Jechonias, ver. 11. and ver. 12. to be the ſame perſon, leave only 13 in the ſecond ſeries, if Jeconias be added to the third; or in the third, if he be reckoned to the ſecond: When therefore the Apoſtle ſaith by way of inference, So all the generations from David until the carrying away into Babylon, are fourteen generations, ver. 17. he leads us to this interpretation, becauſe this would not be true, were Jeconias, ver. 11. and Jeconias, ver. 12. one and the ſame perſon. Thus (d) Jerom ſaith expreſly, that in Evangelio ſecundum Matthæum ſecunda τεσσαρες δεκαδες in Joacim deſinit filio Joſiæ, tertia incipit à Joacim filio Joachim: And again, (e) Sciamus Jeconiam priorem ipſum eſſe quem & Joachim, ſecundum autem filium, non patrem.

Object. If it be here objected, that they carry both one name, and ſo muſt be one perſon.

Anſw. It is anſwered, (1*ſt*,) That the names in the original differ very little, the one being יְהוֹיָקִים, the other יְכָנְיָה; which difference is ſo little, that both are tranſlated by the Septuagint, Ἰωακείμ· ſo is Jechonias tranſlated, Jer. 52. 31. twice: So (f) Joſephus ſaith, that Nebuchodonoſor, Ἰωάκιμον interfecit, & Ἰωάχιμον ἀ ὑὸν αὐτῦ καθίστησι βασιλέα, ſlew Joachim, and made Joachim his ſon King: And Clemens of Alexandria, that after Ἰωακεὶμ who reigned eleven years, ὁ ὁμώνυμος αὐτῦ Ἰωακεὶμ τρεῖς μῆνας βασιλεύς, Joachim of the ſame name, reigned three months. To this add that of Irenæus, l. 3. c. 30. that in the account St. Matthew gives of the generation of Jeſus Chriſt, Joſeph, Joachim & Jechoniæ filius oſtenditur.

Object. Thro' the whole chapter, the perſon who is firſt ſaid to be begotten and then to beget is the ſame perſon, it therefore ſeemeth reaſonable to think it ſo here.

Anſw. So alſo it is here; for it is expreſly ſaid, that Joſias begat Jechonias, i. e. Joachim and his brethren, i. e. he begat alſo Jehoaz, and Jehojakim, named alſo Jechonias, and theſe three continued to reign till the captivity, at which time Jechonias was carried away into Babylon; and after they were brought to Babylon, Jechonias begat Salathiel. But here comes in a freſh objection, that God had ſworn Jechonias ſhould be childleſs, (Heb. ſtript or naked,) a man that ſhall not proſper in his days; for no man of his ſeed ſhall proſper ſitting on the throne of David. Now hence it appears, (1*ſt*,) that the Hebrew עֲרִירִי, from the root עָרַר or עָרָה, may as well ſignify, ſtript, ſolitary, naked, rooted up, as childleſs; and accordingly it is rendered by the LXX ἐξωσμένος, an abject, abdicated perſon: (2*dly*,) He might be thus childleſs, or ſtript of his offſpring, by his childrens dying before him, as well as by his having none. And, (3*dly*,) This ſenſe is certain both from the preceeding words, He and his ſeed are caſt out into a land which they know not, ver. 28. and from the reaſon following, for none of his ſeed ſhall proſper: And, Laſtly, From 1 Chron. 3. 17. where his ſons are reckoned Aſſir and Salathiel.

Object. It farther is objected, that whereas it is here ſaid, that Salathiel begat Zorobabel, he was indeed the ſon of Pedajah, the ſon of Salathiel or Shealtiel, 1 Chron. 3. 19.

Anſw. To this I have already anſwered, That St. Matthew here follows the ſtile of the Old Teſtament, (e) Antiq. l. 10. c. 6. p. 336. (d) In Dan. 1. (e) In Matth. 1. (f) Antiq. lib. 10. c. 8.

Teſtament, and of the Jewiſh writers, in which Zorobabel is ſtill called the ſon of Salathiel. (2*dly*,) Were he not the immediate ſon of Shealtiel, but of Pedajah, yet is this ſuitable to the language of the Jewiſh nation, to count the grandſon the ſon of the grandfather: Thus Sarah is called the daughter of Terah, Gen. 20. 12. as being the daughter of Haran, the ſon of Terah; and the ſame with Iſcah, Gen. 11. 28, 29. Thus Laban is called the ſon of Nahor, Gen. 29. 5. as being the ſon of Bethuel, who was the ſon of Nahor, ch. 24. 47. And Jehoram is called the father of Jehoaſh, 2 Kings 12. 18. as being the father of his father Ahaziah; and Maacah the daughter of Abiſhalom, is ſaid to be mother of Aſa, 1 Kings 15. 10. becauſe ſhe was his father's mother, ver. 2. Conſiderable here is the obſervation of Mr. Whiſton, (1*ſt*,) That there is no other inſtance in this genealogy, but what ſpeaks of a truly natural generation. (2*dly*,) That in all other places of the Old Teſtament, Salathiel is ſaid to have begotten Zorobabel; and therefore we have cauſe to follow the Alexandrian MS. which, in the place of the Chronicles cited, makes not Pedajah, but Salathiel the father of Zorobabel; or to ſay, that Salathiel might have one ſon of that name, and Pedajah another, or laſtly, That Pedajah begat Zorobabel of the wife of Salathiel, and ſo he was the natural ſon of Pedajah, but the legal ſon of Salathiel. So the Biſhop of Ely.

Ver. 13. [l] Zorobabel begat Abiud.] Againſt this it is objected, That among the ſons of Zorobabel reckoned up, 1 Chron. 3. 19. there is no mention of Abiud.

Anſw. To this it is anſwered, (1*ſt*,) That it is not evident, that Zorobabel in Matthew and in Chronicles is the ſame perſon, and then he in St. Matthew may be the ſon of Salathiel the brother of Pedajah. (2*dly*,) That Abiud is mentioned in Chronicles under the name of Meſhullam, it being certain that many perſons in the Old Teſtament, and eſpecially about the time of their captivity, had other names in Babylon than what were uſed in their own land: And it is the ingenious conjecture of Dr. Lightfoot, that this ſon was called Abiud, in remembrance of his father's glory; and Meſhullam, either in memorial of Solomon, the glory of whoſe houſe was transferred to him, or from the ſignificancy of the word, which importeth requited: For, whereas Jechonias was called Shallum, that is, finiſhed, becauſe the race of Solomon ended in him, when a recompence of the failing of that is made, by the ſucceſſion of Salathiel in its ſtead, well might Zorobabel, in whom it firſt appeared, call his ſon Meſhullam, or requited.

Ver. 14. [m] Here it is enquired, whence St. Matthew had this genealogy, there being nothing of it to be found in ſcripture.

Anſw. I anſwer from the authentick genealogical tables kept by the Jews, of the line of David; for, it appears from the taxation mentioned, Luke the 2d, that they had genealogies of all their families and tribes, ſince all went to be taxed, every one to his own city, ver. 3. and Joſeph went to Bethlehem the city of David, becauſe he was of the houſe and lineage of David: And this is certain, touching the tribe of Levi, becauſe their whole temple ſervice, the effect of their ſacrifices, and expiations, depended on it: And therefore Joſephus being a Prieſt, not only confidently depends on theſe genealogical tables for the proof of his deſcent, ἀνωθεν ἐξ ἱερέων, in a long ſeries from Prieſts; but adds, that all their Prieſts were obliged to prove (g) ἐκ τῶν ἀρχαίων τῆς διαδοχῆς, their ſucceſſion from an ancient line; and if they could not do it, they were to be excluded from officiating as Prieſts, and that in whatſoever part of the world they were, they uſed this diligence: And again, Chriſt being promiſed as one who was to proceed out of the loins of David, and therefore called the Son of David, it was abſolutely neceſſary, that the genealogy of the houſe and lineage of David ſhould be preſerved, that they might know that their Meſſiah was of the ſeed of David, according to the promiſe. Hence the Apoſtle ſaith to Timothy, Remember that Jeſus Chriſt, of the ſeed of David, was raiſed from the dead, 2 Tim. 2. 8. And (h) Euſebius from Africanus ſaith, according to the verſion of Ruffinus, Omnes Hebræorum generationes deſcriptæ in Archivis Templi ſecretioribus habebantur, That all the ſucceſſions of the Hebrews were kept in the ſecret Archives of the Temple, and thence they were deſcribed, ἐκ τῶν βίβλων τῶν ὑπομνημάτων, from their Ephemerides, by the kinſmen of our Saviour. It therefore doubtleſs was from theſe authentick records, that St. Matthew had his genealogy, for otherwiſe he would have expoſed himſelf to the cavils of the Jews: And hence the author to the Hebrews repreſents it as a thing evident to the Jews, that our Lord ſprang out of Judah, Heb. 7. 14.

Ver. 16. [n] Joſeph the huſband of Mary, of whom was born Jeſus.] It was neceſſary that the genealogy of Jeſus ſhould be deduced from Joſeph, becauſe it was ſo generally received by the Jews, that Jeſus was the ſon of the Carpenter, Matth. 13. 55. the ſon of Joſeph, John 6. 42. ſo that if Joſeph (g) Lib. 1 contra Ap. p. 1036.

(h) Eccl. Hiſt. l. 1. c. 6.

Joſeph had not been acknowledged to have been of the tribe of Judah, and of the family of David, they would not have failed to have objected this as a juſt prejudice againſt all Chriſt's pretences to have been the Meſſiah; wherefore the Divine Wiſdom was pleaſed to direct this Apoſtle, to remove that ſtumbling block. 2*dly*, It was alſo neceſſary by reaſon of that received rule among the Jews, that the family of the mother is not called a family; and 'twas not fit that St. Matthew in this matter ſhould recede from the conſtant rules and cuſtoms of that nation, the families being always preſerved and continued in the males of Iſrael, and all their genealogies being reckoned from them.

Object. But ſtill it may be ſaid, that Joſeph being not the natural, but the reputed father of the Holy Jeſus; this cannot be ſufficient to prove, that Jeſus came from the loins of David, Acts 2. 30. or was the fruit of his body according to the promiſe, Pſal. 132. 11.

Anſw. To this it is anſwered, that Joſeph and Mary were of the ſame tribe and family, and therefore by giving us the genealogy of Joſeph, the Apoſtle did at the ſame time give us the genealogy of Mary, and conſequently of Jeſus the ſon of Mary, and ſhew that he was of the ſeed of David. Hence ſeveral of the ancients inquiring, why Jeſus was conceived of a virgin eſpouſed, and not of one perfectly at liberty, ſay, this was done, that by the family of Joſeph the family of Mary might be ſhewn; and this will be made highly probable from ſcripture, and from hiſtory. For tho' thoſe words, Luke 1. 27. The Angel Gabriel was ſent to a virgin, eſpouſed to a man whoſe name was Joſeph, of the houſe of David, and the virgin's name was Mary, do not prove this of themſelves, becauſe it may be Joſeph and not the virgin, who is ſaid to be of the houſe of David; yet may they alſo be tranſlated thus, To a virgin of the houſe of David, eſpouſed to a man whoſe name was Joſeph, and the virgin's name was Mary: And this tranſlation is confirmed from the following words of the angel to her, Thou ſhalt conceive in thy womb, and bear a ſon, and the Lord God ſhall give him the throne of his father David; ſhe therefore who conceived this ſon, muſt be of the houſe of David: And this is farther proved from the taxation mentioned, Luke 2. 3, 4, 5. Whence it appears, (1.) That all went to be taxed, women as well as men; for, Joſeph with his eſpouſed wife Mary, went up to be taxed; which troubleſome journey, ſhe who was ſo near the time of her travail, would not have taken, had it not been neceſſary. (2.) That every one, men and women, went up to their own city to be taxed, ver. 3. (3.) That Joſeph went up to Bethlehem the city of David, to be taxed, becauſe he was of the houſe and lineage of David, ver. 4. Since therefore Mary went up to Bethlehem with him to be taxed, ſhe muſt do it for the ſame reaſon, becauſe ſhe alſo was of the ſame houſe and lineage. Add to this, that Domitian having given out a command to deſtroy all that could be found of the houſe or family of David, ſome deſcended from Judas the brother of our Lord, were brought before him, (i) ὡς ἐκ γένους ὄντας Δαυὶδ, as being of the family of David, which they freely owned. See more upon this ſubject in the Biſhop of Bath and Wells's Demonſt. of the Meſſias, Part 2. ch. 13.

A new and ſtrange opinion is advanced by Mr. Whiſton, That this genealogy was chiefly deſigned, to ſhew that Chriſt was born at Bethlehem, only becauſe 'tis enquired thus by the Jews, John 7. 42. Hath not the ſcripture ſaid, that Chriſt ſhould be born in the town of Bethlehem, where David was? But,

1*ſt*, Hath not the ſame ſcripture as expreſly ſaid, That he was to be of the ſeed of Abraham and David? Can therefore any man reaſonably imagine, that a genealogy beginning thus, The generation of Jeſus Chriſt, the ſon of David, the ſon of Abraham, ſhould not be primarily deſigned to prove he was the ſon of David, and of Abraham?

2*dly*, The ſecond chapters of St. Matthew and St. Luke, do indeed prove, that Jeſus was born in Bethlehem, becauſe they do expreſly ſay it; but this genealogy ſaith nothing of it, and therefore, abſtracted from them, it proves nothing of it: And, can it be the chief deſign of this long genealogy, to prove that which it doth not prove at all, and which is only proved from what follows in another chapter, and in another Evangeliſt? And,

3*dly*, The very laſt clauſe of this genealogy, That Joſeph was the huſband of Mary, of whom was born Jeſus, who is called Chriſt, is all that can relate to Chriſt's being born in Bethlehem; and all that goes before, is evidently impertinent to that matter, and therefore can have no ſubſerviency to that deſign: Whence we may reſt aſſured, that it was not intended by the Holy Ghoſt for ſuch an end, ſeeing he never could deſign to prove a thing by an account of any thing impertinent, and which hath no relation to it.

Ver. 17. ὁ Πᾶσαι οὖν αἱ γενεαὶ, ſo all the generations.] It is here obſervable, that the Apoſtle ſaith of the generations from Abraham to David, that they were in all fourteen; but when he comes to the ſecond interval, he does not ſay as before πᾶσαι πᾶσαι αἱ γενεαὶ· the fourteen mentioned by him, were all the generations of that interval, as knowing that for good reaſons, he had omitted three belonging to that interval; but only that the whole number of thoſe which he had named, was fourteen, as really they were. 2*dly*, That in every one of theſe ſeveral intervals, they were under a ſeveral and diſtinct manner of government; and the end of each interval produced ſome alteration in the ſtate; in the firſt they were under Judges and Prophets, in the ſecond under Kings, and in the third under Haſmonæan Prieſts: The firſt fourteen brought their ſtate to glory in the kingdom of David; the ſecond, to miſery in the captivity of Babylon; and the third, to glory again in the kingdom of Chriſt: The firſt begins with Abraham who received the promiſe, and ends in David who received it again more clearly: The ſecond begins with the building of the Temple, and ends in the deſtruction of it: The third begins with their peeping out of miſery in Babel, and ends in their accompliſhed delivery by Chriſt.

Ver. 19. Ρ Λάθρᾳ ἀπολῦσαι αὐτὴν, to put her away privily;] that is, to give her a bill of divorce privately into her hand, or into her boſom, before two witneſſes only; this he was minded to do, ſaith the text, becauſe he was a juſt man, that is, a ſtrict obſerver of the rites of his nation, ſaith (k) Mr. Selden, who held it infamous to retain an adultereſs; and this was all he could do, for tho' the law required, that a married woman found lying with a man, ſhould die, i. e. be ſtrangled, ſay the Jews; and an eſpouſed virgin for the ſame crime was to be ſtoned, Deut. 22. 22, 23, 24. yet neither was Joſeph certain that ſhe was guilty of this crime after the eſpouſals, nor had he two witneſſes of the fact, without which ſhe could not be ſubject to the puniſhment by the Jewiſh Canons, tho' ſhe might be divorced after eſpouſals, without proof, by witneſſes or otherwiſe, of ſuch defilement: Thus in the judgment of Dr. Lightfoot and Mr. Selden, δίκαιος ὢν, a juſt man, here retains its proper ſignification. See Note on Rom. 3. 26.

Ver. 23. ϙ Η παρθένος ἐν γαστρὶ ἕξει· a virgin ſhall be with child, and ſhall bring forth a ſon:] That the Hebrew Alma is duly rendered παρθένος, a virgin, we prove againſt the Jews, (1.) From the authority of their own Septuagint, who ſo rendred it above 300 years before St. Matthew wrote his Goſpel. (2.) From the derivation of the word Alma from עלם, to hide, or cover; for virgins, according to the cuſtom of the Eaſtern nations, were kept in ſecret apartments from the company of men as recluſes; whence, by the author of the books of the Maccabees, they are ſtiled αἱ κεκλεισμέναι τῶν παρθένων, the virgins that were ſhut up, 2 Macc. 3. 19. And by Philo, παλαμευόμεναι παρθένοι, the virgins kept in chambers. Orat. in Flacc. p. 757. A. And (3.) This promiſe is made as a ſign or miracle, to confirm the houſe of David in God's promiſe, made to him of the perpetuity of his kingdom: Now, what ſign or miracle could it be, that a woman ſhould be with child after the ordinary manner? Where is the ſign or wonder in this? Had no more been intended, what need was there of thoſe words, the Lord himſelf ſhall give you a ſign? What need of that ſolemn notice, behold! There being nothing new or ſtrange in all this?

Ibid. ʳ Καὶ καλέσουσι τὸ ὄνομα αὐτῦ Ἐμμανουήλ· and they ſhall call his name Emmanuel.] Here is,

1*ſt*, A verb perſonal put for an imperſonal, i. e. they ſhall call his name, for, he ſhall be called: So Gen. 16. 14. therefore קרא the pit was called, Exod. 15. 23. therefore קרא, the name of the place was called Marah, Iſa. 9. 6. ויקרא, and his name ſhall be called Wonderful. So alſo, Jer. 23. 6. this is the name אשר יקראו by which he ſhall be called. See Anſw. in Gen. 16. 14. and Neh. 2. 7. Iſa. 44. 7. Mic. 2. 4. Amos 4. 2, 4. ſo in the New Teſtament, Luke 12. 20. Thy ſoul ſhall be required of thee, ἀπαιτοῦσι· Chap. 16. 9. δέξωνται ὑμᾶς, you may be received. See Dr. Ham. there. Note,

2*dly*, That in ſcripture-phraſe to be called, and to be, is the ſame thing; ſo my houſe ſhall be called an houſe of prayer, Iſa. 56. 7. i. e. is or ſhall be ſo. Luke 19. 46. Iſa. 9. 6. His name ſhall be called Wonderful, i. e. he ſhall be a wonderful perſon. And Jer. 23. 6. he ſhall be called the Lord our Righteouſneſs, i. e. he ſhall be ſo. This being ſo, 'tis no objection againſt the application of theſe words to Chriſt, that he did not bear this name, if really he was God with us, which is the import of it. And (l) Philo having ſaid, Ἰησοῦς ὁ Σωτηρία τοῦ Κυρίου. that the word Jeſus ſignifies the ſalvation of God; he that is called Jeſus, muſt in effect be called Emmanuel.

Object. And whereas the Jews farther object, that this promiſe being made to Ahaz as a ſign, muſt have relation to a child born in his time, and therefore not to our Jeſus, born above 700 years after his death.

Anſw. This objection is founded on a miſtake, this promiſe or ſign being not given to Ahaz, who refuſed to ask a ſign, Iſa. 7. 12. but to the houſe of David, according to the following words, Hear ye now, O houſe of David, the Lord himſelf will give give you a ſign: Now the houſe of David being then in great danger of being cut off and extinguiſhed, ver. 2. becauſe the Kings of Iſrael and Syria were come againſt them; the promiſe of a Meſſiah, who was to be of the ſeed of David, and to ſit upon his throne, was a great ſecurity that the houſe of David ſhould not be extinguiſhed, and ſo a proper remedy againſt thoſe fears. It is enquired farther, whether this name, given to Chriſt, be any certain argument of his divine nature, as it ſeems to be, for Chriſt is called אל גבור, the mighty God, Iſa. 9. 6. Now he who is properly called El, and is alſo really Emmanu, with us, he muſt infallibly be that Emmanuel who is God with us. But to this the Socinians anſwer, That God is ſaid to be a God with us, when he gives ſome eſpecial tokens of his grace and favour to us, as Joſh. 1. 5. Jer. 1. 8. Acts 18. 10. Rev. 21. 3. Since then Chriſt came to be our Jeſus, to ſave us from our ſins, and give us life eternal, he may well on that account be called Emmanuel, ſeeing God by ſending him to us for theſe great ends, was in the moſt ſignal manner preſent with us, and therefore it is firſt ſaid, His name ſhall be called Jeſus, for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſins; and then 'tis added, that this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet, His name ſhall be called Emmanuel.

(k) Ux. Hebr. l. 3. c. 23.

They add, that divine names are given to things and places on the account of things done or to be done there; the place in which Abraham offered Iſaac, is called Jehovah Jireh, the Lord hath ſeen, Gen. 22. 14. the place where Jacob wreſtled with God, Peniel, Gen. 32. 30. the place in which God appeared to him, Bethel, Gen. 28. 19. the altar which Moſes built, Jehovah Niſſi, Exod. 17. 15. the city of Jeruſalem, Jehovah Shammah, the Lord is there, Ezek. 48. 35. This divine name therefore, ſay they, might in like manner be given to Chriſt, becauſe of the great things God deſigned to do by him for us.

Ver. 25. ἕως οὗ ἔτεκε τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς τὸν πρωτότοκον, till ſhe had brought forth her firſt-born ſon.] The perſon that firſt opens the womb, being in ſcripture ſtiled the firſt-born, whether any other birth did follow or not; as in thoſe words, ſanctify to me all the firſt-born, i. e. whatſoever openeth the womb, Exod. 13. 2.——34. 19. it cannot from this word be gathered, that the Bleſſed Virgin had any other offſpring.

But then it is not ſo eaſy to anſwer to the argument taken from theſe words, He took unto him Mary his wife, but he knew her not till ſhe had brought forth her firſt-born; for to know his wife, in the ſcripture-phraſe, ſtill ſignifies to cohabit with her as a wife. See Gen. 4. 1, 17, 25.——38. 26. Judg. 19. 25. 1 Sam. 1. 19. 2*dly*, Joſeph was a juſt man, and tenacious of the Jewiſh rites; wherefore it being certain, that (m) the marriage-duty was by the law, and by the canons of the Jews, to be paid by the huſband to the wife, Exod. 21. 10. and the Angel having commanded him to take her as his wife, without any intimation that he ſhould not perform the duty of an huſband to her, it is not eaſy to conceive he ſhould live twelve years with her he loved ſo well, and all that while deny that duty, which by the law was not to be diminiſhed, when the wife was leſs beloved: And whereas it is ſaid, that the words ἐγνω, he knew her not until, &c. do not imply he knew her afterwards, becauſe the like expreſſion is uſed, when it cannot be concluded that was done afterwards, which was ſaid not to be done till then; it ſeemeth evident, that ſcarce any of the places cited, ſeem truly parallel to this. For, 1. Moſt of them ſpeak of a thing not done afterwards, becauſe it could not be done, as when it is ſaid, Micah had no child till the day of her death, 2 Sam. 6. 23. Samuel come not to ſee Saul till the day of his death, 1 Sam. 15. 35. So Job 27. 5. Iſa. 22. 14. Or, becauſe the cauſe ceaſed afterwards, as when 'tis ſaid, Gen. 8. 7. The crow returned not till the waters were dried up; there was no reaſon for his returning afterwards: And when Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 28. ult. I will be with you, (teaching all nations,) to the end of the world, i. e. to the end of teaching them. So when God ſaith to Jacob, Gen. 28. 15. I will be with thee, I will not leave thee till I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of; if that refers to the bleſſing promiſed to his ſeed, that it ſhould inherit the land of Canaan, he could not leave him afterwards, he being long before that with God, and ſo it is an inſtance of the firſt kind; or, if it refers to his being with him going down to Padan Aram, till he had brought him ſafe from thence; then the reaſon of that promiſe ceaſed after his return: Or, laſtly, becauſe the reaſon of the thing ſtill remains, as when 'tis ſaid of the ſepulchre of Moſes, No man knoweth of it to this day, Deut. 34. 6. For the ſame reaſon, no man doth, or, without a revelation, will know of it for ever; whereas, certain it is, that it was not impoſſible, in the nature of the thing, for Joſeph to know his wife after ſhe had brought forth her firſt-born: And, 2*dly*, The reaſon why he ſhould know her at all, being, becauſe ſhe was his wife, that reaſon ceaſed not after the birth of her firſt-born; nor did ſhe conceive any ſecond ſon of the Holy Ghoſt; and ſo the reaſon why he knew her not till ſhe had brought forth her firſt-born, remained not. I therefore conclude with (n) St. Baſil, that till ſhe had brought forth her firſt-born, her virginity was neceſſary, that a virgin might conceive, and bear a ſon, τὸ δ ἐφεξῆς ἀπολυπραγμόνητον τῷ λόγῳ· μυστηρίου καλλωπίσματος· but what ſhe was afterwards, let us leave undiſcuſſed, as being of ſmall concern to the myſtery.

(m) Vide Seld. de Uxor. Hebr. l. 3. c. 4. G.

CHAP. II.

1. NOW when Jeſus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the King, behold, there came [a] Wiſe Men from (Arabia in) [b] the Eaſt to Jeruſalem,

2. Saying, [c] Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have ſeen his Star (being) in the Eaſt, and [d] are come (thence) to worſhip him.

3. When Herod the King had heard theſe things, he (knowing that the Jews were then expecting Meſſiah their King to rule over them, and throw down all other kingdoms,) was troubled, and all Jeruſalem with him.

4. And when he had gathered all the chief prieſts, and ſcribes of the people together, he demanded of them where (i. e. in what place) Chriſt (their expected Meſſiah, and King,) ſhould be born.

5. And they ſaid unto him, (he is to be born,) in Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the Prophet (Micah, ſaying, ch. 5. 2.)

6. [e] And thou Bethlehem in the land of Judah, art not (to be reputed) the leaſt among the Princes (or thouſands) of Judah; for out of thee ſhall come a Governor, that ſhall rule my people Iſrael; (and this ſhall render thee truly great.)

7. Then Herod, when he had privily called the Wiſe Men, (he) enquired of them diligently, what (was the exact) time (at which) the Star appeared (to them?)

8. And (having done this,) he ſent them to Bethlehem, and ſaid (to them,) Go, and ſearch diligently for the young child, and when you have found him, bring me word again, (Gr. tell me of it) that I may come and worſhip him alſo; (tho' his intention was not to worſhip, but to deſtroy him, ver. 16.)

9. When they had heard the King (ſay this,) they departed, and [f] lo, the Star which they ſaw (or had ſeen, being) in the Eaſt (of Judea,) went before them till it came, and ſtood over (the houſe) where the young child was; (i. e. till coming over the houſe where the child was, it ſtood ſtill.)

10. (And) when they ſaw the Star (again thus conducting them to, and then ſtanding over the houſe where the child was,) they rejoiced with exceeding great joy (for the divine conduct.)

11. And when they were come into the houſe, they ſaw the young child with Mary his mother, and (they) [g] fell down, and worſhipped him: And when they had opened their treaſures, they preſented to him gifts, (viz.) gold, and frankincenſe, and myrrh.

12. And being warned of God in a dream, that they ſhould not return to Herod, they (in obedience to the divine command,) departed into their own country, another (and more private) way.

13. And when (or after) they were departed, behold, the Angel of the Lord appeareth to Joſeph in a dream, ſaying (to him,) Ariſe, and take the young child, and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word (that thou with ſafety mayeſt return:) for Herod will ſeek (after) the young child to deſtroy him.

14. And when he aroſe (from his bed,) he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt:

15. And was there until the death of Herod, that (by his abode there,) it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken of the Lord by the Prophet (Hoſea, ch. 11. 1.) ſaying, [h] Out of Egypt have I called my ſon.

16. Then [i] Herod, when he ſaw that he was mocked of the Wiſe Men, was exceeding wroth, and ſent forth (his officers,) and (they having received commiſſion from him ſo to do,) ſlew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and (in) all the coaſts thereof, from two years old and under, according (or even) to the time which he had diligently enquired of the Wiſe Men.

17. Then was [k] fulfilled (by another more eminent completion,) that which was ſpoken by Jeremy the Prophet, ſaying, (ch. 31. 15.)

18. In Ramah (near to Bethlehem,) was there a voice heard (of) lamentation and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, becauſe they are not; (i. e. becauſe they were dead.)

19. But when Herod was dead, behold, an Angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joſeph, (being then) in Egypt,

20. Saying (to him,) Ariſe, and take the young child, and his mother, and go (back) into the land land of Iſrael: for they are (he is) dead which ſought the young child's life.

(n) To. 1. p. 509.

21. And he (accordingly) aroſe, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Iſrael.

22. But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithſtanding, (Gr. but) being warned of God in a dream (ſo to do,) he turned aſide into the parts of Galilee, (where Herod Antipas was ſeated, from whom there was leſs apprehenſion of danger.)

23. And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth, that it might be [1] fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet, He ſhall be called (by way of reproach,) a Nazarene.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. II.

Ver. 1. [a] ΜΑ'ΓΟΙ, Wiſe Men.] Tho' the Greek word ſignifies Magicians, yet ſeeing in the ancient times, that word was not appropriated to that evil ſenſe which now it bears, but generally ſignified men of wiſdom and learning, ſkilled in the knowledge of things natural and divine; and more eſpecially, in that ſort of learning which relates to the ſun, moon, and ſtars, as we learn from (a) Porphyry, (b) Apuleius, (c) Dio Chryſoſtomus, and others: And, ſeeing the Evangeliſt ſeems to have given them that name, not as a note of infamy, but as an honourable title; therefore doth our tranſlation ſtile them Wiſe Men, ſuch as the old Greeks named σοφοὶ, the Sages of their time. The Arabians of the Eaſt, eſpecially the ſons of Teman being renowned for wiſdom, 1 Kings 4. 30. Jer. 49. 7.

As for the dignity and number of theſe men, the tradition of the Roman church ſaith, that for number they were three, and all of Royal dignity: Hence in their office for Epiphany, they apply that of the Pſalmiſt to them, The Kings of Arabia and Saba ſhall bring gifts: But had they been of ſo great quality, we cannot reaſonably think the Evangeliſt would have omitted a circumſtance of ſo great moment, both for their honour and our Lord's; we alſo ſhould in likelihood, have had ſome mention of their Royal train and equipage, and all Jeruſalem would have been moved as much to ſee them come, as they were at the hearing their queſtion: Herod would likely have received them with more reſpect, and not have let them go alone to Bethlehem; much leſs would he have laid upon them his commands to return back, and give him an account of the child found. This therefore is an inſtance of the uncertainty and vanity of the traditions of that church.

Ibid. [b] Ἀπὸ ἀνατολῶν, from the Eaſt.] Hence the opinion of ſome, that the Wiſe Men came from Chaldea, a country renowned for Magicians and Aſtrologers, may be confuted, becauſe the ancient Prophets, who foretold the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Chaldeans, tell us, that they lay not Eaſt, but North of Jewry, and came from thence upon them. Hence they are called, the families of the North, and an evil breaking out of the North, Jer. 1. 14, 15. A people coming out of the North-country, Jer. 6. 22. See Joel 2. 20. It is therefore more probable they came from Arabia, which was, ſaith (d) Tacitus, the bound of Judea Eaſtward: And hence, in the Scripture, the Arabians are ſometimes called the men of the Eaſt. So Judg. 6. 3. The children of the Eaſt came up againſt them, that is, the Arabians. Job 1. 3. This man was the greateſt of all the men of the Eaſt. Moreover, the gifts which theſe men offered, were the native commodities of Arabia; the gold of Sheba in Arabia, Pſal. 72. 15. Frankincenſe and myrrh of the ſame place, according to that of the poet, Molles ſua thura Sabai. Add to this, that much of Arabia was in the land of Canaan; whence David and Solomon, to whom the promiſe of having the land of Canaan was made good in its full extent, dilated their dominions over theſe countries, even to Euphrates; and they who lived there, were of the ſeed of Abraham. Now it is more likely, theſe firſt-fruits of the Gentiles, ſhould be brought to do homage to the King of the Jews, from a country which did as much to David and Solomon, the types of Chriſt, than from a foreign nation, and to conceive, that they were of the ſeed of Abraham rather than of another race. Nor is it to be wondred, that the Magi ſhould be ſaid to come from the Eaſt, ſince (e) Porphyry informs us, that Pythagoras went into Arabia to acquire wiſdom: And Grotius here cites Ptolemy, ſaying, That Arabia was Magorum

Ver. 2. [c] Πῦ ἐστὶν ὁ τεχθεὶς Βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων. εἴδομεν γὰρ αὐτοῦ τὸν ἀστέρα; Where is he that is born King of the Jews, for we have ſeen his Star?] Here the enquiry is, How theſe men could know this was his Star, or that it ſignified the birth of a King? Moſt of the (g) ancients anſwer, That they learned this from theſe words of Balaam, Numb. 24. 17. There ſhall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter ſhall ariſe out of Iſrael, and ſhall ſmite thro' the Princes of Moab, and deſtroy all the children of Seth; and Edom ſhall be a poſſeſſion to him: But evident it is, that theſe words ſpeak not of a Star that ſhould ariſe at any Prince's birth; but of a King, which ſhould be glorious and ſplendent in his dominions, as ſtars are in the firmament, and who ſhould vanquiſh and poſſeſs thoſe three nations as David did. Moreover, from this text, they might have as rationally expected to have ſeen a Scepter as a Star; it being as expreſly ſaid, A Scepter ſhall ariſe out of Iſrael, as that a Star ſhall come out of Jacob. Add to this, that we know of no record in which this prophecy was preſerved, but the books of Moſes, which theſe nations neither read nor believed: Others do therefore ſay, theſe Wiſe Men were by a revelation, or by an Angel, told the meaning of this Star: And one among the ancients cites an Apocryphal hiſtory, ſaying, (h) This Star appeared in the form of a child, holding a croſs in his hand; and telling them, that Chriſt was born, and that they ſhould go to Jeruſalem to worſhip him. But theſe conjectures are all ſufficiently confuted by this one conſideration, That the Wiſe Men give not this as the reaſon of their coming, that they had ſeen an Angel, a viſion, or had a revelation of this matter, but that they had ſeen a Star. For the true reſolution therefore of this queſtion, let it be conſidered, That (i) Tacitus and (k) Suetonius inform us, That thro' the whole Eaſt it was expected, that about that time a King was to ariſe out of Judea, who ſhould rule over all the world. Nor could it well be otherwiſe, ſince, from the time of the Babylonian captivity, we find the Jews diſperſed throughout all the provinces of the Perſian Monarchy, Eſth. 3. 8. and that in numbers ſufficient to gather themſelves together, and to defend themſelves againſt their enemies in thoſe provinces, Eſth. 9. 2, 16. and many of the people of the land became Jews, Eſth. 8. 17. And after their return into their land, they increaſed ſo mightily, as that they were diſperſed throughout Africa, Aſia, and many cities and iſlands of Europe; and as Joſephus ſaith, whereever they dwelt, they made many proſelytes to their religion. See the note on Jam. 1. 1. and on 1 Pet. 1. 1. Theſe Wiſe Men therefore living ſo near to Judea, the ſeat of this prophecy, and converſing with the Jews, i. e. among them who were every where expecting the completion of it at that time; they being alſo ſkilled in Aſtrology, and ſeeing this Star or light appearing in Judea, might reaſonably conjecture, that it ſignified the completion of that celebrated prophecy touching the King of Jewry; over the center of which land, they being in the Eaſt, then ſaw it hang. And ſure it was a better way to read this leſſon to them, by ſetting this light upon the very place where the King that it betokened was born, rather than in the Eaſt part of heaven, where it might ſeem to denote ſomething among the Indians, or other Eaſtern nations, rather than among the Jews. See additions N. 3. What this Star was, ſee note on ver. 9, 10.

Ibid. [d] Καὶ ἤλθομεν προσκυνῆσαι αὐτῷ, and are come to worſhip him.] Here the enquiry is, when they came to Jeruſalem? whether within thirteen days after the birth of Chriſt, as the received time of celebrating the Epiphany imports, and as moſt Chriſtians have from the 5th century ſuppoſed; or, whether they came only in the ſecond year of Chriſt's age, as ſome conjecture from theſe words, ver. 16. Herod ſent forth, and ſlew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and all the coaſts thereof from two years old, and under, according to the time that he had diligently enquired of the Wiſe Men. For reſolution of this queſtion, obſerve, That it ſeems evident from comparing St. Matthew and St. Luke, that the Wiſe Men came within forty days after our Saviour's birth; for St. Matthew expreſly ſaith, they found Chriſt at Bethlehem; lehem; whereas St. Luke informs us, that when the forty days of his mother's purification were accomplished, they brought the child to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord; and after that, we never read of their return with him to Bethlehem, and therefore have no reason to presume they did so, Luke 2. 22. But on the contrary, we are told, that when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee to their own city Nazareth, ver. 39. Arabia then being so near unto Judea, that much of it belonged to the land of Canaan, the Wise Men having also their swift dromedaries to ride upon, and the same cause to say, as did the Shepherds, when the light shone from heaven upon them, Let us now go and see this thing which is come to pass, Luke 2. 15. I see no reason why these Wise Men might not come within the compass of these days to Jerusalem, and so no certain ground to think this festival hath been misplaced by the church.

Object. Against this it is said, That immediately after these Wise Mens departure, the Angel appeared to Joseph, ver. 13. and dispatched them to Egypt; which could not be before the time of Mary's purification, for then they went up to Jerusalem, Luke 2. 22. and so not to Egypt; nor after their return from Egypt, could they go up to Jerusalem for this end; for the text saith expressly, that Joseph then was afraid to go into Judea, and therefore receded to Nazareth; nor could they go up to Jerusalem after the departure of the Magi, for that had been to cast themselves into Herod's hands at Jerusalem.

Answ. But (1st,) the text doth not say, that the Angel appeared to Joseph immediately after the departure of the Wise Men, but only that ἀναχωρησάντων αὐτῶν, he did so, they being returned, leaving the time indefinite: Seeing therefore there is a necessity of saying, the Angel appeared a considerable time after their departure, I therefore conjecture, that he appeared to Joseph with this message, being not at Bethlehem, but at Jerusalem or at Nazareth, and that thence he fled into Egypt.

(2dly,) I add, That going to Jerusalem after the Magi were departed, when the days for the purification of his mother came, could not be casting themselves into the hands of Herod, because he knew nothing of this being the child they came to worship; and so they staying there so little time, might be as safe there as elsewhere. Nay, had Herod known which personally was the child they worshipped, why should he slay all the young children at Bethlehem without distinction? As to the second objection from ver. 16. see what may be answered to it in the note there.

But after all, I confess, there is one circumstance that seems to make it probable, that the Angel spake to Joseph to depart from Bethlehem into Egypt; whence it must follow, that after the purification of the virgin mother, they returned to Bethlehem, viz. that Herod's seeking to destroy the child, is assigned as the cause of this flight: Now we find not, that he ever made or designed any other attempt to destroy him, than by slaying the young children at Bethlehem. But to this the answer is easy; That Simeon having made such an honourable mention of this child at his appearance in the Temple, as of the Lord's Christ, ver. 26. And Anna the Prophetess speaking of him as such, to all that looked for redemption in Jerusalem, ver. 38. where perhaps Herod staid for the answer of the Wise Men; this must render Christ's stay at Jerusalem, or in Herod's jurisdiction, very dangerous; and so might give occasion to the message of the Angel to Joseph, to depart thence quickly with him into Egypt, lest Herod, hearing this fame of him, should attempt to slay him. Moreover, Herod might have enquired, what children might have been born in Bethlehem in the time of the enrolment, whose parents lived elsewhere, and so might have come to the knowledge of this supposed son of Joseph; and this might make it necessary that he should flee with him into Egypt.

Ver. 6. ε Καὶ σὺ Βηθλεέμ, γῆ Ἰούδα, οὐδαμῶς ἐλαχίστη εἶ ἐν τοῖς ἡγεμόσιν Ἰούδα· And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the Princes of Judah.] These words are cited from Micah 5. 2. where, according to the original, they run thus, Thou Bethlehem Ephratah, tho' thou art little among the thousands of Judah. And to make them agree perfectly with St. Matthew's version, observe,

1*st,* That Bethlehem Ephratah and Bethlehem Judah, are both names of the same town, as appears from these words, And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Bethlehem; and it is called Bethlehem Judah, Judg. 17. 7.—— 19. 2. in these words, And the husband of Naomi was a man of Bethlehem Judah, Ruth 1. 1. Yet of Booz, who married Ruth to raise up seed unto him, it is said, Do thou worthily in the house of Ephratah, Ruth 4. 11. and it was so named to distinguish it from another Bethlehem in the tribe of Zabulon, mentioned, Josh. 19. 15. Here also David's father lived, and he himself was born, 1 Sam. 17. 12. John 7. 42. Note,

2*dly,* That the thousands of Judah, and the Princes or Governors of Judah are in sense the same; for thousands are mentioned in allusion to the custom of the Israelites, of dividing their tribes tribes into thouſands, over every one of which thouſands was a Prince, or Chief, Exod. 18. 25. 1 Sam. 10. 19. So that to ſay, among the thouſands or Princes is all one. Note, 3*dly*, That the Hebrew word צָעִיר, which is rendered little, Micah 5. 2. ſignifies alſo great, or of great note and eſteem. Hence R. Tanchum renders the place thus, Thou ſhalt be Chief, Prince or Ruler among the thouſands of Judah: So קֶרֶן מְצֻעֶרֶת, the little horn, Dan. 8. 9. is rendered by the LXX. κέρας ἰσχυρόν, and by the Arabick, Cornu forte, a ſtrong horn. So Jer. 48. 4. צְעִוריה, his little ones, is in the Chaldee, Sultanun, his rulers: And, Zech. 13. 7. הַצְּעִירִים, is rendered by the LXX. ποίμνες· See MSS. Alex. by the Syriack, Superiours.

Ver. 9. [f] Καὶ ἰδοὺ ὁ ἀστὴρ ὃν εἶδον ἐν τῇ ἀνατολῇ προῆγεν αὐτούς· And behold, the Star which they ſaw in the Eaſt went before them, till coming over the place where the child was, it ſtood.] Hence it is evident, this Star could not be one of the heavenly orb, but only ſome new and extraordinary appearance, ſeated only in the air: (1*ſt*,) Becauſe it actually did, and was deſigned to ſhew the place of Chriſt's nativity, the very houſe of his abode, which no celeſtial ſtar could do, becauſe they never hang over one country more than another, and much leſs over any certain place. (2*dly*,) Becauſe it moved ſo as they do not, by intervals, moving ſometimes, and ſometimes ſtanding ſtill; whereas they move perpetually, their motion alſo is from Eaſt to Weſt, whereas the motion of this Star was from North to South. It therefore ſeems probable this ſeeming Star appearing to the Wiſe Men in the Eaſt, might only be that glorious light which ſhone upon the Bethlehem ſhepherds when the Angel came to impart unto them the tidings of our Saviour's birth; for that this light was exceeding great, is clear from that expreſſion which ſtiles it the glory of the Lord; that it was a light from heaven hanging over their heads, the Greek aſſures us; that immicuit ex alto, It ſhone upon them from on high, the Latin ſaith. Now we know that ſuch a light at a great diſtance appeareth like a ſtar, or at leaſt after it had thus ſhone about the ſhepherds, it might be lifted up on high, and then formed into the likeneſs of a Star. This body of light, or another like it, when they journeyed to Jeruſalem, was formed into the likeneſs of that Star they had formerly ſeen, and went before them in the air to Bethlehem, and then ſunk down ſo low as to point out the very houſe where the babe lay. And if this ſhould be ſo, the Star the Wiſe Men ſaw muſt have appeared to them the very day of Chriſt's nativity; for of the light appearing to the ſhepherds, St. Luke informs us, Chap. 2. 8, 11. that it was ſeen the very day and night of Chriſt's nativity.

Ver. 11. [g] Καὶ πεσόντες προσεκύνησαν αὐτῷ, καὶ προσενέγκαν αὐτῷ δῶρα, χρυσὸν, καὶ λίβανον, καὶ σμύρναν. and falling down they worſhipped him, and when they had opened their treaſures, they preſented to him gifts, gold, frankincenſe, and myrrh.] Of the import of the word προσκυνῶν, to worſhip, and that it doth as well ſignify civil, as religious worſhip, even when it is performed by proſtration, ſee the notes on Matth. 8. 2. But tho' this word will do us no ſervice againſt the Socinians, it is worthy our obſervation, that the Chriſtians from the beginning, either from this adoration, or the gifts offered, did collect even then that Chriſt was God, or at the leaſt that both were fitly given to him, as being truly God, whatever the Wiſe Men might think of him. Thus (l) Juſtin M. teacheth that Chriſt being God, could not receive the Holy Ghoſt as wanting him, or his aſſiſtance; and ſaith, of this we have a teſtimony from the Magi of Arabia, who, as ſoon as the child was born, came and worſhipped him. (m) Ireneus ſaith, the Wiſe Men, by the gifts they offered, ſhewed who he was that was worſhipped; they offering myrrh, becauſe he was to die for mankind; gold, becauſe he was a King, whoſe kingdom ſhould have no end; and frankincenſe, becauſe he was God. (n) Tertullian ſaith, they honoured him with theſe gifts, quaſi Deum & Regem, as a God and King: And when Celſus laughed at the Wiſe Men as προσκυνοῦντες ἔτι ἡτιοι, ὡς Θεὸν, worſhipping Chriſt whilſt an infant, as God; (o) Origen anſwers, that they brought gifts to him compounded, as it were of God and Man; gold, as an enſign of his Kingly power; myrrh, as to one that was to die; and frankincenſe, as to a God. It alſo may deſerve to be obſerved, that Kimchi on thoſe words of Eſaiah 60. 6. All they of Sheba ſhall come, they ſhall bring gold and incenſe, &c. ſaith, They ſhall bring bring them for an offering to the King Messiah.

Ver. 15. [h] Ἐξ Αἰγύπτου ἐκάλεσα τὸν υἱόν μου out of Egypt have I called my son.] This is cited from Hosea 11. 1. and not from Numbers 24. 8. for the words in Numbers are the words of Balaam, whom the Evangelist would not cite by the honourable name of a Prophet, without any distinction from the Prophets sent by God to the Jews; nor doth he say as Hosea doth, word for word, I have called my son out of Egypt.

2*dly*, Note that it cannot be truly said, that these words are by St. Matthew mentioned as belonging to Christ only by way of application, or accommodation, tho' the Holy Ghost, who spake them by the Prophet, intended not they should be again fulfilled in him; for this cannot answer what is here said by St. Matthew, that Christ was called out of Egypt, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophet; for certainly these words can import no less than that the calling of Christ out of Egypt, was by God intended as a completion of these words, and that till he was called thence, they had not their full and ultimate completion. Note,

3*dly*, That Israel was a type of Christ, as being by God called his son, his first-born, Exod. 4. 22, and God bearing the relation of a father to Israel, Jer. 31. 9. hence Israel is put for Christ, Isa. 49. 3. in these words, Thou art my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified; and what is in the Hebrew, Behold my servant whom I uphold, mine elect in whom my soul delighteth, Isa. 42. 1. is in the Chaldee, My servant the Messiah, and in the Greek, Jacob my servant, and Israel mine elect: Now as a prophetical prediction is then fulfilled when what was foretold is come to pass; so a type is then fulfilled, when that is done in the antitype, which was done in the type before. Note,

4*thly*, That the words run in the time past, out of Egypt have I called; and that not only because this is the way of prophetical predictions, to speak of those things as already done, which shall be as certainly accomplished as if they were already done, but because they had already been fulfilled in the type. Note,

5*thly*, That St. Matthew cites only these words of Hosea, Out of Egypt have I called my son, as words to be fulfilled in Christ, and not any more, making Israel a type of Christ only in this regard, that they were called out of Egypt, as he was to be so; so that it doth not hence follow that any other words in this prophecy are to be referred to Christ, and so no argument taken from the following words, which do not belong to him, can be of any validity to prove that these do not, which here the Holy Ghost applieth to him. Nor is it any objection against what hath been said, that the Jews could not understand this intendment of these words, for they were not concerned to understand it till the completion of these words in Christ; and then sure they who abounded with mystical interpretations of the law and the Prophets, could not reasonably object against this application of these words to God's calling his own son out of Egypt. See additions N. 4.

Ver. 16. [i] Then Herod — sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, ἀπὸ διετοῦς καὶ κατωτέρω κατὰ τὸν χρόνον, ὃν ἠκρίβωσε παρὰ τῶν Μάγων, from two years old and under, according (or even) to the time that he had diligently enquired of the Wise Men.] Hence some infer that it must have been above a year after our Saviour's birth, that the Wise Men came to Jerusalem, or that they gave an account to Herod of the appearance of the Star; for why else should Herod slay the children from two years old and under? And why is he said to have done this according to the time that he had learnt exactly from the Wise Men? But this seems not certain from these words; for (1*st*,) διετὴς ζῶν is only to live a year; thus of some wasps (p) Aristotle says διετίζουσι they live not a whole year, but all die in the winter, and the like he saith of the fish Polypus; and in Hesychius and Phavorinus, he is διετὴς who lives διὰ ὅλου τοῦ ἔτους a whole year; and if so, these words may be rendered from a year old and under; even so much under as κατὰ τὸν χρόνον even to the time of the appearance of the Star, of which time he had diligently enquired; and if the words will admit of this construction, it is evident they afford no semblance of an argument, that the Wise Men came above a year after our Saviour's birth. But let διετὴς signify two years, yet if κατὰ τὸν χρόνον refer not to it, but only to the word κατωτέρω under, even so far under as to, or according to the time of the Star's appearing, we cannot from these words collect, how long it was after Christ's birth before these Wise Men came to Jerusalem. There is little account to be given of the actions of a tyrant, who slew three of his own sons, and it is reasonable to conceive he would endeavour to make sure work, and so might be induced to slay all born in Bethlehem, a year and more, even to the time of the Star's appearing to declare the birth of this King; thus tho' the Jews had told him from the Oracle, that Christ was to be born in Bethlehem, he is not content to slay the infants there, but shed their blood in all the coasts thereof.

It is much admired why Josephus who relates his

his murder of ſome youths, when he was only Governor of Galilee, and the cry of their mothers for Juſtice againſt him for it, ſhould yet ſay nothing of the ſlaughter of theſe infants. But (q) Joſephus being only born in the firſt year of Caius, and the thirty eighth of Chriſt, and writing his hiſtory of the Jewiſh wars in the (r) fifty ſixth year of his age, and this ſlaughter of theſe infants being not likely to be preſerved in the Jewiſh records, it is not ſo much wonderful that he, who wrote ninety four years after the fact was done, ſhould make no mention of it. It is ſufficient, that it is preſerved in (ſ) Macrobius, who ſaith, that when Auguſtus had heard, that among the children which under two years old Herod the King had ſlain in Syria, his own ſon was one, he paſſed this joke upon him, It is better to be Herod's hog than his ſon; tho' it muſt alſo be confeſſed that Macrobius is miſtaken in the circumſtances of this ſtory.

Ver. 17. [k] Τότε ἐπληρώθη τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ Ἱερεμίου τοῦ Προφήτου, λέγοντος, 18. Φωνὴ ἐν Ῥαμᾶ ἠκούσθη, then was fulfilled that which was ſpoken by the Prophet Jeremiah, ſaying, A voice was heard in Rama, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, becauſe they were not.] Here note (1ſt,) that it is not here ſaid as v. 15. ἵνα πληρωθῇ this was done that it might be fulfilled, but τότε ἐπληρώθη i. e. then that happened which gave a more full completion to thoſe words of Jeremy, and ſo a greater occaſion to Rachel to weep for her children than before, which the providence of God foreſeeing, his Spirit might have a reference to it in theſe words. For, (1.) Rachel being dead ſo long before the captivity, ſhe may as well be introduced weeping here, as there. (2.) The ſlaughter of the Bethlemites might well be ſtiled, the ſlaughter of her children, ſhe being buried there, Gen. 35. 19. and the Bethlemites being deſcended from her huſband and her own ſiſter. (3.) The ſlaughter of the innocents being not reſtrained to Bethlehem, but extended to all the coaſts round about, and Ramah being in the tribe of Benjamin, which ſprang from Rachel, and not far from Bethlehem, the voice of her weeping may be well ſaid to be heard in Rama.

2dly, Note, that this weeping for her children was, ſaith the Prophet, chi ainnu, becauſe they were not, Jer. 31. 15. Now the import of this phraſe is this, they were dead, or taken away from the land of the living, Gen. 5. 24.——42. 13. Pſal. 39. 13.——104. 35. Jer. 10. 20.——49. 10. Lam. 5. 7. Accordingly tho' the Jews then undoubtedly had embraced the doctrine of the immortality of the ſoul, yet, ſaith the ſon of Sirac, Chap. 17. 28. Praiſe periſheth, ἀπὸ νεκροῦ, ὡς μηδὲ ὄντος, from the dead as not being; and in that very Chapter in which (t) Joſephus aſſerts the perpetual duration of the ſoul, he ſaith, we have received from God our being, καὶ τὸ μηκέτι εἶναι πάλιν ἐκείνῳ ἀποδώσομεν, and to him we render again our not being, that is, as the context ſhews, we return that ſoul which he hath given us; and this being not literally true of her own children gone into captivity, from which, ſaith God, they ſhall come again to their own borders, v. 16, 17. why ſhould it be thought ſtrange that ſo literal a completion of theſe words ſhould alſo be referred to by the Holy Ghoſt?

Ver. 23. [l] Ὅπως πληρωθῇ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ τῶν Προφητῶν, ὅτι Ναζωραῖος κληθήσεται, he dwelt in his own city Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets, he ſhall be called a Nazarene.] Here note, 1ſt, That becauſe that is here ſaid to be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets, τὸ ῥηθὲν, not that which was written; ſome here think it enough to ſay, there was among the ancient Prophets a belief that the Meſſiah ſhould be a Nazarene, and that this was delivered down by tradition. But I cannot acquieſce in this; for (1.) the foundation of this criticiſm is falſe, the phraſe τὸ ῥηθὲν being uſed thirteen times in this Goſpel, and but once elſewhere in the New Teſtament; and it is always uſed of that which is written. It is twice ſo uſed in this chapter, v. 15, 17. once Chap. 1. 22. See Chap. 4. 14.——8. 17.——12. 17.——13. 35.——21. 4.——22. 31.——24. 15.——27. 9. and Mark 13. 14. (2.) How comes any one to know that any ſuch tradition was delivered by the ancient Prophets to the Jews, when they themſelves know nothing of it, and therefore, upon this account accuſe St. Matthew as citing what was no where to be found? Nor find I any of the ancient Chriſtians who mention this ſuppoſed tradition, but either ſay the Apoſtle refers to ſome writings of the Prophets, which were then extant, but are now loſt, or to ſome writings not put into the Canon, or ſome interpretations of their writings. Let it be therefore noted from St. Jerom,

2dly, That St. Matthew doth not cite any particular Prophet for theſe words, as he had done, Chap. 1. 22. and here v. 15. 17. and in the other places above cited, but only ſaith, this was ſpoken by the Prophets in general, (u) pluraliter autem Prophetas

Prophetas vocans oſtendit, ſe non verba de Scripturis ſumpſiſſe, ſed ſenſum, and thereby ſhews he took not the words from the Prophets, but the ſenſe only. Note,

3*dly*, That all the interpretations which refer this to Chriſt's being called Netzer, the Branch, Iſa. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5. or the Holy one, or one ſeparated from the faults of mankind, fail in this, that they give no account how this was fulfilled by Chriſt's being at Nazareth; he being as much the Branch, the Holy one, when he was born at Bethlehem, and before he went to Nazareth, as after.

4*thly*, Note therefore, that ὁ Ναζαρῆνος, the Nazarite, was a name of infamy put upon Chriſt and Chriſtians, both by the unbelieving Jews and Gentiles. There was among the (x) Jews a celebrated thief, called Ben Nezer, and in alluſion to him they gave this name to Chriſt. So Abarbinel ſaith, the little horn mentioned, Dan. 7. 8. is Ben Nezer, that is, Jeſus of Nazareth. And this title of Nazaræan, both the Jews, and the enemies of Chriſtianity, gave always by way of contempt to our Jeſus, and that becauſe he was ſuppoſed to come out of this very city; yea, his very going to dwell there, was one occaſion of his being contemned, deſpiſed, and rejected by the Jews. Thus when Philip ſaith to Nathaniel, We have found Jeſus of Nazareth of whom Moſes ſpake; Nathaniel anſwers, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? John 1. 47. and when Nicodemus ſeemed to favour him, the Sanhedrim ſpake thus to him, Search and look, for out of Galilee ariſeth no Prophet, John 7. 52. Note,

5*thly*, That moſt of the Prophets ſpeak of Chriſt as of a perſon that was to be reputed vile and abject, deſpiſed and rejected of men. Thus the Pſalmiſt ſaith of him, For thy ſake have I ſuffered reproach, ſhame hath covered my face, מזר הייתי I was an alien to my brethren, and a foreigner to my mother's ſons, for the zeal of thine houſe hath eaten me, and the reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me, Pſal. 69. 9, 10. Iſaiah ſaith of him, Chap. 53. 3. He was deſpiſed and rejected of men, he was deſpiſed, and we eſteemed him not. Here then is a plain ſenſe of theſe words; the Angel ſent him to this contemptible place, that he might thence have a name of infamy and contempt put upon him, according to the frequent intimations of the Prophets.

At the cloſe of this chapter, I think it proper to conſider two new opinions of Mr. Whiſton, who in his harmony of the Goſpels aſſerts,

1*ſt*, That Herod ſlew the infants at Bethlehem the ſame day that he cut off his ſon Antipater; that is, ſaith Joſephus, but five days before his death.

2*dly*, That Joſeph fled into Egypt, and returned thence before the purification of the Virgin Mary in the temple at Jeruſalem. Now the ſecond opinion is demonſtratively falſe; for the Virgin Mother, coming to Jeruſalem with her offering when the days of her purification were accompliſhed, Luke 2. 22,——34. muſt come thither before her flight into Egypt, or not at all, ſeeing, at their return from Egypt into the land of Iſrael, St. Matthew hath expreſly told us, that Joſeph was afraid to go into Judea, Chap. 2. 22. and that by a Divine admonition, he was diverted from any thoughts of doing ſo, and ἀνεχώρησε returned, or went back into Galilee, to his own city Nazareth; and how abſurd is it to imagine, that, after his own fears, and the divine admonition to the contrary, he ſhould go on, not only into Judea, where Archelaus then reigned, ver. 24. but even to Jeruſalem, where he continued till he took his journey to Rome? Nor is Joſeph bid to return back into the land of Judea, but into the land of Iſrael, Matth. 2. 20. that is, as that meſſage is farther explained, ver. 22, 23. into Galilee, to his own city Nazareth.

Object. But it is ſaid, that he could not paſs from Egypt to Nazareth but thro' the land of Judah.

Anſw. The way from Peluſium to Nazareth was by Gaza, Azotus, Joppa, and ſo on by the ſea-ſide till you turn up to Nazareth. Now though, in the diviſion of the tribes, Gaza was added to the tribe of Judah, they did not long poſſeſs it, but it was in Samuel's time a city of the Philiſtines, 1 Sam. 6. 17. and was afterwards by (a) Pompey made a free city, and annexed to Syria; and tho' he in his journey might paſs thro' either the city or the deſart, he might not hear that Archelaus reigned till he got to Azotus in the tribe of Dan, and ſo might fear to go into Judea.

Object. St. Luke ſaith, Chap. 2. 39. That when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee into their own city Nazareth.

Anſw. 1*ſt*, This place ſeems rather to confute than to eſtabliſh this aſſertion, as ſhewing that, when the days of her purification were accompliſhed, they brought him not out of Egypt, but from Bethlehem to preſent him to the Lord; for, ver. 15. the Shepherds go to Bethlehem to ſee him; and ver. 21. he is circumciſed ſtill at Bethlehem; and then immediately it follows, ver. 22. that they brought him to Jeruſalem to preſent him to the Lord; i. e. they brought him from Bethlehem to Jeruſalem; no other place of his abode, nor any intimation of his removal thence before, being mentioned.

(x) Buxt. Lex. p. 1383.

(a) Joſeph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 8. p. 475.

Anſw. 2*dly*, St. Luke having brought them up from Nazareth to Bethlehem to be enrolled, he here informs us, that after this purification they returned not to Bethlehem, as ſome have imagined, to abide there, but that their future abode was their own city, in which they formerly had dwelt, but that nothing happened between this purification and their ſettled abode there, or that they fled not after from thence into Egypt, he ſaith not. All therefore that St. Luke ſaith may be true, tho' Joſeph fled after this purification from Jeruſalem, or from Nazareth into Egypt; but what St. Matthew ſaith cannot be true, if Joſeph came with them from Egypt to Jeruſalem before he went to Nazareth. In fine, as St. Luke ſaith nothing of their going any whither after the purification of the Virgin, but to Galilee, ſo he ſays nothing of their going any whither after Chriſt's circumciſion, but to the temple at Jeruſalem at the purification; ſo that the argument from St. Luke's ſilence can be no ſtronger for their flight into Egypt before, than after the purification.

Object. 3. Had this flight and ſlaughter been deferred till after the purification, that was a thing ſo publick, and attended with ſuch publick circumſtances in the temple, that it was not poſſible for Herod to be ignorant of it.

Anſw. 1*ſt*, He who makes this objection ſhould have conſidered, That he earneſtly contends that Herod was not then at Jeruſalem, but at Jericho, under the extremity of his numerous diſtempers, and ſo there was no fear of his being inſtantly advertiſed there of what was done in the temple; but to wave this, I anſwer, That Herod, tho' he was then at Jeruſalem, neither repaired to the temple, into which he could have no admittance, nor troubled himſelf with any thing done there, unleſs it were done in a riotous, ſeditious manner, and much leſs with the talk of one old man and woman, not regarded, that we read of, by any but Joſeph and the Virgin Mother. We find another ſtory publiſhed by the Shepherds of the appearance of Angels, declaring that one Chriſt the Lord was born in that very city of David, which made all the people wonder at the things which they had ſpoken, and yet Herod takes no notice of it.

Anſw. 2*dly*, Herod knew nothing either before or after, that this was the child the Magi came to worſhip; for then, why ſhould he ſlay all the young children about Bethlehem without diſtinction, and ſo they ſtaying there ſo little time, might be as ſafe there as elſewhere; tho', laſtly, the poſſibility that theſe things might come to his ear, or that his curioſity might move him to enquire what children were born at Bethlehem during the time of the taxation, and removed thence to other places, was perhaps the occaſion of the Angel's being ſent to Joſeph to haſten his flight from Jeruſalem, or Nazareth, into Egypt. For whereas ſome imagine, that the text of St. Matthew ſeemeth to imply, that the Angel appeared to Joſeph immediately after the departure of the Wiſe Men; and therefore whilſt he was at Bethlehem, the text doth not enforce this inference; for it ſaith only that ἀναχωρησάντων αὐτῶν, they being returned, he did ſo, leaving the time indefinite. See Woltzogenius on Matth. 2. p. 105, 106, 107.

Arg. 2. Moreover, (b) Joſephus ſaith expreſly, That Herod had ſent meſſengers to Rome concerning the conſpiracy of Antipater before the diſciples of Judas and Matthias attempted to pull down his Eagle; for which, after examination, and impriſonment for ſome time at Jericho, they ſuffer death upon the third of March, Old Style, and that theſe meſſengers returned with letters from the Emperor but five days before his death. Now can any man imagine, they ſhould ſpend nine months in ſuch a journey to Rome and back again, which even in winter might be performed in leſs than two? And yet this evidently muſt be done, if Herod died not till the 25th of November following, and yet died in five days after their return.

It therefore is highly probable, and will appear ſo to any one who reads Joſephus carefully, that Herod died ſome time before the Paſſover, which that year happened on the 5th of April, in which interval Archelaus might do all that was requiſite to celebrate his father's funeral, and yet come to Jeruſalem, as (c) Joſephus ſaith he did, a little before the Paſſover; now, if his father died the 25th of November, he muſt ſpend four full months in celebrating his funeral; which ſure muſt ſeem incredible to any who conſiders that he was ἦγον τάχος, intent upon the quickeſt performance of his journey to Rome, for confirmation of his royal dignity. For tho' in hereditary kingdoms, where the ſucceſſor is proclaimed the ſame day that the King dies, and hath no competitor, theſe funeral ſolemnities may be deferred for ſome conſiderable time; yet, ſeeing the validity of that will which made Archelaus King, depended abſolutely upon the pleaſure of the Emperor, and a competitor was ready, and appeared as quick as he at Rome, to conteſt the matter with him, by virtue of a former will, it cannot reaſonably be thought that that Archelaus would make so long a stay before he took his journey to Rome.

(b) Antiq. l. 17. c. 8.

Object. Against this argument it is objected, That the funeral could not be performed in so short a time, because the very journey from Jericho to Herodion was, saith Josephus, 200 stadia, that is 25 miles; and, saith the same Josephus, they went only eight stadia, i. e. one mile per diem, and so must be 25 days in going to Herodion.

Answ. 1*st*, This objection is upon this account highly improbable, that it must either find them a town at every mile's end, sufficient to contain so great a concourse as then attended on the corps of Herod, or make them lodge many days in the open field, or wilderness, in the winter-time, provided Herod died on the 25th of November.

Answ. 2. 2*dly*, It is built upon a false foundation; for tho' (d) Josephus doth expressly say, that Herodion was 200 stadia distant from Jericho, i. e. the castle of Herodion was at that distance from it; he doth not say they went but one mile a day, but only that (e) ἦσαν ἢ ἐπὶ Ἡρωδίου σταδία ὀκτώ, they came (viz. the first day) within eight stadia of Herodion; i. e. they came to the town there built by Herod, which was eight stadia from the castle; it being, saith he, a large town like a city, from which there was an ascent of 200 marble steps to the Mammea, or place of his interment. This being so, I am of the opinion of (f) Kepler, Dr. Allix, and Langius, that all that Josephus mentions after the eclipse, till the death of Herod, may be comprised within 20 or 22 days, which is the interval betwixt the 13th of March and the 5th of April, New Style, especially if we consider, that (g) Eusebius saith, that what was done after the 13th of March, was done παραυτίκα θείᾳ πληγῇ, by the Divine vengeance very suddenly, till the time of his death.

Arg. 3. 3*dly*, We are assured from (h) Josephus, that it was after the disease of Herod had been some time upon him, that Judas and Matthias moved their scholars to cut down the Eagle Herod had placed upon the great porch of the temple, as being contrary to their laws, judging this time of Herod's distemper καιρὸν ἐπιτηδειότατον, the fittest time for the enterprise; and that they moved this the more confidently, upon a report that the King was dying; that when he sent to the principal men of the Jews to assemble about this matter, he was carried to them in a bed, ἀδυνατία τοῦ στῆναι, being so weak that he was not able to stand; that instantly after the 13th of March, he lay under such a complex of diseases, that all men thought he could not live long, a violent inward fever burning up his bowels, attended with a boulimia, or perpetual voracity, which must needs feed his fever, ulcers in his bowels, cholick passions, an asthma, convulsions in all parts, a putrefaction in his scrotum breeding worms, so that he stank alive; and when presently he went to the hot baths at Callirrhoe, he had there a deliquium, and was for some time dead, and had no hopes left of life, and was, saith Josephus, ἀπιὼν τὸν βίον, even departing when he shut up the Jews in the hippodromium at Jericho. Now can any man think he should live above eight months after this, and keep the Jews shut up there all that time, as he must have done if he lived till the 25th of November following? especially if we consider, that the next thing Josephus mentions of him, is that he endeavoured to stab himself with a knife; and then kills Antipater, (who hearing this, had attempted to escape from prison,) and in five days after dies. Now is it reasonable to conceive, that an Angel should be sent to command Joseph to flee into Egypt but seven days, as Mr. Whiston's computation hath it, before the death of Herod, (when his whole body was full of torment, and his heart of grief, and his head full of other employments,) to avoid Herod's future attempts to slay the child, when he might have been as secure any where in the land of Israel for so short a time, and could scarce get thither before his death?

Mr. Whiston indeed saith in answer to this, that there is no time set for the duration of the disease of Herod; but in opposition to this, (i) Josephus expressly affirms, that he did εἰς νόσον ἐμπεσεῖν, fall into his disease after the time that he had sent his messengers with letters to Rome concerning the condemnation of Antipater; and that upon the receipt of an answer to them, he killed (k) Antipater, and five days after died: Allowing then two months for the going and return of his messenger, he must die within two months and five days after he fell sick, and so could not live from the 13th of March, when his disease increased, till the 25th of November.

Arg. 4. 4*thly*, According to Mr. Whiston's opinion, Herod must be near eight months at Jericho before he died; for he went thither, saith Josephus, soon after the slaughter of Judas and Matthias, with their disciples, and there continued till his death; and yet the history of St. Matthew, eſpecially according to his ſuppoſition, that it relates to what happened only two weeks and a few days before the death of Herod, plainly proves the contrary; for he informs us, that the Wiſe Men came to Jeruſalem, adding, that at their coming thither, Herod was troubled, and all Jeruſalem with him; that he enquired of the chief prieſts and ſcribes, whoſe reſidence was there, where Chriſt ſhould be born; and of the Wiſe Men, then at Jeruſalem, what time the ſtar appeared to them; and this, ſaith Mr. Whiſton in his Harmony, p. 159. was a conſultation at Jeruſalem. From thence therefore he ſends them to Bethlehem, when therefore he bids them bring him word again when they had found the child, muſt he not bid them bring him word to Jeruſalem, the place where he conſulted with them? Muſt he not there expect them? When therefore being fruſtrated of his expectation of their return thither, Χαπίσηλεν, he ſends forth his officers to ſlay the infants of Bethlehem; muſt he not ſend them from Jeruſalem? And is not all this ſufficiently intimated in their Divine warning, μὴ ἀνακάμψαι not to return back to the place from whence they came to Bethlehem? How therefore could it be, that the Wiſe Men ſhould come to him at Jeruſalem, but two or three weeks before he died? Or, Why doth he now deny that Herod was then at Jeruſalem, when he ſent forth to ſlay the infants? Why alſo doth he ſay in contradiction to his former ſelf, I believe the famous and unexampled ſummons of all the chief of the Jews a little before Herod died, in Joſephus, was the very ſame ſummons mentioned in St. Matthew, for the enquiry of the place where the King of the Jews was to be born, upon the coming of the Magi, and that by conſequence the ſummons was to Jericho, and not to Jeruſalem? Which is as great an inſtance of a man reſolved to ſay any thing, tho' never ſo improbable, πάλιν ὑποθέσεως to ſerve an hypotheſis, which otherwiſe muſt fall, as can be offered: He is the firſt, and I believe will be the laſt, who ever entertained ſuch a vain imagination. For, (1*ſt*,) That the Wiſe Men came to Jeruſalem, and that at their coming thither Herod was troubled, and all Jeruſalem with him, the text ſaith expreſly: And can it then be reaſonably ſaid, that Herod was not then at Jeruſalem? (2.) The men ſhut up in the Hippodromium were the ὀνομαστοὶ καὶ ἀξιόλογοι ἀφ' ἑκάστης κώμης, the nobles of every village, (who were then at court;) nor was there one word ſaid unto them when they were thus ſhut up. The men conveened in St. Matthew were only High Prieſts and Scribes, whoſe reſidence was at Jeruſalem, and enquiry is made of them where Chriſt ſhould be born. (2*dly*,) When (l) Herod was dead, Salome and Alexas ſent theſe men home, ὀπὶ τὰς ἀγρὰς into the fields or villages, to mind their own buſineſs, whereas the High Prieſts had no buſineſs to do there. And, (3*dly*,) Herod ſhut them up, ἤδη τελευτῶν, καὶ ἀπιέναι μέλλων, when he was a dying, and ready to depart this life, ſaith Joſephus: And was this a time for him to ſay to the Wiſe Men, Bring me word of the child, that I may come and worſhip him? In a word, there is not one word of St. Matthew's ſtory in Joſephus, or of the ſtory of Joſephus in St. Matthew; and can it then be reaſonable to think they relate to the ſame thing? To conclude, this new opinion confounds the general doctrine of the fathers from Origen to Theophylact, that Herod fell into that diſeaſe, which ſo tormented him ob cædem infantum, for the ſlaughter of the infants, ſeeing, according to this opinion, he muſt have lain long under theſe torments, and been ready to expire with them, before he did this fact, it being done, ſaith this opinion, but five days before his death. To come now to conſider what Mr. Whiſton offers to confirm his opinion:

1*ſt*, He ſaith, that in the ancient account of the Jewiſh feaſts and faſts, viz. in the Megillah Taanitz, we find the ſeventh day of the month Chiſleu, which anſwers to our 25th of November, recorded for an anniverſary holy-day, becauſe Herod the King, who hated the Wiſe Men, died on that day.

Anſw. Dr. Allix, in his anſwer to Biſhop Uſher concerning the true date of the death of Herod, ſaith, That had Biſhop Uſher ſeen this book, he would never have cited it; for it is not the Megillah Taanitz mentioned by the Miſnah, but a late fabulous, ignorant author, not known to, and much leſs credited by the Jews, who do not follow, or agree with him in this matter, and who mentions a feaſt in the month Chiſleu not known to the Jews, not extant in their kalendar publiſhed by Mr. Selden, nor by Buxtorf, among their occaſional feaſts; and which would never have been permitted by Herod's family, who governed till the deſtruction of Jeruſalem.

Mr. Whiſton ſaith farther, That this is wonderfully confirmed by the circumſtances of Herod juſt before his death; and by the words of Auguſtus concerning his barbarity to his children, recorded by Macrobius, it appearing by Joſephus, that Herod was in a ſtrange fury and rage but a few days before his death.

Anſw. Here the point in diſpute is ſo plainly, and ſo fully given up, that if Mr. Whiſton will abide by his own words, it muſt be at an end: for it is evident from the words of Joſephus, that he he fell into this rage, or Ἠγριώσην ἀκέστω τῇ ὀργῇ, was exasperated to the utmost rage, upon suspicion of the contempt of the Jews; and that he was confirmed in this suspicion by the following attempt of the disciples of Judas and Matthias; who thereupon are taken by one of (m) Herod's Captains, examined by Herod, then sent to Jericho, and after consultation with the chief men of the Jews, they are slain on the 13th of March. If therefore Herod fell into this rage but a few days, yea even just before his death, 'tis certain that he must die soon after this 13th of March, as indeed he did, and therefore could not live till the 25th of November, that is, eight months after. He therefore elsewhere contradicts himself, i. e. saith, p. 154. That Herod burnt these men alive some considerable time before his death; tho' it is plain from Josephus, that he did it after that rage, which, saith he, happened just or a few days before it.

2*dly*, To proceed to the words of (n) Macrobius, they run thus, When Augustus had heard that among the children within two years old, which Herod King of the Jews had commanded to be slain in Syria, his own son was killed: he said, It is better to be Herod's hog than his son. It is observable here:

1*st*, That as Strauchius saith, There are not wanting men who look upon this story of Macrobius as a mere fiction; as also doth Grenobius in his notes upon these words; (1*st*,) Because no R. historian whatsoever, before Macrobius, who lived almost 400 years after Augustus, nor any Christian writer, tho' both historians, commentators, and homelists, speak largely of the cruelty of Herod towards the infants of Bethlehem, make any mention of this jest, which gives just reason to suspect it is a fiction; like to that other in Philo's book of chronology, that Herod had then a son of two years old begot by one Salome of the line of David, whom he then slew. Or, 2*dly*, We may say with (o) Grotius, That Macrobius finding that the Christians kept the solemnity of Innocents day, when, saith Origen, Horum memoria, ut dignum est, in Ecclesia celebratur, the memory of these infants is deservedly celebrated in the church, he out of error applied the jest of Augustus to it.

2*dly*, These words contain no testimony of Augustus about this matter; he only says, It is better to be Herod's hog than his son; and this he might say rather upon occasion of Herod's slaying his two sons, Alexander and Aristobulus, against his advice, to which Dr. Allix refers this speech, than his slaying Antipater; which being done with his permission, he had no just occasion to pass this jest upon him, for doing that which he himself allowed. Moreover, Antipater being slain by Herod but five days before his death, Augustus could not hear of it till he heard also of his death, and then it seems too late to pass this jest upon him; whereas Alexander and Aristobulus being slain long before, might give a just occasion for it. And he who contradicts the full assertion of so many fathers of the second and third century, saying, That our Saviour was baptized when he began to be 30 years old, as St. Luke also doth; may permit us to question the authority of Macrobius as to the occasion of a jest made 400 years before, and mentioned by him alone.

3*dly*, It is evident, that if any son of Herod's was slain inter pueros, among the infants of Bethlehem, it could not be Antipater, he being neither slain among them, nor near Bethlehem, but alone at a castle far distant from it. Nor, 2*dly*, could he be slain at the same time with these infants; for it plainly appears from Josephus, that Antipater was slain soon after the eclipse, which happened on March 13. the infants, saith Mr. Whiston, were slain Nov. 20. Antipater was slain not long before the return of Archelaus to Jerusalem, the five days of his father's life, and his funeral solemnity only intervening; and yet we learn from (p) Josephus, that Archelaus came thither, ἐσταίας ἤδη τῆς ἀζύμων ἑορτῆς, the Passover being then at hand. Lastly, The infants were slain whilst Herod was at Jerusalem; for thence he sent forth to slay the children at Bethlehem, whereas he had left Jerusalem, and was gone to Jericho before he slew Antipater; tho' therefore it might so happen, that Augustus might hear of the relation, or discourse of both these acts of cruelty at the same time; it is impossible that they should happen both at the same time.

4. And the ſame John, (who thus cried,) had his [d] raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins, (as Elias, whom he repreſented, had,) and his [e] meat was locuſts and wild honey.

5. Then (after notice of his proclaiming the approach of the Meſſiah,) went out to him Jeruſalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan,

6. And were baptized of him, [f] confeſſing their ſins, (and promiſing the reformation of their lives.)

7. But, when he ſaw many of the [g] Phariſees, and Sadducees, come to his baptiſm, he ſaid unto them, Oh! generation of vipers, [h] who hath warned you to (make uſe of this means, to) flee from the wrath to come, (if indeed you would eſcape it?)

8. [i] Bring forth therefore (then) fruits meet for repentance.

9. And [k] think (it) not (ſufficient) to ſay within your ſelves, We have Abraham to our father; for, I ſay to you, that God (rejecting you,) is able of theſe [l] ſtones (before your eyes,) to raiſe up (ſuch, who believing as he did, ſhall be accounted by him) children unto Abraham.

10. And (to engage you ſo to do, conſider that) now alſo is the ax laid to the root of the tree; therefore every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is (to be) hewn down, and caſt into the fire.

11. I indeed baptize you (only) with [m] water, (calling you by this rite) to repentance; but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, (being one) whoſe [n] ſhoes I am not worthy to bear, (i. e. whoſe ſervant I am not worthy to be) he ſhall baptize you (who believe in him) with the Holy Ghoſt, and with fire, (i. e. appearing in the emblem of fire.)

12. (And he is one,) whoſe [o] fan is in his hand; and he will throughly purge his floor, and will gather the wheat, (the ſincerely penitent,) into his garner, but the chaff, (the wicked, and the unbelievers,) he will burn with unquenchable fire.

13. Then (while John was thus preaching and baptizing,) cometh Jeſus from (Nazareth of) Galilee to Jordan, unto John, to be baptized of him.

14. But John, (being a Prophet full of the Spirit from his mother's womb, Luke 1. 15. and by the afflatus of that Spirit knowing who he was,) [p] forbad (or would have hindered) him, ſaying, I have need to be baptized of thee (with the Holy Ghoſt,) and comeſt thou to me (to receive my water baptiſm?)

15. And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid unto him, Suffer it to be ſo now, for thus it [q] behoveth us to fulfil all righteouſneſs, (i. e. to own every righteous inſtitution of God;) then he ſuffered him.

16. And Jeſus when he was [r] baptized, went up ſtraightway out of the water, and lo the heavens were opened to him, and (both) he (and John Baptiſt, John 1. 32.) [s] ſaw the ſpirit deſcending like (as) a dove (deſcends,) and [t] lighting upon him.

17. And lo a voice (was heard) from heaven, ſaying, [v] This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. III.

Ver. 1. [a] Ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ τ Ἰυδαίας, preaching in the wilderneſs of Judea.] Ἔρημος, a wilderneſs, among the Jews, did not ſignify a place wholly void of inhabitants, but a place in which they were fewer, and their habitations more diſperſed, than in villages and cities; hence we read of ſix cities with their villages in the wilderneſs, Joſh. 15. 61, 62. that Nabal dwelt in the wilderneſs of Paran, 1 Sam. 25. 1, 2. and Joab had his houſe in the wilderneſs, 1 Kings 2. 34.

Ver. 2. [b] Μετανοεῖτε, ἤγγικε γὰρ ἡ βασιλεία τ̃ ϑεῦ, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.] Of the repentance here mentioned, ſee ver. 8. But to treat here more largely of the kingdom of heaven mentioned here, and elſewhere frequently in the Goſpels, let it be noted,

Firſt, That the kingdom of heaven and the kingdom of God ſignify the ſame thing, as will be evident from the variation of the word: Bleſſed are ye poor, for yours is the kingdom of heaven, Matth. 5. 3. The kingdom of God, Luke 6. 20. The kingdom of heaven is at hand, Matth. 4. 17. The kingdom of God, Mar. 1. 15. The leaſt in the kingdom of heaven is greater than John, Matth. 11. 11. In the kingdom of God, Luke 7. 28. To you it is given to know the myſteries of the kingdom of heaven, Matth. 13. 11. Of the kingdom of God, Mark 4. 11. So Matth. 19. 14. and Mar. 10. 14. The reaſon ſeems to be, becauſe this kingdom is erected by the God of heaven; and and in scripture phrase it is the same to be from God and to be from heaven, Matth. 21. 25. Luke 15. 18. And שמים Heaven is the name of God, Dan. 4. 26. and among the Rabinical writers frequently. See Buxt. Lex. Talmud. in Voce. Note,

2*dly*, That the kingdom of heaven in the Gospels sometimes unquestionably signifies that heavenly kingdom in which all pious persons shall enjoy endless felicity with God, as their reward in heaven: As when it is said, Blessed are they who are persecuted for righteousness sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven; Matth. 5. 10. i. e. Great is their reward in heaven, v. 12. Not every one that saith to me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doth the will of my Father, Matth. 7. 21. To the rest I will say in that day, I know you not, &c. v. 22. 23. It is better to enter into the kingdom of heaven with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell, Mark 9. 46, 47. See Matth. 13. 40, 43.——25. 34, 46. Luke 12. 32, 33. Note,

3*dly*, That it very frequently in the Gospels signifies the coming of the Messiah to erect his spiritual kingdom, or that evangelical state and government of the church he was to set up, with the benefits belonging to them, who should by faith in him become members of this kingdom, and would be governed by his laws; this is undoubtedly the import of the phrase, (1*st*,) when the kingdom of God is said to be at hand, as here and Matth. 4. 17.——10. 7. Luke 10. 9. that the kingdom of God is near, Luke 21. 31. that it was presently to be manifested, Luke 19. 11. that it was among the Jews, Luke 17. 21. that it was come to them, Matth. 12. 28. that devout men expected it, Mark 15. 43. that the Pharisees asked when the kingdom of God would come, Luke 17. 20. and when Christ said, There are some standing here, who shall not taste of death till they see the kingdom of God come with power, Matth. 16. 28. Mark 9. 1. Luke 9. 27. (2*dly*,) When it is said that Jesus preached the Gospel of the kingdom of God, Mark 1. 14. that from the days of John the Baptist the kingdom of God was preached, Luke 16. 16. that Christ preached the Gospel of the kingdom, Matth. 4. 23.——9. 35. that he preached the kingdom of God, Luke 4. 43. and spake to them of the kingdom of God, Luke 9. 11. that he sent his Apostles to preach the kingdom of God, v. 2. and told the Jews the kingdom of God should be taken from them, Matth. 21. 43. (3*dly*,) This sense it also bears in almost all the parables which speak of the kingdom of God, as Matth. 13. 11, 31, 33, 44, 45, 47. Chap. 18. 1, 3, 4.——20. 1.——22. 2.——25. 1. (4*thly*,) It seems to bear this sense when it is said, the least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than John the Baptist, Matth. 11. 11. that the kingdom of heaven suffers violence, and the violent take it by force, ibid. v. 12. that to the disciples was given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, Matth. 13. 11. see v. 19, 52. to thee will I give the keys of the kingdom of heaven, Matth. 16. 19. when Zebedee asks for her two sons that they might sit on his right and left hand in his kingdom, Matth. 20. 21. This is that kingdom which the Scribes shut men out from, Matth. 23. 13. which the Scribe was not far from, Mark 12. 34. and of which it is said, Blessed is he who shall eat bread in the kingdom of God, Luke 14. 15.

4*thly*, In other places I am yet doubtful whether it refer to the times of the preaching of the Gospel, and the erecting of Christ's kingdom, or to the first and higher sense of the kingdom of heaven, as it imports the kingdom into which the righteous shall enter at the great day of recompence, viz. Matth. 5. 3, 19, 20.——6. 33.——8. 11.——19. 12, 24. Mark 10. 14, 15, 23, 24, 25. Luke 18. 29.——22. 29, 30.

Ver. 3. [c] Ἑτοιμάσατε τὴν ὁδὸν Κυρίου, εὐθείας ποιεῖτε τὰς τρίβους αὐτοῦ, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.] From these words compared with Mark 1. 2. Matth. 3. 1. some prove that Christ is God, even the same in essence with the God of Israel, because the way of which Isaias speaks, Chap. 40. 3. is דרך יהוה or the way of Jehovah, the path which he requires to be made straight is the path τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν, of our God. And it is the God of Israel who saith, Behold I send my messenger before my face, or before me, Mal. 3. 1. Now this messenger is by Christ himself declared to be John the Baptist, Matth. 11. 10. and he is said to be sent πρὸ προσώπου σου, before the face of Christ to prepare his way, ibid. and Luke 7. 27. Mark 1. 2. this therefore, say some, is an evident proof that Christ is one God with the Father, and that in Christ God came, and was manifested in the flesh. But to this the Socinians answer two things, which seem to lessen the force of this Argument, viz.

1*st*, That the Baptist was sent before the face of God, but not of God only, but of Christ also, for he was sent to call the people to repentance towards God, and so he went before God to turn many of the people to the Lord their God, Luke 1. 16, 17. He was also sent to bear witness to Christ, that all men might believe on him, John 1. 7. and so he went before the face of Christ to prepare his way.

2*dly*, They add, that this messenger may well be said to go before the face of God, as being sent before the face of this great Prophet, and Ambassador of God, who therefore sustained his person, and was his image, and representative in a more excellent manner than any Prophet, or any Angel mentioned mentioned in the Old Teſtament; yea, ſay they, God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf, 2 Cor. 5. 19. which ſhews that Chriſt in a moſt perfect manner repreſented him, ſo that the meſſenger ſent before Chriſt's face, might well be ſaid to be ſent before the face of God. For if he who perſecutes the members of Chriſt perſecutes Chriſt himſelf, Acts 9. 4. he that deſpiſeth Chriſt's meſſengers, deſpiſeth him, and he that deſpiſeth him, deſpiſeth alſo him that ſent him, Luke 10. 16. and he that lied to the Apoſtles lied to God, Acts 5. 4. and if he that received them received him, Matth. 10. 40. and he that ſhews an act of charity to his members, ſhews it to him, Matth. 25. 40. then in like manner he that goes before God's great Prophet and Ambaſſador, may be ſaid to go before God alſo. Theſe anſwers muſt be confuted before we can depend upon the ſtrength of this argument. See alſo Note on Luke 3. 4, 5.

Ver. 4. [d] Εἶχε τὸ ἔνδυμα αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τριχῶν καμήλου, καὶ ζώνην δερματίνην περὶ τὴν ὀσφὺν αὐτοῦ, &c. And this John had his raiment of camels hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins.] It is very true, as Cteſias, (a) Apollonius, and (b) Ælian, declare, that ſome garments made of camels hair were very ſoft and fine, and therefore worn by Prieſts and Noblemen; theſe, ſaith Paulus Venetus, in Tartary are called Zambilottes, lib. 1. cap. 63. and by us Chamblets, but doubtleſs the garment of the Baptiſt was made ex villis, of the long and coarſe hair of camels, that he might in habit, as well as in ſpirit and office, reſemble Elijah, who was an hairy man, and girded with a girdle of leather about his loins, 2 Kings 1. 8.

Ibid. [e] Ἡ δὲ τροφὴ αὐτοῦ ἦν ἀκρίδες καὶ μέλι ἄγριον, and his meat was locuſts and wild honey.] That ſome locuſts were clean meat we learn from theſe words, Lev. 11. 22. of theſe ye may eat, the bald locuſt after his kind. That locuſts were a common meat, not only in the Eaſtern and the Southern parts, but even in Paleſtine it ſelf, is fully proved by Bochartus Hieroz. part 2. lib. 4. c. 7. Euſtath. in Dionyſ. p. 37. and by Ludolphus in his Æthiopick hiſtory, and in his diſſertation de locuſtis: ſo that vain are all the criticiſms to change the word ἀκρίδες.

Ver. 6. [f] Καὶ ἐβαπτίζοντο ἐν τῷ Ἰορδάνῃ ὑπ' αὐτοῦ ἐξομολογούμενοι τὰς ἁμαρτίας αὐτῶν. And were baptized of him in Jordan, confeſſing their ſins.] In the river Jordan, Mark 1. 5. ſee Note on v. 16. Of this confeſſion of ſins Maldonate owns it could not be auricular confeſſion, becauſe that was not yet inſtituted: Moreover it was a confeſſion of them not to John, but unto God, much leſs was it a confeſſion of all their offences made ſecretly in the ears of John; for how could one man have ſufficed for that work, when all Judea and Jeruſalem went out unto him? But only a general confeſſion that they were ſenſible of their ſins, and ſo repaired to his baptiſm, profeſſing their repentance for them; and ſuch were the confeſſions we meet with in the Old Teſtament, Ezra 9. Neh. 9. Dan. 9. and that made by the High Prieſt, on the day of atonement, of all the iniquities of the children of Iſrael, Lev. 16. 21. it was a confeſſion not of thoſe who had been baptized concerning ſins committed after baptiſm, but of thoſe who were to be baptized: And laſtly, it was not a confeſſion required of them by the Baptiſt, but made freely of their own accord; in all which circumſtances it differs from the auricular confeſſion of the church of Rome.

Ver. 7. [g] Ἰδὼν δὲ πολλοὺς τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ Σαδδουκαίων ἐρχομένους ἐπὶ τὸ βάπτισμα αὐτοῦ. And ſeeing many of the Phariſees and Sadducees coming to his baptiſm, &c.] That theſe Phariſees and Sadducees not only came to the place of baptiſm, but alſo actually were baptized by John is proved. (1.) Becauſe as much is ſaid of them here, as of the multitude, Luke 3. 7. they came to be baptized, and of the Publicans, v. 12. ἦλθον βαπτισθῆναι, they came to be baptized. And the ſame admonitions and words are ſpoken to the multitude there, v. 7, 8. as to the Phariſees and Sadducees here. Now the multitude and Publicans were actually baptized; only obſerve that many of them are ſaid to come to his baptiſm not comparatively, as if but few refuſed, for St. Luke ſaith Chap. 7. 30. that the Phariſees and Lawyers rejected the counſel of God towards them, being not baptized of John; but abſolutely, they being not a few who were baptized. Now from this example of the Baptiſt admitting this generation of vipers to his baptiſm, upon their profeſſion of repentance, and a deſire to eſcape the wrath to come, we may learn that ſuch profeſſors may be admitted to the Sacrament, as have been very bad, upon the like profeſſion, provided we do warn them as the Baptiſt did theſe men, that as they do make profeſſion of repentance and amendment, ſo they would be as careful to bring forth fruits worthy of repentance.

Ibid. [h] Τίς ὑπέδειξεν ὑμῖν, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?] This is not, as Mr. Cler. conceives, a negative, or declaration that none had warned them to do this, for doubtleſs the Prophets of the Old Teſtament, and their own conſciences muſt warn them to avoid impendent wrath: But it is a who, of admiration, like that of St. Paul to the Galatians, Who hath bewitched witched you! Chap. 3. 1. where sure he did not intend to say that no man had done it. See the like, Isa. 42. 19.——49. 21.——53. 1.——60. 8. ——63. 1. Matth. 21. 10. Luke 5. 21.——9. 9. Rev. 13. 4. and is as if he should have said, How wonderful is it that such men should do things so alien from their temper and inclinations!

Ver. 8. [i] Ποιήσατε οὖν καρποὺς ἀξίους τῆς μετανοίας· Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance.] i. e. A change of the mind from the approbation or good-liking of sin, as seeing in it something we conceive desirable, to the aversion and alienation of the mind from it, as being convinced of the vileness and the destructive nature of it; and this is properly μεταμέλεια repentance, and to be thus affected is ἀνανεῦσθαι τῷ πνεύματι τοῦ νοὸς ὑμῶν, to be renewed in the spirit of our mind, Eph. 4. 23. and because hence naturally follows a change of the will, and the affections, from love, to the hatred of sin, and so from chusing, to the refusal of it: Hence is it well defined by Phavorinus, ἡ μετὰ τοῦ κρείττονος ὁπισχνουμένη γνώμη ἀπὸ πλημμελημάτων ἐπὶ τὸ ἐναντίον ἐπανόρθωσιν, a conversion from our evil ways to the contrary good, or to that which is better: and because where these ruling faculties are truly thus affected, we shall cease to do evil, and learn to do well, Isa. 1. 16, 17. so that if we have done iniquity, we will do it no more, Job 34. 32. therefore it is stiled μετάνοια ἀπὸ νεκρῶν ἔργων, repentance from dead works, Heb. 6. 1. and repentance to salvation is stiled ἀμεταμέλητος, 2 Cor. 7. 10. i. e. such as is not reversed by any voluntary returning to, or relapsing into our former sins. And seeing God is unchangeably holy and righteous, and must for ever hate iniquity with a perfect hatred; it is certain from his very nature, that he cannot be reconciled to, or have communion with the sinner, till he cease from sin, and a change is wrought in his conversation from sin to righteousness; for a change there must be, either in God or man: Now since God's nature is immutable, it cannot be in him, and so of necessity must be in man. Now it is evident, both from reason and experience, that confession of sins, a present sorrow for them, and displeasure against them, and a warm resolution to forsake them is neither necessarily, nor always attended with this change, and so that these alone cannot be fruits meet for repentance; and oh! how necessary was this admonition for the men of that age, who, as Dr. Lightfoot notes, placed their repentance in a meer oral confession of their sins, as the Schoolmen and some Latin Fathers did in a meer groan; saying, Si ingemueris, salvaberis. And I wish this note were not as necessary for too many of our own age.

Ver. 9. [k] Καὶ μὴ δόξητε λέγειν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς πατέρα ἔχομεν τὸν Ἀβραάμ· And begin not to say within yourselves, we have Abraham to our father.] There seems no necessity of making δόξητε here, or ἄρχομαι, Luke 3. 8. an expletive; for the sense runs clearly thus, when you are called to bring forth fruits meet for repentance, begin not to obstruct the efficacy of this admonition with those thoughts so common among you, that you are secure from wrath, by being the children of Abraham. How prone they were to such vain imaginations you may learn, Note on Rom. 2. 13. and from these words of (a) Justin Martyr, calling the Jews to repentance, and desiring them not to be deluded by their rabbins and masters, who told them, that tho' they continued in their sins, yet if they knew God τὸ μὴ λογίζεσθαι αὐτοῖς ὁ κύριος ἁμαρτίαν, God would not impute their sin to them. And conceiving that being Abraham's seed, though they continued in their disobedience to God, and in infidelity, the kingdom of heaven should be given to them.

Ibid. [l] Ὅτι δυνατός ὁ Θεὸς ἐκ τῶν λίθων τούτων ἐγεῖραι τέκνα τῷ Ἀβραάμ, for God is able out of these stones to raise up children to Abraham.] I see no reason for the interpretation of (b) Clemens Alexandrinus here, out of these stones, that is, ἐκ τῶν λίθοις παρεικασθέντων εἰδώλων, out of the Gentiles who worshipped stones, or that of Jerom on the place, Lapides Ethnicos vocat propter cordis duritiem, He calls the heathens stones, for the hardness of their hearts, though almost all the ancients concur with them; unless perhaps it might be thought he pointed to the heathen soldiers standing there; the sense seems rather to be this, that God, who raised Adam from the earth, and children to Abraham from the dead womb of Sarah, can from these stones create such persons whose faith shall render them more truly and acceptably, the sons of faithful Abraham, than you are. See the Note on Luke 19. 40.

Ver. 11. [m] Ἐγὼ μὲν βαπτίζω ὑμᾶς ἐν ὕδατι εἰς μετάνοιαν, I indeed baptize you with water to repentance, &c.] They seem to be much mistaken who think the baptism of John was for substance the same with that which afterwards Christ did institute, to admit disciples into the Christian church; for (1.) John neither did nor could baptize disciples in the name of the Holy Ghost, as the Apostles did, because the Holy Ghost was not yet, John 7. 39. and much less could he baptize them with the Holy

D Ghost,

Ghoſt, as here he ſaith Chriſt would, and yet Chriſt makes both theſe baptiſms neceſſary to our entrance into the kingdom of God, John 3. 5. (2.) John did not baptize in the name of Chriſt, for had he done ſo, there could have been no doubt, whether he himſelf were the Chriſt, or not, Luke 3. 15. nor any occaſion for that queſtion, Why baptizeſt thou, if thou be not the Chriſt? John 1. 25. He only admoniſhed thoſe he baptized in general, that they ſhould believe in him that was coming after him. So that he baptized only thoſe who as yet believed not in Chriſt; whereas the baptiſm inſtituted by Chriſt was in his name, and belonged only to them who believed in him: And laſtly, St. Paul baptizes them again, who had before received the baptiſm of John, to fit them for the reception of the Holy Ghoſt, Acts 19. 6, 7.

Ibid. [n] Οὗ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἱκανὸς τὰ ὑποδήματα βαστάσαι, whoſe ſhoes I am not worthy to carry;] i. e. whoſe ſervant I am not worthy to be. See Note on John 1. 27. and Grotius here.

Ver. 12. [o] Οὗ τὸ πτύον ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ· Whoſe fan is in his hand, and he will throughly purge his floor, and burn the chaff with unquenchable fire.] That which we render here a fan from vannus, is, ſays Heſychius and Phavorinus, a ſieve, in which they ſeparate the wheat from the chaff. It is, ſays Didymus and Euſtathius, [in Iliad. V.] τὸ λικμητικὸν, a winnowing inſtrument, by which they ſhake the grains together, ἀναχωρίζοντες τὸ ἄχυρα, ſeparating them from the chaff. Now the wheat or other grain thus cleanſed, was put into the granary, to the chaff they put fire, to prevent the winds blowing it back into the threſhing floor, and that fire burnt on till it had conſumed it, without being quenched; and to this practice do theſe words refer.

Ver. 14. [p] Ὁ δὲ Ἰωάννης διεκώλυεν αὐτὸν· But John forbad him, &c.] To the queſtion how the Baptiſt knew him to be the Chriſt before the Spirit deſcended on him, it is anſwered by almoſt all the commentators on the Goſpel of St. Matthew, that John the Baptiſt being a Prophet filled with the Holy Ghoſt from his mother's womb, Luke 1. 15. knew by the afflatus of that Holy Spirit, that he who then came to him was the perſon on whom the Holy Ghoſt ſhould deſcend ſo plentifully, and on whom he ſhould abide, that he might impart him to others, ſuch matters being frequently imparted to Prophets, by an immediate intimation of the Holy Spirit. So Simeon, being told that he ſhould not die till he had ſeen the Lord's Chriſt, Luke 2. 26. had an afflatus declaring to him, that our Lord was that Chriſt, v. 27, 32. So Anna the Propheteſs, being one of them who expected his coming, by a like afflatus, was moved to ſpeak of him as the promiſed Meſſiah, v. 38. So Samuel, being told by God, that on the morrow a man ſhould come to him, to be the Captain over his people Iſrael, 1 Sam. 9. 15. when Saul appears, hath another afflatus, reſembling that of the Baptiſt's here, viz. Behold the man of whom I ſpake to thee, v. 17. and on whom thou may'ſt expect to ſee the ſignal promiſed. Thus tho' Moſes knew before from the mouth of God, and many other antecedent evidences, that he was by him deſigned to bring his people out of Egypt, yet God ſpeaks thus to him, This ſhall be a ſign to thee, that I have ſent thee, when thou haſt brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye ſhall ſerve God upon this mountain, Exod. 3. 12. In a word, the Baptiſt being to preach, when he baptized with water, that another ſhould baptize them with the Holy Ghoſt, God tells him, that of this he ſhould ſee an evidence, by the viſible deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon him, who from his fullneſs was to impart this Spirit to all true believers; and when our Saviour came to be baptized, tells him again, this was that very perſon.

Ver. 15. [q] Οὕτω γὰρ πρέπον ἐστὶν ἡμῖν πληρῶσαι πᾶσαν δικαιοσύνην, for ſo it becomes us to fulfil all righteouſneſs.] i. e. to own every divine inſtitution, and ſo to ſhew my readineſs to comply with all God's righteous precepts, and to juſtify God, and approve his counſel, Luke 7. 29. and celebrate his wiſdom, in ſending thee to prepare his, and my way, by calling men to repentance, and by ſo doing to fit them for the bleſſings of my kingdom, and the avoiding of the wrath to come. So the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions (l. 7. c. 22.) ſay, that Chriſt was baptized, not that he needed any purgation, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ Ἰωάννῃ ἀληθῆναι προσωμολογήσῃ, καὶ ἡμῖν ὑποδείγματον ἀφήσῃ, but to teſtify the truth of St. John's baptiſm, and to be an example to us.

Ver. 16. [r] Καὶ βαπτισθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀνέβη εὐθὺς ἀπὸ τοῦ ὕδατος· And Jeſus being baptized came up ſtraightway out of the water.] The obſervation of the Greek church is this, that he who aſcended out of the water, muſt firſt deſcend down into it: (c) Baptiſm therefore is to be performed not by ſprinkling but by waſhing the body; and indeed it can be only from ignorance of the Jewiſh rites in baptiſm that this is queſtioned, for they, to the due performance of this rite, ſo ſuperſtitiouſly required the immerſion of the whole body in the water, that if any dirt hindred the water from coming to any part of it, the baptiſm was not right, and if one held the baptized by the arm when he was let down down into the water, another must after dip him, holding him by the other arm that was washed before, because his hand would not suffer the water to come to his whole body. See Lightfoot here on v. 6. and Selden de jure Nat. & Gent. l. 2. c. 2. p. 14. Note also, that the Divines hence infer, that baptism may rightly be received by, and administred to, a subject uncapable of many of the chief ends of it, provided he be capable of some other end for which it also was designed. For Christ being without sin, could neither repent nor promise amendment of life; being the wisdom of the Father, he could be taught nothing; being the Christ, he could not profess he would believe in him that should come after him, that is, in himself: He therefore was baptized, to testify that he owned the Baptist as one commissionated by God to do this office; and, (2*dly*,) that by this rite he might profess his willingness to fulfil all righteousness; and, (3*dly*,) that by this rite he might be initiated to his prophetical office, and consecrated to the service of God; tho' therefore, say they, infants can neither be taught, nor believe, nor give the answer of a good conscience at baptism, yet may they be baptized. (1.) That they may by this ceremony be obliged to observe the laws of that Jesus into whose name they are baptized, even as the circumcised infant, by virtue of that rite, became a debtor to observe the whole law of Moses, Acts 15. 5. Gal. 5. 3. (2.) That by this rite they might enter into covenant with God, and become fœderate children of God, of which they are declared capable by Moses, Deut. 29. 11. And so when by their parents that circumcision was neglected, they are said to have broken God's covenant, Gen. 17. 14. And seeing parents might consecrate their children to God's service from the womb, as in the case of Samson, Judg. 13. 5. and of Samuel, 1 Sam. 1. 11, 22, 28. why might not God appoint this might be done to children, by that only rite which he instituted under the old and the new covenant, for entering any into the number of his fœderal servants? And, (3.) By this rite to consign unto them a right to the kingdom of heaven, and to a blessed resurrection; of which, if infants of believing parents are not capable, when dying in their infancy, they are lost for ever. Now they all being the offspring of Adam, and therefore all obnoxious to death, by reason of his sin, Rom. 5. 12. they cannot be delivered from this death but by the grace of God, which Christ hath purchased, and promised to them only, who are made some way members of his body, and children of God; why therefore should we not conceive they should obtain this favour by that baptism, which is alone appointed by Christ for making any one a member of his body, 1 Cor. 12. 13. and entering any one into the kingdom of God? John 3. 5.

Ibid. [s] Καὶ εἶδε τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ θεοῦ καταβαῖνον ὡσεὶ περιστερὰν, and he saw the Spirit of God descending as a dove.] See the Note on Luke 3. 22.

Ibid. [t] Καὶ ἐρχόμενον ἐπ' αὐτὸν, and lighting upon him.] Here the Socinians object thus:

Object. If Christ had been God as well as man, he could not have needed this descent of the Holy Spirit upon him, as being able, by the divinity residing in him, to do all those things for which the Holy Ghost can be supposed to descend upon him: "What is it, saith Crellius, that the high "God could not do himself? Or, What help could "the Holy Spirit give unto him? If you say, his "human nature needed the assistance of this Ho"ly Spirit, how can that be, seeing it is supposed "to be personally united to the divinity, and to "have the whole fulness of the Godhead dwelling "in it? Or, Why should Christ be rather said to "cast out devils by this Spirit of God, than by his "divine nature; or to be endowed with wisdom, "counsel, knowledge, fortitude, and the fear of the "Lord, by the Spirit, and not by his divine nature?" Woltzogen. upon the place, and Crellius de uno Deo Pat. B. 1. § 2. cap. 33.

Answ. In answer to this objection it is to be observed, first, that the most ancient fathers have taken notice of it, as a specious objection against the received doctrine of the divinity of Christ, and have attempted to return divers answers to it; which is a demonstration, that the doctrine that Christ was truly God, was then received by the church of Christ. Trypho in his dialogue with Justin M. asks this very question of the Socinians, Why Jesus Christ, whom Justin owned to be God, should have the Spirit resting on him, ὡς ἐνδεὴς τούτων ὑπάρχων, as needing his assistance? (e) Justin M. replies, That he accurately and prudently made this inquiry; this being a just cause of doubting in this case; and then he tells him, That the graces of the Holy Spirit, mentioned, Isa. 11. 2. did not descend upon him as if he needed them, but to testify they were to rest upon him, and be accompanied in him; so that these prophetical graces should no longer be in the Jewish church. (f) Irenæus speaking of the same thing, saith, As to that nature by which Chriſt, the Word of God, was man, the ſpirit reſted on him, and he was anointed to preach the Goſpel; ſecnndum autem quod Deus erat, but as he was God, he knew all men, and what was in man, John 2. 24, 25. Now hence the anſwer to this argument is this, That Chriſt as God could not need this unction of the Holy Spirit, but as he was to execute the prophetick office, it was needful for him; becauſe a Prophet being not to ſpeak in his own name, but in the name of God, and what he had ſuggeſted to him by the ſpirit of God, this prophetick office was to be performed, not by the divine nature of our Lord, but by the afflatus of the Holy Spirit. See to this effect the diſcourſe in the preface to St. John. It was alſo needful for the execution of his prieſtly office, that he, by the ſpirit ſanctifying him from the womb, might offer himſelf a lamb without ſpot to God, Heb. 9. 14. So that in all the actions relating to his prophetick office, the divinity of Chriſt muſt be ſuppoſed quieſcent, and Chriſt muſt be ſaid to perform his miracles, to confirm the doctrine which he delivered, by the Spirit of God, by which alſo he was aſſiſted to ſpeak the words of God, John 3. 34. And ſeeing all the orthodox allow, That the divinity was quieſcent in Chriſt till he was 30 years old, why may they not allow it was quieſcent alſo after, in all the actions relating to the execution of his prophetical office, here on earth?

(g) Dioditius indeed exclaims not againſt this hypotheſis, but againſt the words of Irenæus, That Chriſt ſuffered ἡσυχάζοντος τῆς θεότητος, the divine nature being quieſcent, as if the θεότης or divine nature muſt be then a deſerter of the human nature, as not aſſiſting it in his agonies, calling this, a portentous and impious opinion. But this is only a vain exclamation; for that Chriſt did not ſuffer becauſe he wanted power to repel his enemies, or to deliver himſelf from death, but becauſe he was willing to give up his life an offering for ſin, and to obey his Father's command, to lay down his life for the ſheep, John 10. 18. and ſhed his blood for the redemption of mankind, is evident from this, That he who, by a word ſtruck back his adverſaries to the earth, and by a touch, healed the ear of Malchus, John 18. 6. Luke 22. 51. He that had power to reaſſume his life when he had laid it down, John 10. 18. muſt ſure have power to preſerve his life, if it had pleaſed him ſo to do: Shall we then ſay, Chriſt was a deſerter of himſelf, becauſe he was not pleaſed to do this? Does he not ſay, he could call for twelve legions of Angels to deliver him? Matth. 26. 53. Muſt we then call him a deſerter of himſelf, becauſe he did not do it? Is it not plainly ſaid, he had the Father dwelling in him, John 14. 10. and had the Spirit without meaſure? John 3. 34. Shall we then ſay, the Father and the Spirit deſerted him, becauſe they, after all his cries, permitted him to ſuffer on the croſs? If not, why ſhould we ſay, the divine nature did deſert him, becauſe it permitted him, according to the predictions of the Prophets, and the counſel and decree of the Father, to ſuffer for the ſalvation of mankind, and would not reſcue him from that death on which depended our redemption, ſanctification, and ſalvation, Heb. 9. 13.——10. 9.

Ver. 17. ᵛ Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ὑὸς μου ὁ ἀγαπητὸς ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα· This is my beloved ſon in whom I am well pleaſed.] Here note, (1*ſt*,) That this is introduced with an ἰδοὺ, behold! as being ſpoken in the audience of the Baptiſt, that he might teſtify this of him, that he was the Son of God. Note, (2*dly*,) That this voice was directed to Chriſt himſelf; and therefore, Mark 1. 11. Luke 3. 22. the words run thus: Thou art my beloved ſon, in thee I am well pleaſed; i. e. thou art the perſon ſanctified by this deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon thee, to declare my will to the world, according to the propheey concerning him, Iſa. 42. 1. and whoſe words and doctrine it therefore concerns all men to hear and obey, Matth. 17. 5. as a perſon highly favoured by me, and commiſſioned to teach what he delivers in my name.

CHAP. IV.

1. THen was Jeſus led up of the [a] ſpirit, (with which he was filled, Luke 4. 1. farther) into the wilderneſs, to be tempted of the Devil; (that we by his example might learn how to reſiſt temptation.)

2. And when he had (by a miraculous aſſiſtance) faſted forty days and forty nights, (and was, during that time, inviſibly tempted of the Devil, Mark 1. 13. Luke 4. 2.) he was [b] afterwards an hungred.

3. And when the [c] tempter came unto him, he ſaid, (Gr. and the tempter coming (then viſibly) to him, ſaid,) If thou beeſt (indeed) the Son of God, command that theſe ſtones be made bread, (to ſatisfy thy preſent hunger.)

4. But he anſwered and ſaid, It is written, (Deut. 8. 3. that) Man ſhall not live by bread alone, but but by every word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God; (i. e. by any other thing which he shall appoint for his nourishment.)

5. Then (when his temptation succeeded not,) the Devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,

6. And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, (Psal. 91. 11.) He shall give his angels charge concerning thee, (to keep thee,) and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone, (incur any damage.)

7. Jesus said unto him, It is written again, (Gr. again it is written,) Thou shall not [d] tempt, (i. e. distrust,) the Lord thy God, (as I must do, if after a voice from Heaven, saying to me, Thou art my beloved Son, Mark 1. 11. I should require any farther experiment of that matter.)

8. [e] Again the Devil (being baffled in this second assault,) taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and (there) sheweth him (in a landskip) all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, (in a moment of time, Luke 4. 5.)

9. And (he) saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down, and worship me, (for they are given to me, &c. Luke 4. 6, 7.)

10. Then said Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan; for it is written, (Deut. 6. 13.) Thou shalt [f] worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

11. Then the Devil (having ended all his temptations,) leaveth him (for a season, Luke 4. 13.) and behold angels came and ministred to him (Food.)

12. Now when Jesus heard that John was cast into prison, he departed (from Judea) into Galilee, (to avoid the envy of the Pharisees, John 4. 3. and to continue the preaching interrupted by John's confinement.

13. And leaving Nazareth, (by reason of their infidelity, Luke 4. 29.) he came and dwelt in Capernaum, which is upon the sea-coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthali:

14. That it might be [g] fulfilled, which was spoken by Isaias the Prophet, saying, (Chap. 9. 1, 2.)

15. The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthali, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, (which is called) Galilee of the Gentiles,

16. (Are) the people which sat in darkness, (but afterwards) saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up.

17. From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, (to the people) Repent (ye,) for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; (i. e. from the time of John's imprisonment, he began to preach upon that subject, ver. 23.)

18. And Jesus, walking by the Sea of Galilee, [h] saw two brethren, Simon, (afterwards) called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea (to wash it, Luke 5. 2. for they were fishers.)

19. And he saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you (to become) fishers of men, (by gaining them to the faith, or bringing them within the net of the gospel.)

20. And they straightway left their nets, and followed him.

21. And going on from thence, he saw other two brethren, (viz.) James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother (returned now to, and) in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets, and he called them.

22. And they (also) immediately left the ship, and their father, and followed him.

23. And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, (shortly to be erected,) and healing all manner of sickness (es,) and all manner of disease (s, which were) among the people.

24. And his fame went throughout all Syria; and they brought to him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsie, and he healed them.

25. And there followed him great multitudes of people, from Galilee and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. IV.

Ver. 1. [a] Τοτε ὁ Ιησους ανηχθη εις το πνευμα κατα τ διαβλου. Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the Devil.] By the spirit, i. e. by that holy spirit, with which he was filled, Luke 4. 1. Now doubtless, there must be some very great and good ends, why the holy spirit should thus move our Lord to repair into the wilderness for that end, amongst which, saith Theophylact, this was one, To teach us, that when by baptism we have consecrated ourselves to God's service, we must expect temptations: And, (2dly,) To teach us in our Lord's example, how we may best and most effectually resist them, even by an unshaken faith, 1 Pet. 5. 9. and by the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God, Eph. 6. 17.

Ver.

Ver. 2. [b] Τεσσερακοντα ἡμερας, And when he had faſted forty days and forty nights, he was afterwards an hungred.] Hence we may learn, how vain a thing it is to inſtitute, or pretend to keep a faſt of forty days in imitation of this example of our Lord; for it is certain, that ſo great and ſo long abſtinence is inconſiſtent with the frailty of our natures, and ſo can be no duty; it is alſo certain, that our Saviour felt no hunger all this while; for he was only hungry afterwards, ſaith St. Matthew, and ſo his faſting was miraculous. Moreover, his faſt was not intended to chaſtiſe, or to ſubdue that body which never was irregular, or to prepare him for thoſe ſpiritual duties, which, by the unction of the Holy Ghoſt he was abundantly fitted for; and upon theſe accounts, can give no precedent to our faſts, which ſhould afflict the body, and are intended for the ends afore-mentioned. To conclude hence, our obligation to a more than ordinary temperance for forty days, is to place morality in numbers, and introduce an endleſs heap of ſuperſtitious follies; for by like reaſon, we muſt deem ourſelves obliged to ride upon an aſs, in token of our humility, or to renounce our title to our temporal eſtates, and throw away our money, to be like him, who had not where to lay his head, nor could procure ſixpence without a miracle. Better here is the note of Theophylact, and others, that we are then eſpecially to expect temptations when we are alone, and when we are in ſtreights and exigencies, from which we ſee no ordinary way of deliverance; which was the caſe of Chriſt, he being hungry in the wilderneſs, and fed at laſt only by angels miniſtring to him.

Ver. 3. [c] Καὶ προσελθὼν αὐτῷ ὁ πειράζων, εἶπεν· And the tempter coming to him, ſaid, &c.] From this, and the firſt verſe, where Chriſt is ſaid to be led into the wilderneſs, to be tempted of the Devil; the Socinians raiſe two objections againſt the divinity of Chriſt.

Object. 1. If Chriſt were God, why ſhould he be thus tempted? Was it to ſhew, that God was able to ſuſtain and overcome the temptations of the Devil? Could there be any doubt of this? If it be here ſaid, that he was only tempted as he was man; they ſtill reply, that ſeeing his human nature was perſonally united to the divine, it muſt be ſtill ſuperfluous to ſhew, that even his human nature, thus ſtrengthened and aſſiſted, ſhould be able to reſiſt and baffle the aſſaults of Satan; nor will his doing this by a divine aſſiſtance, afford us any comfort, who can expect no like aſſiſtance, when we do grapple with the tempter.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, that the ancient fathers were not ignorant of this objection, made, as it ſeemeth, by the Ebionites, the elder brethren of the Photinians and Socinians. And therefore (a) Irenæus in anſwer to them, lays this for the foundation, That never any of the ſons of Adam were ever, in the ſcriptures called God or Lord, but he who, præter omnes, qui tunc fuerunt homines, Deus & Dominus & Rex æternus & unigenitus, & Verbum incarnatum prædicatum & a Prophetis & Apoſtolis, adeſt videre omnibus qui vel modicum veritatis attigerint, of all men then in being, was only by the Prophets and Apoſtles declared to be God and Lord, and the eternal King, and the only begotten, and the Word made fleſh, as they who have little inſight into the truth may eaſily perceive: And theſe things, ſaith he, the ſcriptures would not teſtify of him, ſi ſimiliter ut omnes, homo tantum fuiſſet, had he been only a man, as others were, but becauſe he had an excellent generation from God the Father, and another in the womb of the Virgin; the Scriptures teſtify of him both, that he was one without form, and ſubject to ſufferings, one that rid upon the foal of an aſs, had gall and vinegar given him to drink, was deſpiſed of the people, and humbled himſelf to the death; and alſo, that he was the holy Lord, the wonderful, counſellor, the mighty God, Iſa. 9. 6. coming upon the clouds to be judge of all men. And having premiſed theſe things, he anſwers thus to the objection of the Ebionites: That (b) as he was man, that he might be tempted, ſo he was the Word, that he might be glorified; the Word being quieſcent, that he might be tempted, crucified, and die. Which words being preſerved and cited by Theodoret, ſhew, That the latter fathers approved of this ſolution of this difficulty. Among the reaſons aſſigned of our Lord's temptation, this is one, viz. the conſolation of his members conflicting with the adverſary of their ſouls, and that upon theſe two accounts. (1) That he ſuffered being tempted, that he might afford ſuitable help to us when we are tempted, Heb. 2. 17, 18.—4. 15, 16. And, (2.) That we have the ſame Spirit in us which was in him, and who is greater than he that was in the world, 1 John 2. 14.—4. 4. and ſo may combat him with the ſame weapons, and overcome him with the ſame aſſiſtance, by which he in his human nature did it: Now this ground of comfort will be wholly taken taken from us, if Chriſt did only overcome him by virtue of that nature, by which he was ἀπείρασ⊙ κακῶν, uncapable of being vincible by temptation. But if, with Irenaus, we affirm, That the divinity was then quieſcent, and that he overcame him by virtue of the Spirit given to him, we, who have the ſame Unction from the Holy One, may alſo hope to do it by his aid: And ſince even the moſt Orthodox do grant, that the divinity in Chriſt was ſo quieſcent for the ſpace of thirty years, as to afford no ſpecimen of its reſidence in him, why might it not be quieſcent alſo in theſe things, which did particularly relate to his prophetick office here on earth, and to that grand exemplar, in which we ſtand obliged to follow his ſteps. In a word, That our Lord could not be overcome of Satan, was the reſult of the union of the human nature to the divinity; that he repelled all his aſſaults might be, becauſe he was anointed, and filled with the Holy Ghoſt.

(b) Ὥσπερ γὰρ διὰ ἄνθρωπον ἵνα πειρασθῇ, οὕτω καὶ λόγος ἵνα δοξάσθη, ἡσυχάζοντος μὲν λόγου ἐν τῷ πειράζεσθαι, καὶ τραυᾶσθαι, καὶ ἀποθνήσκειν.

Object. 2. But the Socinians do ſtill enquire, how a ſpirit ſo wiſe and ſubtle as the Devil is, ſhould venture to aſſault, and ſhould aſſay to tempt the Great God, eſpecially to ſo vile an action as to fall down and worſhip him, ſeeing it is ſcarce imaginable, he ſhould not know it was impoſſible to ſucceed in this temptation, or that he ſhould attempt a thing he before-hand diſcerned impoſſible to be effected?

Anſw. To this, after a jocular reply, that this argument depends upon the modeſty and other virtues of the Devil, Biſterfield ſaith thus, That the malice of the Devil hath oft prevailed upon him, to attempt things very fooliſh and impoſſible; for what could be more ſo, than for a creature to attempt to be like God, or to annul the truth of the prophecies concerning Chriſt? What could be more pernicious to him than the death of Chriſt for the redemption of mankind, which yet he by all means did attempt, though it was impoſſible he ſhould be held under the power of death? Acts 2. 24, 25. And hence Petavius retorts this argument upon the head of Crellius thus: Whatſoever Satan might conceive of Chriſt, he could not but certainly know from the Scriptures he was to be the redeemer of mankind, and the author of ſalvation to them, that he ſhould bruiſe his head, that he ſhould ſit upon the throne of David, to rule there for ever; and knowing this, he could not hope to prevail in his temptations of Chriſt, unleſs he could believe that he was able to reverſe both the decrees and oath of God: To this the fathers add, (2) That the Devil was ignorant of this myſtery, when he tempted Chriſt. Thus Ignatius ſaith, that the virginity of Mary, (c) καὶ ὁ τοκετὸς αὐτῆς and he that was born of her, and the death of our Lord, were three myſteries concealed from Satan, where, by ὁ τοκετὸς he cannot underſtand our Lord's nativity of the bleſſed Virgin, ſince, in that very ſection, he ſtiles him, Θεὸν ἀνθρωπίνως φανερούμενον, a God appearing after the manner of a man: And (d) Origen obſerves, that cum ab ipſo Diabolo tentaretur, nuſquam confeſſus eſt Dei ſe eſſe filium, when he was tempted of the Devil he never did confeſs himſelf to be the Son of God. And ſince this was ſo great a myſtery, that even angels deſired to look into it, 1 Pet. 1. 12. and learned ſomewhat of it from the Church, Eph. 3. 10. what wonder is it the Devil either ſhould not know, or ſhould doubt of it? All his temptations ſhew he looked upon our Saviour, not as a God, but only as one who might be dear unto him; whence he aſſays to tempt him with the glories of the world. This argument doth therefore prove, not that our Saviour was not truly God, but only that the Devil did not know him ſo to be.

Ver. 7. d Οὐκ ἐκπειράσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου. Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God.] It is here well noted by Dr. Hammond, that to tempt the Lord doth not, in Scripture-language, ſignify, to preſume too much on the divine goodneſs, but rather to diſtruſt his power, truth, or providence, after ſufficient demonſtrations and reaſons given for our encouragement to depend upon them, and conſequently to tempt God, here muſt be, as it relates to Chriſt, to doubt whether he was the Son of God, after the voice from heaven had ſaid unto him, chap. 3. 17. Thou art my beloved Son: So the phraſe ſignifies throughout the Old Teſtament. Thus when the Jews murmur againſt Moſes for the want of water, ſaying, Thou haſt brought us out of Egypt to kill us and our children, and our cattle with thirſt; Moſes replies, Why do you tempt the Lord? Exod. 17. 2, 3. and calls the name of the place Maſſah, i. e. Temptation, becauſe they tempted the Lord, ſaying, (after he had dried up the Red-ſea, and provided Manna for them, and gone before them in the cloud, the ſymbol of his preſence) Is the Lord among us, or not? doubting of his goodneſs to, protection over them, and preſence with them, after ſo many ſignal evidences of theſe things; and to this relate the words, here cited by our Lord from Deut. 6. 16. Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God, i. e. Thou ſhalt not queſtion his preſence with thee, or diſtruſt his providence, as ye tempted him in Maſſah. So again God ſaith, becauſe theſetheſe men which have ſeen my glory (in the cloud) and the miracles which I did in Egypt, and in the wilderneſs, (after all theſe demonſtrations of my preſence with them, and of my power and readineſs to reſcue them from the hands of their enemies) have tempted me now theſe ten times, therefore they ſhall not (perſonally) enter into the land of promiſe, Num. 14. 22. Now thus they tempted him, by not believing God could, and would make good his promiſe of bringing them into that land, but thinking they ſhould die by the ſword of thoſe giants which were in that land, v. 2, 3. and therefore God ſpeaks thus: How long will this people provoke me? How long will it be ere they believe me, after all the ſigns which I have ſhewed among them? v. 2, 3. And to ſuch inſtances of their diſtruſt as theſe, refer thoſe paſſages of the Pſalmiſt: They tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Iſrael, not believing, that his power was ſufficient to do thoſe things which he had promiſed, and ſhewed that he was able to perform, Pſal. 78. 41. for they thus limited and tempted him, becauſe they remembred not his hand, nor the day when he delivered them from the enemy. How he had wrought his ſigns in Egypt, and his wonders in the field of Zoan, v. 42, 43. See alſo v. 18, 19, 20. and this being ſpoken of them when they turned back into Egypt, v. 41. relates to the tempting of God, mentioned Numb. 14. to the temptation mentioned Exod. 17. relate theſe words, Pſal 106. 14, 15. Tho' he had dried up the Red ſea for them, and ſaved them from the hand of their enemies, they ſoon forgat his works, and luſting in the wilderneſs, they tempted God in the deſart. And thoſe in Pſal. 95. 8, 9. Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderneſs, when your fathers tempted me, and proved me, Gam Rahu, tho' they ſaw my works, i. e. How I delivered them at the Red ſea, made bitter waters ſweet, and ſent them bread from heaven. Whence the Apoſtle's inference is this, Heb. 3. 12. Take heed there be not in you an evil heart of unbelief. So Judith, 8. 12. who are you that ἐκπειράσατε τὸν Θεὸν, ye tempt God, by limiting him to ſuch a time as five days, as if he could not help you, if he did it not within that time, v. 15. This alſo is the import of theſe words of Ahaz, Iſa. 7. 12. I will not aſk a ſign, neither will I tempt the Lord; as may be gathered by comparing them with the like words of Gideon, aſking a ſign of the fleece, Let not thy anger be hot againſt me (for being thus ſlow of belief) πειράσω δὲ ἔτι ἅπαξ, let me try, or tempt thee yet once more, i. e. Let me have this farther ſign for confirmation of my weak faith, Judg. 6. 39. This alſo is the conſtant import of this phraſe in the New Teſtament. So Acts 15. 10. Now therefore (after God hath given ſo full a diſcovery of his receiving the uncircumciſed Gentiles, upon their faith, into his grace and favour as the effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt upon them, v. 8.) why tempt you God (by diſtruſting this teſtimony of his favour to them, and deſiring ſtill) to put this yoke (of circumciſion) on their necks? 1 Cor. 10. 9. Neither tempt ye Chriſt the Lord, (by diſtruſting his readineſs to ſupport you under, and give an happy iſſue from your temptations, v. 13.) as ſome of them (i. e. the Jews) tempted him, (by ſaying, God had brought them out of Egypt to die in the wilderneſs, becauſe they wanted bread and water, Numb. 21. 5.) and (therefore) were deſtroyed of ſerpents, (v. 6.) thus to tempt the ſpirit of the Lord, Acts 5. 9. is to queſtion, or diſtruſt his wiſdom, to diſcover what Ananias and Sapphira had concealed.

(c) Ep. ad Magn. § 19.

Ver. 8. † Πάλιν παραλαμβάνει αὐτὸν ὁ διάβολος. Again the Devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and ſhews him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them.] Mr. Clere, in his note on the firſt verſe, ſaith, "What is here relat" ed may more ſafely be conceived to have hap" pened to Chriſt in a viſion or dream, than really;
" it looks, methinks, very odd, ſaith he, that an " evil ſpirit ſhould be permitted to have ſuch a " power over our moſt holy Saviour, as to carry
" him through the air; and then, this proſpect of
" the kingdoms of the whole world, could no more
" be ſhewed from a mountain than from a plain;
" for what can be ſeen from a mountain beſides
" woods, fields, rivers, villages and towns, which " are not uſed in any language to ſignify the king-
" doms of the world, and the glory of them? This
" glory conſiſting rather in their ſplendid attire,
" guards and attendants, and their coſtly edifices."
But this is a vain dream, and a viſion of his own brain, and that which robs us of all the practical improvement of our Lord's temptation; for why ſhould Chriſt be led into the wilderneſs to have this dream or viſion? Did he faſt only in a viſion forty days and forty nights? That ſure was a long dream or viſion: or why is it ſaid, that he afterwards was hungry? Why is it ſaid, the Devil ſaid to him, the Devil ſet him upon a pinnacle, and upon an high mountain? Luke 4. 13. that when the Devil had ended all his temptations, he departed from him for a ſeaſon? Muſt not theſe words unavoidably import, that either the Devil did really thus tempt him, or elſe did frame this viſion in his brain? and looks it not far more odd to give the Devil power over the phanſie of our Lord, to raiſe ſuch imaginations in him, and ſuggeſt ſuch dreams to him, than barely to give him that power over our Lord's body, which neither did, nor could do him any hurt?

2*dly*, As God caused Moses to see the whole land of promise from the top of Nebo, either by strengthning his eyes to see it thence, or else by representing it to him, as it were in a large plan or map, in all the valleys round about him, so might the Devil in the valleys round about that high mountain, upon which Christ stood, make a large draught of the stately edifices, the guards and attendants of Kings, appearing in their splendor, visible to the eyes of Christ, which appearance could not be so well made unto him, or advantageously seen, had he been in a plain.

Ver. 10. [f] Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου προσκυνήσεις, καὶ αὐτῷ μόνῳ λατρεύσεις Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.] From these words compared with other like scriptures, it appears, that Christ is not a creature, because the worship and service due to God alone cannot be duly given to a creature, that being to own him equal in dignity with God; and the sin of idolatry chiefly consisting in giving that worship to a creature which is due only to the God of heaven; and therefore religious adoration and service being here said to be due to God alone, cannot be given duly, or without idolatry, to Christ, provided that he be only a creature. Seeing then God doth require, That all men should worship the Son, even as they worship the Father, John 5. 23. and, when he brought the First-born into the world, said, Let all the angels of God worship him, Heb. 1. 6. and seeing this is the character of Christians, that they serve the Lord Christ, Colos. 3. 24. it is certain that he cannot be a creature only, but must be truly God.

To this the Socinians answer, That God alone is to be worshipped as the first and supreme cause of all things, and the chief cause of our salvation, but yet religious worship and service may be paid to Christ as the intermediate cause of that salvation, which God intended by him to procure, and bring to pass for us. But as there are no footsteps of this distinction in the holy scripture, so there are many things contained in it which seem to contradict it. And it is plain the Devil here doth not require to be thus worshipped as the first and supreme cause of all things, for he frankly owns, that all the power he had over the kingdoms of the earth was given to him, and yet our Lord rejecteth his temptation, not by saying, as the Socinians do, that he was an impudent liar, no such power being given to him, but by opposing to him this command, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. Again, all the angels are ministring spirits sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation, Heb. 1. 14. and the Papists, who worship them with religious adoration, do it doubtless, as they conceive it is to the glory of that God whose ministers they are, and notwithstanding must we not condemn that worship in them? Moses and Aaron were intermediate causes of the preservation and happiness of the Jews, whom God by them brought out of Egypt; they, by their supplications and intercessions preserved them many times from present death; and might they therefore pay religious worship to them, provided it was directed to the glory of God, whose ministers they were? Might they do this to Joshua, who carried salvation in his very name? The Apostles are stiled Σωτῆρες Θεοῦ, Workers together with God for our salvation, 1 Cor. 3. 9. their doctrine is called the savour of life unto life. 2 Cor. 2. 16. and they are said to save those that hear them, 1 Tim. 4. 16. Must we therefore pay religious adoration to them as the Papists do? Vain therefore is this subterfuge, by which the Socinians endeavour to justify their religious adoration of that Jesus, whom they maintain to be a creature only, and whose divinity they deny.

Ver. 14. [g] Ἵνα πληρωθῇ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ Ἡσαΐου τοῦ προφήτου That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Isaias, saying, The land of Zabulon and Nephthali.] I see here no reason for saying, with some learned men, that this whole passage of Isaiah is by the Evangelist applied to Christ's preaching in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthali, only by way of accommodation, and not in any mystical sense intended by the Holy Ghost; for it is very easy to discern, that upon occasion of our Lord's leaving Nazareth, a town in the Lower Galilee, in the tribe of Zabulon, and going to Capernaum, in the Higher Galilee, in the tribe of Nephthali, which was called Galilee of the Gentiles, as being partly inhabited, saith (e) Strabo, by Egyptians, Arabians and Phœnicians, he only takes the names of these places from Isa. 9. 1. having no farther consideration of the place, than to shew they are the people of whom the Prophet said, the people that sat in darkness hath seen a great light; let this now be understood in the prophetick stile, representing things surely to be accomplished in their season, as done already, of which we have an instance, v. 6. in these words, for unto us a Child is born, to us a Son is given; and then the prediction will run thus: the people sitting in darkness shall see great light, and to those who sit in the region and shadow of death shall the light arise, as we know it did, it being in Chorazin and Bethsaida, situated in Lower Galilee, that Christ did his mighty works mentioned Matth. 11.

21. and it being Capernaum that was exalted up to Heaven by his dwelling there, and preaching in their ſynagogues, v. 23.

Ver. 18, 21. [h] Εἶδε δύο ἀδελφοὺς, Σίμωνα καὶ Ἀνδρέαν. He ſaw two brethren, Simon, ſirnamed Peter, and Andrew, his brother, caſting their nets into the ſea, v. 21. Καὶ προβὰς ἐκεῖθεν, εἶδεν ἄλλους δύο ἀδελφοὺς, Ἰάκωβον, &c. Going thence, he ſaw two other brethren, James the ſon of Zebedee, and John his brother, with Zebedee their father, mending their nets, and he calleth them.] So alſo we read Mark 1. from v. 16 to v. 21. The hiſtory of Simon and Andrew's coming, mentioned John 1. 41, 42, 43. is plainly different from that of St. Matthew and St. Mark, and ſo cannot be ſaid to contradict what is here ſaid. For, (1.) here Chriſt ſees them, and calls them both together, there they hear Chriſt, and follow him home, and Andrew, after finding Peter, leads him to Chriſt, from v. 37. to 42. (2.) Here it is noted that Simon was already ſirnamed Peter, there it is ſaid thou ſhalt be called Peter, v. 43. there they abide with Chriſt only one night, v. 40. and that uncalled; here they are called, and follow him as his Apoſtles, being always with him, John 15. 27. As for the hiſtory, Luke 5. from v. 1. to 11th, I conceive it to be the ſame with this in St. Matthew and St. Mark, becauſe it happened at the ſame place, at the lake of Genneſareth, Luke 5. 1. i. e. at the ſea of Galilee, Matth. 4. 18. The ſame perſons being preſent, and following him, having left all to do it, v. 10, 11. Matth. 4. 20, 22. But then I place the ſtory thus: He ſaw theſe fiſhermen, two of them, viz. Simon and Andrew, waſhing their nets, Luke 5. 2. i. e. caſting them into the ſea to waſh them, Matth. 4. 18. and the other two mending their nets where they were broken, v. 21. and then he ſpake to them both to follow him. And preſently the multitude reſorting to him to hear the word of God, Luke 5. 1. he enters into the ſhip of Simon, and when Simon, at his requeſt, thruſt it a little from the land, he ſat down and taught them; then ſpeaks he to Peter to let down his net into the ſea for that draught which filled both the ſhips of Simon, and the ſons of Zebedee, and ſtruck them all with great amazement, in ſo much that Peter was afraid to follow him, or to be with him; but Chriſt bidding him not to fear, they drew their ſhips to land, and leaving both ſhips and fiſhes with Zebedee, and others that were with them, Mark 1. 20. forſaking them all they follow him, Luke 5. 11. It is no objection againſt what is ſaid, that in St. Luke we find no mention of St. Andrew, it being certain from St. Matthew and St. Mark, that Andrew was then with Peter, though Simon only be named by St. Luke, becauſe Chriſt ſpake only to him: Thus is it eaſy to remove thoſe manifold diſagreements, which ſome mention, betwixt the hiſtory of this matter in St. Luke, and in St. Matthew and in St. Mark. For, according to the ſeries of the ſtory thus placed, St. Luke being to ſupply what was not told by St. Matthew and St. Mark, begins where they ended, and St. Mark having only ſaid in the general, that Chriſt came thither preaching the Goſpel of the kingdom, St. Luke ſhews how he went on with the work: And this puts an end to Mr. Whiſton's four firſt differences. His fifth is grounded on an evident miſtake; for, in St. Luke, he doth not aſſure them, that from henceforth they ſhould catch men, but ſaid this only to Simon, aſtoniſhed at the miracle, and deſiring Chriſt to depart from him, repeating to him in particular, what he had ſaid more generally to all, that he might remove his fears. The laſt is indeed no difference, it being the ſame thing to leave all that were then with them, and all they had there, and follow him, as St. Luke ſays they did; and to leave nets, ſhip, father, and hired ſervants, to follow him, as in St. Matthew and St. Mark they did. See Additions, N°. 5.

CHAP. V.

1. AND [a] ſeeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain, and when he was ſet (down, as the Jewiſh doctors did when they taught, ſee Luke 4. 16, 20.) his diſciples came unto him.

2. And he opened his mouth, and taught them, ſaying,

3. Bleſſed are [b] the poor in ſpirit, (i. e. the humble and lowly minded) for theirs is the kingdom of heaven; (they are fitted to enter into it here, and to enjoy it hereafter.)

4. Bleſſed are [c] they that mourn, (for their ſins, with that godly ſorrow which works repentance not repented of, 2 Cor. 7. 10.) for they ſhall be comforted; (with the aſſurance of the pardon of their ſins, and with the hope of future happineſs.)

5. Bleſſed are the [d] meek (i. e. the men of a ſweet, quiet, affable and courteous diſpoſition) for they ſhall inherit the earth; (enjoying what is needful for them, with the greateſt quiet and tranquillity, and with moſt comfort, ſatisfaction, and contentedneſs of mind.)

6. Bleſſed are they who do [e] hunger and thirſt after after righteousness, (i. e. are as concerned to be righteous before God, walking in all the commandments of the Lord blameless, as is the hungry person to have meat, or the thirsty to have drink) for they shall be filled; (i. e. be satisfied with the enjoyment of it here, and the completion and reward of it hereafter.)

7. Blessed are [f] the merciful, (who out of pity to others under all their infirmities, wants, miseries, indispositions of soul or body, are ready, not only to forgive and bear with their infirmities, but to their power to relieve, instruct, support, comfort, and reclaim them from their evil ways) for they shall obtain mercy (at the great day of their accounts.)

8. Blessed are [g] the pure in heart, (they whose hearts are cleansed from evil thoughts, evil concupiscence, and evil passions) for they shall see (and enjoy) God (here and hereafter.)

9. Blessed are [h] the peace-makers, (who, being themselves of a peaceable temper, endeavour to promote peace among others) for they shall be called (i. e. shall be, see Note on Chap. 1. 23. and shall be owned as) the children of God, (and as such rewarded.)

10. Blessed are they which are [i] persecuted for righteousness sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

11. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsly for my sake.

12. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven; (who do thus patiently suffer for my name's sake upon earth, your case being like that of the holy Prophets, who are now in Abraham's bosom, and sat down with him in the kingdom of heaven, Luke 13. 28.) for so persecuted they (of this nation) the Prophets which were before you.

13. Ye are (designed by me to be, as) [k] the salt of the earth; (to preserve mens manners from corruption, and give a good savour to their actions) but if the salt have lost its savour, wherewith shall it be salted? (if you in example and conversation should become unsavoury, there would be no recovering of you, and so it would be with you, as) it is (with unsavoury salt, which is) thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and troden under foot of men; (and so you must expect to be cast out by me into outer darkness.)

14. [l] Ye are (appointed to be) the light of the world, (and as) a city that is set on a hill cannot be hid; (so neither in this eminent station in which you are placed, can the light of your doctrine or manners be concealed.)

15. Neither (should you endeavour to conceal them, for) do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel? (surely no) but on a candlestick, and (then) it giveth light to all that are in the house.

16. (Accordingly) [m] Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and (on the account of them may have cause to) glorify your Father, which is in heaven.

17. (And tho' I preach a more spiritual doctrine, than is contained in the letter even of the moral law, yet) [n] Think not that I am come to destroy (i. e. to dissolve or loose you from the obligation of) the law and the Prophets; (for) I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil (them, to give you the full sense and the spiritual import of the moral law, and also to fulfil the types and the predictions of the law, and the Prophets.)

18. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass (away) one jot, or one tittle, shall in no wise pass from the law, (or the Prophets) till all be fulfilled (which was both typified in the law, and foretold by the Prophets.)

19. Whosoever therefore [o] shall break one of these least (Gr. the least of these) commandments, and shall teach men so (to do,) he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; (i. e. he shall not be admitted as a true member of my kingdom) but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great (i. e. he shall be an eminent person) in the kingdom of heaven.

20. (And let it not be thought a sufficient excuse that your Scribes and Pharisees thus teach;) For [p] I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, (who by their traditions exempt themselves and others, in many cases, from the observation of this law, Mark 7. 8, 9.) ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven.

21. [q] Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, (Gr. to them of old) Thou shalt not kill, (Exod. 20. 13.) and whosoever shall kill, shall be in danger of the judgment, (Gen. 9. 6. Numb. 35. 31. and are taught by your Scribes, that by this precept you are not obnoxious to guilt for any thing but murder.)

22. But I say unto you, That [r] whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause, shall be in danger of the judgment; (or anger of God) and whosoever shall say unto his brother, Racha, (i. e. thou art an empty worthless fellow, fit to be whipped, or punished, as an idle drone,) shall be in danger of the council; (i. e. of being punished by them, for vilifying and reviling one of the seed of Abraham) but whosoever (from the like rancour of ſpirit againſt his brother) ſhall ſay (to him) thou Fool, (i. e. ſhall cenſure him as a profane perſon, or an hell-hound) ſhall be in danger of hell-fire; (the portion he aſſigneth to his brother.)

23. [s] Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, (to make atonement for thy ſin) and there remembreſt that thy brother hath ought againſt thee; (i. e. hath received from thee any injury of this, or any other kind;)

24. Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way, (and) firſt (uſe thy endeavour to) be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift; (it being not acceptable for the atonement of thy ſins committed againſt God, till thou haſt thus endeavoured to make ſatisfaction for thy faults committed againſt thy brother.)

25. (And if there be any perſon to whom thou art indebted, and who upon that account may implead thee before the judge) [t] agree with thine adverſary quickly, whilſt thou art in the way (to the judge) with him, leſt at any time the adverſary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, (appointed for that purpoſe) and (ſo) thou be caſt into priſon.

26. Verily I ſay unto thee (if thou permit things to go ſo far) thou ſhalt by no means come out thence till thou haſt paid the uttermoſt farthing; (and ſo will it alſo be, if thou neglecteſt to be reconciled to God, and ſo he caſt thee into the infernal priſon.)

27. [v] Ye have heard that it was ſaid by (Gr. to) them of old time, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery; (Exod. 20. 14.)

28. But (Know this is not all which is forbidden by that precept, for) I ſay unto you, Whoſoever looketh on a woman to luſt after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

29. And (if then) thy right eye offend thee, (by thus luſting) pluck it out, and caſt it from thee; (i. e. ſuppreſs all ſuch impure luſtings) for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members ſhould periſh, and not that thy whole body ſhould be caſt into hell; (i. e. it is better for thee to want theſe delights at preſent, than by enjoying them, to plunge both ſoul and body into hell.)

30. And if thy right hand offend thee, (by miniſtring to this, or any other ſin) cut it off, and caſt it from thee; for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members ſhould periſh, and not that thy whole body ſhould be caſt into hell.

31. [w] It hath been ſaid, Whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement, (and this being permitted for the hardneſs of your hearts, you think may lawfully be done for any cauſe, Matth 19. 3.)

32. But I ſay unto you, That (according to the primitive inſtitution of marriage) whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, ſaving for the cauſe of fornication, cauſeth her to commit adultery; (by giving her this occaſion to go and be married to another) and whoſoever ſhall marry her that is (thus) divorced, committeth adultery (with her.)

33. Again, [x] ye have heard that it hath been ſaid by (Gr. to) them of old time, Thou ſhalt not forſwear thyſelf, but ſhalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths; (Exod. 20. 7. Lev. 19. 12. and this you think is all that is criminal in oaths, (viz.) to ſwear falſly by the name of the great Jehovah.)

34. But I ſay unto you, Swear not at all; (in your common converſation) [y] neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; (and ſo by ſwearing by it, thou ſweareſt by him who ſits upon it, Matth. 23. 22.)

35. Neither by the earth, for it is his footſtool, (and he that ſweareth by it, ſweareth alſo by him whoſe footſtool it is) neither by Jeruſalem, for it is the city of the great King, (and he that ſweareth by it, ſweareth alſo by him that dwelleth in it.)

36. Neither ſhalt thou ſwear [z] by thy head, becauſe thou canſt not make one hair white or black; (for the preſervation of that life, of which the head is the fountain, is not in thy power, but depends on him by whom we live; and therefore to ſwear by it, is in effect to ſwear by him who hath the power of life and death in his hands.)

37. But let your communication be [aa] yea, yea, nay, nay, (an ordinary, or at the moſt a redoubled affirmation or negation) for whatſoever is more than theſe cometh of evil; (i. e. from ſome evil principle, as want of reverence of the great name of God, or from that evil one who is the enemy to God, and to his honour.)

38. [bb] Ye have heard that it hath been ſaid, (that he who maimeth any body ſhall reſtore) an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; (Exod. 21. 24. If the maimed perſon ſhall require the judge to execute this puniſhment on the offender, and will not admit a pecuniary compenſation.)

39. But I ſay unto you, That you reſiſt not evil, (i. e. oppoſe not violence to violence) but whoſoever ſhall ſmite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other alſo; (i. e. bear rather that diſgrace redoubled patiently, than give him ſtroke for ſtroke;)

40. And if any man will ſue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak alſo; (i. e. ſuffer one ſmall and reparable wrong after another, rather than contend by law with him.)

41. And

41. And whoſoever ſhall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain; (rather than maintain thy liberty by forcibly oppoſing his compulſion.)

42. (And if men do not uſe force, but only aſk, or deſire to borrow of thee,) [cc] give to him that aſketh of thee, (what thou haſt to ſpare,) and from him that would borrow of thee, turn not thou away.

43. [dd] Ye have heard that it hath been ſaid, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour, and (this, by the Scribes and Phariſees, is interpreted as a permiſſion, to) hate thine enemy.

44. [ee] But I ſay unto you, Love your enemies, bleſs them that curſe you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that deſpitefully uſe you, and perſecute you, (i. e. be kindly affected towards your enemies, and ready to do good to them for evil, and the good you cannot do yourſelves, pray that God would do for them.)

45. That (ſo) you may (appear to) be the children of your Father which is in heaven, (by your likeneſs to him) for he maketh his ſun to riſe on the evil and the good, and ſendeth rain on the juſt, and on the unjuſt.

46. For if you (reſtrain your) love (to) them (only) which love you, what reward have you? (i. e. what reaſon to expect any reward from God for ſo doing? for) do not even the Publicans (whom you look upon as men deſerted by God, do) the ſame?

47. And if ye ſalute (or kindly treat) your brethren only, what do you more than others? do not even the Publicans ſo (alſo?)

48. Be ye therefore perfect, (in your charity and mercy to others,) even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect; (and then your eminent good works will eminently be rewarded by him.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. V.

Ver. 1. [a] ΙΔΩΝ ὃ τὸς ὄχλους ἀνέβη εἰς τὸ ὄρος, καὶ καθισαντος αὐτῦ· And ſeeing the multitude, he went up into a mountain, and ſitting down, his diſciples came to him.] Here note (1.) That Chriſt ſeeing the multitude, taught them; for tho' his diſciples may be eſpecially concerned in ſome few verſes of this fifth chapter, yet it is certain from theſe words in the cloſe of this ſermon, (the multitudes were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine, for he taught them as one that had authority;) that the multitude not only heard, but were taught, the things contained in this ſermon, according to thoſe words of Chryſoſtom, μὴ τοῖς μαθηταῖς μόνον αὐτὸν νόμιζε διαλέγεσθαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ δι' ἐκείνων ἅπασιν.

Moreover it deſerveth to be noted, that the whole multitude of them who attended on his doctrine, and thought well of him, are called his diſciples, and not the twelve Apoſtles only; ſo doth St. Luke inform us, by ſaying, He called to him his diſciples, and out of them he choſe the twelve, Luke 6. 13. and v. 17. that the whole multitude of his diſciples were then with him. So John 6. 66. From that time many of his diſciples went back, and followed no more after him; and v. 67. he ſaid to the twelve, Will ye alſo go away? What therefore was here ſpoken to his diſciples, might alſo be ſpoken to the multitude. (2.) This ſermon was ſpoken upon the mount, which he made choice of, ſaith Dr. Hammond, that as the law had been delivered from mount Sinai, ſo might the preaching of the Goſpel begin from a mountain: Say others, that he might be the better heard by his auditors, inſtructing us by his example ſo to perform this ſervice, as may be moſt conducing to the advantage of the hearers.

The queſtion here raiſed by interpreters, whether this ſermon be the ſame with that which we find mentioned Luke the ſixth, or only a like ſermon ſpoken at another time and place, is of ſome concern for the right underſtanding of the words; for if the ſermon be the ſame in both, and it were ſpoken only once by Chriſt, tho' it be ſet down twice by the Evangeliſts, the words of one Evangeliſt muſt be interpreted in a ſenſe agreeable to the other, or elſe they cannot both be true. Whereas, if our Lord ſpake the words recorded by St. Luke at any other time and place, than the diſcourſe related by St. Matthew was delivered at, we may give different interpretations to their words; and that this was ſo ſeems highly probable.

1ſt, Becauſe St. Luke omits ſo many things recorded by St. Matthew as parts of this diſcourſe, viz. all the fifth chapter, from v. 13. to 39. the whole ſixth chapter, and chap. ſeventh, from ver. 6. to 16. that is, he omits the greateſt part of this ſermon, and therefore it is probable he did not intend to ſet down the ſame ſermon; ſince otherwiſe it muſt be granted, that he hath performed what he intended very imperfectly; and alſo added many woes, of which St. Matthew makes no mention.

2dly, As for the time, St. Matthew doth ſufficiently inform us, that his ſermon was delivered before the healing of the leper, for as Chriſt came down from the mount, the leper came to him, Chap. 8.

8. 2. whereas St. Luke, tho' he promiſeth to diſcourſe in order of what Chriſt did, gives us the ſtory of the leper, Chap. 5. 12. and the hiſtory of Chriſt's ſermon after, Chap. 6. 17. Again, St. Luke reckons Matthew among thoſe whom Chriſt had choſen to be of the twelve, and ver. 17. he adds, that Chriſt went down with them, and preached the following ſermon, whereas the ſermon mentioned by St. Matthew was preached long before his calling to be one of Chriſt's diſciples; for after Chriſt was come down from the mount, had healed the leper and the Centurion's ſervant, and had done many other things, He ſaw a man ſitting at the receipt of cuſtom, named Matthew, and ſaid unto him, Follow me, Chap. 9. 9. Whence it appears, that he was called long after the preaching of this ſermon on the mount, and yet before the preaching of the ſermon mentioned by St. Luke. Laſtly, St. Matthew's ſermon was preached on the mount by our Lord, calling his diſciples up to him; whereas St. Luke informs us, v. 17. that our Lord came down with his diſciples from a mount, and ſtood in the plain, and from thence preached what he recorded; wherefore the difference of theſe ſermons being ſo great, both as to matter, and to circumſtance of time and place, it ſeems moſt reaſonable to conceive, that they were ſeverally ſpoken, and therefore may admit of divers ſenſes: Yet ſeeing ſoon after both theſe ſermons we find him entering into Capernaum, and healing the Centurion's ſervant, Matth. 8. 5, Luke 7. 1. it may be probably conjectured, that he ſpake the ſermon in St. Matthew, whilſt he was ſitting on the mount, to his diſciples, and that in St. Luke, when he afterwards came down into the plain with them, Luke 6. 17. in the audience of all the people, Luke 7. 1.

Ver. 3. [b] Μακάριοι οἱ πτωχοὶ τῷ πνεύματι· Bleſſed are the poor in ſpirit.] Here note,

1*ſt*, That by the poor in ſpirit we are not to underſtand, as many R. commentators do, ſuch perſons as having riches, and plentiful poſſeſſions, do voluntarily quit them, and chuſe a ſtate of poverty, as moſt conducing to the free exerciſe of religion, as did ſome Eremites, and Monks of old, and as the Mendicants or begging Friars of that church pretend now to do; for it is aſſuredly the duty of all men, who would obtain this bliſs, to be poor in ſpirit; whereas it cannot be the duty of all Chriſtians to turn Monks and Friars Mendicant, to this end, for then all other R. Catholicks muſt be excluded from the kingdom of heaven. Nor,

2*dly*, Doth our Lord here pronounce this bleſſing on the poor properly ſo called, that is, on ſuch as have no riches and poſſeſſions in this world, as being the moſt likely perſons to embrace that Goſpel which calls for the forſaking all that they have, which they who have but little will be moſt eaſily perſuaded to do, and ſo will be moſt ready to enter into the kingdom of God. (1.) Becauſe our Lord expreſly limits this beatitude not to the poor in purſe, or in externals, but to the poor in ſpirit. (2.) Becauſe Chriſt actually pronounces that the poor he ſpeaks of are bleſſed, and that theirs is the kingdom of heaven; which is not true of all, or of the moſt part of thoſe who, as to temporals, are poor; for, by experience, we find they are often diſcontented with their ſtate, are apt to ſteal, lie, flatter, and uſe ſordid arts, to get a penny, and have but little ſenſe of piety, but little knowledge of, and leſs concernment for religion. And, (3.) This interpretation ſeems to exclude the rich, who do not actually quit their temporal enjoyments, from any intereſt in the kingdom of heaven; whereas St. Paul only requires them to be rich in good works, that they may lay hold of eternal life, 1 Tim. 6. 18, 19. And therefore,

3*dly*, The moſt received and beſt interpretation of this phraſe, is this, that by the poor in ſpirit our Saviour underſtands the man of a true, humble, lowly ſpirit; this being the uſual expreſſion by which the ſcriptures and the Jewiſh writers ſtill repreſent the humble man, that he is Shephal Ruach, i. e. poor, low, or contrite in his ſpirit. So Prov. 16. 19. Better is it to be Shephal Ruach, of an humble ſpirit with the meek, than to divide the ſpoil with the proud; and Chap. 29. 23. the pride of man ſhall humble him, but Shephal Ruach, he that is of an humble ſpirit obtaineth glory. So Iſa. 66. 2. To whom will I look but to the poor in ſpirit; which Chap. 57. 15. is Shephal Ruach, to the man of an humble ſpirit. Accordingly, in their (a) Pirk Avoth they have theſe inſtructions, Be thou Shephal Ruach, humble in ſpirit towards all men, he that is Shephal Ruach is worthy of honour, and the Holy Ghoſt will reſt upon him. And (b) great are the humble in ſpirit in the ſight of God: And they who are thus poor in ſpirit are bleſſed, becauſe their humility rendering them teachable, ſubmiſſive, contented, and obedient, prepares them to enter into Chriſt's kingdom, and makes them living members of his body; and ſeeing they who are thus holy ſhall be alſo happy, they muſt be alſo meet to enter into the kingdom of glory hereafter.

Ver. 4. [c] Μακάριοι οἱ πενθοῦντες, Bleſſed are they that mourn.] Here note,

1*ſt*, That by the mourners here, I do not think it

(a) Chap. 4. § 4. 10. c. 5. 19.

(b) Buxt. Floril. p. 117.

it reasonable to understand men whose condition in this world is sad and lamentable, as being destitute of all those outward things which render this life comfortable, and perhaps also under great afflictions; which some conceive to be the import of these words, because a like beatitude in St. Luke runs thus, Blessed are ye that weep now, for ye shall laugh. For (1.) if this mourning did only import a condition sad and lamentable as to outward circumstances, then must the laughter in St. Luke opposed to it, be only a promise of outward temporal felicity, which as it is no Gospel promise, so is it far from rendering any person truly blessed. (2.) Because either we must then pronounce all blessed who are in such a lamentable state, which is far from being true, there being many who fall into it by their own sin and folly, and many who being in it, are nothing better by it, as to the inward frame and disposition of their spirits; or else we must restrain this to them, who do thus suffer for the name of Christ, and for the sake of righteousness; and then it will not be the import of the second, but of the eighth beatitude. Nor,

2*dly*, Do I think, as some of the fathers did, that the mourners here are those who mourn for the sins of others, for the iniquities committed by the professors of Christianity, and especially for the sins committed in the place and nation where they live; for tho' when men thus weep out of a fixed hatred to sin, from a true zeal for God, and a sincere affection for the souls of men, this must be highly acceptable in the sight of God, and therefore matter of just comfort to them also; yet the word mourn is general, and therefore seems not fit to be restrained unto such mourners in particular. The mourner therefore here intended is the person filled with that godly sorrow which works repentance not repented of, or not reversed by our return again to the like sins, 2 Cor. 7. 10. this person must be blessed in the pardon of his sins, for blessed is he, whose iniquity is forgiven, and whose sin is covered, Rom. 4. 6, 7, 8. He also will be comforted with the assured hope of future happiness; this true repentance being stiled Repentance unto life, Acts 11. 18. Repentance unto salvation, 2 Cor. 7. 10.

Ver. 5. [d] Μακάριοι οἱ πραεῖς, Blessed are the meek;] i. e. the men of such a happy frame of spirit, as renders them averse from wrath, even when they are provoked to it, by the injuries they have received from others, and from retaliation, or recompensing evil for evil; but on the contrary, are inclined rather to remit something of their right, and overcome evil with good; and by the sweetness, friendliness, and affability of their conversation, to reconcile and win their brother to a good-liking, and kind affection to them. The blessing promised to these meek persons is this, that they shall inherit the earth; which words being taken from Psal. 37. 11. cannot admit of that strained exposition of some of the ancients, who by the earth understand heaven, as being eminently the land of the living; for it is evident to a demonstration, that David did understand this of the present earth, or of the land of Canaan; for the tenor of this whole thirty-seventh Psalm is designed to shew, that wicked men shall by God's judgments suddenly perish, whilst righteous men lived easily and quietly in the land of Canaan. So ver. 9. Evil-doers shall be cut off, but they that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth; for yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be, but the meek shall inherit the earth. They that are blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and they that are cursed of him shall be rooted out. So ver. 34. Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee, ἵνα κληρονομήσῃς γῆν, to inherit the earth: when the wicked are destroyed, thou shalt see it. It is therefore well observed by Chrysostom upon the place, that because the Jews had been oft taught this lesson in the Old Testament, our Saviour addresses himself to them in the language they had been accustomed to: This son of David repeateth, and confirmeth to them the promise made by David. And this I judge to be the most natural and truest exposition of these words.

But then it must be noted, (2*dly*,) that our Saviour doth not here promise to advance the meek unto an affluence or great abundance, of things temporal, to make him great in power, or rich and wealthy in the world. For a man's life, i. e. the true comfort and satisfaction of it, consists not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth, Luke 12. 15. and so we have no reason to expect those things which are not needful to the comfort and satisfaction of our lives. Experience shews that this is not the ordinary portion of the meek, and therefore doth sufficiently instruct us, that this is not the blessing promised, by that God who cannot lie, or fail of the performance of his promise; and therefore positively this phrase seems rather to import, that meekness is the best way to the most sure enjoyment of these things, as far as they are needful and convenient; and, (2*dly*,) to enjoy them with the greatest quiet and tranquillity, without that strife, debate, anxiety and trouble, which imbitter the enjoyment of these things to others; and, (3*dly*,) with the truest comfort, satisfaction, and contentedness of mind.

Ver.

Ver. 6. [e] Μακάριοι οἱ πεινῶντες καὶ διψῶντες τὴν δικαιοσύνην, &c. Bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs.] The righteouſneſs here mentioned, is by ſome thought to be the righteouſneſs of faith, by which we being juſtified or freed from the guilt of ſin, have peace with God, and this undoubtedly is a fit matter of our ſpiritual thirſt and hunger; but yet I think this cannot be the proper import of the words; (1.) Becauſe the word δικαιοσύνη, righteouſneſs, bears no ſuch ſenſe in the Goſpel; but only in the Epiſtles of St. Paul; (2.) Becauſe the Jews, to whom Chriſt ſpeaks, had no idea of this righteouſneſs, no apprehenſion that their Meſſiah was to die, and much leſs that they ſhould be juſtified by his death; and therefore had Chriſt ſpoken of this righteouſneſs, none of them could have underſtood his meaning, as we may learn from his diſcourſe on this ſubject, John 6. for the Jews could not underſtand it; wherefore the righteouſneſs, here intended, is that inherent righteouſneſs, which conſiſts in a ſincere endeavour to practiſe all thoſe duties, which God requires at our hands, and to eſchew that evil which he hath forbidden; in which ſenſe Zacharias and Elizabeth are ſaid to be both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments of the Lord, blameleſs, Luke 1. 6. and it is repreſented as our duty, to ſerve God in righteouſneſs and holineſs, before him, all the days of our life, v. 74, 75. and here it is ſaid, that except our righteouſneſs exceed the righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees, we can in no caſe enter into the kingdom of God, ver. 20. To hunger and thirſt after this righteouſneſs, is to be as ſenſible of the want of it, as fervently deſirous to have it, as induſtrious to obtain it, as reſtleſs and inceſſant till we do enjoy it, as men uſually are when they are pinched with hunger and thirſt. And they who ſtand thus affected to it, ſhall be ſatisfied with it, i. e. they ſhall have all the means and aids required to make them thus righteous here, and ſhall have the reward of righteouſneſs hereafter, and ſo ſhall be bleſſed; for ſeeing it is God himſelf, who by his word and ſpirit, raiſes in them this diſpoſition towards righteouſneſs; ſince he inviteth every hungry ſoul to eat of this ſpiritual food, and ſaith to every thirſty ſoul, Come drink of theſe waters of life; ſeeing this righteouſneſs renders them ſo acceptable, and well-pleaſing in his ſight; and laſtly, ſeeing he hath promiſed them this ſatisfaction, they all, on theſe accounts, may reſt aſſured, that they ſhall obtain this food of the ſoul. See note on John 6. 27.

Ver. 7. [f] Μακάριοι οἱ ἐλεήμονες, Bleſſed are the merciful;] i. e. They, who from an affecting ſenſe of a ſympathy with others, and a charitable affection and good will towards them, are ready to relieve them as they are able, under all their wants, to pity them in their infirmities, to comfort and ſupport them under their calamities, and ready to forgive, and to ſhew mercy to them when they have offended, and to pray to their heavenly Father to give them thoſe ſupports and conſolations we are not able to afford them; and who eſpecially have this compaſſion for their ſouls, by endeavouring to inſtruct the ignorant, and to reclaim the wicked from their evil ways; ſuch merciful perſons ſhall be bleſſed, both in the inward comforts and ſatisfaction they ſhall find ariſing from theſe diſpoſitions, which render them ſo like to their heavenly Father, and alſo from that mercy they ſhall obtain from him at the great day of their accounts.

Ver. 8. [g] Μακάριοι οἱ καθαροὶ τῇ καρδίᾳ, Bleſſed are the pure in heart.] They whoſe hearts are pure from thoſe evil thoughts and reaſonings, thoſe evil deſires, luſtings, and affections, thoſe evil paſſions and perturbations, and from thoſe evil intentions, devices and machinations which defile the ſoul, are bleſſed; for they are fitted to enjoy communion with God here, 1 John 3. 3. and happineſs with him hereafter; Heb. 12. 14.

Ver. 9. [h] Μακάριοι οἱ εἰρηνοποιοὶ, Bleſſed are the peace-makers;] i. e. (1.) the men of a peaceable mind, for, as he that is inclined to lying, is ſaid to make a lie, Rev. 22. 15. and he that is inclined to ſin, ποιῶν ἁμαρτίαν, to do, or make ſin, 1 John 3. 8. ſo he that is diſpoſed to follow after the things which make for peace, may be ſtiled a peace-maker; (2.) They who endeavour in their ſtations, and as occaſions do preſent themſelves, to preſerve peace, love, and friendſhip, and to prevent contentions, quarrelings, and diſcords among Chriſtian brethren. And (3.) they who labour to promote the peace and quiet of the publick, both in church and ſtate, are bleſſed, becauſe they ſhall be called, i. e. they are, and ſhall be owned by God, as his ſons, by reaſon of their likeneſs to the God of peace, 1 Cor. 14. 33. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Philip. 4. 9. 2 Theſſ. 3. 16. See note on Chap. 1. 23. and being ſons ſhall be heirs of God, joint-heirs with Chriſt, Rom. 8. 17. ſuch as ſhall reign with him in glory; they ſhall be ſons of the reſurrection, Luke 20. 36. and ſhall receive υἱοθεσίαν, the bleſſing conſequent on this ſonſhip, or adoption, viz. The redemption of their bodies from corruption, Rom. 8. 23.

Ver. 10. [i] Μακάριοι οἱ δεδιωγμένοι ἕνεκεν δικαιοσύνης, Bleſſed are they which are perſecuted for the ſake of righteouſneſs,] or for Chriſt's ſake, &c.

&c. i. e. (1.) for perſevering patiently and ſtedfaſtly in the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith, or (2.) for the performance of that duty, which they owe to God the Father, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and to our Chriſtian brother for their ſakes; or (3.) who are perſecuted, becauſe they do not own that as an article of faith, or any part of Chriſtian duty, which God hath not declared to be ſo; for ſeeing this cannot be done without making profeſſion of a lie, or ſaying we believe what we can ſee no reaſon to believe, to ſuffer for this cauſe is evidently to ſuffer becauſe we will not play the hypocrites, or give the lie to our own conſciences; and therefore this, in St. Peter's language, is to ſuffer for conſcience towards God, and ſo to ſuffer wrongfully or unjuſtly. Yea, ſeeing this cannot be done, but we muſt own another teacher, lawgiver, and author of our faith, beſides the Lord Chriſt, our ſufferings for refuſing to do this, are truly ſufferings for the ſake of Chriſt; and ſuch as make us happy ſufferers, ſince Chriſt hath promiſed them the bleſſings of this heavenly kingdom, and hath aſſured them that great is their reward in heaven; and therefore, as their ſtate on earth, under theſe perſecutions, doth render them conformed to their head, and like to the holy Prophets and Apoſtles; ſo ſhall they hereafter be like to them in glory, Rom. 8. 17. 2 Tim. 2. 11.

Ver. 13. [k] Ὑμεῖς ἐστε τὸ ἅλας τῆς γῆς, Ye are the ſalt of the earth.] Sal ſapit omnia, Salt is given to make things ſavoury, according to that queſtion of Job, Chap. 6. 6. Can that which is unſavoury be eaten without ſalt? And alſo to ſave them from putrefaction: ſee note on Mark 9. 49. So that the import of this metaphor is this; ye are appointed by that pure and holy doctrine which you are to preach, and by the ſavour of your good converſation, to purge the world from that corruption in which it lies, and repreſent them to God, as a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour, holy and acceptable to God; but if you yourſelves ſhould loſe the ſavour of your good converſation, and become putrified members in my body, you would be wholly uſeleſs to theſe good ends, and therefore can expect nothing but to be rejected by me, and caſt off, as unſavoury ſalt is caſt unto the dunghil.

Ver. 14. [l] Ὑμεῖς ἐστε τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου, Ye are the light of the world.] The effect of light is to make things manifeſt, Eph. 5. 13. and to direct us in the way in which we are to walk. So that the import of this metaphor ſeems to be this; I have appointed you to manifeſt to the world my doctrine, which will diſcover to them what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God, and ſo direct their feet into the way that leadeth to eternal life, and will enable them to walk as children of the light; and if you do not hide this light from them, but cauſe it to ſhine forth both in your doctrine and Chriſtian converſation, the light of it is ſo clear and radiant, that it cannot be hid from them.

Ver. 16. [m] Οὕτω λαμψάτω τὸ φῶς ὑμῶν· So (therefore) let (this) your light ſhine before men, that they may (from your converſation as well as from your doctrine) ſee your good works, and (then they will ſee cauſe to) glorify your father which is in heaven.] Hence note,

1*ſt*, That though Chriſt's twelve Apoſtles are chiefly concerned in theſe metaphors, yet are they in ſome meaſure applicable to all Chriſtians; for it is the duty of all Chriſtians to ſhine as lights in the world, Philip. 2. 15. And Chriſt having ſaid, He that forſaketh not all he hath, cannot be my diſciple; preſently ſubjoins, Salt is good, but if the ſalt hath loſt its ſavour, wherewith ſhall it be ſalted? Luke 14. 33, 34. Note,

2*dly*, That the good works, here mentioned, muſt be ſuch as, by the light of nature, ſeem good and honourable in the ſight of men, becauſe they muſt give occaſion even to Heathens to think well of Chriſtianity: Theſe works may therefore be performed to be ſeen of men, provided we deſire this not from oſtentation, but for God's glory, and their edification; that they diſcerning the holineſs, juſtice and goodneſs of his precepts, and the excellent effects they have on thoſe who do embrace them, may thereby be convinced, that they are derived from a God juſt, holy, and full of kindneſs and good-will towards men.

Ver. 17. [n] Μὴ νομίσητε ὅτι ἦλθον καταλῦσαι τὸν νόμον, ἢ τοὺς προφήτας· Think not that I am come to deſtroy (Gr. diſſolve) the law or the prophets.] Our Lord hath taught us, that all the law and the Prophets are comprehended in theſe two precepts, Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, &c. and Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf, Matth. 22. 40. St. Paul, that he who loves his neighbour as himſelf, νόμον πεπλήρωκε, hath fulfilled the law, Rom. 13. 8. And that the whole law, πεπλήρωται is fulfilled, Gal. 5. 14. or is perfected, James 2. 8. in this, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf; it is not therefore to be thought that Chriſt came to diſſolve the moral law, or any rules of morality, delivered by the Prophets, but he came rather that the righteouſneſs of the law, πληρωθῇ, might be fulfilled by us, who walk not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit, Rom. 8. 4. And that this is the law chiefly intended here, may be concluded. (1.) Becauſe Chriſt only undertakes the true interpretation of the precepts which reſpect the moral law; in theſe alone can he be rationally conceived to require our righteouſneſs ſhould exceed that of the Scribes and Phariſees, not in the literal obſervance of the ritual precepts, in which they were exactly ſcrupulous, whilſt they neglected judgment, mercy, and the love of God. And of them only could he ſay, That he who brake the leaſt of them, and taught men ſo to do, ſhould be the leaſt in his kingdom, v. 19, 20. Since otherwiſe the Apoſtle Paul muſt have been chief in that number. (2.) As for the rituals of the law and Prophets, our Lord declares, the law and the Prophets were till John, Luke 16. 16. and ſays the time was coming, when neither in Samaria, nor in Jeruſalem, ſhould they worſhip the Father, but ſhould worſhip him every where in a more ſpiritual manner, John 4. 22, 23, 24. Yea, he foretels the diſſolution of that temple, and Jewiſh polity, on which their ritual and judicial precepts did depend, Chap. 24. St. Paul informs us, that the law was only given till the promiſed Seed ſhould come, Gal. 3. 19. and that he being come, we were no longer under the pedagogy of the law. That Chriſtians were dead to the law through the body of Chriſt, Rom. 7. 4, 6. that they were looſed from the law, that being dead, under which they were held, v. 6. that it was evacuated, 2 Cor. 3. 11. that they were redeemed from it by Chriſt, Gal. 4. 5. and that they ought no more to be ſubject to that yoke of bondage, or return to thoſe beggarly elements, v. 9. and Chap. 5. 1. that Chriſt had broken down this partition-wall, and evacuated that law of commandments, Eph. 2. 14, 15. that he had blotted out that hand-writing of ordinances, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his croſs, Coloſ. 2. 14. that it was only to continue to the time of reformation, Heb. 9. 10. that the prieſthood being changed, there was a neceſſity of the change of the law, Chap. 7. 12. and that there was a diſannulling of the commandment going before, becauſe of the weakneſs and unprofitableneſs of it, v. 18. Which things ſeem inconſiſtent with the doctrine that Chriſt came not to diſſolve that ceremonial law, from which he freed all Chriſtians, and made them dead to it, by his body, evacuating this hand-writing of ordinances, and taking it out of the way, by nailing it to his croſs. Nor ſeems it here ſufficient to ſay, This law was not aboliſhed by Chriſt, but vaniſhed by the maturity of the time appointed for the continuance of it; ſeeing it therefore only vaniſhed becauſe Chriſt came to evacuate it by his death and croſs; and what he came to take away, he came alſo to diſſolve. But, (3*dly*,) Theſe rites may be conſidered as they were typical of things future, and were a ſhadow of good things to come by Chriſt, Col. 2. 17. Heb. 10. 1. The Prophets alſo may be looked upon as foretelling his days, and ſpeaking of the things he was to do and ſuffer, and of his future glory, and the glad tidings of the Goſpel, Acts 3. 24. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11, 12. of the converſion of the Jews at the cloſe of the world, the fall of Antichriſt, the coming in of the fulneſs of the Gentiles, and the final judgment; and, in this ſenſe, Chriſt came not to diſſolve the law and the Prophets, but to fulfil them, by exhibiting the antitype and ſubſtance, of which theſe rituals were the types and ſhadows; and fulfilling theſe prophecies, and taking care the truth of theſe things ſhould not fail; nor ſhould the law and the Prophets ceaſe to have their force, till theſe things were accompliſhed; and ſo the phraſe ἕως πάντα γένηται occurs, importing the performance of what was typified by the law, and foretold by the Prophets. So Luke 21. 32. This generation ſhall not paſs away, ἕως ἂν πάντα γένηται, till all things foretold by me be done, Matth. 24. 34. Mark 13. 30. And, (4*thly*,) Many of theſe ritual precepts had a ſpiritual ſenſe; as the circumciſion of the fleſh denoted the ſpiritual circumciſion of the heart, the reſt of the ſabbath, a reſt remaining for the people of God, &c. on which account the Apoſtle declares, not only that the law was holy, juſt, and good, but that it was alſo ſpiritual, Rom. 7. 12, 14. And in this ſenſe Chriſt came not to diſſolve the law, but to fulfil, eſtabliſh and perfect it, by changing him that was a Jew outwardly, to one inwardly; and the circumciſion of the fleſh in the letter, to the circumciſion of the heart in the ſpirit, Rom. 2. 29. and by circumciſing us, not with the circumciſion made with hands, but with the circumciſion of Chriſt, Col. 2. 11. that we might be the true circumciſion, who ſerve God in the ſpirit, Phil. 3. 3. And, (5*thly*,) By one iota, or tittle of the law, I underſtand one precept of it, according to that ſaying of the Jews, It were better one letter of the law ſhould be razed out, i. e. one precept of it ſhould be violated, than that the name of God ſhould be openly blaſphemed. And as for thoſe words, till heaven and earth paſs away, they muſt be underſtood only of the moral law, or elſe muſt bear the ſenſe which St. Luke gives of them, Chap. 16. 17. Sooner may heaven and earth paſs away, than God fail of accompliſhing the things typified by the law, or foretold by the Prophets. Moreover, Some of theſe types relating not only to ſpiritual, but to heavenly things; the reſt of the ſabbath being being typical of the rest remaining to the people of God, Heb. 3. and 4. The tabernacle being a shadow of the heavenly tabernacle made without hand, and the law being the shadow of future good things, Heb. 10. 1. And the Prophets foretelling those things which were not to be completely fulfilled till the end of the world, or the day of judgment, our Saviour might well say, Heaven and earth shall pass away, but one jot or tittle of the law shall not pass away, till all things be fulfilled; some of the things typified by the law, and foretold by the Prophets, being then only to be fulfilled, when heaven and earth were to pass away.

Ver. 19. ὁ Ὅστις ἂν λύσῃ, Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven:] Ἐλάχιστος κληθήσεται, he shall be called least, i. e. he shall be unworthy to be reckoned one of the members of my kingdom. So, I am the least of the Apostles, is, I am unworthy to be called an Apostle, 1 Cor. 15. 9. Note also, that Christ is speaking not of the precepts of his new law, but of the precepts of the moral law, of which he had discoursed in the two preceding verses, as is apparent from the illative particle οὖν, therefore. Moreover, it seems harsh, either to refer this to the beatitudes which ended ver. 12. or to the following precepts, of which Christ had yet spoken nothing. And, lastly, It is probable that Christ may here reflect on those Scribes and Pharisees, who by their traditions exempted themselves, and taught others not to observe some of those moral precepts, and might hint, that how highly soever they were valued by themselves, or others, for their skill in the law, such teachers of it should be of no account in his kingdom.

Ver. 20. ρ Λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν· For I say unto you, except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees;] i. e. Except (1.) ye observe all the precepts of the moral law, not making any of them void by your traditions, not leaving undone the more weighty matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith, as they do, Matth. 23. 23. not thinking to atone for the neglect of some of them, by your observance of the rest. See Note on James 2. 10. (2.) Unless you do observe this law, not only according to the outward man and in the letter, but also in the spiritual sense, and so as to cleanse your hearts from those inward dispositions, which are in God's sight violations of it, and defile the man, you will not be fitted to enter into my kingdom: That in both these things the legal righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees was deficient, is clear, (1.) From our Saviour's care to teach them, it was not sufficient to observe what was said to them of old, according to the letter only, but that they were to regard the higher and spiritual sense of it, not only not to kill, but not to be angry without cause, &c. (2.) That adultery might be committed in the heart as well as in the outward action, ver. 28. and that what cometh out of the heart defileth a man: Which doctrine the Pharisees were so unacquainted with, that they were offended at it, Matth. 15. 12. And Josephus, who was well acquainted with their doctrine, declares Polybius mistaken, when he saith, Antiochus Epiphanes perished, because he would have robbed Diana's temple of its treasure; for, saith he, (c) Τὰ γὰρ μηκέτι ποιῆσαι τὸ ἔργον βλαδὸς ἀνὴρ οὐδὲ τιμωρίας ἄξιον, He deserved no punishment for what he only would have done, but did not. And Kimchi, on these words of David, Ps. 66. 18. If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me; comments thus, He will not impute it to me for sin; for God does not look upon an evil thought as sin, unless it be conceived against God or religion.

Ver. 21. ϙ Ἠκούσατε ὅτι ἐρρέθη τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, Ye have heard, it hath been said by (to) them of old, Thou shalt not kill; ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, but I say to you, whosoever is angry with his brother, &c.] That τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, is here to be rendered in the Dative case, may be concluded, (1.) From the words, I say unto you, where ὑμῖν is undoubtedly the Dative case. (2.) Because the word ἐρρέθη elsewhere, is always joined to this case, so Rom. 9. 12. ἐρρέθη αὐτῇ, it was said to her; and, ver. 26. ἐρρέθη αὐτοῖς, it was said to them. Gal. 3. 16. The promises τῷ Ἀβραὰμ ἐρρέθησαν, were spoken to Abraham. So Rev. 9. 4. 11. And where mention is made of a thing spoken by another, the phrase is still τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑπό, or τὸ ῥηθὲν διά. (3.) Because the words thus cited by our Lord, are words spoken to them of old, as, Thou shalt not commit adultery, ver. 27. Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths, ver. 23. And here, Thou shalt not kill, Exod. 20. 13. and, Whosoever killeth, shall be obnoxious to the judgment, Gen. 9. 6. Num. 35. 31. You shall take no satisfaction for the life of a man, ἐνόχου ὄντος ἀναιρεθῆναι, worthy to be cut off by the hand of judgment, he shall die. Of the question whether Christ here adds to the law of Moses, or rather declares those things belong to the true scope and the intention of it, which the Scribes and Pharisees never thought, or at least taught not their scholars so to be, see the Appendix to this Chapter. I incline to this laſt opinion, and therefore give this ſenſe to the words: You have heard it ſaid by Moſes to them of old, Thou ſhalt not kill; and underſtand not, that by this precept you are obnoxious to guilt for any thing but murder: But I ſay to you, that, by the genuine import of it, all cauſeleſs anger againſt our brother, all contemptuous expreſſions and treatment of him, all raſh judgment of him as a profane and wicked perſon, are forbidden, as being either diſpoſitions to murder, or to neglect the welfare of our brother's life and ſoul: And therefore ſay,

Ver. 22. [r]Ὅτι πᾶς ὁ ὀργιζόμενος τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ εἰκῇ, That whoſoever is angry with his brother without a cauſe, ſhall be obnoxious to the judgment.] See Additions No. 6. For explication of theſe words, note, (1.) That they ſeem not rightly to interpret theſe words, who refer them to the judgment of the three Sanhedrims of the Jews: (1.) Becauſe the Sanhedrim is only mentioned in the ſecond gradation: Nor, (2.) did it belong to the lower court of three men to judge of capital cauſes; and ſo thoſe words, the murderer ſhall be obnoxious to the judgment, ver. 21. cannot belong to them, and therefore the words here repeated cannot belong to them: Nor, (3.) can hell-fire be properly applied to the judgment of the higheſt Sanhedrim. Let it be therefore noted, (2.) That the Jews held that many murderers were not to be puniſhed by the judgment of the Sanhedrim, but only by the judgment of the hand of God; and that the word Rekah, which ſignifies a vain, empty fellow, was uſed as a word of ſcorn and contempt: Now the vilifying a Jew was a thing puniſhable by the Sanhedrim: The word Fool, both in the ſcripture and the Jewiſh phraſe, ſignifies a profane and wicked fellow, or, as we ſay, an hell-hound; for, the wicked ſhall be turned into hell: So in thoſe words, Pſal. 14. 1. The fool hath ſaid in his heart, there is no God. This then may be the import of theſe words, He that is ſubject to unjuſt and cauſeleſs anger, ſhall be obnoxious to the anger and judgment of God; he that publickly reviles his brother ſhall be obnoxious to the publick cenſure of the council; and he that repreſents and cenſures him as a child of hell, ſhall be obnoxious to hell-fire: According to that ſaying of the Jews, He that calls another baſtard, let him be puniſhed with forty ſtripes; but he that calls him fool, let him deſcend with him into his life, i. e. into his miſery. Note, (3.) That theſe words, Vain and Fooliſh, when they are uſed by men aſſiſted by the Spirit of God, or ſpeaking by virtue of their office, out of a ſpirit of charity, and an ardent deſire to make men ſenſible of their folly, do not render them obnoxious to this guilt: Not St. James, when he calls the Soliſidian, vain man, Chap. 2. 20. not St. Paul, when he ſaith, O fooliſh Galatians! Gal. 3. 1. and much leſs Chriſt, whe he ſtiles the Phariſees, fools, and blind, Matth. 23. 17. and when he ſaith to his diſciples, Oh fools, and ſlow of heart, Luke 24. 25. but only then when they proceed from raſh and cauſeleſs anger, rancour of ſpirit, and ill-will towards them. Note, (4thly,) That God, in forbidding murder, forbiddeth alſo thoſe things which tend and diſpoſe us to it; all raſh anger, hatred, rancour of ſpirit, malice, all that contempt of others which may make us not to value their lives, and ſo not fear much the diſpatching them out of the way; all that reproachful language which begets ſuch ſtrifes, as too often end in blood. Ye fight and kill, James 4. 2. That in forbidding the outward act, he forbids all inward workings of the heart towards that act, all deſires, machinations and contrivances, all purpoſes or reſolutions ſo to do: Out of the heart come evil thoughts, murders, Matth. 15. 19. And that by forbidding us to kill, he commands us to do what we are able to preſerve our brother's life. See Note on Luke 6. 9. And, laſtly, that by forbidding us to kill the body, he much more doth forbid us to kill the ſoul, or ſuffer that to periſh, as did the Scribes and Phariſees; ſuffering the ſinner and the Publican to periſh, by their refuſal to converſe with them, though it were to ſave that which was loſt, or to call ſinners to repentance. Note, (5thly,) From thoſe words, He that is angry with his brother without a cauſe, that ſome anger may be juſt and lawful, not as it is defined to be ὄρεξις ἀντιλυπήσεως, a deſire of revenge, or doing evil to another, purely becauſe he hath done ſo to me; we being forbidden to avenge ourſelves, Rom. 12. 19. or even to ſay, we will do to others as they have dealt with us, Prov. 24. 29. But, as it is an inward commotion and diſpleaſure of the mind, ariſing from the apprehenſion of ſome evil done to me, or others for whom I am concerned, with a deſire to remove the evil; and in this ſenſe anger cannot be always ſinful:

1ſt, Becauſe ſome anger hath been found, even in that Jeſus who did no ſin, 1 Pet. 2. 22. as when the cauſe of God and piety were much concerned; for, he looked upon the Phariſees with anger, being grieved for the hardneſs of their hearts, Mark 3. 5.

2dly, Becauſe anger is a paſſion implanted in us by the God of nature; if therefore it were wholly evil in its exerciſe, that God who is the author of it, muſt be the author of our ſin, whereas the juſt avenger of it can never be the author of ſin.

3dly, Becauſe we are only bid to be ſlow to anger, James 1. 19. and not to be haſty in our ſpirits rits to exert this passion, Prov. 14. 29. whereas that which is always evil, we ought not only to be slow to do, but always careful to avoid.

Ver. 23. [s] Ἐὰν οὖν προσφέρῃς τὸ δῶρόν σου ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον· If therefore thou bringest thy gift unto the altar, &c.] Here note,

1*st*, That it was customary with the Jews, who lived at some distance from Jerusalem, to reserve their oblations till the next feast; at which they were obliged to attend; and then to offer them; so that they might easily comply with this precept.

2*dly*, The Scribes and Pharisees held, That the gifts and sacrifices brought to the Temple; were sufficient to expiate for all offences, which were not to be punished by the judge, except those which required restitution to be made first, and that without amendment of life; and therefore Christ here teacheth, in opposition to them, that no sacrifice, or other worship, could be acceptable to God, without justice and charity, and a mind reconciled to our brother; and that they did in vain attempt to propitiate an offended God, till they had made satisfaction for the injuries done to their brother. And that therefore, when they had injured him by causeless anger, reproachful language, or undue and uncharitable censures of his state, or any other way, they should endeavour to be reconciled to him before they sought to render God propitious to themselves; at least by doing all things on their part necessary to give him satisfaction, and obtain his friendship; so that if they prevail not, the fault shall be in him, and not in them. Note,

3*dly*, That the duties of justice and charity are more acceptable to God than sacrifices, or any other part of outward worship; these being only of positive institution, (whilst the others are duties required by the law of nature) and so to be left undone, that we may do the other.

Ver. 25. [t] Ἴσθι εὐνοῶν τῷ ἀντιδίκῳ σου ταχύ, Agree with thine adversary quickly, &c.] Episcopius here saith, These words cannot be properly understood, because, rash anger, reproachful speeches, and calling a man fool, could not be punished with imprisonment; but it is evident, that our Saviour is not now speaking of these things; but having told us what we ought to do to gain our brother's favour, when we had given him just cause of offence; he here counsels us what to do when we lie at his mercy for our debts due to him, viz. to do all we can amicably to compound the matter, lest being brought before the magistrates, we should be put in prison. Now these magistrates were to be in all their gates, Deut. 16. 18. that is, in all their cities; (if the city were small, it had only the consistory of three judges; if large, that of twenty three; and both these are stiled ἄρχοντες, Luke 12. 58.) and from them the creditor might appeal to the higher Sanhedrim, here stiled the judge, by way of eminency; and these consistories had their Schoterim, Officials, Apparitors, or executors of their sentence, called here ὑπηρέτῃ, and Luke 12. 58. πράκτορες, who carried him to prison who was sentenced thither, or inflicted the punishment to which the consistory adjudged him. Here then, ἐκ ὑποστάσεως, is insinuated, how much more it concerns us in time to repent of our offences against God, and to endeavour to be reconciled to him, lest we be cast into the infernal prison, according to that good advice of the son of Syrah, Before judgment examine thyself, and in the day of visitation thou shalt find mercy, humble thyself before thou beest sick, and in the time of sins shew repentance, and defer not until death to be justified, Eccluſ. 18. 20, 21, 22.

Ver. 27. [v] Ἠκούσατε ὅτι ἐρρέθη τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, Οὐ μοιχεύσεις, Ye have heard that it hath been said to them of old, Ye shall not commit adultery.] And this the Rabbins interpret strictly, calling it the 35th Precept, forbidding to lie with another man's wife; on which account our Lord proceeds to say, It is also a prohibition of all incitements to adultery, called by St. Peter, The adulterous eye, 2 Pet. 2. 14. and by the poet, adultera mens, the adultery of the heart, in lusting after any woman; only this seems not to be meant of every sudden desire arising in us before we are aware, and suppressed and contradicted as soon as it is observed; but of morose desires which we consent to, and entertain with pleasure, without retracting them, and more especially of such desires which are followed with contrivance how to accomplish what we thus desire, and which we are only restrained from the accomplishment of, by want of opportunity; in the first case, lust hath conceived and brought forth sin, a sin against this precept, as it forbids all incentives to adultery; in the second it is finished in the will, and hath brought forth death; and doubtless will be so esteemed by that God, who, as he estimates our good actions rather from our good minds, purposes and intentions, than from the act itself, which oft-times it is not in our power to perform; so will he estimate our evil actions, more from the full consent of the will, which makes them morally evil, than from that fact which only renders them more evil in the same kind, as adding to them scandal, and injury to others. And therefore the words, adultery in his heart, are not here used to diminish the adultery, or ſignify it leſs truly ſuch, but to ſhew the true interpretation of the precept. And though many things are produced from the Talmudiſts, to ſhew ſome of their Rabbins condemned this looking on a woman as a very vile thing; yet nothing is produced from them to ſhew they held it forbidden by this precept. See Examen Millii. See Additions, N°. 7.

Ver. 31, 32. [w] Ἐρρέθη δὲ ὅτι, Ὃς ἂν ἀπολύσῃ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, It hath been ſaid, Whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, &c.] Here Chriſt ſaith not, as before, It hath been ſaid to them of old, but only, it hath been ſaid; to note, that this was not a precept given by Moſes to divorce their wives, as the Phariſees ſuggeſted, Chap. 19. 7. but only a permiſſion in ſome caſes ſo to do, as our Lord there anſwers, ver. 8. Of what farther relates to this and the following Verſe, ſee Note on Chap. 19. 7, 9. See Examen Millii.

Ver. 33. [x] Ἠκούσατε ὅτι ἐρρέθη τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, Οὐκ ἐπιορκήσεις Ye have heard, it hath been ſaid to them of old, Thou ſhalt not forſwear thyſelf.] For explication of which words let it be noted,

1*ſt*, That Chriſt, by this prohibition, muſt not be ſuppoſed to forbid all ſwearing, as a thing abſolutely evil; for, in thoſe writings which were indited by the Holy Ghoſt, St. Paul doth often ſeal the truth of what he delivered with an Oath, ſaying, God is my witneſs, that, without ceaſing, I make mention of you in my prayers, Rom. 1. 9. In the Epiſtle to the Galatians, he gives a large account of his converſion and apoſtleſhip, which concludes thus, Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not, Gal. 1. 20. Having given the Corinthians a catalogue of his great ſufferings for the Goſpel's ſake, becauſe it might be thought incredible that any ſober perſon would, or that the ſtouteſt perſon could endure ſo many, and ſo dreadful ſufferings, he concludes thus, The God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt knoweth that I lie not, 2 Cor. 11. 31. To confirm his tender love to the ſame church, he ſaith, I call God to record upon my ſoul, that to ſpare you, I came not yet to Corinth, 2 Cor. 1. 23. To manifeſt his paſſionate affection to the Philippians, God, ſaith he, is my record how greatly I long after you, Philip. 1. 8. Now theſe examples prove, that bleſſed Paul, and that good Spirit, by which he was directed thus to write, did not conceive all ſwearing to be forbidden by our Saviour's words, but that it was ſtill lawful, when the matter was of great importance to the welfare of the ſouls of men, and could not be confirmed any other way, to ſeal it with a voluntary oath: Now undoubtedly St. Paul well underſtood the mind of Chriſt in this his prohibition; and therefore had he conceived it ſo univerſal, as ſome contend it is, he would not have encouraged others, by his example, to tranſgreſs it.

It is confeſſed, the words, both in the prohibition of our Saviour, and St. James, are univerſal; Swear not at all; ſwear not by heaven, nor by earth, or any other oath: But it is alſo certain, that Chriſt and his Apoſtles do often uſe ſuch general expreſſions, which yet muſt neceſſarily admit of limitations. Thus, 1 Cor. 6. 7. we meet with an expreſſion, which in the Greek is fully parallel to this viz. ὅλως ἥττημα it is altogether faulty in you, that you go to law one with another; why do you not rather ſuffer yourſelves to be defrauded? which notwithſtanding, no man, except ſome few Socinians, thinks it unlawful to go to law, for preſervation of his own family, or to ſecure the goods of Orphans, Widows, or the Poor, committed to his truſt, when theſe things cannot be ſecured or preſerved by any other means. Chriſt hath expreſly ſaid, Give to every man that aſketh of thee, and of him that taketh away thy goods, aſk them not again, Luke 6. 30. and yet as God himſelf gives not to them that aſk amiſs, that they may make proviſion for their luſts, James 4. 3. ſo neither muſt the Chriſtian give to ſuch an aſker; and it is evidently repugnant to the law of nature and ſelf-preſervation, tamely to bear the loſs of all that is neceſſary to our ſubſiſtence here, without endeavouring to preſerve or to recover it, when taken from us; as therefore theſe, and many other paſſages of ſcripture, delivered in univerſal terms, muſt be reſtrained by other ſcriptures, that ſo they may not ſeem to enjoin abſurdities, or thwart the law of nature, or the voice of reaſon; ſo muſt the words we now diſcourſe of, be reſtrained and limited by others which we meet with in the word of God. Eſpecially if (2*dly*) we conſider, that Chriſt himſelf, after this prohibition given, ſeems to ſwear; for Mark 8. 12. we read thus, Verily I ſay unto you, εἰ δοθήσεται τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ σημεῖον, if a ſign ſhall be given to this generation, which is an Hebrew form of ſwearing, and imports thus much, Let God puniſh me, or let me not live, if a ſign be given to this generation. So, Deut. 1. 35. The Lord was wroth, and ſwore, ſaying, εἰ ὄψεται, ne vivam, if any of theſe men ſhall ſee the good land of promiſe, Pſal. 95. 11. So, I ſware in my wrath, εἰ εἰσελεύσονται, mentiar, if they ſhall enter into my reſt. So 1 Sam. 3. 14. I have ſworn touching the houſe of Eli, εἰ ἐξιλασθήσεται, if the iniquity of the houſe of Eli ſhall be purged with ſacrifice for ever. So Pſal. 89. 35. Once have I ſworn by my holineſs, εἰ ψεύσομαι, if I fail David: In all which paſſages, Interpreters agree, God ſweareth by his life, or truth. And, Pſal. 132. 2, 3. Lord, remember David, how he ſware, εἰ εἰσελεύσομαι, if I go into my my tabernacle, εἰ ἀναβήσομαι, if I climb up into my bed, εἰ δώσω, if I give sleep to mine eyes, till I find out a temple for the Lord; i. e. let me not prosper, if I do not this; wherefore the words of Christ, being exactly parallel to all these, which are expressly stiled Oaths, may very reasonably be deemed a form of swearing.

(2.) These words must not be so interpreted, as to forbid all promissory oaths, in which we do engage, by calling God to witness, we will be faithful to our promises, or will do this or that hereafter. For, (1.) were it unlawful to use a promissory oath, it must be so, because it is unlawful to engage, as we expect God's favour, for the performance of things future; this being the whole difference betwixt an assertion and a promise confirmed upon oath, that an assertory oath hath always for its object something past or present; whereas a promissory oath hath for its object something future, which oath some therefore think unlawful, because we may forget our promise, or lie under such evil circumstances as render us unable to perform it: but notwithstanding these considerations, that it is not simply unlawful to take a promissory oath, is evident, (1.) From the examples of such oaths recorded and approved in Holy Scripture. For the Lord made his people enter into an oath to serve him, and to keep his covenant, Deut. 29. 12, 14. King Asa made all Judah swear that they would seek the Lord with all their hearts, 2 Chron. 15. 14. and this was so acceptable to God, that he was found of them, and gave them rest round about, v. 15. Ezra engaged the Priests and Levites, and all the house of Israel, to swear that they would put away all their strange wives and children, Ezra 10. 5. And Nehemiah called the Priests, and took an oath of them to do according to their promise, Neh. 5. 12. Moreover he engaged all the nobles and people, to enter into a curse, and into an oath, to walk in God's law; and to observe and do all his commandments, chap. 10. 29. and having done these things, he saith, Remember me, O Lord, for this, and wipe not out the good deeds that I have done for the house of my God. And lastly, I have sworn, saith David, and I will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments, Psal. 119. 106. All these were promissory oaths made by direction, or with the approbation of the God of Israel, to strengthen the good resolutions of a backsliding people, and to increase their obligations to perform their duty; and can it rationally be conceived that the Holy Jesus should forbid what wholly was designed, and really tended to strengthen and confirm us in the performance of our holy purposes? Can he be thought to do it, who hath laid upon all Christians the baptismal vow, and the ὅρκος στρατιωτικὸς, military oath, to fight under his banner, and hath obliged us to renew this vow at every sacrament? (2*dly*,) If Christ did by these words forbid all promissory oaths, no Prince may thus confirm a league with other States and Princes; whereas both Abraham and Isaac made a promissory oath unto Abimelech, that they would still retain a perfect friendship with him, Gen. 21. 24.——26. 31. Again, according to this exposition of the words, no magistrate, or officer of justice, may exact a promissory oath of any Christian subject, nor could a Christian soldier, or trustee, give any promissory oaths of his fidelity. Now had the Christian law untied, and freed all its professors from these bonds of government, this must have much reflected on the wisdom of its constitutions, and given occasion to the infidels to say, that it exposed all government, by this exemption of the subject from those obligations to obedience which lay before upon them, to the greatest hazards; it being formerly the duty both of Jew and Heathen, to keep the King's commandments by virtue of the oath of God. (3*dly*,) That which directly tends to the advancement of society, cannot rationally be supposed to be forbidden by our Saviour, because the current of the Christian precepts do most peculiarly tend to the promotion of the publick good; but promissory oaths, as well as assertory, directly tend to the advancement of society, and the promotion of the publick good, they being instrumental, both to put an end to those contentions, which tend to the destruction of society, and to the confirmation of mens minds touching the truth of what another promises; and therefore to encourage them in making those contracts, which are of absolute necessity to human commerce: And all this the Apostle seemeth to insinuate, by saying, that an oath is for confirmation, and for the ending of all strife among men, Heb. 6. 16. for that the Apostle in that passage speaks chiefly of a promissory oath, is evident from the occasion of it, viz. the promise of a signal blessing God had made to Abraham, and had confirmed with an oath. And, (4*thly*) if all promissory oaths be utterly unlawful, by virtue of Christ's prohibition, then must it be unlawful to adjure a Christian to perform any action we require of him; for to adjure by God, is to engage him under the curse of God, or under the penalty of forfeiting God's favour, and incurring his displeasure, to do what we require of him. Now that, in matters of great concern, the Christian may be thus adjured by his superior, is evident from the example of St. Paul, who writes writes unto his Theſſalonians thus, ὁρκίζω ὑμᾶς τὸν Κύριον, I adjure you, by the Lord, that this epiſtle be read to all the holy brethren, 1 Theſſ. 5. 27. The words I render thus, becauſe I find this is the conſtant import of this phraſe in the Old Teſtament. Thus Gen. 24. 37. ὥρκισέ με ὁ Κύριός μου, My maſter made me ſwear, ſaying, Thou ſhalt not take a wife to my ſon of the daughters of Canaan, and v. 41. when thou comeſt to my kindred, if they will not give thee a wife, ἔσῃ ἄθῳος ἀπὸ τοῦ ὅρκου μου, thou ſhalt be clear from my oath. Thus, in the caſe of jealouſy, ὁρκιεῖ ἱερεὺς the Prieſt ſhall charge the woman with an oath of curſing, and ſhall ſay unto her, The Lord make thee a curſe among thy people, &c. Numb. 5. 19, 21. Thus ὥρκισεν Ἰησοῦς, Joſhua adjured the people, ſaying, Curſed be the man before the Lord, that riſeth up, and buildeth the city Jericho, Joſh. 6. 26. And Saul adjured the people, ſaying, Curſed be the man that eateth any food till the evening; that is ὥρκισε τὸν λαὸν, he charged the people with an oath, 1 Sam. 14. 24. and v. 28. the people feared the oath. Thus alſo, Solomon ſpeaks to Shimei, οὐκὶ ὥρκισά σε ἐν τῷ Κυρίῳ, did I not make thee ſwear by the Lord, that thou wouldſt not go out of Jeruſalem, wherefore then haſt thou not kept, τὸν ὅρκον Κυρίου, the oath of the Lord? 1 Kings 2. 42, 43. If therefore Chriſtians may be bound by others under a curſe or oath, to the performance of ſomething future, which they had not promiſed; much more may they be thus obliged by the magiſtrate to promiſe, and confirm that promiſe by an oath.

And 3*dly*, Hence it clearly follows, that our Lord doth not here condemn judicial oaths, impoſed by magiſtrates, and by ſuperiors in matters teſtimonial; for it is obſervable in judicial oaths, the cuſtom which obtained among the Jews was this, not for the perſon who came under the obligation of an oath, to pronounce the words of ſwearing with his own mouth, but an oath was exacted of him by the magiſtrate, and he became obliged to anſwer upon oath, by hearing φωνὴν ὁρκισμοῦ, the voice of adjuration, or ſwearing from his mouth; ſo the law ſaith expreſly, Lev. 5. 1. If a man hear the voice of ſwearing, and is a witneſs, whether he hath ſeen or known any thing, if he do not utter it, then he ſhall bear his iniquity. To which cuſtom, that paſſage of the Proverbs evidently refers, Whoſo is partner with a thief, hateth his own ſoul. He heareth אָלָה the adjuration of the magiſtrate, and bewrayeth it not, Prov. 29. 24. i. e. doth not diſcover what he knows; if hearing ὅρκου παρεθέντος, the oath pronounced, he doth not declare it, ſay the Septuagint and the Targum. Now hence it follows, that Chriſt could not forbid in theſe words ſuch judicial oaths. (1.) Becauſe it was not in the power of the Jews, to whom he ſpake, to avoid them, they being ſubject to them, by hearing the voice of ſwearing pronounced by the judge. (2*dly*,) Had Chriſt, by this injunction, condemned all judicial oaths, he muſt have diſſolved the law of Moſes in this particular; and ſo have given juſt occaſion to the Phariſees to complain of him, both as teaching contrary to the law of Moſes, and ſtirring up the people to diſturb the government. Then 3*dly*, after this declaration made againſt ſuch oaths, he ſhould not have anſwered when adjured by the High Prieſt, to tell whether he were the Son of God, becauſe he ought not ſo far to have countenanced this ſinful action; wherefore, by breaking of his former ſilence, and taking the adjuration upon himſelf, he ſhewed, that he did not conceive it ſinful to anſwer upon oath before a magiſtrate. (4*thly*,) This prohibition therefore only doth forbid all voluntary oaths in common converſation and diſcourſe; this clearly follows from the removal of thoſe other gloſſes, which have been put upon the text; and (2*dly*,) from what our Saviour adds, by way of explication of it, viz. ἔστω δὲ ὁ λόγος ὑμῶν, Let your diſcourſe or talk be yea and nay, i. e. Let it ſuffice, that in your ordinary diſcourſe you uſe a ſingle affirmation or denial, or, if occaſion do require, a reduplication of them, and do not, on your own voluntary motion, call God to witneſs the truth of what you ordinarily ſay. (3*dly*,) This is apparent from the diſtinction which the Jews obſerved betwixt ſuch oaths, as were impoſed by the magiſtrate in doing juſtice, and voluntary oaths: in the firſt kind of oaths, they reckoned it unlawful to ſwear by any name, but that of God; it being written, that when a cauſe of parties come before the judge, then ſhall the oath of Jehovah be between them, Exod. 22. 11. wherefore this prohibition of ſwearing, by the heavens, the earth, or any other oath, could not relate to their judicial oaths, becauſe, in them, God only was invoked; it therefore muſt reſpect thoſe voluntary oaths, which were in frequent uſe among the Jews, and were leſs ſcrupled by them, becauſe they did not ſwear by God, but by the creatures, accounting that far more excuſable than ſwearing by the name of God; and that this alſo is the meaning of the prohibition of St. James, is evident, becauſe, in the foregoing words, he had exhorted Chriſtians patiently to bear afflictions, and not to be provoked to anger by them; and knowing that our impatience under ſufferings, and our unbridled paſſions, do often vent themselves in oaths, he therefore adds, v. 12. But above all things, brethren, swear not.

Ver. 34. [y] Μήτε ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, v. 35. μήτε ἐν τῇ γῇ, Neither by heaven, nor by earth, nor by Jerusalem.] That these forms of swearing were very usual among the Jews, we learn from the Jewish writers, saying, (d) By heaven so it is, by heaven you have brought this to my memory: It was also customary with them, to swear by the heavens and earth together, or by them separately. And accordingly (e) Philo forbids men to swear by the supreme cause; but, saith he, if there be a necessity of swearing, call to record, γῆν, ἥλιον, ἀέρας, οὐρανὸν, the earth, the sun, the stars, the heavens. They also swore by Jerusalem, and by the temple. But then observe, they did not look upon these as binding oaths. So (f) Maimonides saith, If any man swear by heaven, or by earth, yet this is not an oath. And (g) R. Judah, that he that saith by Jerusalem, it is nothing, unless with an intent purpose, he shall vow towards Jerusalem, and this Martial intimates in that known distich,

Ecce negas, juràsque mihi per templa Tonantis,
Non credo, jura, Verpe, per Anchialum.

And hence our Lord informs them, that this was their great mistake, all these oaths being in effect, oaths made by God, and so as binding as those, in which he personally was named. And seeing an oath is a solemn appeal to what we swear by, as a witness of the truth, and an avenger of the falshood of the testimony, it follows, that all our oaths made by insensate creatures must in effect be oaths made by that God, whose creatures they are, or none at all. See Addition No. 8.

Ver. 36. [z] Μήτε ἐν τῇ κεφαλῇ, Neither by thy head, for thou canst not make one hair white or black.] This also was an usual form of swearing among the Jews, who said to their neighbour, swear to me בחיי ראשך (h) by the life of thy head; now, saith Christ, the preservation of that life, of which the head is the fountain, is not in thy power, but depends entirely upon him, by whom we live; and so to swear by it, is in effect to swear by him, who hath the power of life and death.

Ver. 37. [aa] Τὸ δὲ περισσὸν τούτων ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ ἐστιν, For what is more than this cometh of evil.] These words import either,

1*st*, That swearing, in our common discourse, proceeds from some inherent evil, as certainly it doth from an unhallowed heart, from a soul void of reverence to God, and therefore prone to vilifie his sacred name; or,

2*dly*, That it proceeds from Satan, and that he it is who tempts us to mix them with our common talk. And this interpretation well comports with the signification of the word; ὁ πονηρὸς, being most frequently used in the New Testament, to signify this wicked one; thus ἔρχεται ὁ πονηρὸς, the wicked one cometh, and snatcheth away the seed, Matth. 13. 19. the Devil doth it, v. 39. Cain is declared to be ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ, from the Devil, God's children have overcome τὸν πονηρὸν, they keep themselves so that ὁ πονηρὸς, the evil one doth not touch them. Now this is a full demonstration of the vileness and horrid nature of this sin, that we are most particularly excited to it, by him who is the worst of beings, and bears the greatest hatred and opposition to God's glory; and therefore, if he be so diligent to tempt us to the commission of it, we may be sure it is, because he knows it highly tends to the dishonour of God, and to deprive us of that reverence to his most sacred name, which can alone restrain us from the commission of the worst of evils.

Ver. 38, 39. [bb] Ἠκούσατε, &c. You have heard it hath been said to them of old, An eye for an eye, &c. But I say unto you, resist not evil.] Of this law of Talio, let it be observed;

1*st*, From Grotius, that it bound not the party damaged to require the like punishment, but left him free, either to forgive, or take a compensation; but if this penalty was required by him, it bound the judge to inflict it. For to the judge only is it said, thy eye shall not spare or pity him, but eye shall go for eye, &c. Deut. 19. 18, 21. And hence it follows, (2*dly*,) that the party hurt or damaged, could not himself be the executioner of this law, but was obliged, if he would require the punishment, to repair to the magistrate for the execution of it; for this punishment was to be executed by the judges, Exod. 21. 22, 23. and therefore, as the words, thou shalt not pity, Deut. 19. relate only to the judge; so also the words, as he hath done, so shall it be done to him, Lev. 24. 19. relate to the same person; as if it had been said, so shall it be done to him by the judge; but they oblige not the injured party to require the judge so to do. Now hence it follows, that they mistake Christ's meaning in the following words, opposed to this law, who say, Christ only doth forbid that resistance of evil, and return of injuries, which private persons do themselves attempt, without repairing to the magistrate for redress; for private vengeance, or execution of punishment upon offenders, was never permitted to the Jews themſelves; whereas thoſe words, but I ſay unto you, ſeem plainly to evince, that Chriſt forbids the Chriſtian ſomething which was permitted to the Jew. Note (3*dly*,) that the Jewiſh Doctors generally maintain, that the puniſhment of an eye for an eye, or a tooth for a tooth, might be redeemed by money, or that ſatisfaction might be made for it by a pecuniary mulct, (i) Joſephus is expreſs, that the law allowed him that was hurt to eſtimate his own damage, and that if he would not take a pecuniary ſatisfaction, he was deemed ſevere or cruel. Hence the Targum of Jonathan renders the words thus, the price of an eye for an eye, the price of a tooth for a tooth, &c. both in Exod. 21. 24. in Lev. 24. 20. and in Deut. 19. 21. All theſe, ſay the Hebrew Doctors, (except life for life) may be redeemed by money; and this they gather from Numb. 35. 31. Ye ſhall take no ſatisfaction for the life of a murderer; ſo that the other maims or hurts are not forbidden to be ſatisfied for, and, in reſpect of ſatisfaction, it is ſaid, Deut. 19. 21. Thine eye ſhall not pity, Maimon. Treat. of Hurts, cap. 1. ſect. 3, 4. So of the Roman law of the twelve tables, (k) A. Gellius aſks what cruelty is in it, cum habeas facultatem paciſcendi, when liberty is granted to compound the matter, and there is no neceſſity of ſuffering the law, where men do not chuſe to do ſo? And this ſeems very reaſonable in many caſes, there being ſome caſes in which this law of Talio is impoſſible, as if he that had loſt his own tooth, ſhould ſtrike out the tooth of another; ſome, in which it ſeems impracticable, as in breach for breach, wound for wound, for how difficult is it to make a wound neither deeper nor wider than that the other hath received? to break a bone, or make a rupture in the ſcrotum, or elſewhere, juſt like another made already? and ſometimes it ſeems unmerciful to do it, as in the caſe mentioned by (l) Diodorus Siculus, and by Ariſtotle Rhetor. l. 1. c. 7. of the man with one eye; for would it not ſeem unmerciful to make him ſtark blind, becauſe he hath caſually, or in a ſudden fit of anger, ſtruck out his brother's eye? or to cut off the right hand of a Painter, or a Scrivener, by which he maintains himſelf and family, becauſe he hath cut off the right hand of a Songſter, or one who ſuffers little in his calling by the loſs? Laſtly, I cannot think that God allowed this to be done by the damaged perſon out of revenge, he having ſo expreſly ſaid, Lev. 19. 18. Thou ſhalt not avenge, or bear any grudge againſt the children of thy people; nor as a remedy of his grief, it being an unreaſonable and ill-natured thing, to deſire to eaſe my grief, by cauſing grief to another, nor will either my pain or loſs be leſs, becauſe another ſuffers the like pain or loſs; this therefore only ſeemeth to be granted as it tends to the publick good, by cauſing men to be more careful how they offend in this kind.

2*dly*, That which Chriſt here forbids, in oppoſition to what was granted to the perſon injured by this law, is ἀνθίστηναι to reſiſt evil in this kind, by requiring the execution of this law of retaliation upon him, as being that which tended not to the diminution of the Chriſtian's pain or loſs, and therefore ſeemed not ſuitable to Chriſtian charity. (2.) In matters eaſy to be born, rather to ſuffer them with Chriſtian patience, than to contend before a judge about them, or to require compenſation of him for them. For it is to be noted,

(1.) That the ſtriking of a free-man on the cheek with open palm, was only matter of diſgrace; and he that did it, was by the (m) law of the twelve tables, to pay 25 aſſes, or half-pence; and by the Jewiſh canons, to pay, if he gave one blow upon the cheek, 200 Zuzees; if he gave him another, 400; and theſe mulcts were eſtabliſhed, and inflicted by the judge. See Dr. Lightfoot. But Chriſt will rather have both theſe injuries born patiently, than that his ſervants ſhould contend before the judge, for reparation of the diſgrace put upon them.

(2.) As for the taking the outward coat, that ſeems but a ſmall loſs to him that hath an inward coat remaining: For, the Baptiſt requires him that hath two coats, to give to him that hath none, Luke 3. 11. and Chriſt ſuffers not his diſciples to provide two coats for their journey, Matth. 10. 10. Tho' therefore by the Jewiſh canons, a mulct of 400 Zuzees was allowed for this, Chriſt requires thoſe who being ſo well provided, may reaſonably be ſuppoſed able to repair the loſs of both, to do it rather than contend, or wage law for reparation of his loſs before an heathen, or a Jewiſh Magiſtrate: So St. Paul alſo, Why do you not rather ſuffer wrong? 1 Cor. 6. 7.

(3.) If the King's Officer will ἀγγαρεύειν, compel or preſs thee, who haſt a privilege or immunity from theſe affairs, as the Jews thought the diſciples ciples of the wise, and students of the law had; yet, saith Christ, I require my disciples, rather to wave this privilege, than to contend for this immunity: So that, according to this sense, Christ here requires his disciples to remit tolerable injuries, relating either to their reputation, as in the first instance, or to their possessions and estates, as in the second, or to their privilege and freedom, as in the third, rather than to contend at the law about them. If this exposition be not liked, it is observable, that κρίνεσθαι and κριτῶν is also to contend by fighting, or striving with another, or using force to repel the injury. So Eccles. 6. 10. A man cannot κριθῆναι, strive or fight with one that is stronger than himself. So 2 Maccab. 15. 17. Κρῖναι τὸ πρόσωπον, is to try the matter by conflict, or to fight it out; in which sense Christ may be supposed to command, rather that his servants should patiently suffer these things, than fight and strive with those who offer such affronts and injuries to them.

Ver. 42. cc Τῷ αἰτοῦντί σε δίδου, καὶ τὸν θέλοντα ἀπὸ σοῦ δανίσασθαι μὴ ἀποστραφῇς. Give to him that asketh; and from him that would borrow of thee, turn thou not away.] Here it is certain, (1st,) That Christ, by saying, Luke 6. 35. Give to every one that asketh, doth not require us to give to every one that asketh, whether he need or not, nor, whether we can spare it or not, but only to give to him that asketh out of need, what we are able to bestow, and do not ourselves want: So Paul, by asking the charity of the Corinthians, for the distressed Jews, saith, I mean not that others be eased, and you burdened, but that your abundance be a supply for their want, 2 Cor. 8. 13, 14. (2dly,) These words may have respect to the precedent, and be intended to teach Christians, not to be unwilling to give to others, because they have disgraced, or unjustly taken something from us; nor to upbraid them in their wants, with their deportment towards us, and call upon them first to restore what they have taken from us, but even to shew kindness to them, as if they had not thus offended. (3dly,) I see no reason for changing our translation from, Turn thou not away, into, Turn not him away; for as men, ἀποστρεφόμενοι τὴν ἀλήθειαν, Tit. 1. 14. are men turning away from the truth: So τὸν θέλοντα,—μὴ ἀποστραφῇς, may be ἀπὸ τοῦ θέλοντος—μὴ στρέψῃς, from him that would borrow of thee, turn not thou away.

Ver. 42. dd Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, καὶ μισήσεις τὸν ἐχθρόν σου, and shalt hate thy enemy.] Here note, (1.) That these words Thou shalt hate thy enemy, are not found in the law of Moses; tho' nothing is more frequent in the Jewish canons, nothing more certain in their practice, than that they had, as Tacitus observes, intestinum odium adversus omnes alios, a deadly hatred against all that were not of their religion; which affords a strong argument, that Christ here is not correcting, or adding to the moral precepts of the law, but opposing the corrupt interpretations of the Scribes and Pharisees, of which we have this farther argument, That the law expressly doth require this love of enemies, and the love of strangers, in the highest measure, saying, Lev. 19. 18. Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self; and ver. 34. The stranger that sojourneth with you, shall be as one home-born among you, and thou shalt love him as thy self; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt. Now here it cannot be truly answered, as the Jews and some Christians do, that the neighbour, ver. 18. is only a Jew, and not a stranger; for both our Saviour, and St. Paul, speaking of these very words, do plainly shew the contrary, as is fully proved, Note on Matth. 22. 39. Moreover, every Egyptian man and woman is a neighbour, Exod. 11. 2. and so is every other man, Deut. 22. 26. And even Kimchi on Psal. 15. 3. saith truly, A neighbour is every one with whom we have any dealing or conversation; and so also the word neighbour must signify in the tenth commandment, if it do not leave the Israelite free to covet the wife of the Gentile. Nor, (2dly,) Can it be truly said, the stranger mentioned ver. 34. is only a proselyte of justice, or one who had obliged himself to observe the law of Moses. For, (1.) The text speaks of such strangers as they themselves were in the land of Egypt, where they were strangers of a different religion from the Egyptians: So again, Deut. 10. 18, and 19. God loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment; love ye therefore the stranger, for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt: Which words afford another argument for the love of all strangers permitted to be among them, tho' they were not of their religion, because, in this affection, they were to imitate God's love to strangers, which extended not only to those of their religion, but even to all that conversed with them, in giving food and raiment to them. See Chap. 24. 22.

Object. It is objected, That God commands concerning the seven nations, that they should utterly overthrow them, Exod. 23. 24. that they should smite them, and utterly destroy them; that they should make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy to them, Deut. 7. 2. That of the Ammonite and Moabite, it is said, Thou shalt not seek their peace, nor their prosperity, all thy days for ever, Deut. 23. 6. And of the Amalekites, Thou ſhalt blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven; thou ſhalt not forget it, Deut. 25. 19. Habemus ergo hoſtes, habemus & odium; Here we find the enemies and the hatred, ſaith Grotius.

Anſw. Here is indeed an inſtance of God's hatred of, and ſevere diſpleaſure againſt theſe nations, whom he commanded them thus to root out, and to deſtroy, without that mercy and pity, which might preſerve them from that deſtruction he had decreed againſt them for their abominable impurities and idolatries; but here is no inſtance of a command given to the Jews to hate them. For, 1ſt, It is obſervable, that the war, waged againſt them, is called the Lord's war, and he promiſeth to deſtroy them; and their neglect of doing it, even to a man, is ſtiled diſobedience againſt the Lord. This is extremely evident in the caſe of the Amalekites, God having ſaid, he would utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek, for ever, and ſworn, he would have war with Amalek, from generation to generation, Exod. 17. 14, 16. Accordingly, when the Lord ſent Saul to ſmite Amalek, and utterly deſtroy them, and ſpare them not, but ſlay both man and woman, infant and ſuckling, 1 Sam. 15. 3. it was no argument of Saul's hatred to them, that he went to execute this command of the Lord, but an act of diſobedience, that he ſpared Agag and the beſt of the ſheep. And, in like manner, the war againſt the Seven Nations was the Lord's war; and the Iſraelites which fought againſt them, were the Lord's hoſts, Joſh. 5. 14. and the deſtruction of them he aſcribes to himſelf, ſaying, I will deſtroy all the people to whom thou ſhalt come, Exod. 23. 27. I drive out before thee the Amorite, Exod. 34. 11. ſee Deut. 7. 12. So that the Jews were only the executioners of God's vengeance upon theſe nations, for their abominable idolatries, beaſtly luſts, and horrid cruelties; and ſure, an executioner may do according to the ſentence of the judge, without hatred of thoſe he executes; nor is it any ſign of hatred to them that he ſpares not them, of whom the judge hath ſaid, Thou ſhalt not ſpare them. Moreover, the reaſon given, why they ſhould not ſhew mercy to them in ſparing their lives, being this, Deut. 7. 4. For they will turn away thy ſons from following me, that they may ſerve other gods; ſo will the anger of the Lord be kindled againſt you, and deſtroy thee ſuddenly: This ſparing mercy towards them would have been not only diſobedience to God's commands, but alſo cruelty to themſelves and their poſterity; and ſo it proved in the iſſue. And, laſtly, whereas it is ſaid of the Ammonite and Moabite, Thou ſhalt not ſeek their peace nor their proſperity, all thy days, for ever; the import of theſe words is this, ſaith Grotius, Thou ſhalt not do it, by entering into leagues of friendſhip, mutual aſſiſtance, and conjugal ſociety with them, and that by reaſon of the danger they might ſuffer by their friendſhip with them, who being their near neighbours, would watch all opportunities to enſnare and diſturb them. This precept therefore was to be obſerved, not ſo much out of hatred, or ill-will to them, as out of friendſhip to themſelves, and regard to their own good.

Ver. 44. ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, Ἀγαπᾶτε τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ὑμῶν, But I ſay to you, Love your enemies, &c.] To this reſtrained affection of the Jews to their own brethren, and men of their religion, Chriſt here oppoſeth his excellent precept of loving enemies: And that, (1.) by ſhewing a ſincere affection and good-will to them who bear enmity or ill-will to us, and by expreſſing our beneficence to them, who, by their actions, ſhew their hatred to us; and in our works, by doing good to them for evil, and in our words, by bleſſing them, who, with their mouths, curſe us; and, praying for God's bleſſing upon them, who revile and perſecute us, as his enemies: And this affection he recommends to us, 1ſt, From the plain abſurdity of the Jewiſh doctrine, which made them no better in this reſpect, than thoſe ſinners, publicans, and heathens, whom they allowed themſelves to hate: For, if you only love them who love you, what reward have you? Do not even the publicans the ſame, even ſinners? ſaith St. Luke, Chap. 6. 32. If you ſalute your brethren only, what excellent thing do you? Do not even publicans, or as ſome copies have it, Heathens ſo? Which words being ſo directly levelled againſt that hatred, the Jews allowed themſelves to theſe three ſorts of men, ſhews, that the foregoing words, Thou ſhalt hate thine enemy, are not to be reſtrained to the Seven Nations.

2dly, That they who boaſted of this as their proper title, and their peculiar glory, that they were the ſons of God, might ſhew they really were ſo, by their reſemblance of his goodneſs, who is kind to the unthankful and the wicked, Luke 6. 35. For, he maketh his ſun to riſe on the evil and the good, and ſendeth rain on the juſt and on the unjuſt, ver. 45. So Seneca, Si deos imitaris, da & ingratis beneficia, nam & ſceleratis ſol oritur, If thou wouldſt imitate the gods, be kind to the unthankful, for the ſun riſes on the wicked. De Benef. l. 5. c. 25. The immortal gods, ſaith Antoninus, not only patiently bear with wicked men, but alſo κηδονται αὐτῶν παντοίως, take all manner of care of them; and ſhalt thou, a mortal man, be weary of bearing with them, καὶ ταῦτα, εἷς ὢν τῶν φαύλων, when thou art one of them? Lib. 7. § 70. See Gataker in Anton. p. 291, 316, 331.

3*dly*, That this will render us complete in this great duty of love and mercy to others; ver. 48. Be ye, (in this) perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect. That this command is thus to be restrained, we learn, (1.) From the parallel words, Luke 6. 36. Be ye therefore merciful, as your heavenly Father is merciful; and, (2.) From the preceeding words, which call not on us to resemble God, in holiness, justice, fidelity, but only in beneficence and mercy, as well to the evil as the good: So that there is no reason to extend this perfection here beyond the subject-matter, tho' it be true, that in all other perfections, in which we are required to imitate him, we are to come as near unto him as we can, truly resembling that pattern which we cannot, nor, by his precept are obliged to equal; for, Imitatio stat citra exemplar, Imitation falls below the pattern. See here Examen Millii.

CHAP. VI.

1 [a] TAKE heed that you do not your alms before men, to be seen of them; otherwise, (if that be your inducement to perform them,) ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven; (since then you do your alms, not out of obedience to his commands, or in resemblance of his goodness, but rather from vain glory.)

2. Therefore, when thou dost thy alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do, (proclaiming their actions) in the synagogues, and in the streets, that they may have glory of men; verily, I say unto you, [b] they have their reward; (i. e. that applause of men they seek for, and no more.)

3. But when thou dost alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doth; (but do them so,)

4. That thine alms may be in secret, and (then) thy [c] Father, which seeth in secret, (the sincerity of thy love to others, for his sake) himself shall reward thee openly, (before men and angels:)

5. And (likewise) when thou prayest, thou shalt not be [d] as the hypocrites are, (doing this out of vain ostentation;) for they love to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men, (and be deemed devout persons by them:) Verily, I say unto you, they have their reward.

6. But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and, when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father, which is in secret, (and invisible, both in his nature and operations;) and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

7. But when ye pray, [e] use not vain repetitions, (or words of the same import, to lengthen out your prayers,) as the heathens do; for they think they shall be heard for their much speaking.

8. [f] Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him, (and is still ready to grant the desires which come from a sincere and honest heart; so that he needs neither your words to inform, nor your persuasions to move him; and so your requests to him may be absolved in few words.)

9. [g] After this manner therefore pray ye, (saying, when ye pray, Luke 11. 2.) [h] Our Father which art in heaven, (i. e. who being in heaven, from thence beholdest all our wants, Psal. 11. 4. and must be able to relieve them, 2 Chron. 20. 7. Psal. 115. 3. and being our God and Father, must be inclined so to do.) [i] Hallowed be thy name (i. e. may all men so speak, and so think of thy divine majesty, and so deport themselves towards thee, that thou mayest be glorified in their words, thoughts, and actions.)

10. [k] Thy kingdom come; (may thy Gospel be generally entertained by men, with due faith and obedience; may all men receive thy Son Jesus Christ as their King and Saviour, and humbly submit to his laws; may the Christian religion obtain every where, as well in reality as profession, the minds of all men being subdued to the obedience of faith.) [l] Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven; (i. e. may all men, with sincerity, alacrity and readiness, yield obedience to thy holy will, and imitate the blessed angels in an intire compliance with it, without hesitation or renitency.)

11. [m] Give us this day our daily bread; (i. e. be pleased continually to afford us what thou seest needful for us, and give thy blessing both upon our labours to procure it, and our food to afford nourishment and strength to us.)

12. [n] And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors; (i. e. give us upon our repentance, the pardon of our sins committed against thee; for we, in obedience to thy command, freely, and from our hearts, forgive the offences of others against us.)

13. [o] And lead us not into temptation; (suffer us not by the assaults of Satan, or the substraction of thy grace, or by putting us for our punishment into such circumstances, as may prove snares and stumbling-blocks to us, to be led into, or overcome by the power of temptation; but grant us such a measure of thy grace, as may preserve us from falling by them:) [p] but deliver us from (the) evil (of sin, and from those dispositions and inclinations which make us prone unto it; and from the assaults of the evil one:) q for thine is the kingdom; (we deſire may come;) and (thine is) the power, (thus to aſſiſt, provide for, and protect us;) and (thine is, and will be,) the glory (of ſo doing,) for ever. Amen.

14. (And with great reaſon do I teach you to ſay, Forgive us our ſins, as we forgive others:) r For if ye forgive men their treſpaſſes, your heavenly Father will alſo forgive you.

15. But, if ye forgive not men their treſpaſſes, neither will your Father forgive your treſpaſſes.

16. Moreover, s when ye faſt, be not as the hypocrites, of a ſad countenance; for they diſfigure their faces, (putting on ſad and mournful looks) that they may appear unto men to faſt: Verily I ſay unto you, they have their reward.

17. But thou, when thou faſteſt, anoint thy head, and waſh thy face, (as the Jews do on ordinary days;)

18. That thou appear not unto men to faſt, but (only) to thy Father which is in ſecret; and thy Father which ſeeth in ſecret, ſhall reward thee openly.

19. t Lay not up for your ſelves treaſures upon earth, where moth and ruſt doth corrupt (them,) and where thieves break through and ſteal.

20. But, lay up for your ſelves treaſures in heaven, where neither moth nor ruſt doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through, nor ſteal; (this being the only means to be heavenly-minded.)

21. For where your treaſure is, there will your heart be alſo.

22. v The light of the body is the eye, (by which we are directed how to guide the body in our walking, as is the eye of the mind, that light by which we diſcern our duty;) if therefore thine eye be ſingle, (i. e. free from covetouſneſs, and ready to relieve Chriſt's needy members,) thy whole body ſhall be full of light; (i. e. this charity will lead thee in the way to life, and will direct the actions both of thy ſoul and body aright.)

23. But, if thine eye be evil, (if it be an envious covetous eye,) thy whole body will be full of darkneſs; (i. e. all its actions will be deeds of darkneſs:) if therefore (then) the light that is in thee be darkneſs, how great is that darkneſs? (i. e. if the inward light which ſhould direct thy actions, be darkneſs, how great and fatal will be that darkneſs in which thou walkeſt?)

24. (And that your affection to theſe earthly things may not thus blind you, conſider, That) No man can x ſerve two maſters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other, or elſe (which is the conſequent of that affection) he will hold to the one, and (comparatively) deſpiſe the other; (ſo that) ye cannot ſerve (both) God and mammon.

25. Therefore I ſay unto you, y Take no thought for (the things neceſſary to preſerve) your life, (to wit,) what ye ſhall eat, or what ye ſhall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye ſhall put on; (for,) is not the life more than meat, and the body (more) than raiment? (He then who gave this life and body, will be concerned to make proviſions for them.)

26. Behold (how is it with) the fowls of the air, (which are leſs conſiderable than you are;) for they ſow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns, yet your heavenly Father feedeth them: Are ye not much better than they? (and ſo more aſſuredly will be provided for.)

27. But (and) which of you, by taking thought, can add one cubit to his ſtature, (or make your body taller? how much leſs will your ſolicitude preſerve the whole?)

28. And why take ye thought for raiment? conſider the lilies of the field, how they grow, they toil not, neither do they ſpin;

29. And yet I ſay unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of theſe.

30. Wherefore if God ſo cloath the graſs of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is caſt into the oven, ſhall he not much more cloath you, Oh ye of little faith? (if you diſtruſt his care in making theſe proviſions for you.)

31. Therefore take no thought, ſaying, What ſhall we eat? or what ſhall we drink? or wherewithal ſhall we be cloathed?

32. For after all theſe things do the Gentiles ſeek, (but ye who are under a more peculiar providence, need not do it,) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all theſe things, (and ſure his providence will never ſuffer you to want what he ſees needful for you.)

33. But ſeek ye firſt the kingdom of God, and his righteouſneſs; (viz. that righteouſneſs, which will render you acceptable in his ſight,) and (then) all theſe things (as far as they are needful) ſhall be added to you.

34. Therefore take no thought for to-morrow, (be not beforehand importunately ſolicitous for your future ſubſiſtence,) for to-morrow ſhall take thought for the things of itſelf; (i. e. you may time enough take thought for to-morrow, when it comes; add not therefore to the cares of each day, for) ſufficient to the day is the evil thereof; (i. e. the neceſſary trouble which attends each day.)

ANNOTATIONS

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. VI.

Ver. 1. [a] Προσέχετε τὴν ἐλεημοσύνην ὑμῶν μὴ ποιεῖν ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀνθρώπων πρὸς τὸ θεαθῆναι αὐτοῖς, Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them, &c.] Christ in this chapter teacheth, that those works, which are otherwise good in themselves, are not acceptable to God, when they are done out of vain-glory, because they are done, not for God's sake, but for our own; not with respect to his glory, which ought to be the chief end of every action, 1 Cor. 10. 31. 1 Pet. 4. 11. but that we may obtain glory from, and favour with men. But here note,

1*st*, That Christ doth not forbid us to perform those works of charity, which being in their nature publick, tend to procure respect, and a good reputation among men, since they fall under the general precepts of providing τὰ καλὰ things honourable in the sight of all men, Rom. 12. 17. and approved of men, Chap. 14. 18. and of thinking of those things which are good, virtuous, lovely, honourable, of good report, and are praise-worthy, Philip. 4. 8. and which St. Paul in distribution of the Corinthians alms attended to, 2 Cor. 8. 21. provided these things be done, not chiefly because they are commendable in the sight of men, but because they are acceptable to God, Rom. 14. 18. not that they may gain glory to us, but to God, and our religion, 1 Pet. 2. 12. and remove all occasions of bringing any scandal on it, Tit. 2. 8. 1 Pet. 3. 16. Nor (2*dly*,) doth he absolutely forbid us to do these things, that men may see them, provided we desire not they may be seen from ostentation, or vain-glory, but that men seeing our good works, may glorify our Father which is in heaven, Chap. 5. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 9. Nor (3*dly*,) doth Christ forbid us to do these things, so that others seeing us, may profit by our example, and be excited to good works, or so as to seek a good reputation among men, provided we desire it only for the publick good, that we may be more instrumental to promote God's glory, and that others may more freely hearken to our good admonitions; for in these cases we do not properly intend our own advantage, but God's glory, the welfare of souls, and the publick good; nor have we our own praise and glory, but those higher ends, for the scope of all such actions. Moreover, it being not apparent from any of their writings, that it was customary with the Jews to sound a trumpet, when they distributed their alms; this seems only a proverbial expression, for making a thing known or publick, as both Jews and heathens were used to do by the sound of a trumpet, calling the multitude together, saith Phavorinus, by it, using it in their triumphs, and before they began to act their tragedies or Comedies. See Examen Millii here.

Ver. 2. [b] Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν ἀπέχουσι τὸν μισθὸν αὐτῶν, Verily, I say unto you, they have their reward.] It is the observation of the Jews, that God punishes all the light evil deeds of good men in this life, that he may reward them in the next, and that he rewards all the good actions of bad men in this life, that he may punish them in the next: He often gives them the outward things they set their hearts upon; sensual pleasures, wealth, honour, and glory with men, and thus they have their good things, and their reward in this life; and this is very truly and very equitably so. For these things which can only be enjoyed in the body, and during this present life, are the things they chiefly prize, have their desires and affections set upon, and most industriously pursue, comparatively despising the things above, and neglecting their future interests, and so they very properly are stiled, their good things, Luke 16. 25. And happiness being the general end of all men, they who thus chiefly prize, and above all other things pursue these sensual pleasures, honours, and enjoyments, must chiefly place their happiness in them, and look upon them as the most comfortable, most satisfactory, and most desirable reward of all their labours, and so in the enjoyment of them they have their reward. They therefore cannot charge God with hardships to them, they having done no good thing, for which he hath not rewarded them according to their heart's desire. He hath given them the good they chose for their portion, and made them as happy as they would be; he hath given them the things, they above all things loved and delighted in, and in which they placed their chief happiness, and only lets them want the things which they despised as not worth their labour; which being offered upon reasonable terms, they scornfully neglected and refused; and of which, by this refusal and neglect, they have rendered themselves both unworthy and uncapable.

Ver. 4. [c] Αὐτὸς ἀποδώσει σοι ἐν τῷ φανερῷ, And thy Father who seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.] Though it be true which Grotius here observes, that God doth often visibly reward the sincere charity of pious persons, performed from true love to him, with temporal blessings in this life, yet will he chiefly do it in the sight of men and angels in the world to come, Matth. 25. 34. Luke 14. 14.

And

And it is obſervable, that the very thing we are forbid to ſeek from men on earth, is part of that reward we ſhall receive at that great day, when our faith and charity ſhall be found to our praiſe, honour and glory, 1 Pet. 1. 7. and that good men, by patient continuance in well-doing, are ſaid to ſeek for glory and honour, as well as immortality, Rom. 2. 7. and have the promiſe of it, ver. 10. See Examen Millii here.

Ver. 5. [d] Καὶ ὅταν προσεύχη οὐκ ἔσῃ ὥσπερ οἱ ὑποκριταὶ, ὅτι φιλοῦσι; And when thou prayeſt, thou ſhalt not be as the hypocrites, who love to pray ſtanding in the ſynagogues, and in the corners of the ſtreets.] Chriſt doth not here condemn all prayer made in the ſynagogues, ſeeing both he and his diſciples often prayed with the Jews in the ſynagogues, Luke 4. 16. nor any publick devotions in the houſe of God, but ſpeaking only here of private prayer, he would have that performed agreeably to the nature of it, and ſo in ſecret; and condemns them only who affected to do this in publick places, that others might take notice of them, and look upon them, as devout, religious perſons, for ſo doing.

Ver. 7. [e] Προσευχόμενοι δὲ, μὴ βαττολογήσητε ὥσπερ οἱ ἐθνικοὶ, δοκοῦσι γὰρ ὅτι ἐν τῇ πολυλογίᾳ αὐτῶν εἰσακουσθήσονται; But when ye pray, uſe not vain repetitions, as the heathens do, for they think they ſhall be heard for their much ſpeaking.] What we here render vain repetitions is in the Greek, battology; which ſeems not well rendered by Chryſoſtom and Theophylact φλυαρία, trifling, in asking little temporal things, nor by Heſychius or Phavorinus ἀρλολογία ἀκαιρολογία ſpeaking vainly and unſeaſonably, but is well rendered by Suidas πολυλογία, much ſpeaking; for (1.) our Lord ſeems plainly thus to explain himſelf, uſe not the battology of the Heathens, who think to be heard for their much ſpeaking. (2.) So doth the Arabick, multiply not words; ſo the vulgar, nolite multum loqui, do not ſpeak much; and (3.) this is agreeable to the like precept of the Preacher, Eccleſ. 5. 2. God is in heaven, thou on earth, therefore let thy words be few; and of the Son of Syrac, Chap. 7. 14. μὴ διπλερώσῃς λόγον ἐν προσευχῇ σου, multiply not words in thy prayer, and (4.) this ſeems to follow from the ſhort form of prayer preſcribed, in oppoſition to this heathen practice, and introduced with an οὕτως οὖν, ſo therefore pray ye. But ſtill it remaineth difficult to give a determinate ſenſe to this much ſpeaking, and ſay preciſely when this διπλερώσις, or repetition of the ſame words, is vain. For,

1*ſt*, We cannot reaſonably conceive our Saviour here condemns all repetition of the ſame words in prayer; eſpecially when it ariſes from a deep ſenſe of our neceſſities, and a vehement deſire of divine grace. For he himſelf prayed thrice in the ſame words, to be delivered from the bitter cup. It is alſo highly probable, that as David compoſed it by the ſpirit of God, ſo Chriſt ſung the hymn called Hallel Magnum, beginning at Pſal. 115. and ending at Pſal. 118. where in the four firſt verſes the ſame words frequently occur. It was alſo uſual for Prophets, and men of excellent and raiſed devotion, to uſe the ſame words in the ſame prayer; ſo doth Daniel, Chap. 9. ſaying, v. 5. We have ſinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, v. 17. O, our God, hear the prayer of thy ſervant, and his ſupplications, v. 18. O my God, inclin thine ear and hear; and v. 19. O Lord, hear; O Lord, hearken. How oft doth the royal Pſalmiſt ſay, Pſal. 119. Teach me, O Lord, thy ſtatutes, ordinances, commandments, judgments, the way of thy ſtatutes? Pſal. 107. we have four times theſe words, Oh that men would therefore praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs, ver. 8. 15, 21, 31. and Pſal. 136. the ſame words are repeated twenty-ſix times.

This repetition therefore can only be accounted vain, when it is not requiſite to heighten the devotion, or when it is uſed as the heathens did, to lengthen out devotion, or as the comedian hath it, deorum aures contundere, to ſtun the ears of the gods, as if we thought they could not hear or underſtand, niſi idem dictum ſit centies, unleſs we ſay the ſame thing over and over; and this ſeems to have been the deſign of the Baalites, in crying out from morning to noon, O Baal, hear us, 1 Kings 18. 26.

2*dly*, It alſo ſeems not agreeable to Scripture or reaſon to aſſert, that all long prayers are forbidden by theſe words of Chriſt; though many things, which make them ſo, may be here, by analogy, forbidden, as coming under the reaſon of the prohibition; I ſay all prayers, continued to a conſiderable length ſeem not forbidden; for the prayer of Solomon, at the dedication of the temple was ſuch, and ſo is that in Nehemiah 9. where we are alſo told, that they confeſſed and worſhipped for three hours. In the New Teſtament (to omit the example of our Lord, who, according to our verſion, continued all night in prayer, as not concluſive, becauſe it may be rendered, he continued all night in a ſynagogue, or houſe devoted to the ſervice of God. See the Note on Luke 6. 12. and yet not wholly impertinent, becauſe Matth. 14. 23. Luke 6. 12. he went up thither to pray, and therefore may be reaſonably ſuppoſed to have ſpent much of that time in that duty) we find the Church thus praying for the deliverance of St. Peter, for as the prayer itself is stiled προσδοκὴ ἐκτενὴς, Prayer extended to a considerable length; so when St. Peter came to the house, he found them still praying, Acts 12. 5, 12. We also find St. Paul praying night and day, and that ὑπερπερισσῶς more abundantly that he might see his Thessalonians, 1 Thess. 3. 10. and also praying, and giving thanks, and making mention of other churches in his prayers incessantly, Rom. 1. 9. 1 Cor. 1. 4. Eph. 1, 16. Philip. 1. 4. Col. 1. 3. 1 Thess. 1. 2.—2. 13. 2 Tim. 1. 3. which sure must render his supplications of a considerable length. And (3*dly*) he requires these Churches προσκαρτερεῖν to continue instant in prayer, Rom. 12. 12. to pray always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, ἀγρυπνοῦντες, watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints, Eph. 6. 18. to continue in prayer γρηγοροῦντες, watching in the same with thanksgiving, Colos. 4. 2. to pray without ceasing, 1 Thess. 5. 17. and makes it the duty of the widow (after the example of St. Anne, Luke 2. 27.) προσκαρτεροῦσα, to continue in prayers and supplications night and day, 1 Tim. 5. 5. which precepts seem plainly to suppose their prayers should sometimes be extended to a considerable length; and therefore that he did not think that length was inconsistent with the injunction here delivered by our Lord. But then positively (1*st*,) these words seem plainly to condemn prayers lengthened out upon this apprehension, that we shall be the sooner heard for our much speaking, because this is the very thing, in which we are forbidden to be like the heathens; and yet this seems to have been also the misapprehension of the Jewish doctors, when they lay down these rules, (a) That every one that multiplies prayer shall be heard, and that the prayer, which is long, shall not return empty. And (2*dly*,) all that much speaking must be vain, by which we hope with our fair speeches, to incline, or, by our arguments, to move, or by pathetical intreaties, to persuade God to grant us our requests, whilst we continue in our sins, and so are indisposed to receive a gracious answer from him. And indeed what is it to attempt to move him by arguments, but to think to move him by something he doth not know, or hath not considered already? What is it to assay to incline him by fair speeches, and by importunity, but to look upon him rather as a man, that changeth without cause, than as an unchangeable God, who cannot vary from the just methods of his government, to gratify the importunity of his creatures? And yet experience shews, that when men have thus flattered and importuned God with their lips, they are apt to think, that he, on this account, will hear them, and that what is thus prevalent with men, cannot be lost, when tendered to a gracious God. And (3*dly*) the form and exemplar given us being so short and concise in its addresses, for the advancement of God's honour and of his kingdom, and our obedience to his will, for pardon of sin, and preservation from it; that we, in it, only request in general terms, things of so vast importance, leaving the distinct matter and manner and measure, according to which they should be disposed, to the wisdom and goodness of God; I say this form seems to instruct us, that in our daily and customary addresses to God, for the same blessings which we daily want, we should use words as comprehensive, general, and free from needless repetitions as we can, and then of necessity our prayers must be concise, and our words few, and well digested.

Ver. 8 † Be not ye therefore like unto them, οἶδε γὰρ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὧν χρείαν ἔχετε, for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask.] If this argument against speaking much be good, said some (b) Hereticks of old, why should we pray at all, seeing God knoweth all our wants before we pray? To this St. Jerom answers, that we do not pray to declare our wants, but supplicate for the relief of them; and we may ask any thing of him, who doth already know we want it; and if we know he is kind, and ready to supply our wants, may therefore ask with greater confidence. (c) Origen answers, that he who knows all our needs before we ask, knows also that it becomes not him to give what they do want, who do not think it worth their while to ask what they do want, and he alone can give; because by this neglect they do not own him, as the donor of the things they want. But, though this may suffice to answer the objection of the hereticks, for the due understanding of this text, it may be necessary to add, (1.) That this being offered as a reason why we should not be like the heathen in speaking much in prayer to God, seems only to import we should not do it on the accounts on which they did it, viz. as questioning God's omniscience, and therefore speaking thus to impart to him what he did not know, or to inculcate what he might not presently attend to, or suggest again what he had forgotten. But,

(2.) By comparing theſe words with v. 30. where we are forbidden to be anxious about what we ſhall eat, or drink, or wherewithal we ſhall be cloathed, for after all theſe things do the Gentiles ſeek; and your heavenly Father knoweth you have need of all theſe things; it may be conjectured, that theſe words alſo do refer to the ſame matter, to wit, the heathens ſolicitude about, and their continual teaſing of the gods in long harangues for theſe things. This being, in the opinion of the Greek Fathers, (g) the battology, and much ſpeaking, here reproved in the heathens by our Lord, to wit, the being thus ardent in their deſires after little and earthly things. And then this will be ſuitable both to the philoſophy of (h) Plato, who commends the ſhort prayer of the Lacedæmonians, who were never heard to ſay more than this, τὰ καλὰ ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς θεὸς δίδοιεν, that the gods would give them things good and honourable; which prayer, ſaith he, the Oracle preferred before the long addreſſes, and pompous ſacrifices of the Athenians, who quarrelled with the gods becauſe they were not heard for their much ſpeaking; and adds, that temporal things were not poſitively to be aſked, becauſe no man knew whether he ſhould uſe them ill or well, and ſo whether they would be good or hurtful to him; and to the opinion and practice of (i) Socrates, who prayed to the gods, ſaith (k) Xenophon, ἁπλῶς τὰ ἀγαθὰ δίδοναι, only to give him good things in the general, leaving the particulars to them who knew beſt what was good for him, and diſapproved of them who prayed for gold, ſilver, and for government, as being things which might be as well hurtful to, as good for them; and more ſuitable to the Chriſtian Theology, which allows us to aſk theſe things only conditionally, with ſubordination to the divine will, and if his wiſdom ſees they will be good for us; and, according to the ancients, not to pray for them at all, as knowing that, as far as they are good, they ſhall be added to them, who ſeek firſt the kingdom of God, and the righteouſneſs thereof; to which purpoſe they often cite a paſſage from this Chapter, not at preſent to be found in it, viz. (l) Aſk great things, and little things ſhall be added unto you.

Ver. 9. ℟ Οὕτως οὖν προσεύχεσθε ὑμεῖς, ſo therefore pray ye.] Here obſerve, that the word οὕτως hinders not this from being a command to utter the ſame words, as is apparent from theſe words of St. Luke 11. 2. When ye pray, ſay, Our Father, for the ſame word is uſed where a form of words is certainly preſcribed; thus, in the form preſcribed for the Aaronical Benedictions, οὕτως εὐλογήσετε, ſo ſhall ye bleſs, ſaying the words following, Numb. 6. 23. and when God put a word into the mouth of Balaam, which he ſhould ſpeak to Balak, God ſaith to him, οὕτω λαλήσεις, ſo ſhalt thou ſpeak, which is the ſame with τὰ ῥήματα λαλήσεις, theſe words ſhalt thou ſpeak, Numb. 23. 5, 16. So in God's words directed to the Prophets, οὕτω λέγει ὁ Κύριος, thus ſaith the Lord, Iſa. 8. 11.——28. 16.——30. 15.——37. 33.——42. 5.——43. 1, 14, 16.——52. 4.——55. 8.——66. 1. is the ſame with τὰ ῥήματα λέγει ὁ Κύριος, theſe things ſaith the Lord, Iſa. 30. 12.——37. 21.——52. 3.——57. 15.——65. 13.——66. 12. and ſo in the other Prophets. And had not Chriſt intended this, he would not have given ven his diſciples a form of prayer, but the heads only of the things they were to pray for. (2dly,) The diſciples requeſt him to teach them ſo to pray as John had taught his diſciples, Luke 11. 1. Now it is highly probable that John taught his diſciples to pray as the Jewiſh maſters taught their ſcholars, by giving them a form called Kaddiſh Magiſtrorum, from which they uſed not to vary. But though this be admitted, yet it is ſtill diſputed whether this form were only given by Chriſt to his diſciples to be uſed whilſt they were infirm and weak, and before the Holy Spirit fell down upon them, and was plentifully effuſed upon the Church; or whether it were given as a ſtanding form to be uſed by Chriſt's diſciples, or by all Chriſtians throughout all ages of the Church, as by the practice of the Church, at leaſt from the third century, they ſeem to have conceived. Two reaſons are alledged to the contrary, viz.

1*ſt*, That though we read in the Acts of the Apoſtles, of prayers made by the Church, or by particular members of it, yet we find not any intimation that they ever uſed this form of prayer. We read that they prayed, Acts 1. 24. that God would ſhew them whether Joſeph or Matthias were to be choſen into the place of Judas; Acts 2. 42. that thoſe who were converted continued in the doctrine and fellowſhip of the Apoſtles, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers, Acts 4. 24, 30. So we find the whole Church praying, that God would enable them to ſpeak the word with boldneſs, and would ſtretch out his hand to heal, and to ſhew ſigns and wonders through the name of his Holy Child Jeſus. See Chap 6. 6.——8. 15.——12. 5.——13. 3.——20. 36. But in none of theſe places have we the leaſt intimation that they ever uſed the Lord's prayer. In the Martyrology of Polycarp is inſerted a large prayer made by him after his condemnation, but it concludes not with this form, but with the uſual form of ſome of our collects.

2*dly*, Becauſe the ſecond petition in this prayer being this, Thy kingdom come, they do not think it reaſonable to continue a petition for that which is come already, God's kingdom being come, and erected from the time that our Saviour aſcended into heaven, and ſat down at the right-hand of glory. To this latter argument I ſhall give a full anſwer, when I come to that petition.

To the firſt objection, an anſwer may be returned from a known rule, that a negative argument is of no validity; indeed in matters of doctrine the argument is always good; we read of no ſuch doctrine in the ſcriptures, therefore it neither is, nor can be any article of faith, becauſe we have no other rule of faith beſides the holy ſcriptures; but then, in matters of practice, this rule will not hold good, the ſacred penmen being under an obligation to deliver the whole rule of faith, but under no obligation to give us a full hiſtory of all that the Apoſtles did; we never read that the Apoſtles prayed, or were baptized before our Lord's reſurrection; and ſhall we therefore ſay they never prayed, or that they refuſed the council of God, as did the Phariſees, in being not baptized of John. After our Lord's aſcenſion, we never read that any of the Apoſtles, ſave Paul and Peter, did baptize any; we read not that they ever did receive the ſacrament, we read not that half of them ever preached the Goſpel to any nations, and ſhall we therefore ſay they did none of theſe things? St. John informs us that there were many things which Jeſus did, which were not written, Chap. 20. 30.——21. 25. What wonder therefore is it there ſhould be many things which his Apoſtles did which are not written? (2*dly*,) In moſt of the texts cited from the Acts, we read not one word of the matter of their prayer, but only in general that they prayed; and ſo no ſemblance that they did not uſe the Lord's prayer. In the firſt inſtance, the whole conſiſts but of one verſe, in the ſecond, but of two. Now, after every collect, or ſhort ejaculation, no man thinks it neceſſary, or even proper to add this prayer; but only that in ſome of our moſt ſolemn addreſſes, publick or private, we ſhould uſe this prayer. For we are Chriſt's diſciples, as well as they to whom this prayer was given, and ſo muſt very fitly uſe that prayer, which is the badge of a diſciple of this Lord. The prayer itſelf is of all others the moſt excellent, and comprehenſive, and as plain as it is full, it is ſo ſhort that any man may learn it, ſo clear that all may underſtand it, ſo full as to comprehend all our wants, and ſo exact as to inſtruct us what we ſhould be, as well as what we ſhould aſk, as being, ſaith Tertullian, breviarium evangelii, an epitome of the Goſpel. It was compoſed by him who had the Spirit above meaſure, as a direction how and what to pray; and ſo, as Cyprian ſays, we may hope, ut facilius audiamur, to be more readily accepted by our heavenly Father, when we come to him with the words of his only Son. The learned farther do obſerve, that this prayer is taken out of the Jewiſh Liturgies, in which we wholly find it, excepting only theſe words, as we forgive them that have treſpaſſed againſt us: Our Father which art in heaven, is in their Seder Tephilloth, or Form of Prayers; let thy great name be ſanctified, and thy kingdom reign, in their form called Kaddiſh; let thy memory be glorified in heaven above, and in earth beneath, in the Seder Tephilloth; forgive us our ſins, in the ſixth of their eighteen daily prayers; deliver us not into the hand of temptations, and deliver us from the evil figment, in that and the book Musar: For thine is the power and the kingdom for ever and ever, is, saith Drusius, their usual doxology. And as hence Grotius notes, how far this Lord of the Church was from affecting novelty, or despising any thing, because it was a form; so others do hence justify the doxology contained in the close of this prayer, which some think to be an addition of the Greek fathers, because it is wanting in the Latin, in St. Luke, and in many Greek copies. See Examen Var. Lect. Millii, l. 2. c. 1. n. 2.

Note lastly, that this prayer consists of three parts, a preface excellently fitted to prepare us for prayer, by filling our hearts with charity to our brother, who bears the same relation to our common Father, with reverence to him, whose throne is in heaven, seated over all, and with faith and humble confidence in him, who being to us a Father, must be ready to do his children good, and being our heavenly Father, must, looking down from heaven upon the children of men, see all our wants, and must be able to supply them. The Lord's throne is in heaven, saith the Psalmist, he doth whatsoever pleaseth him. 2*dly*, It consists of six petitions, the three first of which call upon us to pray for the sanctification of his name, the advancement of his kingdom, and the performance of his will; teaching us to make the glory of God, and the advancement of his Son's kingdom, the chief end of all our actions; and having first done his will, then to expect provision and protection from him, and preservation from all evil: The three next respect, (1.) our daily sustenance, as being that without which we cannot be able to promote his glory, or to do his will. (2.) The remission of our past sins, that they may not obstruct his blessings, and preservation from them for the future, that we may not lose his favour. And, lastly, an agnizing the supreme dominion, the power fit to be ascribed to, and the glory due to God for ever.

Ibid. h Πατὴρ ἡμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς· Our Father which art in heaven.] This being spoken to his disciples, who were Jews, and had no distinct notion of a Trinity, must be understood in the usual notion of the Jews, who stiled the God of Israel אבינו our Father; and so must signify the first person in the S. Trinity, they being not able to apprehend it otherwise. Moreover, our Lord still calls the God of Israel his heavenly Father, Matth. 7. 21. —— 10. 32, 33. —— 11. 25. —— 12. 50. —— 15. 13. —— 16. 17. —— 18. 10, 19, 35. Luke 10. 22. clearly distinguishing himself in person from that heavenly Father, with whom, in essence, he was one. This phrase must therefore necessarily signify a distinct person from the Son, nor is it certain that it ever bears any other sense in the New Testament.

Now God is called Father, (1*st*.) by right of creation, He having made us, and not we ourselves, according to that question of Malachi, chap. 2. 10. Have we not all one Father, hath not one God created us? On which account the Scripture stiles him, the Father of our spirits, Heb. 12. 9. (2*dly*,) By right of providence and preservation, for he upholds our souls in life, according to that question of God to his own people, Is he not thy Father, which hath bought thee, hath he not made thee and established thee? Deut. 32. 6. He being that one Father who is above all things, by his power and essence, goes through all things by his providence, and is in all by his presence, Eph. 4. 6. (3*dly*,) By right of vocation and adoption, we being called to that faith in Christ, which constitutes us the sons of God, John 1. 12. we being all the children of God, through faith in Christ Jesus, Gal. 3. 26. and by the renovation of the Holy Spirit, who enables us to cry Abba, Father, Rom. 8. 15. and testifies to our spirits, that we are the sons of God, ver. 16. For as many as are led by the spirit, they are the sons of God, ver. 14. in which sense he is stiled, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named sons, Eph. 3. 14, 15. The angels, who by the Jews are stiled his family above, being oft called the sons of God, Job 1. 6. —— 2. 1. —— 38. 7. and good men, who are stiled his family on earth, being made so by adoption. Yet, though this be the most excellent notion of a son, and in this sense especially, is God the Father of the Christian; yet seeing, as the heathens have well noted, God is communis humani generis parens, the common Father of mankind; seeing he owned himself the Father of the whole nation of the Jews, and stiled them all his sons, the notion of a Father here, must be extended to all the senses mentioned, or at the least, to all to whom God is a Father, by calling them unto the faith; since otherwise, persons of tender consciences, who doubted of their renovation in the spirit, and of their right to claim the privileges of the adopted sons of God, could not recite this prayer in faith. And also, (2.) Then only could we pray for the regenerate in this form of prayer, and so it would be only an imperfect form; we being bound in charity to pray for all men, that they may hallow his name, and do his will.

Moreover, as this relation to God, as our Father, calls for our reverence of him, our fear to offend offend him, our zeal for his honour, Mal. 1. 6. 1 Pet. 1. 17. our obedience and likeness to our heavenly Father in purity and holiness, 1 Pet. 1. 14, 15. Philip. 2. 15. 1 John 3. 2, 3. and in love to all mankind, Eph. 5. 1. even to them that are our enemies, and despitefully use us, Matth. 5. 44, 48. And lastly, our patient submission to all his fatherly chastisements, Heb. 12. 9, 10. So doth it naturally tend to cherish our faith, and raise our hope of speeding in our sincere, fervent, and reasonable addresses to the throne of Grace; our Lord having taught us to conclude, that if earthly parents being evil, will give good things to their children, much more will our heavenly Father give good things to those that ask him, Matth. 7. 9, 10.

The word Our is joined to Father, saith St. Chrysostom, Ἵνα κοινον πατέρα ἔχειν διδαχθέντες, ἀδελφικὴν πρὸς ἀλλήλους διακείμεθα φιλίαν, That being taught, we have one common Father, we may love as brethren, and pray for all the members of the church; though this hinders not but in our private devotions we may use the singular number, and desire the supply of our own particular wants, provided we also intercede for others as well as ourselves; so David, O Lord, thou art my God, &c. It is added, which art in heaven; not to signify, that his essence is included there, for he fills heaven and earth, Jer. 23. 24. undoubtedly with the same presence, seeing he is not far from any of us, Acts 17. 25, 27. and whether we go up to heaven, or down to Hades, or fly to the ends of the earth, we can never fly from his presence, Psal. 139. 7, 8. And Solomon declares, That the heaven of heavens are not able to contain him, 1 Kings 8. 27. Vain therefore is the note of Woltzogenius here, that when God is said to be any where but in heaven we are to understand it, not of his essential presence, but of his efficacy, operation, and omniscience; for if the heavens cannot contain him, the earth must; if he fill heaven and earth, why not with the same presence? and seeing his power and essence is the same thing, and never can be separated, how can it be conceived that he should act where he is not? He is therefore said to be in heaven, because there is his glorious presence, where he dwells in light inaccessible. And by this phrase is signified (1*st*,) The high majesty and supreme excellency of God, and his dominion over all creatures; as in those words of Jehoshaphat, Art not thou God in heaven, and rulest not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? And Psal. 103. 19. The Lord hath prepared his throne in heaven; his kingdom ruleth over all. And so we owe to him the highest reverence, Eccles. 5. 2. and most exact obedience. (2*dly*,) His power, whereby he is able to do for us above what we can ask or think, 2 Chron. 20. 6. Art not thou God in heaven? and in thy hand is there not power and might, so that none is able to withstand thee, Psal. 115. 3. Our God is in heaven, he hath done whatsoever he pleased; and this engageth us to fear him above all, who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell-fire. (3*dly*,) His omniscience, by which he sitteth in heaven, beholdeth all that is done upon the earth, Psal. 11. 4. The Lord's throne is in heaven, his eyes behold, his eye-lids try the children of men; Psal. 33. 13, 14, 15. The Lord looketh down from heaven, he beholdeth all the sons of men; he fashioneth their hearts alike; he considereth all their works: And this should teach us sincerity, and a regard both to our words and thoughts at all times, but more especially in our addresses to him. Lastly, His infinite purity and holiness, Deut. 26. 15. Look down from thy holy habitation from heaven, and bless thy people. Hence is he stiled, the high and lofty one, who inhabiteth eternity, whose name is holy, Isa. 57. 15. and this teacheth us to be holy, for the Lord our God is holy.

Ibid. 1 Ἁγιασθήτω τὸ ὄνομά σου· Hallowed be thy name.] Note,

(1*st*,) That by the name of God, we are to understand himself; considered not precisely as to his essence; for of that we may enquire with holy Job, Canst thou by wisdom find out God? But as he is made known to us by his creating all things, to be God over all, infinite in power; by the beauty and exact order in which he hath placed all things, and the wise ends, for which he hath adapted them, to be a God of infinite wisdom and knowledge; by the law of truth, equity and righteousness, which he hath impressed upon our spirits, that he is a God of truth and righteousness; by the purity and holiness of his precepts, that he is a God of purity; and by the rich provision he hath made, both for the present and the future happiness of man, that he is a God rich in mercy and plenteous in goodness to the sons of men, and a true lover of souls. For, as in Scripture, τὸ ὄνομα, the name of any one is often put for his person, Acts 1. 15. Rev. 3. 4. —— 11. 13. or the glory and majesty of him that bears that name, Eph. 1. 21. Phil. 2. 9, 10. Heb. 1. 4. So here the name of God signifies the divine majesty, or God himself, as he is made known unto us by his attributes; in which sense, to call upon the name of God, or Christ, Gen. 4. 26. 1 Kings 18. 24. 2 Kings 5. 11. Psal. 116. 17. Joel 2. 32. Zeph. 3. 9. to love the name of God, Psal.

69. 36. Iſa. 56. 6. Heb. 6. 10. to blaſpheme and profane his name, James 2. 7. Rev. 13. 6. is to do this to God himſelf.

Note, (2.) That to ſanctify or hallow, when it is aſcribed to things capable of being changed to the better, ſignifies either to conſecrate, and ſet them apart from a profane to a ſacred uſe; in which ſenſe, the veſſels of the Sanctuary, ſet apart for God's ſervice, were hallowed; and the Prieſts and Levites conſecrated to God's ſervice, are ſaid to be ſanctified; or elſe to adorn with ſuch inward habits and diſpoſitions, as render them inwardly pure and holy; and thus we are ſaid to be ſanctified through the Spirit in the inward man. Now, the divine Majeſty being infinitely holy in himſelf, and exalted above all that we are able to conceive, cannot be hallowed or ſanctified in either of theſe ſenſes, but by analogy to them. He is then ſanctified by us, when we do ſeparate him from, and in our conceptions do exalt him above all other things, and when we do aſcribe unto him the excellencies of his divine Majeſty, and treat him ſuitably to them. According to that of St. Chryſoſtom, τὸ ἁγιασθήτω, ἀντὶ τοῦ δοξασθήτω, hallowed, that is, glorified be thy name. Now, how this may moſt effectually be done, we cannot better learn, than from obſerving how God himſelf acts for his glory and the ſanctification of his holy name; now this he does, by the diſcovery of thoſe perfections which naturally tend to raiſe within us a fear, and reverence, and love of him, truſt and affiance in him, and render us obedient to him, and in which it is our duty and our perfection to be as like to him as we can. And therefore, (1.) God glorifies his name, and ſanctifies himſelf by the diſcovery of his mighty power, rendering him able to do exceedingly above what we can aſk or think. So Pſal. 106. 7, 8. He ſaves them for his name's ſake, that he might make his power to be known: And, Iſa. 44. 23. The Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and in Iſrael δοξασθήσεται will be glorified. (2.) By rendering his judgments conſpicuous againſt preſumptuous ſinners, and thoſe whoſe hearts are hardned from his fear, according to that ſaying of Solomon Jarchi on Numb. 20. 13. The holy bleſſed God ſanctifies himſelf before his creatures, by the exerciſe of his judgments on them. Thus, ſaith he, Exod. 14. 4, 17. Ἐνδοξασθήσομαι, I will get me glory upon Pharaoh, and all his hoſt; i. e. I will ſhew my power, and juſtice in their deſtruction: And when God had broke forth upon Nadab and Abihu, for offering ſtrange fire, Moſes ſaith, This is that which the Lord had pronounced, I will be ſanctified in thoſe that come nigh me; and before all the people I will be glorified, Levit. 10. 3. See alſo, Iſa. 5. 16. Ezek. 28. 22.——38. 23. (3.) By rendering conſpicuous his truth and faithfulneſs to his promiſes; as when the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal. 138. 2. I will praiſe thy name for thy loving kindneſs and truth; for thou haſt magnified thy truth above all thy name; i. e. thou haſt been chiefly glorious in the punctual performance of thy promiſes. See Jer. 14. 22. (4.) By ſhewing the riches of his grace, mercy, and goodneſs to the ſons of men: So when God had declared to Moſes, That he was a God merciful and gracious, long-ſuffering, abundant in goodneſs, and forgiving iniquity, Exod. 34. 6, 7. he is ſaid to make his goodneſs paſs before him, and to ſhew him his glory, Exod. 33. 22.——34. 5, 6. Only it ought to be obſerved from the (m) fathers, That the great end of all God's glorious works and diſpenſations, in which theſe excellencies are diſplayed, cannot be this, that he may be admired and applauded by his creatures. It is vain to think the all-wiſe God can be concerned, whether ſuch blind creatures as we are, approve or diſapprove of his proceedings, or that he really can ſuffer any diminution of his glory, by our diſlike, or is advanced in honour by our approbation of his diſpenſations. We detract from his Majeſty if we conceive that he is tickled with applauſe, or aims at reputation from us in any of his glorious actions; that therefore ſuch as we ſhould think well of him, can be no farther his concern, than as theſe apprehenſions may engage us to that affection and obedience to, and imitation of him, which tends to the promotion of our happineſs.

God therefore, in diſcovering theſe divine perfections, muſt be ſuppoſed to deſign as well the benefit and happineſs of man, as the advancement of his honour. Thus, when he diſcovers all thoſe attributes which repreſent him good and merciful, kind and obliging to the ſons of men, he doth it with deſign, and in a manner, proper to lay the higheſt obligations on us to returns of love and gratitude, and to engage us to that imitation of his goodneſs and mercy to our fellow creatures, which renders us the children of our heavenly Father, Matth. 5. 45. When he gives ſignal demonſtrations of his almighty power, and his great wiſdom, he deſigns by this to teach us, that he is able to foreſee, and to divert the evils which may at any time befal us, and to confer the greateſt bleſſings on his ſervants, that ſo he may encourage us to truſt in him at all times, to repair to him in the time of need, and ſerve him faithfully, fully, in expectation of his favour and protection. When he manifests himself to be a God of truth and faithfulness, one who will punctually perform his promises, and execute his threats upon us; he doth this chiefly to affright us from those sins, which make it necessary for him to be severe upon us, and to provoke us to the performance of those duties, to which he hath annexed the greatest blessings. When he informs us, that his holiness and justice cannot permit the wicked to escape his judgments, or any upright soul to want the tokens of his love, or the reward of his sincere obedience; his great design in all this is, that sin, which is the rise of all our miseries, may be avoided, and holiness, which is the true advancement and best accomplishment of human nature, may be more earnestly pursued by us: So that God's acting for his glory, is also acting for the good of his most noble creatures; it is only recommending himself to their good liking and affection, that so he may the more effectually advance their happiness. Hence therefore we may learn,

1. That we sanctify or glorify God with our mouths, when we declare and do acknowledge these his excellencies; when we offer up our prayers and praises to him, as the author of every good and perfect gift, ascribing all the good we do, receive, or hope for, to him alone, and tell of all his wondrous works.

We sanctify him in our hearts, when we conceive aright of him, as a God infinite in all these excellencies, and consequently have such impressions on our spirits, as cause us truly to fear and reverence him, to believe all his revelations, trust in his promises, behave ourselves before him with all sincerity of heart, and uprightly design the promotion of his glory.

3. We sanctify him in our lives and actions, when the consideration of these divine excellencies engage us to obedience to his holy will, and to act suitably in all our dealings, to our belief of them; when we shew forth his imitable perfections in our lives, 1 Pet. 2. 12. by our sincere endeavour to resemble him in them; when we are fruitful in all those works of righteousness, which are, through Jesus Christ, to the glory and praise of God, Philip. 1. 11. and let our works so shine before men, that they, seeing them, may glorify our Father which is in heaven.

When then we say, Hallowed be thy name, we pray, That all men may so speak, so think of the divine Majesty, and so deport themselves towards him, that he may be thus glorified in their words, hearts and actions; and that all worship of idols and devils may wholly be abolished; and that this honour, as it is due, so may it be ascribed to him alone.

Ver. 10. [k] Ἐλθέτω ἡ βασιλεία σου· Thy kingdom come.] This cannot be understood of that general kingdom, by which God ruleth over all the world, that being always come, and capable of no amplification, and so we cannot wish rationally in any sense, that it may come. And it seems probable that it is not primarily and directly to be understood of the kingdom of glory in the heavens, we praying this kingdom may come to us, that we may do his will on earth. But, considering that this phrase in the prayer, as well as in the language of the Jews, respects the kingdom of the Messiah, which they then thought should immediately appear, Luke 19. 11. and which they were then expecting, Mark 15. 43. and were waiting for, Luke 2. 38. and which they daily prayed for in these words, (n) Let him make his kingdom reign, let his redemption flourish, and let his Messiah come and deliver his people. (2*dly*,) That this is chiefly the import of the kingdom of God, when our Lord in the Gospel speaks of it to the Jews, as is shewed, Note on Matth. 3. 2. b. And, (3*dly*,) That this prayer was composed for the use of Christ's disciples, when this kingdom of God was approaching; and both the Baptist, our Lord, and his disciples, began to say unto the Jews, Repent ye, for the kingdom of God is at hand: I think our Saviour, in the direct and immediate sense of these words, instructs them, out of zeal to God's honour, and that his name may be hallowed, and his will be done on earth, to pray, That his Gospel might be generally entertained by men with due faith and obedience; that all might own, and worship God in truth, receive his Son Jesus Christ, as their King and Saviour, and humbly submit to his laws; or in the words of the Jews, Hosanna to the Son of David, Matth. 21. 9. Blessed and prosperous be the kingdom which cometh in the name of the Lord, Luke 19. 38. And consequently, that it may reign in the hearts of all who do profess to own it, disposing them to an entire subjection to, and ready compliance with its precepts, and working in them those fruits of righteousness, and peace, and joy in the holy Ghost, in which this kingdom doth especially consist, Rom 14. 17. This being the kingdom of God intended, when it is said, ver. 33. Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and the righteousness thereof. We therefore, in this petition, by parity of reason, are to pray, that all men may become subjects to the kingdom of God, erected by Christ, that the knowledge of the Christian

Christian faith may come to all nations, that the kingdoms of this world may be the kingdoms of our Lord Christ, Apoc. 11. 15. all Kings and nations, people and languages, doing him service, Psal. 72. 11. Dan. 7. 14, 27. That his kingdom may be advanced by the coming in of the Jews, and by the fulness of the Gentiles, that the Christian religion may obtain every where, as well in reality as profession, the minds of all men being subdued to the obedience of faith, and they shewing forth the virtues of it in their lives.

Ibid. [Γενηθήτω τὸ θέλημά σου, ὡς ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς· Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth.] Note here,

1*st*, That we pray not here, that God may do his own will and pleasure; for he will always do whatsoever he pleaseth in heaven and in earth, Eccles. 8. 3. And, Who hath resisted his will? Rom. 9. 19. Whether therefore we pray thus, or not, he will do all his pleasure, Isa. 46. 10. and so it is needless to call upon him so to do. Nor,

2*dly*, Do I think, we here desire his will of providence may be done upon us; and we may chearfully submit to it; though in this, consists the life of Christian patience and self-resignation; for we here pray to do God's will on earth, as it is done in heaven, where there is perfect happiness, endless and necessary bliss, and therefore no occasion or possibility of submitting in adverse providences to the will of God. Nor,

3*dly*, Do we here pray, we may on earth be equal to the blessed angels, in the perfection, readiness, and alacrity of our obedience; it being not in the power of imperfect creatures, to do God perfect service; or of them, who have in them flesh still lusting against the spirit, the world still soliciting, Satan still tempting, and the corruptible body pressing down the soul, to pay continually that ready, chearful, and complete homage, which blessed spirits, freed from all those imperfections, conflicts, and temptations, yield: And therefore, such obedience, which it is impossible for us to pay, must also be unreasonable for us to desire. It is almost needless to add,

4*thly*, That we pray not here, That God would necessitate or inwardly compel us to do his will; for this is not to pray, his will may be done by us, but by him in us, nor could we then desire not to be led into temptation; but notwithstanding, by desiring his will may thus be done by us, we consequentially must desire all that grace, and that assistance of his holy Spirit, which is on God's part requisite to enable us thus to do his will. Now of these angels in heaven, we read,

1*st*, That they stand continually before the face of God, Matth. 18. 10. as being always ready to receive, and prepared to execute his holy will: Hence are they represented as having wings, and flying swiftly with them, whither he is pleased to send them, to shew the readiness and alacrity, with which they do his pleasure.

2*dly*, That they are stiled ministers of his to do his pleasure, obeying his commandments, and hearkening to the words of his mouth, Psal. 103. 20 21. This therefore seems to be the import of this prayer, that with as much readiness, alacrity, perfection, as the imperfection of human nature will admit of, we may yield obedience to his holy will, and imitate the blessed angels in a sincere compliance with it, without hesitation or reluctancy; and that, in order to this end, he would vouchsafe us those divine assistances which may enlighten our understandings, rightly to discern what is the good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God, and powerfully incline our wills, and strengthen all our executive faculties, to such a chearful, ready, constant, and sincere obedience to it.

Ver. 11. [m] Τὸν ἄρτον ἡμῶν τὸν ἐπιούσιον δὸς ἡμῖν σήμερον. Luke 11. 3. τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν· Give us this day, (or, day by day,) our daily bread.] Here let it be observed,

1*st*, That under the name of Bread, is doubtless comprehended all that is necessary for sustaining human nature, and so meat, drink, and cloathing: These things, saith Christ, your heavenly Father knoweth to be needful for you, ver. 32. and these things he hath promised, to those who seek first the kingdom of God, and the righteousness thereof, ver. 33. and therefore, will undoubtedly provide them. Having this food and raiment, the Apostle enjoins us to be content, 1 Tim. 6. 8. And thereby he defineth, saith Theophylact, what is sufficiency; with this food, Jacob terminates his wishes; for he desires only, that God would give him food to eat, and raiment to put on, Gen. 28. 20. And Agur only asks, that God would order for him τὰ δέοντα, καὶ τὰ αὐτάρκη, what he wanted, and would suffice, Prov. 30. 8. Moreover, seeing the reason of asking thus our daily bread, is the necessity of it for sustaining human life, it follows, that all other things must be comprised in that word, which are as needful to sustain it; to wit, that money, health to labour, and that blessing on our labours and our callings, which is necessary to procure this food and raiment; and that habitation or house, which is necessary to preserve us from the injuries of the weather; and that seasonable weather, which may enable us to reap the fruits of the earth, and so preserve us from perishing by dearth dearth or famine; it also doubtless must comprise those things which are not only necessary for the sustaining of ourselves, but of our family; for seeing charity requires us to ask these things, as well for others as ourselves, it more especially requires us to desire them for them to whom we are so intimately related, and for whom we are required to provide them. All these things seem to be necessaries contained under the name of bread, or food and raiment; and with a sufficiency of these, to sustain life commodiously, we must rest contented. But yet, I doubt not, that many other things may be comprised under this head, provided we do only ask them with submission to the divine wisdom, and if he sees them needful and convenient for us, submitting our concerns about them to his providence. Thus, v. g.

1*st*, Under the name of bread, may be comprised all those things which providence hath given, and designed for the nourishment of man, flesh, fish, fowl, wine, oil, milk, honey, the fruits of the earth, corn, roots, herbs, and of the trees that grow upon it; for all these things hath God created, to be received with thanksgiving, 1 Tim. 4. 3. He hath given all these things to man to eat, Gen. 1. 29.——9. 2, 3. He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herbs for the use of man, that he may bring forth food out of the earth, and wine, that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil to make his face to shine, and bread to strengthen man's heart, Psal. 104. 14, 15. And this is the import of the word bread, when Abraham said, Gen. 18. 5. I will fetch a morsel of bread, and comfort your hearts; for he brought with it butter and milk, and the calf that he had dressed, and set it before them, ver. 8. Thus Joseph saith, Set on bread, Gen. 43. 31. when they slew cattle, ver. 16. and had messes of meat, and store of good wine, ver. 34. See 1 Sam. 9. 7. 1 Kings 21. 7. And in like manner under the name of raiment, may we understand all those things which nature hath provided for no other use, we know of, but to cloath and adorn us, flax, wool, hair, silk; and which, by using to these ends, we only use unto those purposes to which they were designed by nature. And,

2*dly*, That we may have food and raiment in this sense, we must have all things necessary to this end; some having flocks of sheep, some herds of cattle, some employed in husbandry, some in gardening, some in dressing vineyards and oliveyards, some in cloathing, some in other trades, which provide instruments necessary for these employments; and if all these things are sanctified to us by prayer and thanksgiving, then may we ask God's blessing on our honest labours to procure them, and tender our thanksgivings to him for his blessing on these labours to that end. Note,

3*dly*, That the bread we are bid to ask is stiled ὁ ἐπιούσιος, that is, either the bread of the day present, or coming on: As when the Wise Man advises us not to say, αὔριον δώσω, I will give to-morrow, when we can at present do it, Prov. 3. 28. and not to boast of to-morrow. Prov. 27. 1. because we know not τὶ τέξεται ἡ ἐπιοῦσα, what a day will bring forth, or what will be on the morrow. So Chrysostom and Origen, ἢ ἄρτον τὸν ἐπιόντα, τουτέστι τὸν ἐφήμερον. And St. Jerom confesses, that some expound it, de præsenti cibo, of our food at present, because, say Theophylact and others, we are forbidden to be solicitous for the morrow: So also is the phrase interpreted by (o) Phavorinus, Suidas, and St. Chrysostom. Others interpret it the bread, ἢ ἐπιοῦσα χείρ, of the time to come, or of that future life God shall please to afford us, which seems best to comport with St. Luke, saying, Give us τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν, day by, or after day, our daily bread; and so ἐπιούσιον may also signify, as יום ליום doth, Psal. 13. 3. de die in diem, from day to day; and so the sense will be, Lord, give us day by day, that which shall be sufficient for the remainder of our lives: Both senses are good, and may be joined together, tho' I incline most to the first.

They who render this with the vulgar, panem supersubstantialem, as they do not consider, that it is in no sense, ἄρτος ἐπιούσιος daily bread, but ὑπερούσιος, more than we need for sustentation; so neither (2*dly*,) that this sense of the words relating to sacramental bread, obliges all Christians to receive the sacrament daily. (3*dly*,) That this sacrament was not then instituted, nor did the Apostles, for whom this prayer was made, know any thing of it. And lastly, that our petitions for spiritual bread are fully contained in the foregoing precepts. Note,

4*thly*, That the rich, as well as the poor, have need to put up this petition, not only by reason of the mutability of their affairs, and the uncertainty of those enjoyments which may be quickly taken from them, but also from the insufficiency of their abundance to feed and nourish them without God's blessing on it, which they are therefore daily to implore; we therefore are from this petition taught;

1*st*, How moderate our appetites should be towards these outward things, both as to quality and quantity, we being here directed to ask τροφὴν, ἢ τρυφὴν, bread or food, not delicious fare; our neceſſary food, not ſuperfluities; our daily food, not full barns, or treaſures to lay up for many years; a moderate proviſion to be dealt to us as we need it.

2*dly*, By directing us daily to apply ourſelves to God for theſe things, we are taught to own our continual dependence on him for our being; that we owe all we have, or can expect, not to our induſtry or wiſdom, to the ſupport of friends, or our own ſtocks, but purely to the conduct and bleſſing of his good providence; eſteeming his providence our beſt eſtate, his bounty our ſureſt treaſure, his fatherly care our only certain and comfortable ſupport: And therefore praying, that from the riches of his goodneſs, he would continually afford us what he ſees needful for us, and give his bleſſing, both upon our labours to procure it, and on our food to afford nouriſhment and ſtrength unto us.

Ver. 12. [n] Καὶ ἄφες ἡμῖν τὰ ὀφειλήματα ἡμῶν (τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν, Luke 11. 4.) ὡς καὶ ἡμεῖς ἀφίεμεν τοῖς ὀφειλέταις ἡμῶν, (Luke, καὶ γὰρ αὐτοὶ ἀφίομεν παντὶ ὀφείλοντι ἡμῖν·) And forgive us our treſpaſſes, (ſins) as (for) we forgive (every one of) them who treſpaſs againſt us.] Here note that this petition ſuppoſeth theſe ſeveral things, viz.

1*ſt*, That we who put up this petition are ſinners, and want God's mercy in the pardon of our offences againſt him. For ſeeing Chriſt requires all his diſciples thus to pray daily, he muſt exclude himſelf out of that number; who ſays he wants not this forgiveneſs. Hence Solomon informs us, There is no man that ſinneth not, 1 Kings 8. 46. None who can truly ſay, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from ſin, Prov. 20. 9. and that there is not a juſt man upon earth, who doth good, and ſinneth not, Eccleſ. 7. 20. And holy Job enquires, What is man, that he ſhould be clean, or he that is born of a woman, that he ſhould be righteous? Job 25. 4.——15. 14. The prayer of the Pſalmiſt is, Enter not thou into judgment with thy ſervant, O Lord, for in thy ſight ſhall no man living be juſtified, Pſ. 143. 2. St. James ſaith, that in many things we offend all, Jam. 3. 2. and St. John, that if we ſay we have no ſin, we deceive ourſelves, and the truth is not in us, 1 John 1. 8, 10. by all which ſcriptures it is evident, againſt the Pelagians and the Cathari, that this remiſſion of ſins is neceſſary, not for a few only, but for all Chriſt's diſciples, that they are not only humbly, but alſo truly to confeſs they are ſinners, and that if they deny it, they lie, and the truth is not in them.

2*dly*, This prayer ſuppoſes alſo that theſe our ſins, ſhould God deal with us according to the merit of them, muſt render us obnoxious to his juſt diſpleaſure, and that we therefore want the pardon of them. For ſeeing every ſin is a tranſgreſſion of God's holy law, it muſt render us guilty, till by an act of grace we have obtained the remiſſion of it. And,

3*dly*, It ſuppoſeth that we are humbly to confeſs our ſins to God, for he that begs pardon muſt be ſuppoſed to own his offence. And in requeſting pardon for our ſins, we confeſs ourſelves to be ſinners, and to need God's mercy. This petition alſo teacheth us,

1*ſt*, To lay the foundation of our devotions in humility; and when we are addreſſing to God for ſpiritual or temporal bleſſings, to acknowledge our own unworthineſs to receive them, that ſo we may more magnify his goodneſs, in affording them to thoſe who are leſs than the leaſt of any of his mercies.

2*dly*, This being the firſt ſpiritual petition we make for ourſelves, it ſhews how much we are concerned to obtain it; our happineſs depending wholly on the favour of God, and our miſery on his diſpleaſure. And that being obnoxious to his wrath by our omiſſions of what he hath enjoined, and our commiſſion of what he hath forbidden, we are firſt and eſpecially concerned to obtain the pardon of our ſins, and get him reconciled to us, eſpecially if we conſider, that any iniquity unpardoned will obſtruct the efficacy of our petitions for other things, and turn his face and his ear from us, that he will not hear. And,

3*dly*, The condition annexed to our petitions, in that clauſe, as we forgive, or the reaſon of it in thoſe words, for we forgive, ſhews us how neceſſary it is, that we may ſpeed in this petition, that we come to pray with an heart full of charity, and good-will to all men, and free from any grudge, ill-will, any rancour, or regret againſt our brother, according to that counſel of our Lord, When ye ſtand praying, forgive, if ye have any thing againſt another, that your heavenly Father may forgive your treſpaſſes, Mark 11. 25. ſeeing our own forgiveneſs depends upon this diſpoſition, nor ſhall we be forgiven without it, ver. 14, 15. Yea, we come to God with a lie in our mouths, when we ſay to him, forgive, for we forgive others their treſpaſſes, and pray, that, we may not be pardoned, when we ſay, forgive us, as we forgive others their treſpaſſes, if we do not from the heart forgive them. What this forgiveneſs on our part doth require, ſee Note on ver. 14, 15.

Ver.

Ver. 13. ὁ Καὶ μὴ εἰσενέγκῃς ἡμᾶς εἰς πειρασμὸν, And lead us not into temptation.] Temptations being of two kinds, (1ſt,) ſuch as are ſent for trial of our faith and conſtancy, or the improvement of our graces, and the example and encouragement of others; and that Chriſt ſpeaks not primarily of theſe, interpreters conclude, (1ſt,) Becauſe they, by the wiſdom of Chriſt, are made the portion of all Chriſtians, who are to take up their croſs and follow him, and muſt through many tribulations enter into the kingdom of God, Acts 14. 22. They are appointed to them, 1 Theſſ. 3. 3. and if they will live godly, they muſt ſuffer perſecutions, 2 Tim. 3. 12. (2dly) Becauſe theſe trials are ſometimes neceſſary for us, we falling into them only εἰ δέον ἐστὶ, if need be, 1 Pet. 1. 6. and are ſent for ſalutary ends by God, viz. to make us partakers of his holineſs, and to work in us the comfortable fruits of righteouſneſs, Heb. 12. 10, 11. and render us conformed to our Head, Rom. 8. 29. and ſo are repreſented as the gifts of God, Philip. 1. 28. And it ſeems not reaſonable that Chriſt ſhould adviſe us to pray againſt thoſe things which are ſo nedful for, and ſalutary to us. (3dly,) Becauſe we are bid to count it all joy, when we fall into theſe tribulations, Jam. 1. 2. are ſaid to be bleſſed and happy, when we do endure them for the ſake of Chriſt, v. 12. 1 Pet. 4. 14. and believers rejoiced in them, Rom. 5. 5. We are therefore only to pray againſt them, when they fall ſo heavy on us, as to be ſtrong inducements to make ſhipwreck of faith and a good conſcience, as in the caſe of the Theſſalonians, to whom the Apoſtle ſends to know their faith, leſt the tempter ſhould have tempted them, and made his labour vain among them, 1 Theſſ. 3. 5. in which caſe, as they are called καιροὶ πειρασμοῦ, times of temptation to fall away, Luke 8. 13. ὥρα τῆ πειρασμοῦ, the hour of temptation, which was to come upon the earth, from falling by which Chriſt promiſeth to keep the church of Philadelphia, Rev. 3. 10. πύρωσις πρὸς πειρασμὸν, the fiery trial, 1 Pet. 4. 12. which made ſo many of the Jews fall off from the faith. So in this ſenſe our Saviour ſuffering being tempted, that he might ſuccour us when we are tempted, Heb. 2. 18. doubtleſs we may pray that God would not ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able, but would with the temptation make a way for us to eſcape, that we may be able to bear it, 1 Cor. 10. 13. that he would ſo ſtrengthen our faith, and ſo aſſiſt us by his Holy Spirit, that we may be able to repel all theſe fiery darts of Satan, Eph. 6. 16. and may ſtand in the evil day, v. 13. and that he would either keep us from, or preſerve us from falling in this hour of temptation; for the Epiſtles are full of ſuch prayers made by the Apoſtles for the churches, or with directions thus to pray; and this is only praying that we may not enter into temptation, or may be delivered, when under it, from evil. (2dly,) Temptations are ſuch as lead to ſin, and ſuch are the temptations of Satan, ſuggeſting evil things unto, or raiſing evil motions in us; or of our fleſhly luſts by which we are drawn away, and enticed to covet that which is forbidden, Jam. 1. 14. And theſe are the temptations which we are here eſpecially directed to pray againſt, the other ſort being ſo only to be prayed againſt as they fall in with theſe, as being ſtrong temptations to ſin. For he who had taught us in the precedent words to pray for the pardon of our paſt ſins, may rationally be thought here to direct us to pray, that we may be preſerved from them for the future. And this may alſo be concluded from the following clauſe, but (when we are thus in danger of it) deliver us from evil; as we ſhall ſee in the interpretation of thoſe words. And in this ſenſe the word πειρασμὸς, tentation, occurs in Chriſt's exhortation to his diſciples, to watch and pray, leſt they enter εἰς πειρασμὸν, into temptation, Matth. 26. 41. when St. Paul bids the ſpiritual man reſtore thoſe that are overtaken with a fault, in the ſpirit of meekneſs, conſidering himſelf leſt he alſo be tempted, Gal. 6. 1. when he ſaith, they that will be rich fall into temptation, εἰς πειρασμὸν, and a ſnare, 1 Tim. 6. 9.

Now, by praying we may not enter into theſe temptations, we cannot rationally be ſuppoſed to pray that we may not be obnoxious to any ſolicitations or temptations to ſin; for whilſt we carry fleſh about us, this fleſh will luſt againſt the ſpirit, Gal. 5. 17. and the whole life of Chriſtians is a continual warfare and conflict againſt Satan and ſpiritual wickedneſs, Eph. 6. 12. againſt the fleſh, 1. Pet. 2. 11. and againſt the allurements of that world, in which we do converſe; and therefore to pray abſolutely to be freed from theſe temptations, is to deſire to be freed from the common lot and condition of all Chriſtians.

Yet becauſe there be ſometimes caſes in which we are more than ordinarily ſolicited to ſin, as Joſeph was, by the daily importunity of his miſtreſs, either by Satan's more impetuous aſſaults, as when our Saviour being hungry, was tempted by the Devil, to make experiment whether he was the Son of God, by commanding ſtones to be made bread, or by ſome circumſtances and allurements of the fleſh, or of the world, concurring with our inward luſtings, as when the young man is tempted by the harlot to luſt, or the indigent by his companions to theft or robbery, and in theſe caſes we by reaſon of our frailty, and proneneſs to theſe vices, lie under great temptations to offend, and to be overcome by that εὐπερίστατον ἁμαρτία, Sin which doth too eaſily beſet us; in all theſe caſes we are eſpecially to pray, we may not enter into temptation, this being only to deſire we may not be obnoxious to the continual peril of offending, and to the fierce aſſaults of a temptation. Note,

3*dly*, That to be led, or enter into temptation, in the ſcripture ſenſe, is to be drawn by the allurements of a temptation to commit iniquity. In this ſenſe Chriſt adviſeth his diſciples to pray, not that they might not fall into times of temptation, for they were then come; not that Satan might not vex or tempt them to evil, for this he told them they were to expect; but that they might not fall into temptation, i. e. They might not be overpowered by the incurſion of it; in which ſenſe the Apoſtle ſaith to the ſpiritual man, Reſtore thy brother in the ſpirit of meekneſs, conſidering thy ſelf leſt thou alſo be tempted, Gal. 6. 1. i. e. leſt thou alſo fall by a temptation. See the Note there. And to his Theſſalonians, I ſent to know your faith, leſt the tempter ſhould have tempted you, and my labour be in vain. See the Note there. And if we do conſider, that this petition, in the Jewiſh phraſe, runs thus, bring us not into the hand, or power of a temptation, we ſhall be eaſily induced to believe, this is the primary import of theſe words, tho' they may alſo ſecondarily requeſt, the providence of God would not ſubject us to thoſe circumſtances, which lay us under a great peril of offending; or when he doth think fit to do ſo, that he would not deny us ſtrength ſufficient to repel the violence of thoſe aſſaults.

4*thly*, That we may underſtand in what ſenſe it is fit to pray, that God would not lead us into temptations of this kind, we muſt know,

1*ſt*, That God cannot be ſuppoſed to lead any man into temptation to ſin, either by infuſing any evil principle into his heart, or by inclining, exciting, or enticing any man to ſin, or by laying upon any man a neceſſity to commit it, (See Note on 2 Theſſ. 2. 11.) ſeeing in all theſe caſes he would be certainly the author of it, as much as Satan and our own concupiſcence can be ſuppoſed ſo to be; and we in vain ſhould aſk of him, not to be led into temptation, who is diſpoſed to do thoſe things which will infallibly ſubject us to it. And hence St. James ſpeaks thus unto us, Let no man ſay, when he is tempted, I am tempted of God, for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man, Jam. 1. 13. God therefore can be only ſaid, to lead us into temptation upon ſuch accounts as theſe, (1.) That he is pleaſed to remove thoſe reſtraints which he had laid on Satan, and to let looſe his chains, ſo that he may freely aſſault, and try his ſtrength upon us; for it is carefully to be obſerved, for our comfort, that Satan cannot tempt us, at his pleaſure, but only when, and ſo far as God ſhall be pleaſed to permit him; as is apparent in the caſe of Job, whom Satan could not touch without permiſſion from God; and the example of the Apoſtles, whom Satan firſt begged leave to winnow, before he could aſſault them, Luke 22. 31. And ſurely he who durſt not enter into the ſwine till leave was given him by Chriſt, can much leſs fall on his diſciples without leave. And when God in his wiſdom ſeeth fit to grant it, he himſelf is ſaid to do what he permitteth Satan to effect. So when he permitted Satan, by his miniſters, to deſtroy the ſubſtance and the children of Job, Job ſaid, God gave, and God hath taken away, Job 1. 21. And God himſelf ſpeaks thus to Satan, Thou movedſt me to afflict him without cauſe, Chap. 2. 3. So in the caſe of David numbering the people, Satan roſe up againſt David, and moved him to number the people, 1 Chron. 21. 1. Yet becauſe God permitted him to do it, it is ſaid, 2 Sam. 24. 1. that the fury of the Lord was kindled againſt Iſrael, and he moved David to ſay, Go number the people. The coming of Antichriſt is ſaid to be, with the operation of Satan, in all power, and ſigns, and lying wonders, with all deceivableneſs of iniquity to them that periſh, 2 Theſſ. 2. 9, 10. But becauſe he doth this by God's permiſſion, towards them who received not the truth in the love of it, that they might be ſaved, but had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs, therefore it is ſaid, that God ſent them ſtrong deluſions to believe a lie, ver. 11, and 12. Becauſe God did not only permit this, but did ſo for the puniſhment of their infidelity and impiety; ſo God deſigning the deſtruction of a wicked Ahab, permitteth Satan to be a lying ſpirit in the mouth of all his Prophets, and ſaith to him, Thou ſhalt deceive him and ſhalt prevail, go forth and do ſo, 1 Kings 22. 20, 22. giving him full permiſſion ſo to do. (2*dly*,) That he is pleaſed to withdraw that grace which hath in vain been given, and take thoſe talents from us which have been hidden in a napkin. According to that rule of God's proceedings, To him that hath (i. e. improveth what he hath) ſhall (more) be given; but from him that hath not, (i. e. who by not uſing it, is as if he had not) ſhall be taken away that which he hath, Matth. 13. 12. and 25. 29. Here therefore note, (1.) That we are not ſufficient of our ſelves, without divine aſſiſtance, to repel and overcome the temptations of the world, the fleſh, and the devil, and to yield conſtant and ſincere obedience obedience to the will of God: For were this ſo, why ſhould we be daily aſking that of God, which he already hath put into our own hands? This hath been owned even by the wiſeſt of the heathens; (p) that there was never a good man without a divine aid; and that the imperfection of the human nature requires this aid, to regulate our paſſions, and conquer the difficulties of a virtuous life. And this is fully evident from all thoſe places of ſcripture, in which it is aſcribed to God alone to be able to keep us from falling, Jude 24. to be able to ſtabliſh us, Rom. 16. 25. καὶ στηρίξαι to confirm us in every good work to do his will, working in us what is good and acceptable in his ſight, Heb. 13. 21. and to work in us both to will and to do of his good pleaſure, Philip. 2. 13. And from thoſe places which require us to pray, that we enter not into temptation, Matth. 26. 41. that we may be able to ſtand againſt the aſſaults of Satan, Eph. 6. 11. that we may have wiſdom to direct us how to bear them, James 1. 5. and that we may keep ourſelves in the love of God, Jude 20, 21. For theſe things evidently ſhew God's grace preventing us, is neceſſary to make us truly willing, and his aſſiſting grace to make us able to perform our duty; and that we are not able to bear up againſt, and overcome theſe temptations, without the divine aid. (2.) Obſerve that this aid is not to be expected, without diligent ſeeking it by fervent prayer, and knocking for it with daily importunity, Matth. 7. 7. Luke 18. 1. Nor will it be continued to us without our diligent endeavours to make ſome due improvement of it; it rather is to be ſuppoſed that he who doth not rightly aſk it, ſhall not have it, and that from the ſlothful and unprofitable ſervant it ſhould wholly be withdrawn. And then, (3*dly*,) from the withdrawing of that which is ſo neceſſary to preſerve us from falling by temptations, and to enable us for the performance of our duty, it certainly will follow, that we ſhall fall by them, and ſhall neglect our duty. Now becauſe God denies, or withdraws this grace, by way of puniſhment of our iniquity in reſiſting, or neglect in aſking it, or our ſloth in not improving it when granted to us, he may on this account be ſaid to lead us into temptations, although he doth not otherwiſe concur unto it, than by withdrawing, or not affording his abuſed grace, to perſons ſo neglectful, and therefore ſo unworthy of it; becauſe by giving us thus up into the hand or power of the temptation, we ſhall as certainly fall by it, as if he himſelf led us into it. Thus becauſe when the Gentiles knew God, they did not glorify him as God, but fell into all manner of idolatry, God alſo gave them up to uncleanneſs, through the luſts of their own hearts, Rom. 1. 24. He gave them up to vile affections, v. 26. He gave them up to a reprobate mind, v. 28. as a phyſician gives up his patient to do what he will, when he finds he will not follow his preſcriptions. See the Note there. So, tho' Ahitophel gave Abſalom that wicked counſel, of going into his father's wives, and his own wicked heart inclined him to commit that inceſt, 2 Sam. 16. 21, 22. Yet becauſe God permitted Satan to inject this counſel into the heart of Ahitophel, and gave up Abſalom to his own heart's luſt, and did all this, for the puniſhment of David's murder and adultery; he by his Prophet ſaith, I will raiſe up evil againſt thee out of thine own houſe, and I will give thy wives to thy neighbour, and he ſhall lie with them; I will do this thing before all Iſrael, and before the ſun, 2 Sam. 12. 11, 12. And laſtly, becauſe the Jews ſhut their eyes againſt the Goſpel, and ſeeing would not ſee, and hearing would not underſtand, Matth. 13. 14, 15. the Goſpel was ſpoken to them in parables, v. 13. and afterwards taken from them, and God is ſaid to have given them a ſpirit of ſlumber, Rom. 11. 8. See the Note there.

And 3*dly*, God is ſometimes ſaid to do this, by leaving them under thoſe circumſtances, or by his providence placing them in a condition which he foreſees will, through the wicked inclinations of their own hearts, render them ſubject to temptations, and prone to yield to them, or fall by them. Thus was he pleaſed to ſend his Prophet to anoint Hazael King of Syria, 1 Kings 19. 15. Tho' he knew the evil he would do to the children of Iſrael, by ſlaying their young men with the ſword, daſhing their children in pieces, and ripping up their women with child, when he was once advanced to that ſtation, 2 Kings 8. 12, 13. Becauſe he was permitted to do this for the puniſhment of the ſins of Iſrael. And becauſe, by the flight of David, and the conſpiracy of Abſalom, occaſion was given to Shimei to curſe David without fear of puniſhment, the King ſpeaks thus, Let him curſe, becauſe the Lord hath ſaid unto him, Curſe David, 2 Sam. 16. 11. i. e. he by his providence hath given him an opportunity of venting thus his malice without fear of puniſhment. Thus God

God is ſaid to have turned the hearts of the Egyptians to hate his people, Pſal. 105. 25. not by infuſing hatred into their hearts, but by increaſing his people continually, and making them ſtronger than their enemies, ver. 24. Thus Jeremiah ſaith, Ah Lord God, ſurely thou haſt greatly deceived this people! Jer. 4. 10. i. e. as the Chaldee paraphraſt well interprets it, by ſuffering the falſe Prophets to ſay to them, Peace, peace, when there was no peace, Chap. 6. 14.—23. 17. And the Church ſpeaks thus to God, Why haſt thou cauſed us to err from thy way, and hardned our hearts from thy fear? Iſa. 63. 17. though he had only concurred to this, by withdrawing the Spirit, againſt whom they had rebelled, ver. 10. by with-holding thoſe bleſſings and tokens of his favour, by which they were encouraged to fear him, ver. 12, 15. and by ſubjecting them to the power of their enemies, whoſe ſervice made them alien from his fear, ver. 17, 18. So, laſtly, is he ſaid to lay a ſtumbling-block in the way of the righteous, departing from his righteouſneſs, and committing iniquity, Ezek. 3. 20. when he doth not recal him by his chaſtiſements, but leaves him to his own heart's luſts, and to the temptations of Satan and his evil companions.

So then the import of this petition is to this effect: Suffer us not, O Lord, either by the aſſaults of Satan, or the ſubſtraction of thy grace, or by putting us, for the puniſhment of our ſins, into thoſe circumſtances which may prove ſnares and ſtumbling-blocks unto us, to be led into, and overcome by the power of temptation; but be thou pleaſed to afford us always ſuch a meaſure of thy grace, as may keep us from falling by temptations; or, if we fall into temptations, may ſo ſupport us under them, that we be not foiled by them; or, if we ſlide, may be erected quickly by thy power, and ſtand more firmly for the future.

Ibid. [p] Ἀλλὰ ῥῦσαι ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ, But deliver us from evil.] The temptations we deſire not to be led into, being temptations to ſin, the evil from which we here requeſt to be delivered, muſt be either that of ſin, or Satan, the great tempter to it; if by ὁ πονηρὸς, we underſtand with Tertullian, Origen and Chryſoſtom, the Devil, who is a malicious, ſubtle, powerful, and diligent tempter, and therefore one againſt whoſe aſſaults, that we may ſtand firm, we are to pray always with all prayer, and watch thereunto with all perſeverance; or our own evil concupiſcence, vicious inclinations, and diſtempers of mind, by which we are enticed and drawn into ſin; this very properly is added to the former clauſe, as the moſt ſovereign expedient to preſerve us from being led into temptation, and ſo we may well pray, that, in order to that end, God would graciouſly preſerve us from thoſe evil frames of heart and diſpoſitions of ſpirit, which render us ſo prone to yield to a temptation, and from the violent aſſaults of Satan, who being once let looſe upon us, will not fail to hurry us into ſin.

Ibid. [q] Ὅτι σοῦ ἐστιν ἡ βασιλεία, καὶ ἡ δύναμις, καὶ ἡ δόξα, For thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory.] It muſt be owned that this clauſe is not in St. Luke, nor in many copies of St. Matthew, yet are there ſufficient reaſons to receive it as part of the Lord's Prayer, as being in the Syriack verſion, and owned in the Greek liturgies, and being in moſt ancient copies, and a familiar doxology of the Jews; and, laſtly, becauſe it is very unlikely the holy fathers of the Greek Church ſhould preſume to add their own inventions to a form of our Lord's own compoſing; but it is probable that our Lord, delivering this form twice upon different occaſions, might add this clauſe at the firſt time, and leave it out at the ſecond, and that the Latin copies, which are full of errors, might leave it out in both, leſt the Evangeliſts ſhould ſeem to differ in a matter ſo conſiderable. But of this ſee more, Examen Millii, l. 2. c. 1. n. 2. Now the import of this clauſe ſeems to be this, We pray thy kingdom may come, and that thy name may be hallowed, and thy will be done by all men, for thine is the kingdom, and all men are concerned to honour thee, and to obey thy holy laws; we pray for temporal bleſſings to be derived from thee, for the pardon of our paſt ſins, and preſervation from them for the future, for thine is the power thus to provide for, and protect us, and thou alone canſt pardon our offences; we pray for all theſe, for by thus hallowing thee, owning thy kingdom, and doing thy will; by thus pardoning, providing for us, and protecting us, thine will be the glory for ever and ever. Amen.

Ver. 14. [r] Ἐὰν γὰρ ἀφῆτε, For if you forgive men their treſpaſſes.] Note here, that God promiſeth in theſe words remiſſion of ſins, to him that forgiveth others; not that this virtue can alone obtain favour with God, where other Chriſtian duties are neglected; for though negative precepts are abſolute, and he that forgiveth not ſhall never be forgiven, yet affirmative promiſes admit this limitation, ſi cætera ſint paria, if no other condition of ſalvation ſhall be wanting. So, v. g. He that believeth not (the Goſpel revealed to him) ſhall be damned, is abſolutely true; but he that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved, is only true, if he perform the condition of his baptiſmal covenant, when he is in capacity to do ſo. Or (2dly,) This promiſe is made to him, who from his heart forgives his brother, becauſe he who doth thus forgive forgive the offences of his brother in obedience to God's commands, and from a sincere desire to obtain forgiveness of God, will by the same motives be induced to do whatever else is necessary to obtain favour and acceptance with him. Now to this true remission it is requisite,

1*st*, That our minds be wholly freed from all desires of revenge, or of returning evil to our brother, according to that admonition of St. Paul, Rom. 12. 19. Avenge not yourselves, but rather give place to wrath, for God hath said, Vengeance is mine, and I will repay it. See to it, that none render evil for evil. 1 Thess. 5. 15. 1. Pet. 3. 9. This being to do that ourselves which it belongs to God to do. And hence it follows, that we must not desire God to revenge our quarrels, seeing this shews a mind desirous to be avenged of our brother.

2*dly*, That we do not rejoice in any evil that befals our brother, according to that admonition of Solomon, Rejoice not when thy enemy falleth, and let not thy heart cheer thee when he stumbleth, Prov. 24. 17.

3*dly*, That we do not so retain the evil done unto us in our memory as to reproach him for it, or upbraid him with it, this being an indication, that we have not from the heart forgiven him. Thus the Jews say, that he who being desired by one to do that for him, which he refused to do to him, answers, I will not deal with thee as thou hast dealt with me; he, though he lends what is desired, doth not forgive.

4*thly*, That we be still inclined to shew kindness to, and be still ready to help and do him good; for what the law required the Jew to do to the beast of his enemy, Exod. 23. 4, 5. the Gospel doth assuredly require the Christian to do to his enemy; and if we, by consideration of the injury done to us, be restrained from helping him, we have not from the heart forgiven him.

And so far we must go in our forgiveness of all persons at all times, even though they do not ask forgiveness. When this is done sincerely, then,

5*thly*, We are to admit our offending brother into friendship and familiarity again; for if we from the heart forgive him, our heart must be toward him as formerly it was. Moreover this remission must be,

1*st*, Without delay, before the sun goes down, saith the Apostle, before we go to our devotions; for when you pray, saith Christ, forgive, Mark 11. 15. seeing we pray to God for forgiveness at present, and if we do not thus forgive, we cannot say, forgive as we forgive.

2*dly*, It must be an entire forgiveness of all, even the most heinous crimes; for this the example of the ten thousand talents, forgiven by our Lord, requires, Matth. 18. 24. And otherwise, when we pray to be forgiven as we ourselves forgive, we pray that our greatest crimes may not be forgiven.

3*dly*, This forgiveness must be extended to our brother, though he doth frequently offend, Luke 17. 3. for we pray daily to God for the remission of our daily sins.

Ver. 16, 17, 18. [s] Ὅταν δὲ νηστεύῃς μὴ γίνεσθε ὡσπερ οἱ ὑποκριταί, But when ye fast, be not as the hypocrites.] i. e. do nothing which may signify you fast to gain applause from men. See the Discourse of Fasting, Appendix the third.

Ver. 19. [t] Μὴ θησαυρίζετε ὑμῖν θησαυροὺς ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, but lay up treasures in the heavens.] These, and the following words to the end of this chapter, contain an excellent dissuasive from an inordinate affection to, and from an anxious solicitude about the good things of this present life, taken,

1*st*, From the consideration of the nature of them, they being fading and subject to casualty, ver. 19.

2*dly*, From the mischiefs of them, when our hearts are set upon them, and our minds are anxious about them. For, (1.) they take off our hearts from those true, spiritual and lasting blessings, ver. 20, 21. which we should primarily and chiefly prosecute, ver. 33. (2.) They corrupt all our actions, and turn them into deeds of darkness, ver. 22, 23. (3.) They rival God, and take off our affections from him, ver. 24. (4.) They shew great want of faith and trust in God, ver. 30. (5.) They add to the evils of this present life, ver. 34. discruciating the mind with cares, which are (1.) fruitless, ver. 27. (2.) needless, seeing our heavenly Father knows our wants, ver. 32. And he who is so liberal in making provision for the grass of the field, and for the fowls of the air, will not be wanting in his provisions for the necessities of his children, ver. 26, 28, 29, 30. And (3.) they are heathenish, for after all these things do the Gentiles seek, ver. 32.

Note also, that by the word treasure we are not to understand every thing which we lay up for the future, provided we be ready, when the glory of God, or the duties of charity require us, to part with it, for merchandize and husbandry cannot be carried on without something laid up in store; but that is, in the forbidden sense, our treasure, which we chiefly prize, delight in, and set our heart upon; as we may gather from those words, for where your treasure is, there will your hearts be also, ver. 21. and that which we do chiefly spend our time and study to pursue and prosecute, with the neglect, or to the hazard of our heavenly treasure, as appears from the opposition here. That which which we seek first, ver. 33. and are concerned for, tho' we be not rich towards God, Luke 12. 21.

Ver. 22. ᵛ Ἐὰν οὖν ὁ ὀφθαλμός σου ἁπλοῦς· If thy eye be single, thy whole body will be full of light; ἐὰν δὲ ὁ ὀφθαλμός σου πονηρὸς ᾖ, but if thine eye be evil, thy whole body will be dark.] That by the single eye, the liberal person, by the evil eye, the covetous man is intended, appears, (1.) From the connection of the words; for, the preceding words are a dissuasive from laying up treasures on the earth; the following, from the love of riches; and therefore the intermediate words most probably relate to the same thing. (2.) From the like use of the phrase, both in the sacred writers and among the Jews, who say proverbially, He that gives a boon, let him do it with a good eye, i. e. freely and liberally; and, Give thy first fruits ἐν ἀγαθῷ ὀφθαλμῷ, with a good eye, Eccles. 35. 10. so ψυχὴ ἁπλῆ, is the liberal soul, Prov. 11. 25. and to give ἁπλῶς and ἐν ἁπλότητι, is to give liberally, James 1. 5. Rom. 12. 8. 2 Cor. 8. 2. —— 9. 11, 13. And on the contrary, ὀφθαλμὸς πονηρὸς, the evil eye, is the covetous eye that envies others any share of its good things. So Prov. 28. 22. He that hasteth to be rich, is a man עין רע of an evil eye; and Chap. 23. 6. Eat not the bread of him that hath an evil eye; for the evil eye ὀφθαλμὸς πονηρὸς, is envious for his bread, and he is a niggard at his table, Eccles. 14. 10. Tob. 4. 16. Give alms of thy abundance, and let not thine eye be envious when thou givest alms; and Matth. 20. 15. ὀφθαλμός σου πονηρός ἐστιν, is thy eye evil, because I am good? So that the import of these words is this; As the eye gives light to the body, to lead it safely in the way, so the eye or mind free from covetousness, and ready to relieve the wants of Christ's needy members, will be a light to the Christian, to lead him in the way of life; whereas, covetousness being the root of all evil, he that hath this evil eye, must be led by it into evil, and walk in darkness, and in that way which leads to utter darkness; for the friendship of this world is enmity to God, James 4. 4. And He that loveth this world, the love of the Father is not in him, 1 John 2. 15. Now our affections are inordinately set upon the things of this world;

1*st*, When we are not contented with those things that we at present do enjoy, tho' we have what is necessary, to wit, food and raiment, 1 Tim. 6. 8, 9. for this man is ὁ σκληρὸς πλοῦτῶν, one that cannot be contented without being rich. See Note on Heb. 13. 5.

2*dly*, When being not satisfied with things needful, we are solicitous for superfluities, Luke 12. 15. See the Note there.

3*dly*, When we cannot freely give of our superfluities, when the necessities of Christ's members do require our charity; but we do this grudgingly and sparingly; and our charity is extorted from us by shame or importunity, and comes not liberally and freely from our hands, for then it is imparted ὡς ἐκ πλεονεξίας, as of covetousness, and not of good-will, 2 Cor. 9. 5. See the Note there.

Ver. 24. ˣ Οὐδεὶς δύναται δυσὶ κυρίοις δουλεύειν, No man can serve two masters.] Here is an excellent rule, by which we may infallibly discern what we do prevalently love in any case, even that which we cleave to, with neglect of that which stands in competition with it. And hence it follows, that we love mammon more than God: (1.) When we pursue it by unlawful or forbidden means; by a lie, as Ziba and Gehazi, by fraud, oppression, theft, violence, or by false testimony; for in all these cases, we despise God's authority to obtain mammon. (2.) When our labour and concernment for these temporals, doth cause us to neglect, or be remiss in the performance of our duty to God, then are we ἀμελήσαντες, despisers, and neglecters of his invitations, out of regard to our fields, our yoke of oxen, or our married wife, Matth. 22. 5. And, (3*dly*,) When we cannot part with them for God's sake, but chuse rather to make shipwreck of a good conscience, and quit our interest in spiritual, than in temporal blessings; for then we certainly cleave to them more than God, and him we do comparatively despise.

Ver. 25. ʸ Μὴ μεριμνᾶτε τῇ ψυχῇ. Take no thought for your life, ver. 34. Μὴ μεριμνήσητε εἰς τὴν αὔριον· Take ye no thought for the morrow.] We are not to imagine, that Christ doth here forbid our provident care and diligence, in providing, by our honest labours, things necessary for this present life, or even all care of improving ourselves, or getting wealth by this means; for God hath commanded us to labour with our hands, both for provisions for ourselves and others, Eph. 4. 28. This also is the reward God hath promised to the diligent hand, that it shall make us rich; and these enjoyments are useful, not only for the offices of charity, but also for the flourishing estate of kingdoms and commonwealths, and therefore cannot absolutely be forbidden. Nor can we reasonably think, Christ here forbids all provident concernment for the future, i. e. not only for the morrow, but the next month or year; all laying up provisions of corn, wine, oil, money, which œconomical wisdom doth require, and prudence in all governments instructs men to do. The solicitude therefore about these things forbidden here, is, (1.) A solicitude arising from a want of faith, or a surmise, that divine goodness may be wanting to us in things his wisdom seeth needful for us, ver. 30. (2.) A regard to these things more than spirituals, and with a comparative neglect of them, you cannot serve God and mammon; διὰ τοῦτο, and for this cause, I say unto you, Take no thought, &c. (3.) Such a solicitude for these things as makes us anxious, rends and afflicts our hearts with fears, lest we should want them, as may be gathered not only from the import of the word μεριμνᾶν, but from the reason assigned of this precept, Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof, i. e. the cares and troubles which necessarily attend each day.

And, lastly, Let it be noted, That tho', generally speaking, it be true, that the Gentiles ἐλπίδα μὴ ἔχοντες, having no certain hope of future blessings, sought thus after these things; yet some of their philosophers have used the same arguments against this solicitude, declaring, (1st,) That a philosopher and servant of God, ought not to be solicitous for these things, δεδοικὼς μὴ ἐκ τροφὰς αὔειν, as fearing he might want food to-morrow. Arrian, l. 3. c. 9. p. 109. and, l. 3. c. 36. p. 348.

(2dly,) That a good man ought to believe, God will provide things necessary for him; for, saith Epictetus in Arrian, p. 350. Φοβεῖ τὶς ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς μὴ λίπωσιν αὐτὸν τροφαί; doth any good man fear he may want food? Will he who is not wanting to the blind and lame, be wanting to good men? Doth God so neglect his servants and his witnesses of his care and providence?

(3dly,) They add, that this fear renders us worse than brutes, ὧν ἕκαστον αὐτὸ αὑτῷ ἀρκέμβιον ἐστὶ τροφῆς χάριν ἢ οἰκείας, which are content with their portion, and want nothing necessary for preservation of their lives. L. 3. c. 9. p. 108. See Examen Millii here.

CHAP. VII.

1. [a] JUdge not (severely, and without charity and mercy,) that ye be not judged (accordingly, James 2. 13.)

2. For with what judgment ye judge, (men,) ye shall be judged (of God;) and with what measure ye mete (to them,) it shall be measured to you again.

3. And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, (i. e. his lesser failings,) but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye, (i. e. thy own greater crimes?)

4. Or, how wilt thou say to thy brother, (without shame and self-condemnation,) Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye, and behold a beam is in thine own eye?

5. Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye; (i. e. reform first thy own greater sins, and then thou wilt be better fitted to reprehend the failings of others.)

6. (But then, that being thus fitted to correct the vices of others, you may not labour in vain, or run into hazards without cause;) [b] Give not that which is holy unto dogs, neither cast your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you; (i. e. continue not to preach the Gospel to those whom you find refractory, and pertinaciously confirmed in their infidelity, and so addicted to their evil habits, that they will rather revile and persecute you on that account, than hearken to you.)

7. (And that ye may never want what is necessary to the performance of your duty as Christians or Apostles:) [c] Ask (in faith,) and it shall be given you, seek (diligently,) and ye shall find, knock (perseveringly,) and it shall be opened unto you.

8. For every one that asketh (duly) receiveth; and he that (thus) seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh (thus,) it shall be opened.

9. (And of this you may be assured from the kindness of earthly parents; for) [d] What man is there of you, whom, if his son ask bread (of him,) will he give him a stone?

10. Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? (i. e. will he give him what is unprofitable for, or hurtful to him?)

11. If ye then, (tho') being evil, know how (and are inclined) to give good gifts to your children, how much more shall your Father, which is in heaven, give good things to them that (duly) ask him?

12. (And as I have thus taught you, how to obtain what you would have God do for you, so do I now teach you the best way to obtain what you would reasonably desire of men:) therefore, all things whatsoever [e] ye would that men should do to you, do you even so to them; for (in) this (rule) is (comprised the substance of) the law and the Prophets.

13. Enter [f] ye in at the strait gate, (that leadeth unto life, ver. 14.) for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction; and many there be which go in thereat, (with ease; but there is great need of industry, and much striving to get into the other:)

14. Because, strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

15. (And that you may not be led out of it,) [g] beware of falſe Prophets, which come to you in ſheeps cloathing, (as the old Prophets did,) but inwardly they are ravening wolves.

16. Ye ſhall know them by their fruits (for,) do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thiſtles? (Surely, No.)

17. Even ſo (it is not to be expected, that ye ſhould receive good from ſuch perſons; for) every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18. [h] A good tree, (whilſt it continues ſo,) cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19. (And yet it is of great importance, that your fruit ſhould be good; for) every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down, and caſt into the fire; (the puniſhment reſerved for ſuch falſe Prophets and evil-workers.)

20. Wherefore, by their fruits, ye ſhall know them, (whom I thus bid you beware of; for,)

21. [i] Not every one that ſaith unto me, Lord, Lord, (or calls himſelf one of my Prophets or diſciples,) ſhall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he (only) who doth the will of my Father which is in heaven; (and thus will it appear to be in the great day; for,)

22. [k] Many will ſay to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not propheſied in thy name, and in thy name, have caſt out devils, and, in thy name, done many wonderful works?

23. And then will I profeſs unto them, I never knew you; (i. e. never approved of you as my diſciples, therefore) depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

24. [l] Therefore, whoſoever heareth theſe ſayings of mine, and doth them, I will liken him to a wiſe man, who built his houſe upon a rock:

25. And the rain deſcended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that houſe, and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock: (So alſo will the obedient perſon ſtand firm in the day of trial.)

26. And every one that heareth theſe ſayings of mine, and doth them not, ſhall be likened to a fooliſh man, who built his houſe upon the ſand:

27. And the rain deſcended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that houſe, and it fell, and great was the fall of it; (i. e. ſo will it be with him, who lives not ſuitably to my doctrine.)

28. And it came to paſs, when Jeſus had ended theſe ſayings, the people were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine:

29. For he taught them [m] as one that had authority (from God to teach them,) and not as the ſcribes, (who only taught them what were the traditions and expoſitions of their fathers.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. VII.

Ver. 1. [a] Μὴ κρίνετε, ἵνα μὴ κριθῆτε, Judge not, that ye be not judged.] Here note,

1*ſt*, That Chriſt cannot reaſonably be ſuppoſed in theſe words, to forbid the magiſtrate to ſit in judgment on the criminal, or to condemn notorious offenders; ſince by his own authority it is, that kings do reign, and princes decree judgment: They are the miniſters of God, ordained for the execution of his wrath upon the evil doer, and the defence, encouragement, and reward of well-deſerving ſubjects; which office they can never execute, unleſs they have authority to judge, who are the perſons that do good or evil, and to paſs ſentence on them according to their actions. Moreover, we are obliged to pray for magiſtrates, that, under them, we may live peaceable and quiet lives; which, in effect, is to deſire that they may judge, reſtrain, condemn and puniſh the factious and profane, ſeditious and ungodly perſon. See Prov. 8. 15. Rom. 13. 4. 1 Tim. 2. 2. That therefore cannot be forbidden here, which is the duty and deſign of magiſtracy, and which all Chriſtians are obliged to pray for.

2*dly*, It cannot reaſonably be thought, that Chriſt doth here forbid Church governors to judge, condemn, and paſs the cenſures of the Church, upon notorious and ſcandalous offenders, becauſe he hath himſelf enjoined the execution of her cenſures upon thoſe who will not hear the Church, when ſhe requires them to repent of, and ſatisfy their Chriſtian brother for any treſpaſs done againſt him, Matth. 18. 17. He hath committed to them an authority to bind and looſe, retain, or to remit offences, as, upon due examination of the fact, they ſhall find cauſe to do ſo, Matth. 16. 19. which office doth ſuppoſe a power to judge, not only who offend, but what offenders may deſerve to be condemned, and to proceed according to their judgment in thoſe matters. St. Paul himſelf doth in the general declare, That it belongeth to the Church to judge of them who are within the pale of her communion, that he himſelf had judged the inceſtuous perſon; and that it was the duty of the Church to put out or exclude from her communion that wicked perſon, 1 Cor. 5. 3, 12, 15. And to deny the rulers of the Church this power is wholly to diſſolve her diſcipline, to lay upon her a neceſſity of giving holy things to dogs, which their great Paſtor here forbids, and render her unable to remove remove the precious from the vile, which they who are God's mouth unto the people, are obliged to do, Jer. 15. 19.

3*dly*, Christ doth not here forbid the Christian to pass a judgment on the manifest, or notorious actions of his Christian brother, seeing he doth enjoin such duties as cannot be performed without this judgment, v. g. He enjoins him to reprove his brother, and not to suffer sin upon him, Lev. 19. 17. to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but reprove them, Eph. 5. 11. to withdraw himself from every brother that walks disorderly, and not according to the traditions received from the Apostle, 2 Thess. 3. 6. to mark them who caused divisions and offences, contrary to the doctrines they had received from them, and avoid them, Rom. 16. 17. to turn away from them, who, though they had the form, denied the power of godliness, 2 Tim. 3. 5. not to communicate with him, who being called a brother, is a fornicator, or idolater, or a drunkard, 1 Cor. 5. 11. Now it is impossible that any Christian should perform these duties, who does not judge who walks disorderly, who commits deeds of darkness, who is a fornicator, or idolater, who makes divisions, and the like; and therefore, to forbid this judging, is consequentially to forbid the practice of these Christian duties. But positively,

1*st*, The reason of the prohibition shews, that judging and condemning others, must be here forbidden, which will render us obnoxious to judgment and condemnation from God; now such is all rash and uncharitable judgment, and all the judgment we pass upon our brother, without sufficient ground; viz. (1.) That judgment, which we pass upon his person, state, or actions, when we have no right or authority to do so, by virtue of our office, or that relation which we bear unto him, or the discharge of any duty which Christianity doth call for at our hands; for such a one doth meddle with a matter which belongs not to him, and doth usurp the office of him, who is his proper judge, and therefore must offend. To this effect is that enquiry, Rom. 14. 4. Who art thou who judgest another man's servant, when thou hast no commission from his Lord to do so; (2.) Such is that judgment or censure, which we pass upon another without sufficient evidence, as when we judge that action evil, which may, for any thing we know to the contrary, be good; that action done upon corrupt and evil principles, which perhaps was well intended, and free from any ill design; or when we judge that person hypocritical and obstinate, who perhaps only sins through weakness and infirmity, or want of better information. This rule I gather from those words of the Apostle, 1 Cor. 4. 5. Judge nothing before the time, till the Lord come, who will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the secrets of the heart; what therefore is not manifest, as the hypocrisy, or obstinacy of our brother, in many circumstances, cannot be; what doth depend upon his inward thoughts, as the intentions of our brother do, when they are not revealed by his words; is by this rule to be reserved to God's judgment, and we, by passing our verdict in such cases, must be too forward, and guilty of rash judgment. Such (3.) is that judgment which doth aggravate the actions of our brother beyond their just demerit, or passeth a more heavy censure on him than he hath deserved; for so far is our judgment false, and without ground, as it exceeds the nature and the demerit of the fact.

2*dly*, Our Lord here plainly seemeth to forbid that judgment of our brother, which is void of charity and mercy, and which is not consistent with the forgiveness of him. This may be fairly gathered from the connection of the words; for the preceeding words are these, Luke 6. 36. Be ye merciful, as your heavenly Father is merciful; the following words run thus, Forgive and ye shall be forgiven, v. 37. and also from that saying of St. James, Chap. 2. 13. He shall have judgment without mercy, who sheweth no mercy.

3*dly*, That judging must be here condemned, which begets in us a contempt of others, and makes us to despise and vilify them, as may be gathered from that question, Rom. 14. 10. Why dost thou judge? why dost thou set at nought thy brother?

Lastly, Christ by this prohibition, must be supposed to condemn our forwardness to judge and censure others, whilst we ourselves are guilty of far greater crimes; it being plain hypocrisy to pretend a zeal against the lesser faults of others, and yet allow much greater in ourselves. This plainly follows from the connection of the words, Judge not, that ye be not judged; and, why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, when, behold, a beam is in thine own eye? the Jews themselves used this proverb familiarly in this very case, against those who reprehended the least offences in others, when they themselves were guilty of very heinous crimes. See Cartw. Mellif. and Lightf. here.

Ver. 6. [b] Μὴ δῶτε τὸ ἅγιον τοῖς κυσὶ, Give not that which is holy to dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine.] By dogs and swine here, we must not understand all that are wicked and profane, either through ignorance or vicious habits; for Chriſt preached the Goſpel to publicans and harlots, and ſent his Apoſtles to preach it to that heathen world which lay in wickedneſs, and was dead in treſpaſſes and ſins; but ſuch wicked perſons only, as by experience they found, after the Goſpel was preached, and confirmed to them by miracles, were ſtill refractory, and pertinaciouſly continued in their filthy luſts, after they had received the knowledge of the truth; and were ſo far from embracing it, that they reſiſted and blaſphemed it, and were ready to perſecute and deſtroy the profeſſors of it; among ſuch perſons, ſaith Chriſt, ſpend not much time, ſeeing your labour will not be only loſt to them, but hazardous to yourſelves. Such were thoſe Jews to whom St. Paul having preached the Goſpel, they contradicted and blaſphemed it, and therefore he turned from them to the Gentiles, Acts 13. 41, 46. Such were eſpecially the ſcribes and Phariſees, and rulers of the Jews, who ſeeing that Chriſt did caſt out devils, ſaid, he did it by confederacy with Beelzebub, the prince of devils, Matth. 9. 34.—12. 24. who being reduced to ſilence by his miracles, were filled with madneſs, Luke 6. 11. and took counſel how they might deſtroy him, Matth. 12. 14. and confeſſing that he did many miracles, conclude thence, he was to be taken off, John 11. 47, 53. and conſult of cutting off Lazarus alſo, becauſe by reaſon of him many believed in Chriſt, John 12. 10, 11. And being aſſured of Chriſt's reſurrection, by the teſtimony of thoſe very ſoldiers, whom they had placed as a guard about his ſepulchre, corrupt theſe witneſſes with money, to diſguiſe it with a bare-faced lie, Matth. 28. Note alſo, that this ſaying was (a) proverbial among the Jews.

Ver. 7. [c] Αἰτᾶτε καὶ δοθήσε[ται] ὑμῖν, &c. Aſk and it ſhall be given you, ſeek and ye ſhall find, &c. for every one that aſketh receiveth.] To underſtand aright this promiſe, let it be obſerved, that to enable us to pray with ſuch an aſſurance of faith, that what we aſk we ſhall receive, ſome things are requiſites in the party praying, ſome as to the matter, and ſome as to the manner of his prayer. And,

1*ſt*, The perſon who expects his prayer ſhould find acceptance with God, muſt not perſiſt in any way of ſin, his heart and his affections muſt be taken off from every evil way; for, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, If I regard iniquity in my heart, God will not hear my prayer, Pſal. 66. 18. And otherwiſe, in our addreſſes to God for preſervation from ſin, we do but flatter him with our lips, and diſſemble with our double hearts, we being not diſpoſed, or willing to forſake that ſin we pray againſt.

2*dly*, He muſt begin at leaſt to be a doer of God's will, one who ſincerely doth deſire to fear him, and who doth uprightly purpoſe and reſolve, that he will keep his righteous precepts; for, if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doth his will, him he heareth, John 9. 31. when once this holy fear is rooted in our hearts, his ear will be ſtill open to our prayers, for he will fulfil the deſires of them that fear him, and when they call he will anſwer them, Pſal. 145. 19. And whilſt we do perſiſt in the ſincerity of our obedience, we ſhall retain this humble confidence of our acceptance; for if our hearts condemn us not, (of inſincerity) then have we confidence with God, and we know that what we aſk we receive, becauſe we keep his commandments, 1 John 3. 21, 22.

To clear both theſe particulars, conſider that true prayer is attended with a ſtrong deſire, that we may enjoy the bleſſing we pray for, and alſo that we addreſs to God for the aſſiſtance of our weakneſs and inability to compaſs the deſired bleſſing, by our own induſtry, without divine aſſiſtance; ſo that in all our addreſſes to God, for preſervation from, or ſtrength againſt any temptations, or aſſaults of ſin, or the mortification of any evil habit, which we have contracted, we ſolemnly profeſs to him, we are very willing, and deſirous to mortify that ſin, and be preſerved from that temptation; and in all our ſupplications for grace, to perform our duty, or to increaſe in any virtuous habit, we declare that we are truly willing to perform that duty, we earneſtly deſire to advance to higher meaſures in that Chriſtian virtue, and that we therefore ſue to him for power to enable us to do according to thoſe good deſires. Now theſe profeſſions made to God, muſt be hypocritical and falſe, and therefore cannot render any of our prayers ſucceſsful; or elſe we muſt be truly willing, and deſirous to break off our ſins by repentance, and to perform that duty which we owe to God, before we do addreſs to him for ſtrength, for the performance of our duty, and preſervation from ſin.

Again, ſeeing that God, to whom we pray, is in himſelf immutable, and in the holineſs and perfections of his nature is unchangeable, ſeeing he always acts agreeably to thoſe ſtanding rules of righteouſneſs, he hath declared in his word, it muſt be vain for us to hope, by argument to move, by fair ſpeeches to incline, or by pathetical intreaties to perſuade him, to do any thing which is not ſuitable to this purity of his nature, and to the juſtice of his government; when therefore we aſk pardon of thoſe ſins, we are not willing to forſake, when we deſire his friendſhip or or protection, whilst we continue violators of his holy laws, and rebels to his government, it is impossible we should prevail in our addresses, because it is not consistent with the honour of a just and holy God to grant what we desire; we pray against the declarations of his holy will, against the laws of his government, and the perfections of his nature, and so we cannot hope that our desires should be granted; since then God changeth not, if we desire that our prayers should find acceptance with him, the change must be in us; in our affections, from a love, to an hatred of every evil way, from a dislike, to an approbation of the ways of piety; in our wills, from a perverse and disobedient, to a willing mind; and then that God, who is immutable, will therefore be disposed to hear us, for he unchangeably is willing to shew kindness to his friends, and give assistance to every soul that uprightly desires to fear and serve him.

3*dly*, He must be one who doth forgive his brother's trespasses, that he may be disposed to obtain the pardon of his own. A man, saith the son of Syrach, beareth hatred against another, and doth he hope for pardon from the Lord? He sheweth no mercy to a man that is like himself, and doth he ask forgiveness of his own sins? Eccluſ. 28. 3, 4. When ye stand praying, saith our Lord, forgive if you have ought against any man, that your heavenly Father may forgive you; for if you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses, Mark 11. 25, 26.

4*thly*, He must be free from all injustice, injury, and wrong, done to his neighbour, or ready to make satisfaction for it, according to that resolution of the Psalmist, I will wash my hands in innocency and so will I compass thine altar, Psal. 26. 6. We must not offer our oblation to God, till we have offered, or are resolved, as we have opportunity, to offer reasonable satisfaction to our brother; for if thou bringest thy gift to the altar, saith our Lord, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way, first be reconciled to thy brother, then come and offer thy gift, Matth. 5. 23, 24. To proceed to the matter of our petitions.

1*st*, What we ask must be agreeable to the holy will of God; for if we ask any thing according to his will he heareth us, 1 John 5. 14. And this must be the limit of all our acceptable desires, it being neither possible in nature, that he can, nor fit in reason that he should, permit our foolish wills to thwart the counsel of his wisdom. It must be also something which comporteth with, and tendeth to his glory, that being the great end of all our rational desires, that God in all things may be glorified. And hence observe, that even spiritual blessings may be asked amiss, and so as not to be obtained, because we are not fitted to receive them in that way in which alone it is for God's glory to confer them. As when we would enjoy the end, but will not use the means, by divine wisdom appointed for the obtaining that end: v. g. He that desires to be saved, desires what is agreeable to his will, who would have all men to be saved; but if he will not also, by continuance in well-doing, seek for glory and immortality, if he will not work out his salvation with fear and trembling, if he will not have his fruit unto holiness, the end can never be eternal life, because God hath made holiness the means, obedience the condition, of salvation; and it is in the nature of the thing impossible that an impure soul should be prepared for the enjoyment of an holy God; or is it for his honour to confer this blessing on the disobedient, or to admit unholy souls into his blissful presence. And tho' our gracious God be willing we should be saved, he is not willing we should be so, whether we will or no; he is not willing we should be saved, tho' we use not the means appointed by him, to obtain salvation. Again, it is certainly agreeable to the mind of God, that we should abstain from that iniquity, which is a provocation to the pure eyes of his glory, and it is doubtless for his honour, that we should do so; but tho' we pray to be preserved from it, yet if we add not our sincere endeavours, if we do not watch as well as pray, that we enter not into temptation, and as much as in us lies, avoid the occasions of, resist the temptations and solicitations to it, our prayer for preservation will not be successful, because we are not uprightly disposed to use the means, for preservation from it, which God hath put into our hands.

2*dly*, What we thus ask, must be what is truly good for us, and were we intirely wise, we should not be capable of tendering to God a request, which doth not minister to this end, because good is the adequate object of all our rational desires, and when we ignorantly put up addresses for what he in his wisdom seeth not to be good for, but rather hurtful to us, it is out of pure kindness and concern for us, that he denieth our requests. To proceed,

3*dly*, To the manner requisite to render these our prayers successful;

1*st*, We must pray in faith, that is, with an entire persuasion that God is able to supply all our wants; that divine wisdom discerneth all our real needs, and knows how to relieve them; sees all our miseries and troubles, and knows how to convert them to our good, or work deliverance from from them in the fitteſt ſeaſon, that he will be exactly true to all his promiſes, and ſo will not with-hold any good thing from them that lead a godly life; that laſtly, he is a God of immenſe goodneſs, and therefore willing to beſtow upon his ſervants, all that his wiſdom ſeeth good and neceſſary for them; what things ſoever you deſire in prayer, believe that you ſhall receive them, and ye ſhall receive them, Matth. 21. 22. If you have faith, μὴ διακριθῆτε, and doubt not, ver. 21. if ye aſk in faith, μὴ διακρινόμενοι, not doubting of his power or will to do what is for his glory and your good. See Note on James 1. 6. Aſk, and you ſhall receive.

2*dly*, If our petitions be not inſtantly granted, we muſt pray (for ſpiritual things eſpecially) with perſeverance, and wait with patience till he will be gracious, for we muſt pray always, and not faint, Luke 18. 1. Eph. 6. 18. And,

3*dly*, We muſt pray (at leaſt for ſpiritual bleſſings) with fervency of ſpirit, we muſt knock, ſaith the metaphor here, we muſt ἀγωνίζεσθαι, be in agonies of devotion for them, Col. 4. 12. to ſhew how much we prize them, the fervent being the availing prayer, Jam. 5. 16.

Ver. 9. [d] Ἢ τίς ἐστιν ἐξ ὑμῶν ἄνθρωπος, ὃν ἐὰν αἰτήσῃ——μὴ λίθον ἐπιδώσει αὐτῷ;] For the conſtruction of theſe words, let it be noted from Stephanus, that ἤ at the beginning of a ſentence, no other particle preceding, ſignifies an; ſo Judg. 14. 15. ἢ ἐκβιάσασθαι ἡμᾶς κεκλήκατε, have ye called Samſon to do us violence? 1 Sam. 10. 12. ἢ καὶ Σαοὺλ ἐν τοῖς προφήταις, Is Saul alſo among the prophets? So Matth. 20. 15. ἢ οὐκ ἔξεστί——ἢ ὁ ὀφθαλμός σου; Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with my own? is thine eye evil becauſe I am good? 1 Cor. 14. 36. ἢ ἀφ' ὑμῶν ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθεν, ἢ εἰς ὑμᾶς μόνους κατήντησεν; came the word of God from you, came it to you only? So here ἢ τίς, is there any man among you, ὃν ἐὰν αἰτήσῃ——ἄρτον; of whom his ſon ſhall ask bread? μὴ is only the ſign of an interrogation: So Gen. 18. 14. μὴ ἀδυνατήσει; ſhall any thing be too hard for God? Ver. 17. μὴ κρύψω; ſhall I hide from Abraham? Ver. 23. μὴ συναπολέσεις; wilt thou deſtroy the righteous with the wicked? Judg. 9. 9, 11, 13. μὴ ἀπολείψασα; ſhall I leave my fatneſs? ſhall I leave my ſweetneſs? ſhall I leave my wine? Jer. 32. 27. μὴ κρυβήσεται; ſhall any thing be hid from me? See Gen. 27. 38.——30. 15.——31. 14.——41. 38.——43. 7. So that the whole verſe runs thus, Is there any man among you of whom his ſon ſhall ask bread, will that man give him a ſtone?

Ver. 12. [e] Πάντα οὖν ὅσα ἂν θέλητε ἵνα ποιῶσιν ὑμῖν ἄνθρωποι, οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς ποιεῖτε αὐτοῖς, Whatſoever you would that men ſhould do to you, do you even ſo to them, &c.] Here the critical note is this, that we are not to look for a connection of theſe words to the former, though they be introduced with the particle οὖν, therefore; that being, ſaith Phavorinus, often ἀργὸν, an expletive, or ſerving only by way of tranſition from one thing to another; others connect the words thus, viz. that in the immediate preceding words our Lord inſtructs us by a compariſon taken from men, that we may reaſonably expect our heavenly Father will confer upon us all thoſe bleſſings, which he ſees needful for us, and we can reaſonably deſire, provided that we ask them with faith and importunity, and do with diligence ſeek them; and hence, ſaith Grotius, our Lord infers, that we who ſtand engaged to be followers of God, as dear children, ſhould be as ready to afford to others all needful aid, which they, on the account of equity, humanity and Chriſtian charity deſire of us; this being only that, which, in like caſes, we expect from others. Hence, in St. Luke, Chap. 6. 30. our Lord is introduced, ſaying, Give to every one that asketh; and as you would that men ſhould do to you, do ye even ſo to them, ver. 31. But, for explication of this rule, note,

1*ſt*, That it was a rule which obtained both among Jews and Gentiles, and was delivered by them in ſome variety of words, but with great harmony of ſenſe; firſt poſitively, as here,

Quod tibi fieri vis, fac alteri.
Γενοῦ πᾶσιν ὡς σοι θέλεις πάντας. Nilus.

And alſo negatively,

Quod tibi fieri non vis, alteri ne feceris.
Quod damnaturus ſis in aliis, in te non admiſeris.
Ὅπερ σου μισεῖς παρ' ἑτέρων σοὶ γίνεσθαι, εἰς ἑτέρους μὴ ποίει.
Ἃ πάσχοντες ὑφ' ἑτέρων ἀγριζόμεθα, ταῦτα τοῖς ἄλλοις μὴ ποιεῖτε. Iſocrat. ad Nicocl. Or. 3.

and in thoſe words of Hillel, Do not thou that to thy neighbour, which thou hateſt when it is done to thee; which rule in Tobit, Chap. 4. 15. is expreſſed thus, ὃ μισεῖς μηδενὶ ποιήσῃς, do that to no man which thou hateſt.

2*dly*, That this rule being given as the ſum of the law and the Prophets, or an abridgment of the rules of juſtice preſcribed by them, can never duly be ſo conſtrued, as to ſubvert any of the laws and orders eſtabliſhed by them, or thwart the proper rules of charity, or juſtice. And therefore this rule admits theſe limitations.

3*dly*, Whatſoever I deſire with a well ordered or regulated will, that is, what I deſire agreeably to the dictates of right reaſon, or to the principles of Chriſtian religion, ſhould be done, or not done to me; that I muſt do, or not do to others. It therefore will not follow from this rule, that if a pot-companion would give me drink to exceſs, that I muſt give him drink to exceſs; or that if Socrates would lend his wife to his friend, that friend ſhould do the like to him; becauſe that which is here preſcribed as a rule of charity and juſtice among Chriſtians, could never be intended to countenance what is oppoſite to charity and juſtice, to the law and the Prophets, and more eſpecially to the precepts of Chriſtianity. And ſo, as to the negative part of this rule, though a criminal or guilty perſon, would not have the judge condemn him, or the witneſſes give in teſtimony againſt him, but would be pardoned after condemnation; yet he who is a judge, were he ſuch a perſon, muſt not forbear to condemn, or always pardon the condemned criminal, ſince this practice would take away vindictive juſtice, and let all offenders go unpuniſhed.

4*thly*, This rule muſt be interpreted as a rule of proportion, binding us to do, or not to do that to others, which in like ſtate, condition, or relation we would, or we would not have done to ourſelves, v. g. It requires not the maſter to obey his ſervants, becauſe he would have them obedient to him, but to be as obedient to his maſters, as he can reaſonably expect they ſhould be to him, and to treat his ſervants as kindly and favourably, as, if he were a ſervant, he could reaſonably deſire to be treated by his maſter: The Prince muſt not be ſubject to his people, as he would have them be to him, but he muſt treat them with that equity and kindneſs, which, if he were a ſubject, he reaſonably might expect from a Prince duly regardful of his ſubjects weal; and ſo proportionably in the relations of father and children, man and wife, maſter and ſcholar, paſtor and flock, &c.

5*thly*, This rule muſt not be extended to every thing which another may lawfully do to me, and therefore I deſire he would do; but only to what I may deſire of him, or expect from him as his duty, on the account of equity and juſtice, charity, friendſhip, or relation. Thus, if a poor man would deſire, that ſome very wealthy perſon would give him out of his eſtate enough to make him rich; though, were this rich man poor, he would be glad if ſome body would ſhew the like kindneſs to him, yet he is not obliged by this rule, though lawfully he might do it, to make this poor man rich, becauſe he ſtands not bound by any law of charity or juſtice ſo to do. And,

6*thly*, Note that this rule, as it is poſitive, reſpects not only our outward actions, but even our words and thoughts, requiring us to ſpeak, think and judge of others, as, in like circumſtances, we may in equity and reaſon expect they ſhould ſpeak, think, or judge of us. As it is negative, it muſt require us not to ſpeak, think, or judge of others, as we conceive, that, in like circumſtances, they ought not to ſpeak, think, or judge of us; for there is an equity to be obſerved in our words and thoughts of others, as well as in our actions, and a judgment of charity, and a righteous judgment, as well as a labour of love, and a righteous deed; and alſo an evil word and thought, and a wrong judgment, which therefore ought to be forborn from principles of love and equity.

Ver. 13, 14. f Enter in at the ſtrait gate, &c. Of the metaphor of a ſtrait gate, ſee note on Chap. 8. 11. and note, that the way of virtue and felicity is repreſented by the heathen ſages under the like metaphor; thus Cebes ſaith, that there is at the entrance of it θύρα τίς μικρὰ a little gate, and ἀνάβασις σφὸ πάνυ, the way hath a very ſtrait aſcent, and is a way not troden in, which πάνυ ὀλίγοι πορεύονται, very few walk in, as ſeeming to be difficult, τραχεῖα καὶ σκληρός, rough and rocky. And yet this is no contradiction to thoſe ſcriptures, which repreſent the ways of wiſdom, as ways of pleaſantneſs, and the yoke of Chriſt as eaſy, and his commandments as not grievous; for this way is only rough and grievous at our firſt entrance into it, when we have many old acquaintances and ſeeming friends to part with, and evil habits to put off, and till faith and patience have ſmoothed it to us; but then we can rejoice in tribulations, and take pleaſure in infirmities, and love will make it pleaſant to us, when temperance and patience, ſaid Cebes, have lifted us to the top of the hill, then is it ὁδὸς καλὴ τε καὶ ὁμαλὴ καὶ ἀπόφορος, a way that is pleaſant, ſmooth, and eaſy to be trode, free from all evil, and leading to the regions of felicity. And whereas it is added, ὅτι στενὴ ἡ πύλη, becauſe ſtrait is the gate, ὅτι there ſhould be rendered but, for the Hebrew כי which anſwers to it, often ſignifies, and is therefore rendered by the Septuagint, ἀλλὰ or ἀλλ' ἢ but, viz. 2 Chron. 20. 25. Pſal. 44. 3. Dan. 9. 18. Amos 7. 14. And ſometimes ὅτι, in the ſenſe of but, ſo 1 Kings 21. 15. Naboth is not alive, כי מת ὅτι τέθνηκε, but dead; 2 Kings 1. 4. He ſhall not deſcend down from his bed, כי מות ימות ὅτι θανάτῳ ἀποθανῇ, but ſhall die. So Numb. 27. 3. Deut. 11. 7. Judg. 1. 19.——2. 17. 1 Sam. 17. 47. 2 Sam. 24. 24. and in many other places. See Noldius de partic. Hebr. p. 404.

Ver.

Ver. 15, 16. ᵍ Προσέχετε ἀπὸ τῶν ψευδοπροφητῶν, v. 16. ἀπὸ καρπῶν αὐτῶν ἐπιγνώσεσθε αὐτούς, Beware of falſe prophets, by their fruits ye ſhall know them.] They who extend the word falſe prophets to all teachers of falſe doctrines, will ſcarce be able to ſhew, how they who teach the doctrine of the Millennium, or that the promiſes of the law were only temporal, or that the baptiſm of infants may be deferred till they come to years of diſcretion, or that the Sabbath-day is ſtill to be kept holy, can be proved to be falſe prophets, by the evil tendence or conſequents of their doctrine: Moreover, it muſt be noted, that Chriſt here ſpeaks to the multitude, ver. 28, 29. and to the ears of the people, Luke 7. 1. they therefore muſt beware of them, and ſo be able to know them by their works, as the tree is known by its fruits, ver. 20. from the works of iniquity they do, ver. 23. not from their doctrines; for that would render our Lord's words ridiculous, viz. Beware of teachers of falſe doctrines, by their falſe doctrines ye ſhall know them.

Object. But you may ſay, Chriſt owns they ſhall appear in ſheeps cloathing, that is, in a fair appearance of piety and innocence, and ſo it muſt be difficult to paſs a judgment on them by their works.

Anſw. It is not neceſſary that their coming in ſheeps cloathing ſhould ſignify their ſeeming innocency, but only their appearance in the habit of prophets. For ſo Elias wrapped himſelf ἐν τῇ μηλωτῇ αὐτοῦ, in his ſheep-ſkin mantle, 1 Kings 19. 13. and when he aſcended ἡ μηλωτὴς, his mantle fell from him, 2 Kings 2. 13. This therefore may be the true import of this phraſe, They ſhall appear in the habit of prophets. But (2.) admit it ſignifies their hypocriſy and diſſimulation; things feigned and diſſembled only, will in a little time be eaſily diſcerned from that which is ſincere and real; when ſuch hypocritical pretenders have once got a liberty to do it, when their advantage requires it, when perſecutions for the faith ariſe, they will ſoon put off the maſk, and diſcover themſelves to be counterfeits.

Moreover, falſe prophets both in the Old and the New Teſtament, do always ſignify ſuch perſons as falſly pretend a commiſſion from God for what they teach, or who promiſe or foretel things falſly in his name; as will appear from all the places of the New Teſtament, where this word occurs, viz. Matth. 24. 11. Mark 13. 22. Luke 6. 26. Acts 13. 6. 2 Pet. 2. 1. Rev. 16. 13.—19. 20.——20. 10. That ſuch falſe prophets were ſuddenly to come into the world, our Lord foretels, Matth. 24. 11. That many of them were come, we learn from St. Peter and St. John, 1 John 4. 1. And, Laſtly, The Apoſtles teach agreeably to Chriſt, that ſuch falſe apoſtles and falſe prophets are to be diſcovered, not only by their doctrines, but by their works, as being ravenous wolves, not ſparing the flock, Acts 20. 29. Teachers of what they ought not for filthy lucre's ſake, Tit. 1. 11. ſuch as count gain godlineſs, 1 Tim. 6. 5. Lovers of money, 2 Tim. 3. 2. Through covetouſneſs by feigned words making merchandize of others, 2 Pet. 2. 3. Admiring perſons for gain, Jude 16. Such as may be known by the evil works they did, and taught others to do, as being lovers of pleaſure, 2 Tim. 3. 4. Abominable, Tit. 1. 16. Defiling the fleſh, and turning the grace of God into laſciviouſneſs, 2 Pet. 2. 10. Jude 4, 8. And laſtly, ſuch as inſiſted upon queſtions, which had no tendence to advance godlineſs, but rather to nouriſh ſtrife, and to ſubvert the hearers, 1 Tim. 1. 4.—4. 7. 2 Tim. 2. 16, 23. Tit. 3. 9.

Ver. 18. ʰ Οὐ δύναται δένδρον ἀγαθὸν ποιῆσαι καρπὸς πονηροὺς ποιεῖν, A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can an evil tree bring forth good fruit.] i. e. while they continue ſuch; Hence ſome make two inferences, which are falſe and alien from the mind of Chriſt.

1ſt, That he who once is regenerate can never ceaſe to be ſo; which no more follows, than that he who is once wicked cannot ceaſe to be ſo, and therefore, that it is vain to call ſinners to repentance, or bid them make the tree good, as Chriſt doth, Matth. 12. 33.

2dly, That an irregenerate perſon can do nothing that is good, becauſe he is an evil tree, and ſo he muſt be purely paſſive in his whole converſion; which is, as if I ſhould argue, that a good man cannot ſin, becauſe being a good tree, he cannot bring forth evil fruit. See Additions N° 9.

Ver. 21. ⁱ Not every one that ſaith unto me, Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the kingdom of heaven, &c.] Of the import of this phraſe, the kingdom of heaven, ſee Note on Chap. 3. 2. And note hence, that faith and purpoſes of obedience, without actual obedience to the commands of God, as long as we live, and have opportunity to do ſo, will avail no man to ſalvation.

Ver. 22. ᵏ Many ſhall ſay in that day, Lord, ἐν τῷ σῷ ὀνόματι προεφητεύσαμεν, have we not propheſied, caſt out devils, and done many mighty works in thy name?] I grant that it cannot be certainly inferred from theſe words, that any perſons will thus plead at the day of judgment, but only that ſuch pleas, if made, will be of no account with God from workers of iniquity; but yet it will hence follow, that ſuch perſons might be workers of iniquity, and alſo that they might have ſome expectations of favour from Chriſt, on the account of theſe things performed in his name. And that ſuch such miracles were actually performed by such men in the name of Christ, we learn from (c) Origen, who saith, That so prevalent is the name of Christ to cast out devils, οὐκ ἴσθ' ὅτι, καὶ ὑπὸ φαύλων ὀνομαζόμενον ἐνίοτε, that sometimes, as Christ said, it avails when named by wicked Christians. And (d) Pseudo-Justin confesseth of the hereticks, ἐνεργεῖν τινας ἐν αὐτοῖς δυνάμεις, that some miracles were wrought by them. For though true miracles cannot be wrought in confirmation of a false doctrine, yet seeing miracles wrought by the name of Jesus, are wrought not to confirm either the doctrine, or piety of him that doth them, but only to confirm his doctrine, in whose name they are wrought, I think it no absurdity to grant, that evil Christians may do them in his name. Thus God put many true prophecies concerning his people, into the mouth of that Balaam, who loved the wages of unrighteousness, and Judas was one of those twelve to whom Christ gave power to cast out unclean spirits, and to heal all diseases, Matth. 10. 1.

Ver. 24. [l] Πᾶς οὖν ὃς ἀκούει τοὺς λόγους τούτους, καὶ ποιεῖ αὐτούς, Every one that heareth these words, and doth them, will I liken to a wise man.] Hence it appears, that this sermon on the mount contains those rules of faith which are sufficient for salvation; since otherwise Christ could not promise it to them who observed and practised these his sayings.

(2.) That a man may be disposed to yield this obedience, it is necessary, (1.) That he believe Christ was a teacher sent from God into the world, to propound those rules of life and death in his name, and by his authority; faith being the principle and root of all obedience. (2.) That he hath a sufficient knowledge of these rules, and doth retain them in his memory; for, what he doth not know, he cannot; and what he retains not in his memory, he will not do. We must add to our faith knowledge, 2 Pet. 1. 5. and, keep in memory the things that we have heard, 1 Cor. 15. 2. (3.) That he firmly believe and frequently reflect upon the motives to perform these rules, viz. the blessings promised to the observers of them, and the great evils threatened to the neglecters of these rules; for, the serious and frequent consideration of these things, will not only animate us to the performance of our duty, but will strengthen us against all the temptations and allurements of the world, to divert us from it; whilst we perceive that the advantages we shall receive, by living according to these rules, are infinitely greater than any which the world can tender; and the evils, which will certainly ensue on our neglect to do so, are far more formidable than any we can suffer from a persecuting world.

Ver. 29. [m] Ἦν γὰρ διδάσκων ὡς ἐξουσίαν ἔχων. The multitude were astonished at his doctrine; for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.] They certainly mistake, who interpret these words thus, He taught them as the author of the doctrine he preached, and one who had authority in his own name, to propound the terms of life and death; and therefore saith not, as the Prophets, Thus saith the Lord, but I say unto you. This being not only contrary to the nature of his prophetick office, but to his frequent declarations, That the doctrine which he taught was not his own, but his that sent him; that he spake not of himself, or in his own name, but as he had heard from his Father, and as he had commanded him to speak, John 7. 16.——17. 18.——8. 28.——12. 49.——14. 10. This interpretation therefore of St. Jerom, Theophylact, and others, is to be rejected. Others think this relates to the confirmation of his doctrine by miracles; for, when he had cured all manner of diseases, demoniacks, lunaticks, and paralyticks, the people flock to him from all quarters, Matth. 4. 24, 25. and then he begins this sermon. So, Mark 1. 27. they all marvelled, saying, What is this new doctrine? for, καὶ ἐξουσίαν, with authority, he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they obey him: And, Luke 4. 32. they were amazed at his doctrine; for his word was, ἐν ἐξουσίᾳ, attended with the power of miracles, ver. 36. And, (3dly) Because it is here said, they were astonished, not at his miracles, but at his doctrine. Others interpret the words thus, He spake as a Prophet, having authority from God to deliver his message to them; not as the scribes, who pretended only to deliver the traditions of their forefathers, and to teach only what they had learned from Hillel, Shemaja, Abtalion, &c. So Lightf.

CHAP. VIII.

1. WHEN he was come down from the mountain, (on which he delivered this divine discourse) great multitudes followed him:

2. And behold, (when he was in, or near one of the cities, Luke 5. 12.) there came a leper and [a] worshipped him, (kneeling, Mark 1. 40. and falling down before him; Luke 5. 12. and) saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

3. And Jesus (having compassion on him, Mark 1. 41.) [b] put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, ſaying (to him) I will, be thou clean; and immediately his leproſy was cleanſed.

(c) Contr. Cels. l. 1. p. 7.

4. And Jeſus (ſtraitly charged him, and forthwith ſent him away, Mark 1. 43. and) ſaith unto him, [c] See thou tell no man (who hath done this) but go thy way (firſt, and) [d] ſhew thyſelf to the Prieſt, and offer (for thy purification, Mark 1. 44. and Luke 5. 14.) the gift that Moſes commanded for a [e] teſtimony to them; (but he going from him, publiſhed it ſo much, that the multitude hearing of it, came to him from every place to be healed of their infirmities, Mark 1. 45. Luke 5. 15.)

5. And when Jeſus was entered into Capernaum, there [f] came unto him, (by the elders of the Jews, Luke 7. 3.) a centurion, beſeeching him,

6. And ſaying, Lord, my ſervant lieth at home ſick of the palſy, grievouſly tormented, (and nigh to death, I deſire thou wouldſt come and heal him, Luke 7. 3.)

[Luke 7. 4. And when they came to him, they beſought him inſtantly, ſaying, That he was worthy for whom he ſhould do this, Ver. 5. For he loveth our nation, and hath built us a ſynagogue.]

7. And Jeſus ſaith unto him, (i. e. to the meſſengers ſent by him,) I will come and heal him; (and having ſaid this, Jeſus went with them, and when he was now not far from the houſe, Luke 7. 6.)

8. The Centurion (hearing that Chriſt was coming to him, ſent other friends to him, by whom he) anſwered, and ſaid, Lord, (trouble not thyſelf to come to me; for) I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof; (wherefore neither thought I myſelf worthy to come unto thee, Luke 7. 6, 7.) but [g] ſpeak the word only, and my ſervant ſhall be healed.

9. For I am a man under authority, having (alſo) ſoldiers under me; and I ſay unto this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my ſervant, Do this, and he doth it: (How much more canſt thou, who haſt all power in heaven and earth, command one of the miniſtring ſpirits to come and heal my ſervant?)

10. When Jeſus heard (this ſaying,) he marvelled, and ſaid to them that followed him, Verily, I ſay unto you, I have not found ſo great faith, no, not in Iſrael; (the people to whom I was promiſed, and to whom I am ſent.)

11. And I ſay unto you, That [h] many ſhall come from the Eaſt and from the Weſt, (from the North and from the South, Luke 13. 29.) and ſhall ſit down with Abraham, and Iſaac, and Jacob, (and with all the Prophets, Luke 13. 28.) in the kingdom of heaven; (i. e. ſhall be partakers of the bleſſings promiſed to theſe patriarchs.)

12. But the children of the kingdom ſhall be caſt out into utter darkneſs, (ſo that) there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth; (among them thus excluded from the bleſſings of this kingdom.)

13. And Jeſus ſaid unto the Centurion, Go thy way, and, as thou haſt believed, ſo be it done unto thee; and his ſervant was healed in the ſelf-ſame hour; (and they that were ſent, returning to the houſe, found the ſervant whole that had been ſick, Luke 7. 10.)

14. And when Jeſus was come into Peter's houſe, he ſaw [i] his wife's mother laid (upon a bed,) and ſick of a fever (for they had told him of her, Mark 1. 30.)

15. And (he ſtood over her, and rebuked the fever, Luke 4. 39. and) he touched her hand, and the fever left her; and ſhe aroſe, and miniſtred unto them, (what was neceſſary for their entertainment.)

16. And [k] when the even was come, (ſo that the ſun was ſet, Mark 1. 32. Luke 4. 40. and the ſabbath ended,) they brought unto him many that were (ſick, and many) poſſeſſed with devils; and he caſt out the ſpirits with his word, and (laying his hands upon them, Luke 4. 40.) healed all that were ſick.

17. That (in this ſenſe alſo) it might be fulfilled, which was ſpoken by the Prophet Eſaias, ſaying, (Chap. 53. 4.) [l] He himſelf took our infirmities, and bare our ſickneſſes.

18. Now when Jeſus ſaw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment (to his diſciples) to depart unto the other ſide (of the lake Geneſareth, Luke 8. 22.)

19. And (as they were preparing for their departure,) a certain Scribe came, and ſaid unto him, Maſter, I will follow thee whitherſoever thou goeſt.

20. And Jeſus ſaith unto him, (if thou reſolveſt thus, upon proſpect of any temporal advantages in my kingdom, thou wilt be fruſtrated in thy expectation; for) the foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have neſts, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his (own) head; (and therefore much leſs any accommodations for his followers.)

21. And another of his diſciples (or attendants, being bid to follow him, Luke 9. 59.) ſaid unto him, Lord, ſuffer me firſt to go, and (abide at home, till I) bury my father.

22. But Jeſus ſaid unto him, Follow me, (now) and [m] let the dead bury their dead; (i. e. let thoſe who are unconcerned for the things of God, and unfit to engage in the promoting them, do ſuch offices, which they may do as well as others; but do thou, who haſt begun to follow me, and to attend upon the doctrine of the kingdom of God, go on without diverſion in that work; for no man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God, Luke 9. 62.)

23. And

23. And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him:

24. And behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was (sometimes) covered with the waves, but he was asleep (in the hinder part of the ship, Mark 4. 38.)

25. And his disciples came unto him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us, we perish.

26. And he saith unto them, [n] Why are ye fearful, Oh ye of little faith? Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the sea, (saying to them, Peace, be still, Mark. 4. 39.) and there was a great calm.

27. But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, (and how great is his power,) that even [o] the winds and the sea obey him?

28. And when he was come unto the other side, into the country of the Gergasens, (see note on Mark 5. 1.) there met him [p] two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, (one of which was) exceeding fierce, so that no man might (safely) pass by that way; (for no man could tame him, or bind him so effectually with chains or fetters, that he could not break them; and night and day he was in the mountains, or among the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones; and seeing Jesus afar off, they run unto him, and worship him, Mark 5. 3, 4, 5.)

29. And behold, they (i. e. the unclean spirits in them,) cried out, saying, [q] What have we to do with thee, Jesus thou Son of God? Art thou come [r] hither to torment us before the time (appointed for our punishment?) (i. e. the fierce one said this, the other being present with him: And this he said after that Christ had said to the unclean spirit in him, Come out of the man; and Jesus asking, what was his name? he had answered, saying, My name is Legion, for we are many: And (farther) had besought him much, that he would not send them away out of the country, Mark 5. 8, 10.)

30. And there was a good way off from them, (in the mountains, Luke 8. 32.) an herd of many swine, (even two thousand; Mark 5. 13.) feeding.

31. So the [s] devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, [t] suffer us to go away into the herd of swine.

32. And he said unto them, (I suffer you to) Go; and when they were come out (of the men,) they entered into the herd of swine; and behold the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters.

33. And they that kept them, fled, and went their way into the city, (and villages) and told (them) every thing (that Christ had done,) and what was befallen to the (men) possessed of the devils.

34. And behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus; and, when they saw him, they (being terrified at what he had done, and grieved for their loss,) besought him, that he would depart out of their coasts.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. VIII.

Ver. 2. [a] ΠΡΟΣΕΚΥΝΕΙ αὐτῷ. Worshipped him.] The Jews paid civil adoration both to Kings and Prophets, either by bending of the knee, or by prostration, or falling down before them; So Abigail fell down before David, and bowed herself to the ground, 1 Sam. 25. 23, 41. So also the Amalekite fell to the earth before him, and did obeisance, 2 Sam. 1. 2. So Mephibosheth fell on his face and did him reverence, 2 Sam. 9. 6. So the woman of Tekoah, 2 Sam. 14. 4. Nathan, 1 Kings 1. 23. So the whole congregation worshipped the Lord and the King, 1 Chron. 29. 20. Thus also they reverenced the holy Prophets: So Saul stooped with his face to the ground to Samuel, 1 Sam. 28. 14. Obadiah fell on his face before Elijah, 1 Kings 18. 7. See 2 Kings 1. 13. And Nebuchadnezzar fell on his face before Daniel, Chap. 2. 46. Whence I conclude, that the adorations given to our blessed Saviour by those Jews and Gentiles, who knew nothing of his divinity, could be no argument of his divine nature, but rather were paid to him as the Messiah, or as a Prophet sent from God, or as the King of Israel.

Ver. 3. [b] Καὶ ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα ἥψατο αὐτοῦ ὁ Ἰησοῦς. And Jesus stretching forth his hand, touched him.] The Jews cannot reasonably object, That our Lord violated the law, either by touching the leper here, or by touching the bier of the dead, Luke 7. 14. for, as the effect wrought upon both demonstrated, that the God who gave these laws approved both these actions, they being done by the finger of God; so was it a received rule among them, That a (a) Prophet might vary from, or even change a ritual law: So did Elijah, who took the woman's dead son out of her bosom, and carried him up to his bed, and stretched himself upon him three times, 1 Kings 17. 19, 21. So did Elisha, when he lay upon the Shunamite's child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands, 2 Kings 4. 34. Whence (b) Theophylact observes,

(a) Neve Shallom. l. 9. c. 19.

(b) In Luke 7. 14.

That our Lord touched the leper, to shew it was not necessary that he should observe these lesser matters of the law, and that a pure person is not defiled by touching one unclean; but that it is the leprosy of the soul, which doth indeed defile.

Ver. 4. [c] Ὅρα μηδενὶ εἴπῃς, See thou tell no man.] Viz. that thou wast healed by me, till thou hast offered thy gift to the Priest; and he, by receiving it hath owned thee to be clean from thy leprosy, lest they, hearing that thou wast cleansed by me, should, out of envy to me, refuse to own that thou wast cleansed: This sense, the words offer the gift for a testimony to them, seem to require; for that which was always to be concealed from them, could be no testimony to them of the divine mission. See Note on Chap. 9. 30.

Ibid. [d] Σεαυτὸν δεῖξον τῷ ἱερεῖ, Shew thyself to the Priest, &c.] Here it is well observed by Dr. Lightfoot, That though the Priesthood was much degenerated from its primitive institution and office, and many human institutions were added to God's law, touching the Priest's examination of the leper, who pretended to be clean; yet doth Christ send this leper to submit to all these human inventions, as knowing that they did indeed corrupt, but not extinguish the divine institution.

Ibid. [e] Εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς, For a testimony to them.] This some interpret thus, Offer thy gift for a testimony unto them, that thou art cleansed from thy leprosy; which must be the import of these words, if Christ had absolutely forbid him to declare, who it was that cured him of his leprosy; but in all other places where this phrase is used, it imports a testimony to the truth of Christ's mission, or his doctrine, and therefore most probably here signifies, that by pronouncing the man clean, they may have a testimony that I am the Christ, or am a Prophet sent from God; they themselves owning, that the leprosy can only be cured by the finger of God, 2 Kings 5. 7. and therefore not suffering a Physician to attempt to cure it: So, v. g. Matth. 10. 18. Ye shall be brought before Governors and Kings, εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς, for a testimony to them, and to the nations, Matth. 24. 14. This Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, εἰς μαρτύριον, for a testimony to all nations; Luke 9. 5. If they receive you not, shake off the dust of your feet, εἰς μαρτύριον ἐπ' αὐτούς, for a testimony against them. Hence the lepers are cleansed, Matth. 11. 5. is made the sign of the advent of the Messiah.

Ver. 5. [f] Προσῆλθεν αὐτῷ ὁ ἑκατόνταρχος, παρακαλῶν αὐτὸν, There came to him a Centurion, beseeching him.] Luke 7. 3. He sent to him the Rulers of the Jews; and, ver. 8. the Centurion answered and said, Luke 7. 6. the Centurion sent friends to him, saying. See these things reconciled, in Note on Luke 7. 1. It is conjectured by St. Chrysostom, Καὶ αὐτὸν μετὰ τὸ πέμψαι τοὺς φίλους προσιόντα, That he himself, as Jesus came nearer to his house, came out of civility to meet him; because Christ says unto him, Go thy way, as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee, ver. 13. but of that also, see Note on Luke 7. 1.

Ver. 3, 8. [g] Θέλω, καθαρίσθητι, I will, be thou clean.] Here the Note of Woltzogenius is this, hic vere divina Christi vis elucet, here shines forth the divine power of Christ, that he could do so great things only by his command. So also Moses says, the world was created by God, saying, Let there be light, and there was light, Gen. 1. 3. And on those words, ver. 8. only say the word, and my servant shall be healed, &c. he saith, he represents the faith of the Centurion, concerning our Lord's divine power, thus; If I, who am subject to the power of another, have so much power over my servants, that they instantly do whatever I would have them; how much more shall all things which thou requirest, be done at thy word of command, qui nullius potestati subjectus es, who art subject to the power of none? And, how can he deny him to be God, in whom shines forth that divine power which God exerted in the creation of the world, and at whose word all things that he commandeth must be done; and who is subject to the power of none? Surely this faith of the Centurion may induce us to conclude with St. Jerom on the place, Quod intra corporis tegmen divinitatem latentem videret.

Ver. 11, 12. [h] Λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, ὅτι πολλοὶ ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν καὶ δυσμῶν ἥξουσι, καὶ ἀνακλιθήσονται μετὰ Ἀβραὰμ ——ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τῶν οὐρανῶν, And I say unto you, that many shall come from the East, and from the West, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven, &c.] For the right understanding of these words, note,

1st, That to lie down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven, doth not here signify to enjoy everlasting happiness in heaven with them, but only to become the sons of Abraham through faith, Gal. 3. 7. and so to be blessed with faithful Abraham, ver. 9. To have the blessing of Abraham coming on them, that they may receive the promise of the spirit, ver. 14. through faith in Christ, to be the seed of Abraham, and heirs according the promise, ver. 29. viz. the promise made to Abraham, Gen. 12. 3. renewed to Isaac, Gen. 26. 4. and confirmed to Jacob, Gen. 28. 14. and to be, according to Isaac, the children of the promise, Gal. 4. 28. This, saith Christ, shall be the blessing of the believing Gentiles, they shall be be ſons of Abraham, and heirs of the promiſes made to the Patriarchs, and mentioned by all the Prophets of the Old Teſtament; whereas the unbelieving Jews, wanting the faith of Abraham, ſhall be deprived of the bleſſings promiſed to his ſeed; for they who ſeek to enter, and ſhall not be able, becauſe the maſter hath ſhut to his door, Luke 13. 24, 25. are thoſe Jews who ſought for righteouſneſs by the works of the law, and not by faith, and therefore found it not, Rom. 9. 31, 32.——11. 7. who entred not into the reſt prepared for them, by reaſon of their unbelief, Heb. 3. 18, 19.——4. 2, 5. and from whom the kingdom of God was taken away, Matth. 21. 43. they are they who ſhall ſay to Chriſt, we have eaten and drunk before thee, and thou haſt taught in our ſtreets, Luke 13. 26. which could be ſaid only by the Jews.

2*dly*, Obſerve that this kingdom of God is repreſented here, and elſewhere, as a nuptial ſolemnity, or a banquet, at which the gueſts ſit down with the maſter of the feaſt. Now theſe banquets were uſually made at night, and continued long in the night; hence were they called cœnæ convivales, ſuppers, (c) ὀψὲ γὰρ δεῖπνον ἐπὶ πολὺ ποιεῖσθαι, becauſe they were wont to ſup late, after they had done their buſineſs, ſaith Plutarch; thus have we mention of a great ſupper, Luke 14. 16. of the ſupper of the Lamb, Rev. 19. 7. and of the bridegroom coming at midnight to his ſupper, Matth. 25. 6. Hence at thoſe ſuppers the houſe of reception was filled with lights, called δᾷδες, λαμπάδες, λυχνίαι, αὐλοί, in (d) Athenæus and (e) Plutarch, i. e. torches, lamps, candles, and lanthorns; and ſo they who were admitted to the banquet, had the benefit of the light; but they who were ſhut out, or could not enter, were in darkneſs; whence the unhappy ſtate of thoſe, who were excluded from the kingdom of God, or from a ſtate of future happineſs, is frequently expreſſed by their being caſt out into utter darkneſs, ver. 12. See Matth. 22. 13.——25. 30. and becauſe they who were thus ſhut out from the marriage-feaſt were not only expoſed to ſhame, but alſo to cold and hunger, therefore it is added, there ſhall be weeping and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth, Matth. 13. 42. Luke 13. 28. And oh! how contrary is this prediction of our Lord to the vain opinions of the Jews, who were wont to ſay, that all Iſrael ſhould have a portion in the world to come; but the heathens, ſay they, are to be fuel for hell-fire, Pirk Eliezer, cap. 9. ſect. 4. whereas our Saviour here declareth, that theſe heathens ſhould ſit down with Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven; and they, the children of the kingdom, ſhould be caſt into utter darkneſs.

3*dly*, Obſerve, for explication of other places relating to theſe banquets and nuptial feaſts, that they who were invited to them entered by a gate deſigned to receive them; whence Chriſt, by whom we enter into this marriage-feaſt, compares himſelf to a gate, John 10. 1, 2, 7, 9. Now this gate, at the time when the gueſts invited were to come, was made narrow, the wicket only being left open, and the porter ſtanding there, that they who were not bidden to the marriage, might not ruſh in to it. Hence Chriſt exhorts the Jews to enter in at the ſtrait gate, Matth. 7. 13, 14. Luke 13. 24. i. e. to ſtrive to enter into the kingdom of heaven, and be made partakers of the bleſſings of it, before it was taken from them. Laſtly, When all that were invited were once come, the door was preſently ſhut, and was not to be opened any more to them who ſtood knocking without; ſo after the wiſe virgins had entered with the bridegroom, the gate was ſhut, and was not opened to the fooliſh virgins, who ſtood knocking without, Matth. 25. 11. And in this ſenſe are we to underſtand thoſe words of Chriſt, Luke 13. 24, 25. Many ſhall ſeek to enter, and ſhall not be able, viz. not for want of any grace ſufficient on God's part, but becauſe of their coming too late after the gate is ſhut, and the bridegroom is entered, as is apparent from the reaſon of that admonition, ſtrive to enter in at the ſtrait gate, for many will ſeek to enter in, and ſhall not be able, when once the Maſter of the houſe is riſen up, and hath ſhut to the door.

Ver. 14. [i] Εἶδε δὲ πενθερὰν αὐτοῦ, And when Jeſus came unto Peter's houſe, he ſaw his wife's mother laid, and ſick of a fever.] Learn hence, ſaith Theophylact, that marriage is no hindrance to virtue, ſince the chief of the Apoſtles had his wife. Brugenſis here notes, that it is written of Peter only that he had a wife, but that this is not exactly true, ſee Note on 1 Cor. 7. 8. and on Chap. 9. 5. Moreover we read in the interpolated (f) Ignatius, περὶ Πέτρου καὶ Παύλου, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων Ἀποστόλων τοῖς γάμοις προσομιλησάντων, of Peter and Paul, and other Apoſtles that were married. (g) St. Baſil reckons among thoſe that were married, Πέτρον, καὶ τοὺς λοιποὺς τῶν Ἀποστόλων, Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles. And (h) St. Ambroſe ſaith, that omnes apoſtoli, exceptis Johanne & Paulo, uxores habuiſſe dicuntur, all the Apoſtles, except John and Paul, are ſaid to have had wives. See many other teſtimonies in (i) Cotelerius's Notes on the Epiſtle of Ignatius to the Philadelphians.

evening to evening, according to theſe words, Lev. 23. 32. from even to even ſhall ye celebrate your ſabbath; and therefore when it began to be dark, before the ſabbath, Nehemiah commands the gates of Jeruſalem to be ſhut, Neh. 13. 19. and the author of (k) Coſri ſaith, non ingreditur niſi occumbente ſole, the ſabbath doth not enter but when the ſun is ſet, as St. Mark and St. Luke ſpeak; ſee Lightfoot on the place.

Ver. 17. [l] Αὐτὸς τὰς ἀσθενείας ἡμῶν ἔλαβε, That it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet, ſaying, He himſelf took our infirmities, and bare our ſickneſſes.] This is one of thoſe places from which interpreters conclude, a prophecy is ſaid to be fulfilled only by way of accommodation, though not according to the intention of the Prophet. But I conceive without juſt ground: For (1.) the Jews themſelves did think this paſſage of the Prophet, related to the curing their diſeaſes, as well as the procuring remiſſion of their ſins; for thus they ſpeak, the name of the Meſſiah, is the leper, of the houſe of Rabbi, as it is ſaid, ſurely he bore our infirmities. And we eſteemed him, נגוע Iſa. 53. 4. quaſi leproſum, as a leper, ſaith St. Jerom, and the vulgar, ἀφὴμένον ἐν ἀφῇ ὄντα, Sym. & Aquila, now, ἄφη, ſay Heſychius, Suidas, and Phavorinus, is ἡ χροία τ λέπρας, the colour of the leproſy; See Lev. 14. 32, 35. And again, if Meſſias be among the living, Rabbona Hakkedoſh is he, as being one who bears our infirmities; and ſeeing Chriſt, by healing our diſeaſes, took away the temporal puniſhment of our ſins, (ſee the Note on Chap. 9. 2.) and ſaid to ſome of them he healed, thy ſins are forgiven thee, why might not this prophecy be twice fulfilled, when by taking away their diſeaſes, he took away the temporal puniſhment of their ſins, and when by ſuffering on the croſs, he procured a full remiſſion of the guilt of their iniquities?

Ver. 22. [m] Καὶ ἄφες τοὺς νεκροὺς θάψαι τοὺς ἑαυτῶν νεκρούς, And let the dead bury their dead.] That οἱ νεκροὶ the dead, in ſcripture doth often ſignify, not thoſe who, in a natural ſenſe, are dead, by diſſolution of the ſoul and body, but thoſe who, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, are ſo, by being alienated from the life of God, and dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. See Note on 1. Pet. 4. 6. thus, * Clemens of Alexandria ſaith, that ἐν τῇ βαρβάρῳ φιλοσοφίᾳ νεκροὺς καλῶσι τοὺς ἐκτίσοντας τ δόγματων καὶ καθυποτάξοντας τ νῦν τοῖς πάθεσι τοῖς ψυχικοῖς. The philoſophy of the Barbarians called them dead, who deſerted their doctrines, and ſubjected their minds to ſenſual paſſions; and (l) Origen, That the Pythagoreans placed coffins in their room, ſymbolically to repreſent that death; and Philo ſtiles this the death of the ſoul, ἐνθυμενομένης πάθεσι καὶ κακίαις ἀτάφοις, entombed in paſſions and all wickedneſs, legis alleg. l. 1. p. 45. Here then Chriſt teacheth, that when we are called by him to the promotion of the Goſpel, and the ſalvation of mens ſouls, we ſhould not ſuffer earthly buſineſs, which may be done as well by others, who are unfit to be employed in ſpirituals, to give us the leaſt hindrance from ſetting inſtantly upon that work.

Ver. 26. [n] Τί δειλοί ἐστε ὀλιγόπιστοι, Why are ye fearful, Oh ye of little faith?] Here I conceive it may be uſeful to lay down the indications of a weak and little faith, that we may guard ourſelves againſt them. And,

1*ſt*, The fears and jealouſies of pious perſons, betray the weakneſs of their faith, as is apparent from this queſtion, Why are ye fearful, Oh ye of little faith? Now ſuch are not only thoſe evil fears which terrify us from the performance of our duty, but our irrational, and ſuperſtitious fears of being left alone, or in the dark, the fear of evil ſpirits, and the like; and alſo all anxious and tormenting fears of what hereafter may befal ourſelves, our Chriſtian brethren, or the ſincere and living members of Chriſt's body; a fear of caution, which renders us induſtrious to prevent the evil, may be uſeful in this caſe, but a fear of diffidence becomes not the good Chriſtian; He, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, whoſe heart is fixed, truſting in the Lord, will not be thus afraid of evil tidings, Pſal. 112. 7.

2*dly*, Our doubtings and deſpondings in the time of peril, demonſtrate the weakneſs of our faith, according to that ſaying of our Lord to Peter, when he began to ſink, Oh thou of little faith, wherefore didſt thou doubt? Matth. 14. 31. They then who doubt of God's aſſiſtance in the time of danger, or do ſuſpect he may deſert them in the needful hour, are weak in faith.

3*dly*, Our anxious ſolicitude for any temporal concern, and our perplexing cares for theſe enjoyments, ſhew we are men of little faith, for our heavenly Father knoweth how far we have need of theſe things; and hence our Saviour argues thus, If God ſo cloath the lilies of the field, if he feed the fowls of the air, will he not much more cloath and feed you, Oh ye of little faith? Matth. 6. 30. He therefore, who ſuſpects the kindneſs of his heavenly Father in theſe inferior concerns, either miſtruſts his power, as did the unbelieving Jews, ſaying Can God prepare a table in the wilderneſs? Or elſe conceives his goodneſs to his faithful ſervants may be leſs than to the meaneſt of his creatures. And,

4*thly*, Our impatience under troubles, argues our want of faith, for he that believeth, will not make haste, Isa. 28. 16. Our due persuasions of God's paternal love towards us will engage us to possess our souls in patience, and tarry the Lord's leisure, and wait contentedly for any blessing he hath promised, as knowing it will surely come in its most proper season, and when the wisdom of our heavenly Father sees we are best fitted to enjoy it.

Ver. 27. ° Οἱ ἄνεμοι καὶ ἡ θάλασσα ὑπακούουσιν αὐτῷ, The winds and the sea obey him.] It being so often made the property of God, to still the raging of the sea, Psal. 65. 7. ——107. 25, 29. It is not to be wondered, that Christ's disciples should conceive there must be a divine power in him, who could perform such things.

Ver. 28 ᵖ Ὑπήντησαν αὐτῷ δύο δαιμονιζόμενοι, There met him two possessed with the devil, Mark 2. 5. A man possessed with an unclean spirit, So Luke 8. 27.] See this reconciled, Note on Mark 5. 2.

Ver. 29. ᑫ Τί ἡμῖν καὶ σοί; What have we to do with thee?] Schmidius here shews, that this is not a form of speaking proper to the Jews, and Hellenists only, it being used by good Greek authors, who had no converse with them. So Arrian upon Epictetus τί ἡμῖν καὶ αὐτῷ; What have we to do with him? Lib. 1. Cap. 1. p. 85.

Ibid. ʳ Ἦλθες ὧδε πρὸ καιροῦ βασανίσαι ἡμᾶς, Art thou come hither to torment us before the time?] That βασανίσαι should here signify only to imprison these demons, or send them to the place of their restraint, a reverend person argues, because the word βασανίζω sometimes signifies to imprison, and βασανισταὶ are Gaolers, Matth. 18. 34. And (2*dly*,) because they intreat, Luke 8 31. that he would not command them to go out εἰς ἄβυσσον, that is into hell. But (1.) βασανίζω never signifies to restrain, but in order to punishment or torment, to extort the truth; and βασανιστὴς only signifies a Gaoler, because it is his office to torture and to punish men. And, (2.) they who do afterwards intreat, not to be sent into the abyss, had formerly intreated not to be tormented, ver. 28. which shews, that to be tormented, ver. 28. and to be sent to the abyss, ver. 31. were two different things. That it rather signifies to torment and punish them, may be gathered from the words of another unclean spirit, parallel to these, What have we to do with thee? Art thou come ἀπολέσαι ἡμᾶς to destroy us? Mark 1. 24. Luke 4. 34. (2.) From these words, πρὸ καιροῦ Art thou come to do this to us before the time of torments? For though the devils do at present believe and tremble, Jam. 2. 19. yet are they not at present tormented in the flames, prepared for the Devil and his angels, but only are reserved in chains of darkness to the day of judgment to be punished, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. then Satan is to be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, Rev. 20. 10. at present he walks to and fro through the face of the whole earth, Job 1. 7. and goes about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour, 1 Pet. 5. 8.

Ver. 31. ˢ Οἱ δὲ δαίμονες παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν, The devils intreated him.] Some are of opinion, that the persons represented in the New Testament as demoniacks, were only persons afflicted with some strange diseases, fits of the mother, convulsions, falling-sickness, and the like; but this cavil may be evidently confuted,

1*st*, From the Scriptures and ecclesiastical writers, which make a constant and a plain distinction betwixt these two things, the curing diseases, and the casting out of devils. So Matth. 4. 24. They brought to him all sick people, that were taken with divers diseases, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick and had the palsy, and he healed them; and Matth. 10. 1. He gave to the apostles power against unclean spirits to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and diseases; Mark 1. 34. He healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils. See also Luke 4. 40, 41. The Christians, saith (m) Irenæus, truly cast out devils, and heal the sick by imposition of hands. They cast out devils, and heal many diseases, saith (n) Origen. How many honest men have by us been healed, or freed from devils? saith (o) Tertullian.

2*dly*, This will be farther evident from many circumstances relating to the devils to be cast out, or actually ejected. As, v. g. that Christ suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him (Mark 1. 34.) to be the Christ, Luke 4. 41. that they said, Thou art the Christ the Son of God, Luke 4. 41. That they expostulate with Christ, saying, What have we to do with thee, art thou come to destroy us? art thou come to torment us before the time? and pray that he would not torment them; that they ask his leave to enter into the swine, and being entred hurry them down into the sea, and beg they may not be sent out of the country; that they acknowledge, that their name was Legion, there being many of them, which possessed one man, Mark 5. 1, 14. Luke 8. 27, 33. Now to make all these sayings the effects of a disease, or to conceive that Christ spake thus to a disease, is too great an evidence of one that is himself diseased. For, them to be ſilent, and ſometimes to come out of a man, and enter no more into him, Mark 1. 25. Luke 4. 41. Mark 9. 25.

3*dly*, Christ sometimes puts questions to these demons, asking their names, sometimes commands them

4thly, This we may argue from the ſymptoms of theſe demoniacks, their being of ſuch ſtrength, that no chain or fetters could bind them, Mark 5. 3. Nor could the diſeaſed perſon fear to be deſtroyed, tormented, ſent out of the country, or into the abyſs, by Chriſt.

Object. If it be ſaid that we find no mention of perſons thus poſſeſſed with the devil, among Jews or Gentiles, before our Saviour's advent, nor have we any experience of any ſuch thing, either among the Chriſtians, or in the heathen world, and therefore cannot eaſily believe it was ſo then.

Anſw. I anſwer, that the falſhood of this ſuggeſtion, that men poſſeſſed with evil ſpirits were not known among the Jews in former ages, hath been proved from the plain teſtimonies of Joſephus, Juſtin Martyr, and Irenæus, in the general preface to the Epiſtles, p. 43.

And that among the heathens there were perſons thus poſſeſſed, is there proved alſo from the teſtimonies of Plutarch, Lucian, Juſtin Martyr, and Origen; ſo that it is certain that the hiſtory of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, caſting out devils in Judæa, and of Chriſtians caſting them out throughout the world, was therefore never queſtioned by Jew or Gentile, becauſe they had among themſelves in every place pretenders to it.

Object. 2. Whereas it is objected, That to have a devil, and be mad, are joined together as the ſame thing, John 10. 20. and to be lunatick, and have a devil, Matth. 17. 15, 18. and is hence inferred that theſe diſeaſes were the ſame as devils, and, according to the Jewiſh phraſe, gave occaſion to the being ſaid, ſuch perſons were poſſeſſed with a devil.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, That I have ſufficiently confuted this cavil, in this Note, by ſhewing both from the ſacred records, and the writings of the fathers, that there is a conſtant and plain diſtinction betwixt theſe two things, the curing of diſeaſes, and the caſting out of devils.

Ibid. [t] Ἐπίτρεψον ἡμῖν, Suffer us.] He only therefore ſent them into the herd of ſwine, Mark 5. 12. by permitting them to enter into them; and this he did, ſaith Grotius, to convince the Greeks, who lived in this place, and kept theſe ſwine, of the ſacredneſs of the Jewiſh laws, which they ridiculed, eſpecially on the account of the prohibition to eat ſwines fleſh.

CHAP. IX.

1. AND he entred into a ſhip, and paſſed over (a part of the ſea of Galilee) and came [a] into his own city (Capernaum.)

2. And (a rumour being ſpread, that he was in the houſe, Mark 2. 1. as indeed he was, ſitting and teaching a multitude, ſo great, that the houſe and porch could not receive them; and healing them by his divine power, in preſence of the Phariſees and doctors of the law, who came from Galilee, Judea and Jeruſalem, Luke 5. 17.) behold they brought to him a man ſick of the palſy, lying on a bed (carried by four perſons, who being not able to come to him for the preſs, they uncovered the roof of the upper chamber where he was, and let down the bed to him; ſee the Note on Mark 2. 3.) And Jeſus, [b] ſeeing their faith, [c] ſaid unto the ſick of the palſy, Son, be of good cheer, thy ſins are forgiven thee.

3. And behold certain of the ſcribes (and Phariſees ſitting there) ſaid within themſelves, (i. e. in their hearts, Mark 2. 6. and in their private diſcourſes, Luke 5. 21.) this man blaſphemeth, (making himſelf a God, for who can forgive ſins but God only? Luke 5. 21.)

4. And Jeſus knowing their thoughts, ſaid, Wherefore think you evil in your hearts, (concerning me for theſe words?)

5. For, [d] whether is eaſier to ſay, Thy ſins be forgiven thee, or to ſay, Ariſe (take up thy bed) and walk; (which is a certain indication that the ſins which brought upon him that diſeaſe, are pardoned, or that this puniſhment of them is remitted?)

6. But, (I chuſe to ſay the firſt) [e] that ye may know that the Son of man hath power (even whilſt he is) on earth, to forgive ſins; then (turning from them) ſaith he to the ſick of the palſy, Ariſe, take up thy bed, and go unto thy houſe.

7. And he aroſe (took up his bed) and departed to his houſe.

8. But (and) when the multitude ſaw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given ſuch power unto men; (acknowledging they never ſaw it ſo before, Mark 2. 12.)

9. And as Jeſus paſſed from thence he ſaw [f] a man named Matthew, (or Levi, the ſon of Alpheus, Mark 2. 14. Luke 5. 27.) ſitting at the receipt of cuſtom, (or toll-booth) and he ſaith to him, Follow me; and he (leaving all things) aroſe, and followed him; (and made him a great ſupper in his houſe, Luke. 5 29.)

10. And it came to paſs as Jeſus ſat at meat, in the houſe, (of Matthew) behold, many publicans and and ſinners came, and ſat down with him and his diſciples.

11. And when the Phariſees ſaw it, they (murmuring) ſaid to his diſciples, g Why eateth your maſter with publicans and ſinners? (why doth he, who profeſſeth himſelf a Prophet, and an holy man, defile himſelf by touching, and vilify himſelf by converſing with ſuch men?)

12. But when Jeſus heard that, he ſaid unto them, (ſuch more eſpecially need my help, for) they that be whole need not a phyſician, but they that be ſick.

13. But, (for your farther ſatisfaction in this matter,) go ye, and learn what that (of the Prophet Hoſea, Chap. 6. 6.) meaneth, h I will have mercy, and not ſacrifice, (and how it ſuits with this action of mine,) i for I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance, (and muſt not be diverted from ſuch acts of mercy by your rules.)

14. Then, (it being a day on which the diſciples of John and the Phariſees faſted, Mark 2. 18.) came to him the diſciples of John, ſaying, (to Jeſus) k Why do we and the Phariſees faſt oft, (even twice a week, Luke 18. 12.) but thy diſciples faſt not, (but eat and drink on our faſting days? Luke 5. 33.)

15. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, l Can the children of the bride-chamber mourn as long as the bridegroom is with them, (is this fit, or uſual in ſuch caſes?) but (as for my diſciples,) the days will come when the bridegroom ſhall (by death) be taken from them, and then ſhall they faſt.

16. (And he ſaid alſo, by way of parable, Luke 5. 36.) m No man putteth a piece of new cloth to an old garment, for (if ſo) that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worſe.

17. Neither do men put new wine into old (leather) bottles, elſe the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and (ſo) the bottles periſh, but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preſerved; (ſo in like manner my young diſciples, taken not from the ſchools or academies, as perhaps thoſe of John and the Phariſees might be, but from their fiſhing-trades, muſt not preſently be put to ſuch ſevere taſks, for which they are not yet ſtrong enough, leſt they ſhould be diſcouraged, and fall from me.)

18. While he ſpake theſe things (to them,) behold, there came a certain n ruler (of the ſynagogue, Jairus by name, Mark 15. 22. Luke 8. 41.) and worſhipped him, ſaying, My daughter o is even now dead, (Gr. is dead by this time, for when I came from my houſe ſhe was at the laſt gaſp, Mark 5. 23.) but come, and lay thy hand upon her, and ſhe ſhall live.

19. And Jeſus aroſe, and followed him, and ſo did his diſciples, (and a great multitude, who preſſed upon him, Mark 5. 24. Luke 8. 42.)

20. And behold, a woman, which was diſeaſed with an iſſue of blood twelve years, (and had ſpent all that ſhe had upon phyſicians, and was nothing better, but rather grew worſe, Mark 5. 26. Luke 8. 43.) came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment, (and preſently the iſſue of her blood was ſtanched, Mark 5. 29.)

21. For ſhe (had) ſaid within herſelf, If I may but touch his garment, I ſhall be whole.

22. But Jeſus (knowing that virtue was gone out of him,) turned him about, (to the multitude, and ſaid, Who touched me?) and when he ſaw her, (that had done ſo, and heard her tell the reaſon why ſhe had done it, Luke 8. 45, 47.) he ſaid (unto her,) Daughter, be of good comfort, thy faith hath made thee whole, and the woman was made whole from that hour.

[Luke 8. 49. While he was ſpeaking, there cometh one from the ruler of the ſynagogue's houſe, ſaying to him, Thy daughter is dead, trouble not the maſter. 50. But when Jeſus heard it, he anſwered him, ſaying, Fear not, believe only, and ſhe ſhall be made whole.]

23. And when Jeſus came into the ruler's houſe, and ſaw the minſtrels, and (heard) the people making a noiſe, (as at a funeral ſolemnity;)

24. He ſaid unto them, Give place, for p the maid is not dead, but ſleepeth; (i. e. ſhe ſhall be raiſed from it, as it were out of ſleep,) and they laughed him to ſcorn.

25. But when the people were put forth, (Peter, James, and John, and the father and mother of the damſel being only left, Mark 5. 40.) he went in, and took her by the hand, (and ſaid unto her, Daughter, ariſe, and her ſpirit returned unto her,) and the maid aroſe, (and walked, being twelve years old, and he commanded that ſomething ſhould be given her to eat, to ſtrengthen her, and confirm them that ſhe was alive, Luke 8. 54, 55.)

26. And the fame hereof went abroad into all the land; (tho' he ſtraitly charged them to tell no man of it, Luke 8. 56.)

27. And when Jeſus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying and ſaying, Thou Son of David, (of whom the Prophet Iſaiah hath foretold, that he ſhould open the eyes of the blind, Chap. 29. 18.—35. 5.—42. 7.) have mercy on us.

28. And when he was come into the houſe, the blind men came to him; and Jeſus ſaith to them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They ſaid unto him, Yea, Lord.

29. Then touched he their eyes, ſaying, According to your faith be it to you.

30. And their eyes were opened; and Jeſus ſtrictly charged them, ſaying, [q] See that no man know it.

31. But they, when they were departed, ſpread abroad his fame in all that country.

32. And as they went out (of the city,) behold, they brought to him a dumb man, poſſeſſed with a devil:

33. And when the devil was caſt out, the dumb ſpake, and the multitudes marvelled, ſaying, It was never ſo ſeen in Iſrael.

34. But the Phariſees ſaid, He caſteth out devils thro' (Beelzebub, Luke 11. 15. who is) the prince of the devils.

35. And Jeſus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their ſynagogues, and preaching the Goſpel of the kingdom, and healing every ſickneſs and every diſeaſe among the people.

39. But, (and) when he ſaw the multitudes (that followed him,) he was moved with compaſſion on them, becauſe [r] they fainted, (or ſtrayed) and were ſcattered abroad, as ſheep having no ſhepherd, (and he taught them many things, Mark 6. 34.)

37. Then ſaith he to his diſciples, [s] The harveſt truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; (i. e. there be many who are willing to receive inſtruction, but few who are fit to give it to them.)

38. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harveſt, that he would ſend forth labourers into his harveſt; (to inſtruct thoſe aright who are ready to receive inſtruction.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. IX.

Ver. 1. [a] Εἰς τ ἰδίαν πόλιν, Into his own city,] that is, into Capernaum, Mark 2. 1. Chriſt having left Nazareth, to go to dwell at Capernaum, Matth. 4. 13.

Ver. 2. [b] Καὶ ἰδὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τ πίστιν αὐτῶν. And Jeſus ſeeing their faith;] i. e. the faith of thoſe who let down the ſick of the palſy: Whence it is evident, that the faith of others may prevail for the obtaining temporal and corporal bleſſings: Thus, in the preceding Chapter, ver. 13. the faith of the Centurion prevails, to heal his ſervant; and here, v. 33. the devil is caſt out of a dumb and deaf man, who had no tongue to aſk it, thro' the faith of them that brought him: Thus the daughter of Jairus is raiſed, Luke 8. 50. and the unclean ſpirit is caſt out of the ſon, by the father's faith, Mark 9. 22, 23. Note alſo, that Theophylact here adds, καὶ αὐτοῦ τ παραλυτικοῦ and the faith of the paralytick, for, ſaith he, had he not believed he ſhould be healed, he would not have conſented to their action.

Ibid. [c] Εἶπε τῷ παραλυτικῷ ἀφίωνταί σοι αἱ ἁμαρτίαι σου, He ſaid to the ſick of the palſy, Son, thy ſins are forgiven thee:] Shewing, ſaith Theophylact, That diſeaſes, and chiefly palſies, proceed from ſin, he firſt ſpeaks of forgiving them: But then it muſt be noted, that our Lord here ſpeaks of remiſſion, not of the eternal puniſhments, but of the temporal puniſhments, inflicted for ſin. (1.) Becauſe this remiſſion is obtained by the faith of others; whereas, the enjoyment of ſpiritual and eternal bleſſings in perſons capable of faith, depends on their own faith alone. (2.) Becauſe our Saviour ſaith, it is as eaſy to ſay, Thy ſins be forgiven thee, as to ſay, Riſe up and walk; which conſequence ſeems not to be good, if we take remiſſion of ſins in the higheſt ſenſe; ſince, by the example of the Apoſtles and ſeventy diſciples, it appears, they might have power of healing ſuch diſeaſes, who had no power of forgiving the eternal puniſhments of ſin. Moreover, it is uſual in ſcripture, and was ſo among the Jews, to repreſent bodily afflictions, miſeries and diſeaſes, as the effects of ſin, according to the common proverb, Niſi eſſent peccata, non eſſent flagella; Were there no ſins, there would be no chaſtiſements: Hence is the inquiry of the diſciples, touching the man born blind, who hath ſinned, he or his parents, that he ſhould be born blind? John 9. 2. and to the paralytick, Chriſt having healed him, ſpeaks thus, Behold, thou art made whole, ſin no more, leſt a worſe thing come unto thee, John 5. 14. For the law of Moſes threatened various kinds of diſeaſes to the tranſgreſſors of it, Deut. 28. 21, 22. and when they were remitted, theſe diſeaſes were removed: According to thoſe words of Iſaiah, Chap. 33. 24. The inhabitants ſhall not ſay, That they are ſick; the people that are there ſhall be forgiven their iniquity: And it is alſo uſual in the Old and the New Teſtament, to intimate deliverance from corporal diſeaſes by remiſſion of ſins, as when the Prophet ſaith to David, 2 Sam. 12. 13. The Lord hath taken away thy ſin; thou ſhalt not die for it: And, 2 Chron. 7. 14. I will be merciful to their iniquities, and will heal their land: So what is worded thus, Matth. 9. 22. Thy faith hath ſaved thee, is, Mark 5. 34. Thou art made whole.

Ver. 5. [d] Τί γάρ ἐστιν εὐκοπώτερον εἰπεῖν; Whether is it eaſier to ſay, Thy ſins be forgiven thee: or to ſay, Riſe up and walk?] They who here tell us, It is therefore eaſier to ſay the firſt, becauſe he cannot ſo eaſily be diſproved, who promiſeth a thing thing invisible, as he who engageth to do that which is the object of our senses; do not compare together the things to be done, but only the ways of knowing when they are not done: They therefore interpret these words better, who say, That it must be as easy to say, do the one, as to say with effect the other; it being indeed the same thing to say, thy sins, that is, the temporal punishments of them, are forgiven; and to say, be thou healed, or rise up, and walk effectually; seeing by being freed from the disease, which was the temporal punishment of sin, it was manifest, that sin was thus far forgiven.

Ver. 6. e "Ινα δὲ εἰδῆτε ὅτι ἐξουσίαν ἔχει ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ἀφιέναι τὰς ἁμαρτίας, but that ye may know the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins;] i. e. of absolving or releasing men from the temporal punishments of sin, whilst he is in his state of humiliation; for that Christ speaks here only of the temporal punishments of sin, is evident, not only from what hath been already said, but also from the effect; Christ only giving him power to rise up, and walk. Moreover, that Christ here speaks of a power inherent in him, and not only of the power of God assisting him, as it did the Apostles, when they healed diseases, is evident; because if Christ had only pronounced, that the sins of this paralytick were remitted by God, and the cure performed by his power, the Pharisees could have had no cause to be offended with him, and much less to have accused him of blasphemy.

Lastly, Observe, that by this power the distemper of this paralytick was healed instantly; which shews, the power that did effect it, was divine; that power only being able instantly to cure diseases by a word. Hence do the fathers conclude, our Lord was God as well as man: So (a) Irenæus, By remitting the sin, he cured the man, and manifestly shewed who he was; for, if none can remit sins but God, and yet our Lord did remit them, and cure the man, it is manifest, that he was both the Word of God and the Son of man, receiving power of remission of sins from his Father, as God and man: And (b) Novatian, If only God can remit sins, and yet Christ remitted them, Meritò Christus est Deus, He is truly God. See Additions N° 10.

Ver. 9. f A man named Matthew:] That this Matthew here was the same with Levi, in St. Mark and Luke. See Note on Luke 5. 27.

Ver. 11. g Διὰ τί μετὰ τῶν τελωνῶν καὶ ἁμαρτωλῶν ἐσθίει ὁ διδάσκαλος ὑμῶν; Why eateth your master with publicans and sinners?] The Pharisees looked upon publicans and great sinners, as if they had been heathens, thinking it a sin even to converse with them, tho' it were to convert them from the evil of their ways; objecting this to the reproach of Christ, that he was a friend to publicans and sinners, Matth. 11. 19. Hence saith our Saviour, of him that would not hear the Church, let him be to thee as a heathen and publican; i. e. abstain from any farther converse and familiarity with him, Matth. 18. 17. And if you love them that love you only, or lend to them only that lend to you again, what do you more than others? do not publicans and heathens, Matth. 5. 46. and sinners, Luke 6. 32, 33. do the same? And they bore the same character among the heathens: So the (c) Scholiast upon those words of Aristophanes, Καὶ τελώνιον, καὶ φάραγγα, καὶ χάρυβδιν ἁρπαγῆς, a publican, and a whirle-pit, and a gulph of rapine: And Suidas notes, That διαβέβληται ὁ τελώνης ὄνομα παρὰ τοῖς παλαιοῖς, the very name of publican was infamous to the ancients. Theocritus says, That bears and lions were the most savage beasts in the mountains; but in the cities, τελῶναι publicans and sycophants. Apud Stob. Serm. 2. p. 31. And in Apollodorus he is joined with thieves and dissolute men, κλέπτῃ τελώνῃ βαλαντοτόμῳ· Stob. Serm. 44. p. 307. (d) Cicero declares, The name and office was very grievous to the Greeks, and insinuates, that it was not much less abhorred among the Romans; and well it might be, since Suidas, out of an old author, agrees so exactly with Aristophanes, declaring, That the life of a publican was, Παρόησιαστικὸν βίος, ἀνεπίλημπτος ἁρπαγή, an open and free violence, and unpunished rapine, ἀναίσχυντος πλεονεξία, ἀναίδης ἐμπορεία, πρασμάτεια, λίσσον μὴ ἔχουσα, a shameless covetousness, an impudent merchandize, and unreasonable negotiation: Whence (e) Tacitus not only speaks, De novis acerbitatibus, & illicitis exactionibus publicanorum, Of the new grievances and unlawful exactions of the publicans; but adds, That Nero therefore was consulting, whether he should take away all tributes, Idque pulcherrimum donum generi mortalium daret; and St. John Baptist requires them to exact no more than that which was appointed. See Dr. Hammond on the place.

to be understood absolutely, is evident, because God had commanded sacrifices, and therefore could not absolutely say, he would not have them.

Ibid. [i] Οὐ γὰρ ἦλθον καλέσαι δικαίους ἀλλ' ἁμαρτωλοὺς εἰς μετάνοιαν· For I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance.] Where, by the righteous, we are not to understand those who are only righteous in their own conceits, such as the Pharisees were, who justified themselves before men, Luke 16. 15. and trusted to themselves, that they were righteous, and despised others, in comparison of themselves, Luke 18. 9. for such are not whole, but have great need of the spiritual physician, ver. 12. and such especially, the Gospel calleth to repentance, Matth. 3. 8, 9, 10. Apoc. 3. 17. Moreover, the word sinners here imports, such persons as live in a customary practice of sin; so that the tenor of their lives is wicked, and who are therefore to be called to that repentance which consists in the change of their lives, from the service of sin to holiness, from slavery to Satan, to the fear of God; and therefore, by the righteous, who need no repentance, we are not to understand those who are entirely free from sin; for, so there is not a just man upon earth, Job 9. 2. Eccles. 7. 20. nor any man who is not a sinner, 1 Kings 8. 46. James 3. 2. 1 John 1. 8. but those who are truly and sincerely righteous, have truly reformed their lives, who carefully endeavour to abstain from all known sins, and set themselves sincerely to the performance of their whole duty both to God and man, and so are righteous and accepted in the sight of God; in which sense, Job was righteous, and eschewed evil; Zacharias and Elizabeth were righteous, walking in all the commandments of God, Luke 1. 6. and Simeon, Luke 2. 25. and so they needed not that repentance which consists in the change of the life, from a course of sinning, to living unto God. So that the argument here is double; (1.) That tho' familiar converse with sinners was in the general to be avoided, yet was that only on this account, That we may not encourage them in sin, or be defiled by them; and so it could not hinder that great act of charity and mercy to their souls, which was directed to the conversion of them from their evil ways; the avoiding of familiarity with them, being only as the precept of sacrifice, and therefore not to be regarded, so as to obstruct that more important duty, of shewing mercy to their souls. (2.) That Christ was the great spiritual physician sent to heal these sin-sick souls, and call them to repentance; and therefore, in conversing with them, in pursuance of this end, he was so far from transgressing his Father's precepts, that he was doing the great work for which he was sent by him into the world. Note also, That this of the physician was a proverbial saying; for, when (f) Antisthenes was asked, Why he conversed with wicked men? His answer was, Καὶ οἱ ἰατροὶ μετὰ τῶν νοσούντων εἰσὶν, Physicians are with the diseased: And, when Diogenes, saith (g) Stobæus, when Pausanias, saith Plutarch, was asked, Why he praised the Lacedæmonians, but staid not with them? He answered, Ὅτι ὁ ἰατρὸς πρὸς τοὺς ὑσταίνοντας, ὅπου δὲ οἱ νοσοῦντες διατρίβειν ἀνάγκη, That physicians conversed not among the healthy, but among the sick. See Examen Millii here.

Ver. 14. [k] Διὰ τί ἡμεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι νηστεύομεν πολλὰ; Why do we and the Pharisees fast much, but thy disciples fast not?] It is here said by Mr. Clerc, that it was not the design of St. John's disciples, to enquire simply, Why the disciples of Christ did not fast, but why they did not follow the example of all devout men among the Jews, who did fast often. But, (1*st*,) This seems to be a mistake: for they ask, Why they did not fast at all? And our Saviour's plea for them, is, for an entire exemption from that duty, whilst he was present with them. (2*dly*,) Were it as Mr. Cl. would have it, yet is the observation of the Reverend Dr. Hammond true and pertinent, That the disciples of John intended not to ask the reason, why they themselves fasted often? They being so well satisfied with the reason of that, that they wonder why Christ's disciples did not as they did: This being, saith he, truly the meaning of their question; since we fast so devoutly, why do not thy disciples do this as well as we?

Ver. 15. [l] Μὴ δύνανται οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ νυμφῶνος πενθεῖν; Can the children of the bride-chamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them?] The sons of the bride-chamber are those who are admitted into it, stiled by the Grecians παράνυμφοι and παρόχεοι· by the Latins, pronubi; by the Jews, Shoshebinim; and their business was, to enter into the bride-chamber, and to rejoice and exhilarate themselves with the bridegroom, during the time of the marriage festival, which was, saith Dr. Lightfoot on the place, seven days; and these were usually εἷλοι τοῦ νυμφίου, the friends or kindred of the bridegroom: Whence, St. John Baptist represents himself, as rejoicing to hear the voice of the bridegroom, as being one of his friends, John 3. 29. So then the argument runs thus; I am the bridegroom, and the Church is my bride; as long as I am here, lasts the marriage-feast, and my disciples are the children, and friends of the bridegroom, and so are not to mourn, but to rejoice with me whilst this time lasts; at my death and and departure from them, this bridegroom will be taken from them, and then will be the time for them to fast and mourn.

Ver. 16, 17. [m] Οὐδεὶς δὲ ἐπιβάλλει ἐπίβλημα ῥάκους ἀγνάφου ἐπὶ ἱματίῳ παλαιῷ. No man putteth a piece of new cloth to an old garment.] It is the opinion of many fathers and interpreters, that Christ by these two similitudes intended to shew, he thought it not fit at their first entrance, and before the Holy Spirit was come down upon his disciples, to impose the burden of fasting on them, because they were not fitted to bear it, by reason of their infirmity, and that they might be tempted by such austerities, as were frequent fastings, imposed on them, to fall off from him. And hence they add, That Christ, by his example, recommends this condescension to weak and infirm consciences to his disciples, and to the ministers of the Gospel, viz. not to impose upon them, that σάρκα ἐπιταγμάτων, weight of ordinances which they cannot bear: But, against this exposition, Episcopius objects, That no reason can be assigned, why Christ's disciples should be less able thus to fast, than the disciples of the Baptist, or the Pharisees. To which objection I answer, That there were among the Jews, not only sects of the Essens and Pharisees, who led an austere life, but also (h) schools of the Prophets; and those frequently lived in mountains and deserts, and were also many of them Nazarites, and consecrated to the service of God; they had also their academical and private schools, to train up men in discipline; and from these might come disciples to John in the wilderness, and disciples to the Pharisees, who might be trained up in those duties; whereas it is certain, that the disciples of our Lord were chosen from their fishing-trade, and so came to him wholly unacquainted with, and so unfitted for these austerities. His interpretation is therefore this, That it is as unfit or unseemly for his disciples to fast, whilst he is present with them, as it is to sew a piece of new cloth to an old, or to put new wine into old bottles; in which interpretation, I cannot acquiesce, because it is manifest from both these similitudes, That our Lord represents not the unfitness, but the hurt or damage of doing either of these things, viz. that the doing of the first would make the rent worse; the doing of the second would endanger the breaking the bottles, and the spilling the wine: To which danger, the sense given by Episcopius hath no respect.

Ver. 18. [n] Ἄρχων, a ruler;] This ruler being in St. Mark and Luke, ἀρχισυνάγωγος, a ruler of the synagogue, it is not reasonable to conceive, as some do, that he was one of the twenty-three judges that were constituted in every city, but rather that he was the head, or ruler of the synagogue, which was at Nazareth: Of which rulers we have mention, Acts 13. 15.——18. 8, 17. Luke 13. 14. See Note on Mark 5. 22.

Ibid. ὁ [o] Ἄρτι ἐτελεύτησε, Is now dead:] This being in St. Mark 5. 23. ἐσχάτως ἔχει, she is at the last extremity; the words must be rendered as in the paraphrase, She is by this time dead; and this is evident from the story, because, as Christ was going to the ruler's house, a messenger comes from it to tell him, That his daughter was now dead, Luke 8. 49. which shews, that at his coming to Christ she was not so, but only at the last extremity. See Additions N° 11.

Ver. 24. [p] Οὐ γὰρ ἀπέθανε τὸ κοράσιον ἀλλὰ καθεύδει, For the maid is not dead but sleepeth.] From this place, the Jesuits contend for their equivocations and mental reservations; by which they certainly deceive the hearer, who knows not what in their minds they do conceal, alledging, That when our Lord here saith, she is not dead, he reserved in his mind, in respect of my power, or so as to remain under the power of it. But the words of Christ were plainly spoken to those who were preparing for her interment, and performing the funeral rites belonging to it, and therefore only intimate, she was not so dead, as that they needed to make these preparations, he being come to awake her, as out of a sleep.

Ver. 30. [q] Ὁρᾶτε μηδεὶς γινωσκέτω, See that no man know it.] That Christ should take this care, that his miracles, in healing persons, and casting out of devils, should not be known, only to avoid vain glory, seems not very reasonable; this being done sufficiently by his declaration, that he did this by the finger of God, Matth. 12. 28. and that by these works, he sought not his own glory, but the glory of his Father, John 5. 41.——7. 18. Let it then be noted,

1st, That when he doth his miracles among the heathens, or upon them that dwelt among them, such as were the Syrophœnician woman, and the woman of Paneas, or Cæsarea Philippi, he never imposeth silence on the person healed, but sometimes on the contrary, bids them declare what God had done for them; so when he had cured the Demoniack at Gadara, he bids him go to his house, and his acquaintance, and tell them what things the Lord had done for him, and how he had shewed mercy even to an heathen, Mark 5. 19. And tho' he charged his disciples to tell no man among the Jews, that he was the Christ, till his resurrection, Matth. 16. 20. He doth himself declare to the Samaritan woman, that he was the Messiah,

(h) Campeg. Vitring. l. 2. c. 7.

Meſſiah, John 4. 25, 26. becauſe theſe things would prepare theſe heathens and Samaritans, when Chriſt was preached to them by his Apoſtles, to receive their teſtimony.

2*dly*, Obſerve, That the things which he forbids his diſciples to declare, were not his miracles, but either his transfiguration on the mount, Matth. 17. 9. or that he was the Chriſt, Mark 8. 29, 30. And this he only bade them to conceal, till he was riſen from the dead; and this he did only, that their teſtimony of him might not be looked upon as a thing compacted between him and them, but chiefly becauſe they were not fitted to be his witneſſes of theſe things, till they had received power from on high, by the coming down of the Holy Ghoſt to do it, Acts 1. 8. For he received before the teſtimony of John, and appealed to it, John 5. 33. becauſe he was ſent by God to bear witneſs of him, John 1. 6, 7. and becauſe the blazing theſe things abroad by his diſciples, that he was the Meſſiah, ſent by God to be their Saviour, and that God by a voice from heaven commanded all men to obey him; would have ſo far comported with that imagination of a temporal kingdom to be erected by him, and looked ſo like the ſending his diſciples as his heralds, to proclaim him King, as that it would have given too much occaſion to the government, to ſuſpect that he deſigned ſome ſuch thing, and too much colour to the accuſation of the Jews, that he forbad men to give tribute to Cæſar, ſaying, that he himſelf was Chriſt a King, Luke 23. 2. Now from the firſt obſervation we learn, that the reaſon why he was thus concerned to have his miracles concealed, muſt be ſomewhat peculiar to the Jewiſh nation; and from the ſecond, that he did this chiefly to avoid all ſuſpicion, that he intended to ſet up any temporal kingdom, or to give occaſion to any innovation, ſedition, or diſturbance, upon his account. We therefore may ſay,

1*ſt*, With the Reverend Dr. Hammond, that he did this to avoid the malice of the ſcribes and Phariſees, and the Herodians, againſt him, who were ſo far from being convinced by his miracles, that they not only did blaſpheme them, but oft conſulted how they might entrap him in his words, and get ſomething out of his mouth, by which they might accuſe him as an enemy to God and Cæſar. So when he had pronounced his woes againſt them, the ſcribes and Phariſees began to urge him vehemently, laying ſnares for him, and ſeeking to get ſomething out of his mouth, that they might accuſe him, (to the government,) Luke 11. 53, 54. When, in the parable of the kingdom of heaven, he had told them what was like to be their fate, they ſend out their diſciples with the Phariſees, to entrap him in his words, and to put the queſtion to him, Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæſar, or not? Matth. 22. 15, 18. And when he doth but covertly declare himſelf to be the Son of God, they are ready to ſtone him for it, John 8. 59. —— 10. 31. And at his miracles they were ſo incenſed, as to think of nothing leſs than cutting him off; and thus when he cured the man that had the withered hand, the Phariſees and Herodians take counſel together, how they might deſtroy him, Mark 3. 6. Thus when the people, hearing his words and ſeeing his miracles, began to be convinced by them, and to ſay, that he was the Chriſt; the Phariſees and high prieſts hearing that they murmured ſuch things concerning him, ſend forth their ſervants to apprehend him, John 7. 30, 31, 32. When he had raiſed Lazarus, the chief prieſts and Phariſees conclude, that it was expedient that he ſhould die, and ſend forth their commands, that if any one knew where he was, he ſhould declare it, that they might take him, John 11. 47, 49, 50, 57. That therefore they might not take him off before his time, and that they might have leſs occaſion to do it for his popularity, or the reſort of multitudes unto him, he commands his miracles ſhould be concealed; and when they could not be ſo, he departs from the multitudes into deſart places; and when his fame was ſpread forth in one country round about, he departs thence into ſome other place. But,

2*dly*, His chief deſign in thus concealing that he was the Chriſt, and giving charge not to divulge his miracles, was this, that he might not indulge that pernicious conceit which had obtained among them, that their Meſſiah was to be a temporal King; for the very name of their Meſſiah being ſtill in their Targums, Meſſiah the King; and they ſpeaking ſo much of his kingdom, and dominion over the nations, his delivering Iſrael, and ſubduing their enemies; had our Lord openly declared himſelf the Meſſiah before his reſurrection, and exaltation to the right hand of God, they would eaſily have made this inference, that therefore he muſt be their King, their deliverer, and the ſubduer of their enemies, and would have attempted by tumults and ſeditions to ſet up his kingdom: Thus when he had fed five thouſand with five little loaves and two ſmall fiſhes, they gathering hence, that he was able to make proviſions for an army, preſently conclude, that they would take him by force, and make him a King, John 6. 15. And this cauſeth him to depart from them into a mountain alone. And his miracles being ſo great a conviction, that he was that Prophet that ſhould come into the world, this was thought warrant enough for this attempt, v. 14. Chriſt's kingdom therefore not being of this world, and therefore therefore not to come with that pomp or obſervation, or to the ends which they expected, and it being his great concern, that no ſedition or diſturbance of the civil government ſhould be laid, either to his perſon or doctrine, this ſeemeth to have been the chief reaſon, why he gave charge to thoſe he healed, not to make his miracles known, and to his diſciples not to declare that he was the Chriſt.

Ver. 36. [r] Ὅτι ἦσαν ἐκλελυμένοι, They fainted.] It is certain that Chryſoſtom and Theophylact read here ἐσκυλμένοι, they were toſſed and wearied, either with the burdens of the ſcribes and Phariſees, or with going from one of theſe falſe guides to another; from thoſe that bound, to thoſe that looſed the ſame thing. But our reading, they were ſcattered one from another, comports beſt with the ſimilitude of being as ſheep without a ſhepherd.

Ver. 37. [s] Ὁ μὲν θερισμὸς πολύς, The harveſt indeed is great, but the labourers few, &c.] From this diſcourſe of Chriſt we learn theſe things, worthy to be regarded by all the paſtors of Chriſt's flock, viz.

1*ſt*, That he who doth not inſtruct his flock in the ſincere milk of the word, and acquaint them with the things belonging to their eternal peace, from an heart full of love to God, and to the ſouls committed to his charge, deſerves not the name of a true ſhepherd; for the want of theſe things in the ſcribes and Phariſees, made Chriſt complain, that the Jews were as ſheep without a ſhepherd.

2*dly*, That where the harveſt is great, and there be many who are white for the harveſt, John 4. 35. or ready to receive inſtruction, we ſhould be the more diligent and laborious to afford it to them.

3*dly*, That in ſuch caſes, when either we are not called to that work, or are placed in another ſtation, we ſhould pray fervently, that God would raiſe up men fitted for their inſtruction, and zealous for his glory, and the good of ſouls.

CHAP. X.

1. AND when he had called to him his twelve diſciples, he gave them [a] power againſt unclean ſpirits, to caſt them out, and to heal all manner of ſickneſs, and all manner of diſeaſes, (as they went preaching in his name.)

2. Now the names of the twelve Apoſtles are theſe, the [b] firſt, Simon who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother, James the ſon of Zebedee, and John his brother.

3. Philip, and Bartholomew, Thomas, and Matthew the publican, James the ſon of Alpheus, and Lebbeus, whoſe ſirname was Thaddeus,

4. Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iſcariot, who alſo betrayed him.

5. Theſe twelve Jeſus ſent forth, (by two and two, Mark 6. 7.) and commanded them, ſaying, Go not (at preſent) into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not.

6. But go rather to the [c] loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael; (to whom this doctrine of ſalvation is firſt ſent, and is to be firſt preached, Acts 3. 26.)

7. And as ye go, preach, ſaying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand, (i. e. the kingdom of the Meſſiah is now to be ſet up.)

8. (And in confirmation of this) Heal the ſick, cleanſe the lepers, [d] raiſe the dead, caſt out devils; freely ye have received (this power from me,) [e] freely give, (the benefit of it to others.)

9. (Then he commanded them to take nothing by the way, Mark 6. 8. ſaying,) Provide neither gold, nor ſilver, nor braſs, in your purſes:

10. Nor ſcrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither ſhoes, nor yet [f] ſtaves; for the workman is worthy of his meat; (and therefore you may reaſonably expect to find it among them, for the benefit of whom you labour.)

11. And into whatever city, or town, ye ſhall enter, enquire who in it is [g] worthy, (or prepared to receive inſtruction,) and there abide till ye go thence, (or from that town.)

12. And when ye come into an houſe, ſalute it, (ſaying, Peace be to this houſe.)

13. And if the houſe be worthy, let your peace come upon it, (your bleſſing ſhall reſt on it,) but if it be not worthy, let your peace [h] return to you; (i. e. they ſhall receive no advantage by it.)

14. And whoſoever ſhall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that houſe, or city, [i] ſhake off the duſt of your feet, (for a teſtimony againſt them, Mark 6. 11. Luke 9. 5. that you count them as unclean, and unfit to be converſed with any more, becauſe they have rejected the word of life propounded, and by your miracles confirmed to them.)

14. Verily, I ſay unto you, [k] it ſhall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the (great) day of judgment, than for (the people of) that city; (becauſe the means of knowledge rejected by them hath been greater, Chap. 11. 23, 24.)

16. Behold, I ſend you forth as (if) ſheep (were ſent) in the midſt of wolves; (i. e. on an employment full of peril from the men of the world;) be ye therefore therefore wiſe as ſerpents, (i. e. as prudent and wary as they are to preſerve themſelves from danger,) and harmleſs as doves; (that, giving no offence to any man, you may give them no occaſion to do evil to you. See Rom. 16. 19.)

17. [l] But (and eſpecially) beware of (the) men (of this age and nation,) for they will deliver you up to the councils (of the Sanhedrim,) and they will ſcourge you in their ſynagogues (for preaching in my name.)

18. And ye ſhall be brought before Governors and Kings for my ſake, for a teſtimony againſt (Gr. to) them, and (to) the Gentiles, (who believe not the Goſpel preached to them, that the kingdom of God was come to them, Luke 10. 9.)

19. But when they deliver you up, (to theſe men,) [m] take no thought how, or what ye ſhall ſpeak; for it ſhall be given you in that ſame hour what ye ſhall ſpeak.

20. For it is not ye that ſpeak, (from your own abilities,) but (it is) the Spirit of your Father that ſpeaketh in you.

21. And (know this, that when the Goſpel is thus preached by you, the effect of it will be this, that) the brother (who believeth not) ſhall deliver up the (Chriſtian) brother to death, and the father the child; and the children ſhall riſe up againſt their parents, and cauſe them to be put to death, (as being Chriſtians.)

22. And ye (alſo) ſhall be hated of all (the) men (of the world,) for my name's ſake, but he that endureth to the end (of theſe days of perſecution from the unbelieving Jews,) ſhall be ſaved (from the dreadful deſtruction coming on them.)

23. But [n] when they perſecute you in this city, (i. e. in any one city,) flee ye into another; for verily I ſay unto you, [o] ye ſhall not have gone over the cities of Iſrael, till the Son of man be come; (with his Roman army to deſtroy that nation, and to burn up their cities.)

24. (And to arm you againſt theſe perſecutions, conſider that) the diſciple is not (to expect to be) above his maſter, nor the ſervant (to be) above his lord.

25. It is enough for the diſciple to be as his maſter, and (for) the ſervant (to be) as his Lord; if (then) they have called the maſter of the houſe Beelzebub, how much more (ſhall they call, or proportionably revile) them of his houſhold?

26. [p] Fear them not therefore, for there is nothing covered that ſhall not be revealed, and hid that ſhall not be known; (i. e. for my doctrine, which now ſeems obſcure, and hidden from the world, ſhall in time be revealed to all nations, and overcome all the calumnies with which it is loaded, and all the oppoſition it ſhall meet with.)

27. [q] What (therefore) I tell you in darkneſs, (or parabolical expreſſions,) that ſpeak ye in the light, and what ye hear (from me) in the ear, (i. e. more privately) that preach ye (publickly, and as it were) upon the houſe tops.

28. [r] And fear not them which (can only) kill the body, but are not able to kill the ſoul; but rather fear him who is able to deſtroy both ſoul and body in hell.

29. (Moreover, you who are ſo highly valued by God, and live under ſuch a peculiar conduct of his providence, have no cauſe to fear, what they can do to the body, for) are not two ſparrows ſold for a farthing, (as being birds of little value?) and one of them ſhall not fall on the ground, (or die) without (the providence of) your Father.

30. But (yet this providence it more particularly concerned for you, for) the very hairs of your head are all numbred; (i. e. your minuteſt concerns are under the eſpecial conduct of his providence.)

31. Fear ye not therefore, (for) ye are of more value (in the ſight of God) than many ſparrows.

32. Whoſoever therefore ſhall (by theſe conſiderations be encouraged ſtill to) confeſs (or own) me (and my doctrine) before men, him will I confeſs alſo (or own at the great day, as my faithful ſervant) before my Father which is in heaven.

33. But whoſoever (notwithſtanding theſe encouragements) ſhall (to avoid their perſecutions) deny me before men, him will I alſo deny (and diſown at the great day) before my Father which is in heaven.

34. (And) [s] Think not that I am come to ſend (or cauſe) peace on earth, (and ſo to free you from theſe perſecutions, for) I came not to ſend peace, but a ſword.

35. For I am come to (preach that doctrine, which will rather) ſet a man at variance againſt his father, and the daughter againſt her mother, and the daughter-in-law againſt her mother-in-law.

36. And (thus it ſhall happen, that) a man's foes ſhall be they of his own houſhold.

37. (And this diſpenſation of providence will diſcover who is worthy to be owned as my diſciple, for when this happeneth,) He that loveth father or mother more than me, (i. e. is moved by his regard to them, to diſown me, or diſobey my precepts,) is not worthy of me; and he that loveth ſon or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me.

38. And he that taketh not (up) his croſs, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. (See Note on Luke 9. 23.)

39. (And know that by refuſing thus to follow me, me, men will be the greatest losers, for) He that (by deserting me in time of persecution,) findeth his life (preserved for a little while,) shall lose it (probably here, and certainly hereafter;) and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it, (happily improved into life eternal, and so shall be the greatest gainer.)

40. (Nor shall my kindness be confined only to those who shew this affection to my person, but) [t] He that receiveth you, (preaching in my name, shall be esteemed as he that) receiveth me, and he that receiveth me, (as he that) receiveth him that sent me.

41. (And) He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, (i. e. as one sent from God, and doth accordingly attend to him,) shall receive a Prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man, in the name of a righteous man, (i. e. out of true love to his righteousness,) shall receive a righteous man's reward.

42. And whosoever shall give to drink to one of these little ones, (i. e. the meanest of my disciples,) a cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. X.

Ver. 1. [a] ΕΔΩΚΕΝ αὐτοῖς ἐξουσίαν πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων, He gave them power against (or over) unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease.] ἐξουσία πνευμάτων, here is genitivus objecti, say grammarians; power of unclean spirits, being put for power over or against them. So βλασφημία τοῦ πνεύματος, Matth. 12. 31. is expounded, v. 32. Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. See Isai. 3. 14. Joel 3. 19. 1 Cor. 9. 12. But that which chiefly is to be observed here, is this, that Christ here delegates power to the Apostles, and afterwards to the seventy disciples, Luke 10. 9, 17. and after his resurrection to believers in the general, to do this in his name, Mark 16. 17, 18. And though the Apostles were not at present impowered to impart these gifts to others, yet after our Lord's resurrection they were enabled to do it, by baptizing, and laying their hands upon them; which is so eminent a demonstration of the truth of Christian faith, as hath no parallel in any history, excepting that of Moses, who laid his hands upon Joshua, and he was filled with the spirit of wisdom, Deut. 34. 9. and of Elisha, on whom the spirit of Elijah rested, 2 Kings 2. 15. Though this was done, not by any power they had to communicate to others the virtue which resided in them, but in the case of Joshua by the particular command of God, Numb. 27. 19, 20. and in the Case of Elisha by the will of God; and was a signal confirmation that they were both Prophets sent by God; and much less was it done, as here by invocation of their names. For among all the accounts the heathens have given us of their famous magicians, and workers of wonders, there is not one to be found, who ever pretended to a power to delegate their virtue to others, or to impart their power to them, upon the invocation or using of their names, or belief of their doctrine. And hence (a) Arnobius, having summed up the miracles our Saviour did, adds, that he not only did them by his power, verum quod erat sublimius multos alios experiri & facere sui nominis cum adjectione permisit, but permitted many others to do them, by invocation of his name; nor did he any of these miracles which raised astonishment in others, which he enabled not his little ones, and even rusticks to perform. And then he triumphs over the heathens thus, What say you, Oh ye stiff and incredulous minds? alicuine mortalium Jupiter ille Capitolinus hujusmodi potestatem dedit? Did ever that Jupiter, whom ye Romans worship in the Capitol, gave the like power to any mortal? and then he concludes this to be the evidence of a true divine power, for to transfer your miraculous power to a man, and to give authority and strength to a creature, to do that which you alone can do, supra omnia sitæ est potestatis, continentisque sub sese est rerum omnium causas, is an evidence of one who hath power over all, and hath the causes of all things at his beck.

Ver. 2. [b] Πρῶτος Σίμων, First Simon.] It is the observation of many of the (b) fathers and interpreters here, that Simon is here reckoned the first of the Apostles; not as being so in dignity, but as being first called; for which see Mark 1. 16. Matt. 4. 18. And therefore this word is omitted both by St. Mark, Chap. 3. 16. and St. Luke, Chap. 6. 14. which sure they would not have done, had they imagined it to be so remarkable, for establishing St. Peter's monarchy, as the Papists do.

Ver. 6. [c] Πορεύεσθε δὲ μᾶλλον πρὸς τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἀπολωλότα οἴκου Ἰσραήλ, but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.] He calls all Israel sheep, though they were not obedient to the voice of the Shepherd, as being all God's choſen people; he calls them loſt ſheep, becauſe they were in ſo great peril of being loſt and ruined by the ignorance and wickedneſs of their guides. To them the Apoſtles are firſt ſent, becauſe they were children of the kingdom, Matth. 8. 12. to whom the promiſe of the Meſſiah was made, Gen. 17. 1. and the adoption and promiſes eſpecially belonged, Rom. 9. 4. Whence the Apoſtle ſaith, the Goſpel ought firſt to be preached to them, Acts 13. 46. They who by ſheep here underſtand the elect by a ſecret decree of God, muſt, contrary to the tenour of the New Teſtament, make Chriſt and his Apoſtles to be ſent to none, who rejected the Goſpel; yea, they make Chriſt ſend his Apoſtles to them, whom they could never find; it being not poſſible for them, without a revelation, to know who were thus the Elect of God.

Ver. 8. [d] Νεκρους ἐγειρετε, Raiſe the dead.] Dr. Mills here notes, That theſe words are wanting in many manuſcripts; and, becauſe the Apoſtles raiſed none from the dead before Chriſt's reſurrection, he conjectures, that they have been added to the text: But againſt this imagination, let it be noted, That theſe words are to be found in the Vulgar, Syriack, Arabick, and Ethiopick Verſions, and left out only in the latter Verſion of the Perſick; and the argument which he and Grotius uſe for the excluding thoſe words from the text, would exclude alſo the cleanſing of the lepers, for we read of none cleanſed by them in that interval. But it is to be obſerved, that the words in this Chapter reach to their miſſion after Chriſt's reſurrection, and many of them were not fulfilled before: For then only was it, that they were brought before councils, and ſcourged in the ſynagogues, and brought before Kings and Governors, for Chriſt's ſake, ver. 17, 18. then only was the Spirit given them, to teach them how to ſpeak, ver. 19, 20. then were they hated of all men for his name. Note therefore that there was a double miſſion of the Apoſtles. The 1ſt, Was to the Jews only, excluſively to the Gentiles, and Samaritans, ver. 5. and thus they were ſent, two and two, Mark 6. 7. to go through the cities and villages of Iſrael, to preach, ſaying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand, here, ver. 7, 23. Luke 9. 5, 6. which miſſion they compleated before our Saviour's death, Luke 9. 10, 22, 35. and in this they were only empowered to heal diſeaſes, and to caſt out devils, Matth. 10. 1. Mark 6. 7, 13. Luke 9. 1, 2. But, 2dly, They had a ſecond miſſion, after our Lord's reſurrection, conceived in theſe words, as my Father ſent me, ſo ſend I you, John 20. 21. And this was to be executed after the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon them, by being his witneſſes in Jeruſalem, and all Judea and Samaria, and to the utmoſt ends of the earth, Acts 1. 8. And to this miſſion relates this commiſſion, to cleanſe the lepers, and to raiſe the dead; for, beſides the many things already mentioned, which cannot poſſibly relate to their firſt miſſion; moſt of the things mentioned in this Chapter, are the very things ſpoken in our Lord's prediction of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and are there mentioned as things to be done then. Matth. 24. 9. And theſe words, ver. 22. He that endures to the end ſhall be ſaved, are the very words which Chriſt uſeth, when he ſpeaks of the deſtruction of the Jewiſh polity, Matth. 24. 13. Mark 13. 13. and therefore it is obſervable, that St. Mark and Luke, who relate only what appertained to their firſt miſſion, ſpeak nothing, in the Chapters mentioned, of their commiſſion to cleanſe the lepers, and to raiſe the dead; or, from ver. 15 to 31. as knowing, that theſe things belonged to their ſecond miſſion. See Examen Millii, l. 2. c. 1. n. 4.

Ibid. [e] Δωρεὰν ἐλάβετε, δωρεὰν δότε, Freely you have received, freely give.] Though theſe words are by latter fathers extended to both the ſacraments, according to thoſe words of Tertullian, Nulla res Dei pretio conſtat, We receive nothing for the things of God; yet from the connexion of them, with the commiſſion given to cure diſeaſes, caſt out devils, and raiſe the dead; and from the words of (c) Irenaus, ſaying, The church did all theſe miracles, neither ſeducing any man, nor taking money for them, ὡς γὰρ δωρεὰν ἔλαβε παρὰ Θεοῦ δωρεὰν καὶ διακονεῖ, for as ſhe hath received them freely of God, ſo ſhe freely miniſters them: I ſay, from theſe things it is evident, that theſe words only relate to the diſpenſing of miraculous gifts, and they aſſuredly do wreſt and very much abuſe them, who plead from them againſt the maintainance of the miniſtry. For, (1.) Chriſt ſending the ſeventy on the ſame errand, and inveſting them with the ſame power, bids them, into whatſoever houſe they entered, to eat and drink what was ſet before them, becauſe the labourer was worthy of his hire, Luke 10. 7. And many of the Apoſtles, when executing this commiſſion, even the brethren of our Lord and Cephas, did ſo, 1 Cor. 9. 4, 5. St. Paul alſo, who did not uſe this liberty, not only juſtifies his right to do ſo, but requires them who are taught the word, to communicate to him that teacheth in all good things, Gal. 6. 6. See the Note there; and pronounceth him that labours in the word, and doctrine, worthy of double honour, that is, maintenance; and ſaith, The Lord hath ordained, that they they who preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 9. 14.

Ver. 10. [f] Μηδὲ ῥάβδον, Nor yet staves.] That the reading of Theophylact, and many MSS. μηδὲ ῥάβδους, nor staves, is the true reading, is evident from Mark 6. 8. Luke 9. 3. where they are permitted to carry one staff. And by this precept, our Lord taught them, when they were employed in his service, to depend upon his providence for the provision of what they wanted; and therefore he speaks thus to them, When I thus sent you forth, lacked ye any thing? Luke 22. 35. it follows, for the labourer is worthy of his meat; and therefore, even when they were dispensing these miracles, our Lord allows them to receive it: Only Theophylact here notes, That Christ here says, he is worthy τροφῆς, ὑ τρυφῆς, of his food, not of dainties; for it becomes not a teacher to fare deliciously.

Ver. 11. [g] Ἐξετάσατε τίς ἐν αὐτῇ ἄξιός ἐστι, Enquire who in it is worthy.] So ver. 13. And if the house be not worthy. Here Camero pronounces them innovators, who conclude hence, that the reason why one is rather called than another, is in men themselves, i. e. in any disposition in them to receive the word; that is, he pronounceth all the ancients innovators; for that they were of this opinion, is evident from (d) Dally's Testimon. Verum, and from Vossius in his Pelagian History, l. 7. c. 2. and is demonstrable from these words of Christ; for he sends his Apostles to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, i. e. to those who had strayed from the salutary pastures of the law, and the Prophets, to them whom he calls to repentance, Mark 6. 12. to whom the Gospel was to be preached, Luke 10. 9. He speaks therefore not of them who were called already, but who were to be called to Christ's sheep-fold, to the kingdom of heaven, and to faith and repentance, as the preparations for entering into it. (2.) In those who are thus to be called, Christ manifestly supposeth, some would be found by the Apostles ἄξιοι, worthy, some unworthy; bidding them to enquire who were such, and who not; and accordingly to deport themselves towards them: Now, whence should they know this, but from such dispositions found in some, which rendered them fit for the kingdom, or from whom they might hope, they should not labour in vain in calling them to repentance, and preaching the kingdom of God to them: So also, when he sends his seventy disciples on the same errand, bidding them say, Peace to the house they come to; and promising that if a son of peace were there, their peace should rest upon it, Luke 10. 6. What can this son of peace be, but one disposed to receive such persons peaceably, and kindly, and to hearken to their admonitions? And is not this the very thing which fitted them for the divine benediction? This will be still more evident, from the consideration of the persons opposed to the worthy, and the sons of peace; for they were such as were not disposed to hearken to the word, or to receive the preachers of it, Matth. 10. 14. Mark 6. 11. Luke 10. 10. for which they were to look upon them as impure; yea, for which Christ pronounces their punishment would be greater in the day of judgment than that of Sodom and Gomorrah: And must not such dreadful judgments befal them, for want of such dispositions, as might, and ought to have been in them towards the Gospel of the kingdom, and those who came to them with the kind offer of the blessings of it? They therefore, by refusing to receive the word, judged themselves unworthy of eternal life, Acts 13. 46. when they might, and should have done the contrary; and, for want of those good dispositions, which others had, and they might have had, fell short of the salvation tendered to them.

Ver. 13. [h] Ἐὰν δὲ μὴ ᾖ ἀξία, But, if it be not worthy, let your peace return unto you.] That is, they shall not obtain the peace you wish them, or receive any benefit from your wishes; so this phrase signifies in those words of the Psalmist, My prayer returned into my bosom, Psal. 35. 14. See Isa. 55. 11.

Ver. 14. [i] Ἐκτινάξατε τὸν κονιορτὸν τῶν ποδῶν ὑμῶν, Shake off the dust from your feet.] The Jews thought the dust of heathen lands polluted; so that the import of this phrase is this, Look upon such, as those heathens whom I have forbid you to preach to; when therefore ye depart from them, shake off the dust of your feet, as a testimony that you so esteem them.

Ver. 15. [k] Ἀνεκτότερον ἔσται γῇ Σοδόμων καὶ Γομόρρων ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, Verily I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city.] The gloss which some have put upon these words, viz. that the punishment of that city shall be greater, when Christ comes to execute his judgment on the Jewish nation, than that which Sodom and Gomorrah suffered for refusing the preaching of Lot, doth certainly pervert the import of these words. For, (1.) Christ saith not, it hath been more tolerable for Sodom, but ἔσται, it shall be so; which shews, he had respect, not to the past, but future sufferings of Sodom and Gomorrah. (2.) Christ adds, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom, &c. in the day of judgment. Now, though the times of the deſtruction of the Jewiſh nation, are ſometimes ſtiled the days of vengeance, yet never are they called the day of judgment; but that phraſe ſtill relates unto the final judgment and perdition of ungodly men, 2 Pet. 3. 7. that day to which the wicked are reſerved to be puniſhed, 2 Pet. 2. 9. See Matth. 12. 36. 1 John 4. 17. So alſo doth the phraſe ἐν τῇ κρίσει, uſed by St. Luke, Chap. 10. 14. concerning the ſame perſons, always ſignify, Matth. 12. 41, 42. ſo that the Sodomites ſhall certainly receive a future judgment. According to theſe words of Theophylact, ἐκεῖ μειώτερον κολασθήσονται, and they ſhall be puniſhed more moderately. And, who can rationally conceive, that men polluted with ſuch unnatural luſts, ſhould be fit to come into that place, into which nothing enters that is polluted or defiled? Rev. 21. 27. Here alſo, it is well noted by Grotius, That the ſin of thoſe who reject the Goſpel, rendering them obnoxious to greater puniſhment than Sodom and Gomorrah were to ſuffer at the day of judgment, becauſe committed againſt greater light, and greater confirmation of the truth, muſt be a wilful ſin, which it was in their power to avoid.

Ver. 17. [l] Προσέχετε δὲ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, But beware of men;] i. e. avoid as much as in you lies, the perſecutions you may ſuffer from them: For, as Theophylact here notes, this is to be wiſe as ſerpents, viz. to be circumſpect in declining their ſnares, and giving them no juſt occaſion to afflict us; and to be harmleſs as doves, is, to offend no man by word or example, and ſo to give them no occaſion to do evil to us.

Ver. 19, 20. [m] Μὴ μεριμνήσητε πῶς, ἢ τί λαλήσητε, Take no thought how, or what you ſhall ſpeak; for it is not you that ſpeak, but the Spirit of my Father which ſpeaketh in you;] Chriſt promiſing here to his Apoſtles, immediate aſſiſtance from the Holy Spirit, forbids them, προμελετᾶν, to meditate beforehand what they ſhould ſay, Luke 21. 14. Vain therefore are the Papiſts, who aſcribe the ſame aſſiſtance to their fathers, met in councils, ſaying, It is not they that ſpeak, but the Holy Ghoſt that ſpeaketh in them; and yet make prayers and diſputations, and many other things, requiſite to an infallible deciſion. Vain alſo are the Anabaptiſts, Quakers, and whoſoever do now expect the like aſſiſtance in prayer and preaching, after theſe extraordinary gifts are ceaſed, as the Apoſtles had by virtue of them; they may as well pretend to ſpeak with tongues, and caſt out devils, as the Apoſtles did, by virtue of the ſame aſſiſtance.

Ver. 23. [n] Ὅταν δὲ διώκωσιν ὑμᾶς, &c. But when they ſhall perſecute you in this city, flee into another.] It follows not from theſe words, That a paſtor, who is fixed to a particular congregation, may flee from it in times of perſecution; their caſe being not the ſame with that of the Apoſtles, whoſe commiſſion was to go through all the cities of Judea, beginning at Jeruſalem, Acts 1. 8. ſo that they only fled from one part of their juriſdiction to another, and were ſtill executing the office and truſt committed to them.

Ibid. [o] Οὐ μὴ τελέσητε τὰς πόλεις τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, ἕως ἂν ἔλθῃ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, I ſay unto you, ye ſhall not have gone over the cities of Iſrael till the Son of man come.] This Dr. Lightfoot underſtands as ſpoken of their firſt miſſion, and ſays, the meaning of the words is this, You ſhall not have finiſhed it, till the Son of man riſe from the dead. But, (1*ſt*,) In that firſt miſſion, they met with no perſecution in any city; but where they were not received, left it of their own accord, ver. 11. (2*dly*,) They preſently returned from their firſt commiſſion to their Lord, and told him all that they had done, and taught in proſecution of it, as we read, Luke 9. 10. Mark 6. 30. (3*dly*,) This phraſe, the coming of the Son of man, doth never, that I know of, ſignify our Lord's coming at his reſurrection, but either his coming with the Roman army to deſtroy the Jews, as Matth. 24. 27, 30, 37, 44.——25. 13. Mark 13. 26. Luke 18. 8. —— 21. 27. or elſe his coming to the final judgment, Matth. 16. 27. And ſeeing the Apoſtles were none of them to live till the day of judgment, it ſeems neceſſary to underſtand this of his coming to avenge his quarrel on the Jewiſh nation. And to this ſenſe lead the following words; and if you meet with great obloquies and perſecutions from the Jewiſh nation, whilſt you are thus ſpreading the Goſpel through Judea, (as they did even to the beginning of the war; (e) James, the brother of our Lord, and other Chriſtians, being ſlain by Ananus the High Prieſt, but three years before the war broke out;) it is only what was done to your Lord; and therefore, what you have equal reaſon to expect, for the diſciple is not above his maſter, ver. 24, 25, 26.

Ver. 26. [p] Μὴ οὖν φοβηθῆτε αὐτούς· οὐδὲν γάρ ἐστι κεκαλυμμένον, ὃ οὐκ ἀποκαλυφθήσεται, Fear ye not them therefore; for there is nothing hidden that ſhall not be revealed.] Theſe words are capable of two good ſenſes: (1*ſt*,) Let not the dread of theſe perſecutors affright you from preaching of the Goſpel, as deſpairing of the ſucceſs of it; for though at preſent it ſeems to be hidden from the world, and it is like to be obſcured a while by the calumnies of the Jews and others, I will cauſe it to ſhine through all the world, and diſſipate all the clouds they caſt over it, and break through all obſtacles, and and will render it mighty, to cast down every high thought that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, and bring into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ, 2 Cor. 10. 5. or thus; Fear not the calumnies, with which they shall load you, (as they did your Master, calling him Beelzebub, ver. 25.) for I will make the innocency and excellency of your doctrine, as clear as the light; and your integrity in the dispensing of it, and your patience in suffering for it, to redound to your praise, honour and glory throughout all ages, and especially at the revelation of our Lord from heaven, 1 Pet. 1. 7.

Ver. 27. [q] Ὁ λέγω ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ, εἴπατε ἐν τῷ φωτὶ, &c. What I say to you in darkness, speak ye in the light, and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the house-tops;] i. e. what I have said to you in private, and in obscure parables, and almost as the Jewish doctors, whose custom it is to whisper into the ear of one, who is to speak what he thus whispers aloud to others; (See Dr. Lightfoot and Dr. Hammond on this place) that speak ye openly and clearly in the audience of all, and as it were, after the manner of the Jews, who having battlements on the tops of their houses, over which they could look, Deut. 22. 8. 2 Sam. 11. 1. Acts 10. 9. did often from them preach to the people. And so, saith (f) Hegesippus, they carried James the Just to the top of the temple, to preach to the people at the Passover.

Ver. 28. [r] Καὶ μὴ φοβηθῆτε ἀπὸ τῶν ἀποκτεινόντων τὸ σῶμα, τὴν δὲ ψυχὴν μὴ δυναμένων ἀποκτεῖναι, And fear not them who can kill the body, but cannot kill the soul, &c.] These words seem to contain a certain evidence, that the soul dies not with the body, but continues afterwards in a state of sensibility: For, (1*st*,) That which it is allowed that men can do to the body, it is denied that they can do to the soul; therefore Christ speaks not in these words of death eternal, (for that men cannot inflict upon the body, or hinder its resurrection;) therefore it is spoken of a temporal death. Note, (2*dly*,) That they, who by killing the body, make the soul also to perish, till the re-union and reviviscence both of soul and body, do also kill the soul, and so do more than they who can kill the body only: And they who by killing of the body render the soul or spirit of a man insensate, and deprived of all possibility of thinking or perceiving any thing, do also kill the soul; for it is not easy to perceive, how an intelligible, thinking, and perceiving being, can be more killed, than by depriving it of all sensation, thought, and perception; the body itself, being killed by a total privation of its capacity of sense and motion: Since therefore in St. Luke, Chap. 12. 4. Christ saith, The adversaries of the Christians can only kill their bodies, and here, that they cannot kill their souls; it remains, that the soul doth not perish with the body, nor is it reduced into an insensible state by the death of it. And (3*dly*,) Our Lord may well be supposed to speak here, as the Jews would certainly understand his words; now, they would certainly thus understand him, this being their received opinion, That the soul after the death of the body, was capable of bliss or misery, and therefore did continue in a state of sensation; (g) man, say they, fears an earthly king, who may die to-morrow, should punish him; and doth he not fear him, in whose hands his soul is, both in this life and the future? And the author, περὶ αὐτοκράτορος λογισμοῦ, saith, (h) Let us not fear them who seem to kill the body; for, them who die for the law, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, receive; but they who transgress the law of God, subject the soul to a great danger of endless torments. See Additions N° 12.

Ver. 34. [s] Μὴ νομίσητε ὅτι ἦλθον βαλεῖν εἰρήνην ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν.——ἀλλὰ μάχαιραν. Think not that I came to send peace upon the earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword, ver. 35, 36.] The usual import assigned to these words, is this, Though all my exhortations and institutions tend to conciliate the most endearing love, and to establish the firmest and most lasting peace in the world; yet, the event of it, through mens ignorance and wickedness, will be great variance and discord, even between nearest relatives, and persons of most intimate acquaintance and familiarity: Yet is the exposition of Dr. Lightfoot very ingenious and true, That he came to send upon the land of Judea, not that peace, and those Halcyon days which they expected at the coming of their Messiah, but a sword, and continual war and discords to destroy them, not only by their enemies, but by their own hands: Of which, Josephus gives us a full comment in his History of the continual wars the Jews had with the Greeks, the Syrians, the Samaritans; which were, saith (i) Eusebius from him, σάσεις καὶ πόλεμοι καὶ κακῶν ἐπαλλήλοι μηχαναί, continual wars and seditions, and machinations of evils, with the prognostication of them by a kind of flaming sword hanging over Jerusalem for a year. See Note on Chap. 24. there aroſe in every city tumults and civil wars; and no ſooner had they any reſpite from the Romans, but they turned their hands againſt one another: giving us tragical accounts of the fearful outrages, ſpoils, murders, devaſtations; of robbers, cut-throats, zealots, and their amazing cruelties, beyond example, eſpecially of the three adverſe parties in the Temple and city of Jeruſalem.

Ver. 40, 41, 42. [t] Ὁ δεχόμενος ὑμᾶς ἐμὲ δέχεται, He that receiveth you, receiveth me, &c.] Here Chriſt comforts his diſciples, by promiſing a bleſſing, and reward to every one that ſhews the leaſt kindneſs to them, or any of thoſe who were employed in the ſame work with them, viz. the Prophets mentioned among ſpiritual perſons in the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, and of whom Chriſt ſpeaketh thus, Chap. 23. 34. Behold I ſend to you Prophets, and wiſe men, or even to any of his righteous ſervants; which, as it is a great incitement to others to expreſs their kindneſs to Chriſt's miniſters and faithful ſervants, ſo is it alſo to his miniſters to apply themſelves to his ſervice with a ready mind, and with the utmoſt diligence, in execution of their paſtoral charge. See Additions, N°. 13. Moreover, when he ſaith, v. 39. He that loſeth his life for my ſake, ſhall find it, and he that findeth or preſerveth it by deſerting me and my doctrine, ſhall loſe it; this is exactly true according to the Chriſtian doctrine, which promiſeth a reſurrection of the body to eternal life, to thoſe who are faithful to Chriſt to the death, and threatneth eternal death to thoſe who deſert him to preſerve this momentary life; now ſure he with a witneſs loſeth life, who is deprived of that eternal life he in the body might enjoy, and he as ſurely finds it, whoſe body is raiſed to a life incorruptible. See Additions N°. 14.

CHAP. XI.

1. AND it came to paſs, when Jeſus had made an end of commanding his twelve diſciples, (whom he had ſent to preach, before his coming to the cities of Iſrael, Matth. 10. 23. Luke 10. 1.) he departed thence (from Capernaum, Matth. 9. 1.) to teach and to preach in their cities.

2. Now when John had heard in the priſon (of Macharus) the works of Chriſt, (being told of them by his diſciples, Luke 7. 18.) he ſent two of his diſciples, (whom he had called to him for that purpoſe, Luke 7. 19.)

3. And (they in the name of their maſter, Luke 7. 20.) ſaid unto him, Art thou he that [a] ſhould come, or do we look for another?

4. (And in that ſame hour, that the diſciples of John came with this queſtion, Chriſt cured many of their infirmities, and plagues, and of evil ſpirits; and unto many that were blind he gave ſight, Luke 7. 21. and therefore) Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid unto them, Go, and ſhew John again thoſe things which ye do hear (Luke 7. 22.) and ſee.

5. The [b] blind receive their ſight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleanſed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raiſed up, and the [c] poor have the Goſpel preached to them.

6. And bleſſed is he whoſoever ſhall not be [d] offended in me.

7. And as they departed, (or when they were gone) Jeſus began to ſay to the multitudes concerning John, (that they might not doubt of the teſtimony John had given to him, by reaſon of this enquiry, which ſeemed to render him now doubting of what he before had teſtified; when you went forth into the wilderneſs to be baptized of John) What went you forth into the wilderneſs to ſee? (was it to ſee) a reed ſhaken with the wind? (i. e. a man wavering in his teſtimony, and turning this way, and that way, as a reed ſhaken with the wind doth.)

8. But what went ye out for to ſee? (was it) a man cloathed in ſoft raiment? (a courtier, or a paraſite, apt to flatter, and ſpeak rather what will pleaſe others, than what truth requires?) behold, they that wear ſoft cloathing are in Kings houſes; (i. e. ſuch perſons may be expected rather in Kings palaces, than in deſarts.)

9. But what went you out for to ſee? (was it to ſee) a Prophet? yea, I ſay unto you, and (one that is) more than a Prophet; (his doctrine being more excellent, and his office being not only to foretel, but prepare the way of the Meſſias.)

10. For this is he of whom it is written, (Mal. 3. 1.) Behold I ſend my meſſenger before thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee. (See Note on Matth. 3. 3.)

11. Verily I ſay unto you, among them (i. e. thoſe Prophets) that are born of women, there hath not riſen a [e] greater than John the Baptiſt, (on the accounts forementioned) notwithſtanding he that is leaſt in the kingdom of heaven, (the leaſt Prophet belonging to the Goſpel diſpenſation) is [f] greater than he.

12. And from the days of John the Baptiſt until now, the kingdom of heaven (as it were,) ſuffereth violence, (by reaſon of the great concourſe of people that flie into it, with a fervour like that which is uſed by a multitude aſſaulting a city or caſtle) and the [g] violent take it by force.

13. (I ſay, from the days of John the Baptiſt;) For all the Prophets and the law propheſied, (of the the Messiah, and were the teachers which the people were to hear, Luke 16. 31.) until John. (And ἀπὸ τότε, from that time the kingdom of God was preached, καὶ πᾶς ὁ βιάζεται εἰσέρχεται, and every one that is willing to enter, presseth or rusheth violently into it, Luke 16. 16. which seems to justify the exposition of ver. 12.)

14. And if ye will receive (it, or him, as such, I tell you truly) this (person) is (that) [h] Elias which was for to come, (according to the prophecy of Malachi.)

15. He that hath ears to hear, (i. e. hath judgment to discern, and is disposed to receive the truth,) let him hear, (and embrace it.)

16. But whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like to children sitting in the markets, and calling to their fellows,

17. And saying, (by way of complaint to them,) we have [i] piped to you, (as they use to do at festivals) and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, (as it is usual in funerals, and times of sadness,) and ye have not lamented; (i. e. you will neither follow us when we excite you to mirth, or sadness.)

18. For John came neither eating or drinking (in the usual manner; his meat being only locusts and wild honey, Matth. 3. 4. and his drink only such as the wilderness afforded;) and (because of his austerity,) they (who refuse and reject his baptism, Luke 7. 30.) say, he hath a devil, (i. e. he is possessed by some melancholy spirit.)

19. The Son of man (on the other hand) came eating and drinking (in the usual manner,) and they (who reject him and his doctrine) say (of him) behold a man gluttonous, and a wine-bibber, and (by his converse with them,) a friend of publicans and sinners; but (Gr. and) wisdom is [k] justified of her children.

20. Then began he to upbraid the cities, in which most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not, (at his saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of God is at hand, though he confirmed his doctrine with the greatest miracles, saying thus to them;)

21. Wo unto thee, Chorazin, wo unto thee, Bethsaida; for if the mighty works which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes.

22. But (or therefore) I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the day of judgment than for you.

23. And thou Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, (i. e. advanced highly above others by my presence with thee, and my miracles wrought in thee,) shalt be brought down to hell (i. e. into a state of extremest misery,) for if the mighty works which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained to this day.

24. But (therefore) I say unto you, it shall be more [l] tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.

25. At that time Jesus [m] answered, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast [n] hid these things from the wise and prudent, (in their own esteem and the conceit of others,) and hast revealed them to (those whom they account) babes, Rom. 2. 20.

26. Even so, Father, (hath the event been in my preaching,) for so it seemed good in thy sight.

27. [o] All things (appertaining to my office) are delivered to me of (i. e. by) my Father, neither knoweth any man the Father ('s will aright) save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

28. [p] Come (therefore) unto me all ye that labour (under the bondage and condemnation of the law), and are heavy laden (with the burdens of Pharisaical impositions,) and I will give you rest, (ease and deliverance from these burdens.)

29. Take my yoke upon you, (become my disciples) and learn (not of these blind guides, but) of me, for I am (not like those severe and supercilious doctors, which despise you as people of the earth, and will not vouchsafe even to converse with publicans and sinners, for their reformation, but I am) meek and lowly in heart, (and full of pity to every burdened soul,) and (so by coming to me) ye shall find rest (peace, quiet, satisfaction, and refreshment) to your souls.

30. For my yoke is (not as theirs is, burdensome and galling, but it is) easy, and my burden is light.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XI.

Ver. 3. [a] ART thou ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that cometh, or look we for another?]

Note here, (1.) that ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that is coming, was in those days the common stile for the Messias; so is he stiled by St. John himself, ὁ ἐρχόμενος ὀπίσω μου, he that cometh after me, Matth. 3. 11. John 1. 15, 27. So by the multitude saying, Hosanna to the Son of David, blessed is ὁ ἐρχόμενος he that cometh in the name of the Lord, Matth. 21. 9.—23. 39. or as it is Luke 19. 38. ὁ ἐρχόμενος βασιλεὺς, the King coming; and this name of the Messiah they received from Habakkuk, where he is stiled ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that shall come Hab. 2. 3. and from Daniel, where he is stiled ſtiled ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he cometh with the clouds of heaven, Chap. 7. 13. See Matth. 24. 30.——26. 64. Heb. 10. 37.

Note, (2*dly*,) That the Baptiſt could not make this enquiry on his own behalf, or doubt whether Chriſt were the Meſſiah, or not, for he was ſent to that very end to bear witneſs of Chriſt, John 1. 6, 7, 8. He was taught from heaven a ſign by which he certainly might know him, v. 33. he proclaims him the Son of God, v. 24. the Lamb of God, v. 36. he bare witneſs to him, Chap. 3. 26. ——5. 33. he declared of him, that he was come from above, from heaven, that he ſpake the words of God, that God had not given him the ſpirit by meaſure, and that he who received his teſtimony, had ſet to his ſeal, that God is true; John 3. from v. 29. to the end. It cannot therefore be imagined, that, after all this, he ſhould doubt whether he were the Meſſiah, or not, much leſs can we imagine with many of the (a) fathers, that the ſenſe of this enquiry ſhould be this, Tu es qui venturus es in infernum? Art thou he that art to come to Hades, whither I am going, and ſhould I preach thee there? Chryſoſtom indeed produces, but approves not this opinion; but (b) Origen bids us not to fear to aſſert it, and proves it from this place. Dr. Lightfoot and others conceive that John might imagine, as the Jewiſh nation did, that Chriſt's kingdom ſhould be temporal and ſplendid, and ſo expected that Chriſt ſhould deliver him out of priſon; and that therefore Chriſt ſaith to him, Bleſſed is he that ſhall not be offended in me. But ſeeing σκανδαλίζεσθαι to be offended, ſtill ſignifies to be ſo ſcandalized as to fall off from the faith, and it is by no means credible, after the teſtimonies that John had given of Chriſt, he ſhould be guilty of ſuch Apoſtaſy, or Infidelity, eſpecially ſince his diſciples after his death reſort to Chriſt, and cleave to him, Chap. 14. 12. it is moſt probable that John ſent theſe diſciples not for his own, but for their ſatisfaction in this matter, and that Chriſt ſaid to them, Bleſſed is he that ſhall not be offended in me.

Ver. 5. [b] The blind receive their ſight, &c.] That he ſhould make the blind to ſee, the lame to walk, the deaf to hear, and preach the Goſpel to the poor, was propheſied of the Meſſiah, Iſa. 29. 18, 19.——35. 5, 6.——61. 1. but of the lepers being cleanſed, and the dead raiſed by the Meſſiah, we read nothing in the Prophets; theſe therefore were the things they heard done at Nain, where the widow's ſon was raiſed, Luke 7. 18. and ſaw done before their eyes, when Jeſus cured many τ μαστίσων of their plague, for leproſy is often ſtiled נֶגַע צָרָעַת the plague of leproſy, and the word נגע is by the Septuagint rendered πληγὴ and μάστιξ, it is ſtiled the plague of leproſy, Lev. 13. 2, 3, 9, 20, 25, 31, 47, 49, 51, 59. and Chap. 14. 3, 32, 34. and it was looked upon by the Jews as an immediate chaſtiſement ſent from God. See Note on Chap. 8. 4. See Examen Millii.

Ibid. [c] The poor have the Goſpel preached unto them.] Though the poor here may ſignify the poor and humble in ſpirit, to whom the Goſpel was preached with the beſt ſucceſs, they being beſt fitted for, and ſo moſt ready to receive it; yet I ſee no reaſon to recede from the obvious ſenſe of the words, that whereas the men of mean condition were by the proud Scribes and Phariſees, and learned Rabbi's neglected and contemned as people of the earth, John 7. 49. Chriſt choſe chiefly to converſe with and inſtruct them; and the divine wiſdom ſaw it fit, that when the things of the Goſpel were hid from theſe men, who were indeed blind guides, though wiſe and prudent in their own conceits, they ſhould be revealed to theſe babes, v. 25, 26. And indeed as the ſubject of the doctrines of the Scribes and Phariſees was chiefly vain traditions, everting the law of God, Matth. 15. and the things they impoſed upon them heavy burdens, and the diſputes in their Bethi Midraſhoth, vain janglings; ſo did they teach in ſuch a manner by cabaliſtical deductions, and allegorical interpretations, as tranſcended the capacity of the vulgar, ſo that they could profit very little, by repairing to their ſchools, or hearing their expoſitions upon the law or Prophets; as any one may learn from almoſt all their expoſitions cited from their Talmuds, and their learned Rabbi's: and therefore our Saviour, in the cloſe of this chapter, calls them from them to learn of him. See Note on v. 28.

Ver. 6. [d] Bleſſed is he who ſhall not be offended in me,] i. e. diſbelieve, or fall off from me by reaſon of my mean circumſtances in this preſent world, or becauſe of thoſe afflictions he may ſuffer for my ſake, or for adhering to my doctrine.

Ibid. [f] Ὁ δὲ μικρότερος, But he that is leaſt in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.] Not the meaneſt Chriſtian, but the meaneſt evangelical Prophet, or preacher of the Chriſtian doctrine is greater than he. (1.) In reſpect of his office, which was to preach Chriſt crucified, his reſurrection from the dead, his exaltation to the right hand of God, the bleſſings tendered to thoſe that ſhould believe in his name; and therefore alſo, (2.) In reſpect of his doctrine, which was more ſpiritual and heavenly than that of John, and more expreſs in the revelation of the new covenant eſtabliſhed in the blood of Jeſus, and founded upon better promiſes, Heb. 8. 6. (3.) In reſpect of that divine aſſiſtance by which their doctrine was confirmed, for John did no miracle, John 10. 41. whereas they went forth preaching every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the words with ſigns following, Mark 16. 20. The Holy Ghoſt was not yet, John 7. 39. and ſo he fell not upon John; whence he, comparing himſelf with Jeſus, who was from above, John 3. 31. and had the Spirit above meaſure, v. 34. ſaith of himſelf, He that is of the earth, ſpeaketh of (or from) the earth, v. 31. whereas the evangelical Prophets ſpake by the gifts and afflatus of the Holy Ghoſt, which Chriſt ſent down from heaven on them.

Ver. 12. [g] And the violent take it by force.] i. e. And they who by their continual attendance on the doctrine of it preached to them, their care to underſtand it, and readineſs to receive it, ſhew their ardent deſires to be made partakers of it, and do ἁρπάζειν contend for an entrance into it, do by theſe means prevail. There is another expoſition of theſe words to this effect, i. e. the publicans and ſinners, and the meaner crowd of the Jews, who are looked upon by the ſcribes and Phariſees, as perſons who have no right to the bleſſings of the Meſſiah, and ſo as violent perſons, and invaders, and intruders, embrace the Goſpel, and as it were take it by force from the ſcribes and learned doctors, who challenge the chiefeſt place in this kingdom, according to thoſe words of Chriſt to them, The publicans and harlots go before you into the kingdom of God, for ye believed not John coming to you in the way of righteouſneſs, but the publicans and harlots believed him, Matth. 21. 31, 32. and that which renders this interpretation the more conſiderable is this obſervation, that in the parallel place, Luke 7. 28, 29, 30. inſtead of theſe words, the kingdom of heaven ſuffers violence, we have theſe, and all the people and the publicans juſtified God, being baptized with the baptiſm of John, but the Phariſees and lawyers rejected the counſel of God, being not baptized of him.

Ver. 14. [h] Καὶ εἰ θέλετε δέξασθαι, αὐτός ἐστιν Ἠλίας ὁ μέλλων ἔρχεσθαι· And if you will receive it, that is that Elias which was for to come.] Here note,

1*ſt*, That it was the general tradition of the Jewiſh nation, that Elias the Tiſbite was to come in perſon, as the fore-runner of the Meſſiah of the Jews, that he in perſon was to anoint him, and make him known unto the people; and that before the advent of the Son of David, Elias was to come to preach concerning him. This is the import of the queſtion put to St. John, John 1. 21. Art thou Elias? And of the ſaying of the ſcribes, Elias muſt firſt come and reſtore all things; Matth. 17. 10. of the interpretation of the ſeventy, Behold, I ſend unto you Ἠλίαν τὸν Θισβίτην, Elias the Tiſbite, Mal. 4. 5. and of that ſaying of the ſon of Sirach, Eccluſ. 48. 10. Elias was ordained for reproofs in their times, to pacify the wrath of the Lord's judgment before it break into fury, and to turn the heart of the father to the ſon, and to reſtore the tribes of Jacob. And ſuitably to theſe aſſertions, (c) Trypho the Jew declares, That ἡμᾶς πάντας προσδοκᾶσθαι τὸν Ἠλίαν χεῖσαι αὐτὸν ἐλθόντα, all we Jews expect Elias to anoint Chriſt at his coming. It alſo was the general tradition of the writers of the Chriſtian Church, even from the ſecond century, that Elias the Tiſbite, by virtue of thoſe words of Malachi, is to come in perſon before our Lord's ſecond advent, to prepare men for it. This opinion of the coming of Elias, tradit tota Patrum antiquitas, all the ancient fathers have delivered, ſaid (d) De la Cerda. Conſtans

He is to come*, ſaith (h) Petrus Alexandrinus, καὶ ἡ τῆς ἐκκλησίας παράδοσις, according to the tradition of the church, ſaith Arethas Caſarienſis, according to the unanimouſly received opinion of the church. Note,

2*dly*, That, in oppoſition to this received tradition of the Jews, Chriſt here aſſerts two things. (1.) That John the Baptiſt was the very perſon of whom it was written, Behold I ſend my meſſenger before thy face, v. 10. St. Mark aſſures us of the ſame thing, by ſaying that the beginning of the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, was by the preaching, and baptizing of this John, as it was written of him, Behold I ſend my meſſenger before thy face, who ſhall prepare thy way before thee, Mark 1. 1, 4. (2.) That this meſſenger deſcribed by the Prophet Malachi, Chap. 3. 1. as one to be ſent before the face of the Lord, was the very ſame perſon promiſed by the ſame Prophet in theſe words, Chap. 4. 5. Behold I ſend you Elijah the Prophet before the great and terrible day of the Lord come; and therefore that Elijah could be no other than John the Baptiſt: For, when deſcending from the mount, Chriſt ſaith to his diſciples, Tell no man of the viſion, till the Son of man is riſen from the dead, Matth. 17. 9. They thinking, ſuitably to this tradition, that this Elias, who appeared in the mount, was viſibly to appear among them, to anoint the Meſſiah in the ſight of all the people, and order all things belonging to his advent, aſk this queſtion; ſeeing, according to the doctrine of the ſcribes, Elias muſt firſt come, v. 10. and do theſe things, why is it thou forbiddeſt to ſpeak of his appearance? To this enquiry our Saviour anſwers, that it is very true, there is a promiſe of an Elias to come, and reſtore all things, v. 11. but I ſay unto you, the Elias promiſed, ἤδη ἦλθε, hath come already, and the ſcribes knew him not, but did unto him whatſoever they would, v. 12. and then it follows, that his diſciples underſtood that he ſpake to them of John the Baptiſt, v. 13. They therefore underſtood what the fathers did not, and others will not learn, from Chriſt's plain words, that John the Baptiſt was the Elias promiſed, as the forerunner of the great and terrible day of the Lord; whence it doth plainly follow, that they who do not think John Baptiſt, and he only, was the Elias mentioned by the Prophet, muſt miſtake. For our Lord plainly ſaying, that that Elias, of whom the ſcribes made mention as the forerunner of his advent, was already come, and giving them no intimation that any other was to be expected after the coming of this one, there can be no pretence from the tradition of the ſcribes, or from the ſaying of the Prophet, to expect any other. Moreover our Lord, as if he had foreſeen, and had deſigned to confute this Jewiſh fable, ſpeaks here more plainly thus, All the Prophets, and the law, propheſied until John, and if you will receive, i. e. attend to, and believe it, this is that Elias which was for to come. (i) By which words he moſt plainly teacheth, that that Elias, of whom the Prophets ſpake, as of one for to come, was come already; and makes it manifeſt, that all that was in Malachi, or any other Prophet, ſpoken of Elias, was made good in the Baptiſt, who came in the power and ſpirit of Elias, Luke 1. 16. and was to be underſtood of him alone, as much as if he had in expreſs words aſſerted, that he only was the Elias that was to come, and they were not, by virtue of any prophecy, to look for, or expect another. For thus our Saviour ſpeaks, the Prophet Malachi ſaith, Behold I ſend my meſſenger before thy face; now I aſſure you, the Baptiſt is the very perſon of whom this is written; the ſame Prophet ſaith, Behold I will ſend you Elias the Prophet, &c. whence your ſcribes teach you to expect the perſonal appearance of Elias the Tiſbite, as the forerunner of your Meſſiah; but if you will receive the true interpretation of theſe words from me, St. John the Baptiſt is that Elias, which, according to that prophecy, was to be his forerunner.

Object. 1. But againſt this plain aſſertion of our Lord it is objected, that in the tranſlation of the Seventy the words run thus, Behold I will ſend you Ἠλίαν τὸν Θισβίτην, Elias the Tiſbite, which denotes Elias in perſon, and cannot be applied to St. John the Baptiſt.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, That this argument is of no force, becauſe it is founded, not on the original, but only on a tranſlation, which is not authentick. (2.) From this tranſlation it may be probably collected, that this imagination of the appearance of the Tiſbite, obtained then among the Jews; but hence it will not follow that it was true, any more than that the doctrine of the Millennium, and of Chriſt's temporal kingdom, muſt be true, becauſe they were received by that nation as ſuch. (3.) By the ſame reaſon, and figurative way of ſpeaking, the Baptiſt may as well be called Elijah the Tiſbite, as Elijah the Prophet, that that only ſhewing the country of that Prophet, as the other doth his office; ſo that if the Baptiſt deſerved to be called Elijah the Prophet, becauſe he came in the ſpirit and power of Elijah, he muſt deſerve to be called Elijah the Tiſbite on the ſame account, ſeeing Elijah the Prophet was Elijah the Tiſbite. But,

2*dly*, It is objected, That the day mentioned, Mal. 4. 5. as the time of the coming of Elijah is ſtiled, the great and dreadful day of the Lord, which ſeemeth proper to the day of judgment; whereas the day of Chriſt's firſt coming is not ſo called, but rather an acceptable day, and a day of ſalvation.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, That the day of our Lord's firſt coming, conſidered as reaching to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, was indeed a very dreadful and terrible day. Thus in the Prophet Joel, we read of a day of the Lord deſcribed in the ſame expreſſions. The ſun ſhall be turned into darkneſs, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come; and yet St. Peter, ſpeaking of what was done after our Lord's aſcenſion, and citing theſe very words, ſaith, This was that which was ſpoken by the Prophet Joel, Acts 2. 16. Moreover, our Bleſſed Lord, ſpeaking of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and of the miſeries that ſhould befal that very generation, ſaith, theſe ſhall be the days of vengeance, ſuch days of tribulation as never were from the beginning of the world, and never ſhall be afterwards, Luke 21. 22. Matth. 24. 21. Yea, the tradition of the Jews doth in their Talmud make mention of ſuch great afflictions which ſhould happen in thoſe days of their Meſſiah unto Iſrael, that happy ſhould he be who did not ſee them; (k) which notwithſtanding, this day might be ſtiled, an acceptable day, a day of ſalvation to them who received our Jeſus as their Saviour, believed in him, and obeyed his ſayings; according to the words of the Prophet Malachi, Behold the day cometh which ſhall burn as an oven, &c. but to you that fear my name ſhall the Sun of righteouſneſs ariſe with healing in his wings, Mal. 4. 1, 2. Whence, after this moſt terrible deſcription, our Lord ſpeaks thus to his diſciples, Luke 21. 18, 19. Be not ye terrified when theſe things ſhall happen, in patience poſſeſs your ſpirits; for there ſhall not one hair of your heads periſh: when theſe things come to paſs, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh, v. 28.

Object. It is farther objected, that John expreſly denies that he was Elias; for when the Jews from Jeruſalem, and the Prieſts and Levites were ſent to him, ſaying, Art thou Elias? he ſaid, I am not, John 1. 21.

Anſw. If this objection be of any force, it will alſo prove, that John the Baptiſt was no Prophet; for to the following enquiry, Art thou a Prophet? he ſtill anſwers, No; whereas our Saviour atteſted, that he was a Prophet, yea, and more than a Prophet, Matth. 11. 9. and all the people ſo accounted of him. (l) His meaning therefore is only this, I am not that Elias in perſon, whom you expect, nor am I ſuch a Prophet, as in the days of the Meſſiah you expect to ariſe from the dead. And expoſitors tell us, he choſe to anſwer thus out of modeſty, that he might not commend, or bear witneſs of himſelf, thinking it more convenient that Chriſt ſhould thus bear witneſs of him, than that he ſhould aſcribe ſo great a dignity to himſelf.

Object 4. It is objected, that after St. John was beheaded, our Saviour ſaith, Elias truly ſhall firſt come, and reſtore all things; now, how, ſay they, can this be ſpoken as a thing future of John Baptiſt then? This therefore muſt be underſtood of ſome other Elias to come hereafter. This is the ground on which this doctrine is eſtabliſhed by Juſtin Martyr, that our Lord taught it, ſaying, (m) Ἡλίας ἐλεύσε⁹, that Elias ſhall come. And in this he is followed by Theodoret, and many of the ancients.

Anſw. After that our Lord had uttered theſe words, not in the future, as the Vulgar reads them, but in the preſent tenſe, Elias cometh, or, Elias coming firſt reſtoreth all things, Matth. 17. 11. Mark 9. 11. he adds immediately of the ſame Elias, of whom he had ſaid, he cometh, or, he ſhall come firſt, that ἤδη ἦλθε, he is now come, ὅτι ἐλήλυθε, that indeed he was come, Matth. 17. 12. And again, if you will receive it, this Baptiſt is that Elias, ὁ μέλλων ἔρχεσθαι, who is for to come; and when he had ſaid theſe words, then his diſciples underſtood that he ſpake of John the Baptiſt, i. e. that he meant him, and no other, when he ſpake of an Elias who was for to come.

So that the meaning of our Lord's words is plainly this, True it is, as the ſcribes ſay, Elias is to come before the Meſſiah, and it is alſo true that John is that Elias which was, when Malachi ſpake thoſe words, to come afterwards, but then he was not yet to come, when our Saviour ſpake of him, but, as he ſaith expreſly, was already come; though they who ſaid Elias muſt firſt come, knew him not when he was come. And truly had our Lord ſpoken of one Elias, viz. John the Baptiſt, and the Prophet Malachi of another; had Chriſt ſpoken of an Elias to come at his firſt advent, and the Prophets and the ſcribes of one to come at his ſecond advent, he had not anſwered his diſciples queſtion, but deluded them. And that the Elias here ſpoken of was to appear at our Lord's firſt coming, is apparent from the enquiry of the diſciples: Why ſay the ſcribes, Elias muſt firſt come, before the Son of man; for the tradition of the ſcribes was, that Elias was to anoint the Meſſiah, and make him known unto the people. And it is as evident from our Lord's anſwer, Elias cometh firſt, i. e. before my reſurrection, of which I now ſpeak; from this place therefore it never can be proved, that any other under that character, is to appear before his ſecond coming.

Object. It farther is objected, That the Elias mentioned by Malachi, was to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and was, according to our Saviour's acknowledgment, to reſtore, or ſet all things in order; which ſeemeth not to have been done by the miniſtry of the Baptiſt, who continued but a ſhort time, and did no ſuch things as theſe words ſeem to imply; it remains therefore, that theſe words ſhould be fulfilled by an Elias, who ſhall be the fore-runner of Chriſt's ſecond advent.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, That all who will not give the lie unto the angel ſent to Zachary, muſt be obliged to confeſs, the Baptiſt did fulfil the prophecy of Malachi. For, of the Baptiſt he thus ſpeaks, He ſhall be great before the Lord, and many of the ſons of Iſrael ſhall he turn unto the Lord; for he ſhall go before him in the ſpirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord: If then John Baptiſt did not fulfil the words ſpoken by the angel, we muſt confeſs, the angel was deceived, and Zachary deſerved not the puniſhment he ſuffered for diſbelieving his teſtimony; but if he did fulfil theſe ſayings of the angel, he alſo muſt fulfil the words contained in the Prophet Malachi, becauſe the angel ſpeaketh in the very words of Malachi.

Again, Our Saviour acknowledging, that an Elias was to come before him, and reſtore all things, adds, that he who was to come to reſtore all things, was already come, and was the Baptiſt: He therefore muſt have reſtored all things, or it muſt be confeſſed, that he did not execute his office, or fulfil what was written of him. Moreover, the Holy Ghoſt, by the mouth of Zachary, ſpeaks thus concerning John, And thou, child, ſhalt be called the Prophet of the Higheſt; for, thou ſhalt go before the Lord, to prepare his way, Luke 1. 76. which is the very thing the Prophet Malachi declares to be the office of his meſſenger. And whoſoever ſhall conſider what in the Goſpel is ſaid of John the Baptiſt, and ſhall compare thoſe things with what the Prophet Malachi, and even the ſcribes averred, that the Elias promiſed ſhould do, will eaſily perceive all that was ſaid or propheſied concerning Elias, was ſo punctually fulfilled by the Baptiſt, as to cut off all farther expectation of the completion of this prophecy, by any perſonal appearance of Elias, before our Saviour's ſecond advent. (n) For the Prophet ſaith, Behold, I will ſend Elias; and the Goſpel ſaith, There was a man ſent from God, whoſe name was John; and, that this John was that Elias which was for to come. The Prophet ſaith of his Elias, that he was to come before the great and terrible day of the Lord: And in the Goſpel, John is ſaid to come when the day of wrath was coming, when the ax was laid to the root of the trees, and every tree that brought not forth good fruit, was to be hewn down, and caſt into the fire, Matth. 3. 10. when he was now appearing, whoſe fan was in his hand, to purge his floor, and gather the wheat into his barn, and to burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire, Matth. 3. 12. he came at the time, when, ſaith our Saviour, Their houſe was to be left unto them deſolate, Matth. 23. 38. when the deſolation of their city, nation, and temple, was irreverſibly at hand; when the enemies of Jeruſalem were to caſt a trench about her, and lay her even with the ground, and her children within her; Luke 19. 43. Here it is ſaid, that this Elijah ſhould turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, &c. i. e. that he ſhould preach to young and old, converſion and repentance: And in the Goſpel, it is ſaid of John, That he ſhould turn many of the children of Iſrael to the Lord their God, that he ſhould turn the hearts of the fathers to their children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt; that he preached to all the baptiſm of repentance, Luke 3. 3. and that with ſuch ſucceſs and good effect, that Jeruſalem, and all Judea, and all the regions round about Jordan, went out to him, and were baptized of him, confeſſing their ſins, Matth. 3. 5, 6. that all the people and the publicans juſtified God, being baptized of John, Luke 7. 29. So effectual was his miniſtry, that many of the ſcribes and Phariſees came to his baptiſm, Matth. 3. 7. and even the ſoldiers and the publicans to be inſtructed by him, Luke 3. 13, 14. He prevailed generally with the Jews to unite in one common baptiſm, that of repentance; and, whereas the tradition of the ſcribes taught, That Elias was to anoint the Meſſiah, and make him known to the people, John did baptize him, and declare unto the people, that he was the Lamb of God, (u) Vid. Pocock. p. 105.

God, John 1. 29. and at his baptism by St. John, he was anointed by the Holy Ghost, Matth. 3. 16.

What therefore better can agree, than the prophecy in Malachi, and the matter of fact in the Gospel?

What can be farther requisite to shew, That the person who is characterized thus by the Prophet, and who so punctually answered to that character in the Gospel, is one and the same person, and that no other ought to be expected by virtue of this prophecy?

Ver. 17. [i] Ἠυλήσαμεν ὑμῖν, &c. ἐθρηνήσαμεν ὑμῖν. We have piped to you,——we have mourned to you.] The Jews had their tibiæ, or pipes, saith Buxtorf, for two uses; for joy, and for great lamentations. Hence saith the Prophet Jeremy, My heart shall sound for Moab like pipes, Chap. 48. 35. saith Isaiah, like an harp, Isa. 16. 11. So (o) R. Salomon saith, Tibiæ adhibentur in nuptiis & in funeribus, Pipes are used at marriages and funerals: Thus we read of the αὐλητὰς, or Tibicines, present at the death of the ruler's daughter, Matth. 9. 23. καὶ ἀλαλάζοντας πολλὰ, and lamenting much; which Greek word seems plainly to be derived from חלל, a pipe; and the Jews say, That a poor Israelite is bound to procure two minstrels, and one woman to lament at his wife's funeral: To this double use of pipes, which children imitated, our Lord, saith Buxtorf, referreth in these words, In Voce, חלילו p. 766.

Ver. 19. [k] Καὶ ἐδικαιώθη ἡ σοφία ἀπὸ τῶν τέκνων αὐτῆς, But wisdom is justified of her children.] The common interpretation of these words, is this, That καὶ and, is here put for but; as it is frequently in the Old Testament, viz. Gen. 31. 7. Ex. 1. 17. Num. 4. 20. Deut. 1. 43. Jos. 1. 8. 1 Sam. 1. 13. Psal. 4. 3.——9. 8. And, in the New Testament, Matth. 12. 43.——13. 22.——16. 4.——17. 12. John 5. 40. Acts 10. 28. 1 Thess. 2. 18. that wisdom is the doctrine of St. John, and of Christ, the wisdom of the Father; that the children of wisdom are those who study and seek after true wisdom, as those who study physick, are medicorum filii, the sons of physicians; and those who followed and learned of the Prophets, are stiled filii prophetarum, the sons of the Prophets, 2 Kings 2. 3,——15. and these do justify her, i. e. do approve of, and receive her doctrines: According to which interpretation the sense runs thus, That tho' the scribes and Pharisees reject my doctrine, and that of my fore-runner, and revile those that preach it, yet the wisdom of it is discerned and approved by those who bear a true affection to wisdom, and are disposed to obey her precepts. Or else this may be looked upon as a continuance of the scoff of the Pharisees thus, and they say also, that wisdom is justified of her children, i. e. This Jesus who pretends to be a teacher of the highest wisdom, and represents our Wise Men as fools, behold the fruits of his wisdom, gluttony and drunkenness, whilst we fast twice a week; behold what associates he draws to him, and converses with, publicans and sinners, those whom our Wise Men will not touch, and much less eat and drink with; from these fruits, and these associates, who attend upon his doctrine, and may be called his sons and his disciples, you may judge of his wisdom, for true wisdom may be discerned by its works; and to strengthen this interpretation, it may be observed from St. Jerom on the place, that, in quibusdam Evangeliis legitur, justificata est sapientia ab operibus suis; and that they who were taught by any doctor, were called his children. See the Note on 1 Cor. 4. 15.

Ver. 24. [l] Ὅτι γῇ Σοδόμων ἀνεκτότερον ἔσται ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, ἢ σοί, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.] Here note from these words, because they repented not, the power of miracles to confirm the truth of Christ's doctrine, and to prevail with those that heard him to repent sincerely, according to his exhortation, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; for had not the miracles he wrought among them been a sufficient means to induce them to this repentance, Christ must not only have upbraided, but pronounced the heaviest judgments against these cities, for not doing that which they had no sufficient means afforded them to perform?

2*dly*, Those words, If the works that have been done in thee, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented, seem to bear this sense; if the exhortations to repentance, and the threats made against Tyre and Sidon, for their sins, by the Prophet Isaiah, Chap. 23. 1, 4. Jerem. 25. 22.——47. 4. Ezekiel, Chap. 26. and Chap. 28. Zachariah 9. 2, 3, 4. had been confirmed to them by such miracles, as I have done in these two cities, they would have wrought in them sincere repentance; for that our Lord here speaks of such repentance is evident, (1.) Because he says, they would have repented in sackcloth and ashes; which is the usual description of the most full repentance, as in the case of Nineveh, Jonah 3. 5. See Isa. 58. 5. Jer. 6. 26. Lam. 2. 10. Dan. 9. 3. Judith 4. 15. (2.) Because the Lord here speaks of that repentance which his doctrine and miracles were designed to produce in those cities, and for the want of which he

he there upbraids them; which ſure muſt be the want, not of external hypocritical, but inward and ſincere repentance; nor doth our Saviour ſay, it may be, or, 'tis likely they would have repented, but categorically, they would have done it. Note,

3*dly*, That to be exalted up to heaven, and be brought down to hell, are allegorical expreſſions taken from the Old Teſtament, and ſignifying the higheſt exaltation, and the loweſt depreſſion. So Iſa. 14. 13, 15. Thou haſt ſaid in thy heart, I will aſcend into heaven, &c. but thou ſhalt be brought down to hell. And Chap. 57. 9. Thou didſt debaſe thyſelf to hell. And laſtly, from thoſe words, It ſhall be more tolerable for Sodom, and for Tyre and Sidon in the day of Judgment; to that which hath been noted on Chap. 10. 15. add, that this ſeems to be ſpoken to ſuppreſs the pride of the Jewiſh nation, and the ſeverity of their judgment upon others; they being wont to ſay, that the whole Jewiſh nation, ſaving ſome few hereticks and apoſtates, ſhould be ſaved, but that the people of Sodom ſhould have no portion in the world to come; whereas our Lord declares, that even the Sodomites ſhould have a milder doom in that great day, than the unbelieving Jews. See Additions, N°. 15.

Ver. 25. [m] Ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν, Anſwering ſaid,] This phraſe is often uſed in the New Teſtament, when nothing had gone before, to which an anſwer could be accommodated; and therefore then it only ſignifies that ſuch an one ſpake with relation to ſuch a matter, ſaying. So it occurs, Matth. 22. 1. Mark 9. 38.——11. 14. Luke 13. 14. See the Note there.

Ibid. [n] Becauſe thou haſt hid, &c.] Here our Saviour doth not thank God that he had hid theſe things from the wiſe, but that having done ſo, he had revealed them to babes. So the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 6. 17. God be thanked that ye were the ſervants of ſin, but now ye have obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered to you; that is, that whereas formerly ye were the ſervants of ſin, ye have now been obedient to the laws of Chriſt.

The wiſe and prudent here, are not men truly and ſpiritually wiſe, but men poſſeſſed with carnal, worldly wiſdom, and with a ſwelling conceit of their proficiency in wiſdom, both which things indiſpoſe men to embrace true ſpiritual wiſdom, and from theſe God is therefore ſaid to have hid the wiſdom of the Goſpel, becauſe he permitted them to continue in that ſelf-conceit, and worldly mindedneſs, which cauſed them to reject it, as being not agreeable to their inclinations and miſtaken ſentiments.

The babes are thoſe humble modeſt perſons, who having a low eſteem of their own wiſdom, give themſelves up to the divine wiſdom, and being free from carnal and worldly affections, and having nothing in them to oppoſe this ſpiritual wiſdom, are fitted to embrace it when it is revealed; it being therefore ſuitable to the wiſdom and the good pleaſure of that God, who reſiſts the proud, but giveth grace to the humble, to make known his will to perſons ſo prepared to receive it, our Lord adds, ſo it ſeemeth good in thy ſight.

Ver. 27. [o] Πάντα μοι παρεδόθη ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρός μου, All things are delivered to me of my Father.] Here the Note of the reverend Dr. Hammond is this, that all things here ſeem to belong to perſons, rather than to things; for of thoſe he peculiarly ſpeaks, under the title of babes: nor is the neuter gender any objection againſt this, it being ordinarily uſed for perſons. So τὸ ἀπολωλὸς, that which is loſt, Chap. 18. 11. is the little ones, v. 14. the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, Chap. 10. 6. So Heb. 12. 13. 1 John 5. 4. and ſo his paraphraſe runs thus: All that come to me, and believe on me, are by my Father enlightning, and ſtirring up their hearts, and uſing all powerful and proper means for that end, brought to me, John 6. 37, 44, 45. And none acknowledgeth me but the Father, and they who, by the miracles which the Father enableth me to do, are attracted by me; as on the other ſide none acknowledgeth the Father in that manner as he now requires to be acknowledged, but the Son, and he who believes his doctrine concerning him. See John 1. 18. 1 John 2. 23.——5. 20.

Ver. 28. [p] Δεῦτε πρός με πάντες οἱ κοπιῶντες, καὶ πεφορτισμένοι, κἀγὼ ἀναπαύσω ὑμᾶς, Come unto me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt.] For explication of theſe words, let it be noted.

1*ſt*, That, to come to Chriſt, in the phraſe of the New Teſtament, is to believe in him, and become one of his diſciples: thus, he that cometh to me ſhall not hunger, John 6. 35. is in the following words expounded thus, he that believeth in me ſhall not thirſt. Again, If any man thirſteth, let him come unto me to drink, ſaith Chriſt, John 7. 37. For he that believeth in me, out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living water, v. 38. Thus when our Saviour had complained of the Jews, that on him whom God had ſent, they would not believe, John 5. 38. he, v. 30. changeth the phraſe thus, You will not come unto me, that you might have life. Note,

2*dly*, That the taking the yoke is a Judaical phraſe, their doctors ſpeaking frequently of the yoke of the law, law, the yoke of the commandments, and the yoke of the kingdom of heaven, which is Christ's yoke. Note,

3*dly*, That the law of ceremonies imposed on the Jews by Moses, is stiled by St. Paul, ζυγὸν δουλείας, a yoke of bondage, Gal. 5. 1. and by St. Peter, a yoke which neither they, nor their fathers were able to bear, Acts 15. 10. by reason of the long and frequent journies to Jerusalem, and the great payments for tithes and offerings it imposed upon them, and the burdens which, besides this, the Pharisees laid upon them by their traditions, are stiled by our Lord, φορτία βαρέα, καὶ δυσβάστακτα, heavy burdens, and grievous to be born. Note,

4*thly*, That all these ceremonial performances, when observed most exactly, could not perfect the observer as to his conscience, or take away the guilt of sin, and so could give no peace or rest unto the soul, whereas being justified by faith in Christ, we have peace with God, Rom. 5. 1. This is the thing the Apostle designs to establish in the Epistle to the Hebrews, and this is that to which the words, ἀναπαύω and ἀνάπαυσις, rest to the soul, seem plainly to refer: thus Noah had his name from נוח, to rest, because, say they, αὐτὸς διαπαύσει ἡμᾶς, He shall give us rest from our labours, Gen. 5. 29. That is, saith Aben Ezra on the place, from the troubles of our minds. And when after the deluge, Noah had sacrificed, God smelled an odour of rest, saith the Hebrew, ריח הניחח, an odour of sweet savour, saith the Seventy; that is, saith the Targum, he rested from his anger, and was appeased. Here then our Saviour, who gave up himself for a sacrifice and oblation of sweet savour, Eph. 5. 2. with which the Father was well pleased, represents himself, as a second Noah, to give rest to men, from the labours and troubles of their minds, and procure them peace and favour with God, as Noah by his sacrifice had done.

CHAP. XII.

1. AT that time, (viz.) on the sabbath day, (following the second day of the Passover, Luke 6. 1. See the Note there.) Jesus went thro' the corn, and his disciples were an hungred, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and (rubbing them with their hands, Luke 6. 1.) to eat (of the corn.)

2. But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold [a] thy disciples do that which it is not lawful to do on the sabbath day.

3. But he said unto them, Have ye not read (a like case in) what David (and his followers) did when he was an hungred, and they that were with him?

4. How he entered into the house of God, (or the court of the tabernacle,) and did eat the shew-bread, which (it) was not lawful (otherwise) for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the Priests?

5. Or have ye not read (what is contained) in the law, how (it requires) that on the sabbath days the Priests in the temple (should do those works, which being done by others would) profane the sabbath, and are blameless?

6. But (and moreover) I say unto you, that in this place is one greater than the temple; (so that if the temple-service would excuse their labour, from being a profanation of the sabbath, who attended on it, much more will the service which my Apostles owe to me, excuse them from profanation of the sabbath, by eating of the ears of corn, as they pass along, that they may be the better able to attend upon my service.)

7. But if (therefore) ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, (or that God prefers charity towards them that are in need, even before his own ritual institutions,) ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

[And he (also) said unto them, the sabbath was made for (the sake of) man, and not man for (the sake of) the sabbath; and so the rest required by it must yield to the necessities of man.]

8. For the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath; (i. e. he who is emphatically so stiled, is so. See the Note on v. 2.)

9. And when he was departed thence, he (on another sabbath day, Luke 6. 6.) went into their synagogue, (and taught.)

10. And behold there was a man which had his hand withered, (and they watched him, Mark 3. 2.) and [b] they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath days? that (if he did, by words, or actions, justify the doing this) they might accuse him; (as not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day, John 9. 16. and might have a plausible cause to kill him, for violating the rest required on that day, John 5. 16.)

[Then, he knowing their thoughts, said unto the man who had the withered hand, Stand forth in the midst, and he arose, and stood forth:

Then

Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, I will (alſo) aſk you one thing, (in anſwer to your queſtion,) Is it lawful on the ſabbath days to do good, or to do evil, to ſave life, or to deſtroy it? Luke 6. 8, 9. and they held their peace, Mark 3. 4.]

11. And he ſaid unto them, What man ſhall there be among you, that ſhall have one ſheep, and if it fall into a pit on the ſabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out (on that day?)

12. How much then is a man better than a ſheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well (to men) on the ſabbath days.

13. Then (looking upon them with indignation, Mark 3. 5.) ſaith he unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand, and he ſtretched it forth, and it was reſtored whole, like as the other.

14. Then the Phariſees (were filled with madneſs, Luke 6. 11. and) went out, and held a council againſt him, how they might deſtroy him.

15. But when Jeſus knew it, he withdrew himſelf from thence (with his diſciples to the ſea, Mark 3. 7.) and great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all, (See Mark 3. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.)

16. And charged them, that they ſhould not make him known: (to the Phariſees, who had conſulted how they might deſtroy him.)

17. [c] That (by this deportment) it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by Iſaias the Prophet, ſaying, (Chap. 42. 1.)

18. Behold my ſervant whom I have choſen, my beloved in whom my ſoul is well pleaſed, I will put my ſpirit upon him, and he ſhall ſhew judgment to the Gentiles.

19. He ſhall not ſtrive, nor cry, neither ſhall any man hear his voice in the ſtreets; (i. e. he ſhall not be contentious, or ſet forth himſelf with noiſe, tumult, or oſtentation of what he doth.)

20. A bruiſed reed ſhall he not break, and ſmoaking flax ſhall he not quench, till he ſend forth judgment unto victory; (i. e. he ſhall not ceaſe to exerciſe all acts of charity to the ſouls of them who are any way diſpoſed to receive it, tho' they be weak in faith, till he hath planted the evangelical diſpenſation compleatly in the world, or till the time come that he ſhall execute his judgments on the unbelieving ſtubborn Jews.)

21. And in his name ſhall the Gentiles truſt.

22. Then was brought unto him one poſſeſſed with a devil, (who had caſt him into a diſeaſe, that made him) blind and dumb, and he healed him, inſomuch that the blind and dumb both ſpake and ſaw.

23. And all the people were amazed, and ſaid, Is not this the Son of David?

24. But when [d] the Phariſees (and ſcribes which came from Jeruſalem, Mark 3. 22.) heard it, they ſaid, This fellow (hath a devil, Mark 3. 22. and) doth not caſt out devils, but by Beelzebub, the prince of the devils; (he being a violator of the ſabbath, and an enemy to our traditions, which are more weighty than the law.)

25. And Jeſus knew their thoughts, (and called them,) and ſaid unto them, (in parables, How can Satan caſt out Satan? Mark 3. 23. for) Every kingdom divided againſt itſelf is brought to deſolation, and every city or houſe divided againſt itſelf ſhall not ſtand.

26. And if Satan caſt out Satan, (if he aſſiſt me in this work, whoſe doctrine is plainly oppoſite to the concernments of his kingdom, and who by theſe miracles caſt him out of it,) he is divided againſt himſelf, how then ſhall his kingdom ſtand?

27. And (moreover,) if I by [e] Beelzebub caſt out devils, (let me aſk you,) by whom do your children, (who exorciſe them in the name of the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob,) caſt them out? therefore they ſhall be your judges; (i. e. your judgment, that they do this by the power of God, ſhall condemn you, who aſcribe the ſame thing done by me in my Father's name to the aſſiſtance of the devil.)

28. But if I, (who profeſs myſelf to be the Meſſias,) caſt out devils by the [f] Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto (among) you.

29. Or elſe, how can one enter into a ſtrong man's houſe, and ſpoil his goods, (as I ſpoil theſe principalities and powers by theſe miracles,) except he firſt bind the ſtrong man, (Satan,) and then he will (be able to) ſpoil his houſe? (I therefore who thus oppoſe his intereſts and deſigns, and defeat his power, can be no confederate with him.)

30. [g] He that is not with me (contending againſt Satan's kingdom,) is againſt me, and he that gathereth not with me, (ſubjects to God's kingdom,) ſcattereth (men) abroad (from it.)

31. Wherefore (this being ſo,) I ſay unto you, All manner of (other) ſin and blaſphemy ſhall be forgiven unto men, [h] but the blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt, (which is to come after me,) ſhall not be forgiven unto men.

32. And whoſoever ſpeaketh a word againſt the Son of man, (the Meſſias appearing in theſe humble circumſtances) it ſhall be forgiven him; but whoſoever ſpeaketh againſt (the following diſpenſation of) the Holy Ghoſt, it ſhall not be forgiven him, [i] neither in this world, neither in the world to come, (but he ſhall be obnoxious to eternal judgment, Mark 3. 29.)

33. [Therefore

33. (Therefore I say unto you,) either (take care to) make the tree good, and (then) his fruit (will be) good, or else (you will) make the tree corrupt, and (so) his fruit (will be) corrupt, for the tree is known by its fruit; (and so you will be known by the corrupt judgment which you pass on me, and on those operations of the Holy Ghost which shall testify of me.)

34. O (you that are a) generation of vipers, how can ye, being (thus) evil, speak good things; for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, (so that,)

35. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil treasure (of his heart) bringeth forth evil things.

36. But (whatever you may think of those malicious and blasphemous words you speak against me,) [k] I say unto you that every idle word that men shall (thus) speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

37. For by thy words, (if they be good,) thou shalt be justified, and by thy words, (if they be evil,) thou shalt be condemned.

38. Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, (spake,) saying, Master, [l] we would see a sign (from heaven) from thee.

39. But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the Prophet Jonas, (lying three days in the whale's belly, and then rising out of it.)

40. For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, [m] so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

41. The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it, because they repented at the preaching of Jonas, (though he did no miracle to convince them that he was a Prophet) and behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

42. The Queen of the South, (i. e. of Arabia and Saba, lying South of Jerusalem,) shall rise up in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it, for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth, to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and behold, a [n] greater than Solomon is here.

43. When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none.

44. Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out, and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished.

45. Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there, and the last state of that man is worse than the first; even [o] so shall it be also to this wicked generation; (Satan cast out by me and my disciples, finding no where else such pleasant desirable habitations, or persons so fitted to receive him again, as you of this nation are, shall come back to you, and finding that Christ, whose doctrine shall be entertained by the heathens, hath found no admission among you, shall take a more durable possession of you, and render you seven times more the children of Satan than you were before.)

46. While he yet talked to the people, behold his mother and his brethren stood without desiring to speak with him; (and they could not come at him, because the multitude sat round about him, Mark 3. 32. Luke 8. 19.)

47. Then one said unto him, Behold thy mother and thy brethren stand without desiring to speak with thee.

48. But he answered and said to him that told him, (and by him to the rest, Mark 3. 33. Luke 8. 21.) Who is my mother, and who are my brethren?

49. And (looking round about on them that sat round him, Mark 3. 34.) he stretched forth his hand towards his disciples, and said, Behold (those whom I esteem as) my mother and my brethren.

50. For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is (as dear to me as) my brother and sister and mother.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XII.

Ver. 2. [a] Οἱ μαθηταὶ σου ποιοῦσιν ὃ οὐκ ἔξεστι ποιεῖν ἐν σαββάτῳ, Thy disciples do that which it is not lawful to do on the Sabbath day.] I shall here in one view, give all the exceptions of the Jews against our Saviour, and his disciples for violating the rest required on the Sabbath day, and our Lord's defence against them. And,

1st, They here declare that Christ's disciples, by rubbing of the ears of corn, and eating that which they had rubbed out, did that which was not lawful to be done upon the Sabbath day. And this, saith Maimonides, was forbid, because plucking the ears of corn was a kind of reaping; where, by the way, observe that they seem to be mistaken, who think the fault objected to the disciples was this, that they did break their fasts, before they had celebrated the publick offices, against the common custom of the Jews, Acts 2. 15. For as it is not intimated at what time of the day they did this, ſo was it againſt the Jewiſh canons, at what time ſoever of the day it was done: Moreover, the accuſation is not, that this was not lawful to be done before the morning ſervice was ended, but that it was not lawful to be done on the ſabbath day; and our Lord's whole defence reſpects that only, and not the other ſuppoſed accuſation; nor is our Saviour's argument from what the Prieſts did on the ſabbath day applicable to that purpoſe, for though they were employed about the ſacrifices, they might abſtain from eating till the morning ſacrifice was offered. This action of his diſciples our Lord defends, (1.) By the example of David and his followers, who did eat of the ſhew-bread, which the law had appropriated to the Prieſts, and made unlawful for the laity to eat of; for if the hunger of David and his followers made the violation of that ritual law juſtifiable, the hunger of his diſciples muſt equally juſtify their violation of that ritual command touching the ſabbath. And even (a) according to the Jews this example of David contains two things, tending to excuſe the violation of the ſabbath. (1.) That they ſuppoſe that David with his men thus fled upon the ſabbath day, and yet were not guilty of violating the reſt of the ſabbath. For thus they teach, our maſters think it lawful for him whom the Gentiles or thieves purſue, to profane the ſabbath for preſervation of his life; for ſo we read of David, that when Saul ſought to kill him, he fled, and eſcaped; and that he did this on the ſabbath day, they collect from thoſe words, 1 Sam. 21. 7. that Doeg was detained that day before the Lord, i. e. by the religion of the ſabbath. (2.) That their own canons allowed the laity to eat of the ſhew-bread for preſervation of life; for thus ſpeaks (b) Kimchi on the place, our rabbins of bleſſed memory ſay, that he gave him of the ſhew-bread, &c. their interpretation alſo of the clauſe, yea, tho' it were ſanctified this day in the veſſel, is this, It is a ſmall thing to ſay it is lawful for us to eat the bread removed from the table, it would be lawful for us, in this extreme hunger, even to eat the bread now ſanctified upon the table, if there were no other; and indeed this opinion, that it was lawful to violate the ſabbath for preſervation of life, ſeems plainly to have obtained before the tranſlation of the ſeptuagint, who render the words thus, Exod. 12. 16. Ye ſhall do no ſervile work on it, πλὴν ὅσα ποιηθήσεται πάσῃ ψυχῇ, τοῦτο μόνον ποιηθήσεται ὑμῖν, but that which ſhall be done for the ſake of life, that only ſhall be done by you. (2.) Chriſt's ſecond argument is taken from the work performed morning and evening by the Prieſts, in preparing and offering the ſacrifices; this, ſaith Chriſt, by virtue of the ſame law, and the authority of the ſame lawgiver who commanded the reſt of the ſabbath, was done by the Prieſts upon each ſabbath day; whence it is evident that far more laborious work was to be done by God's command, upon the ſabbath, to obey the ritual precepts which concerned ſacrifices; and much more might my diſciples do that leſſer work of rubbing out ſome ears of corn to ſatisfy their hunger, which is a work of charity, and to fit them for that higher work of attending me in preaching of the Goſpel. And to this agree thoſe ſayings of the Jews, cited by Dr. Lightfoot on the place, There is no ſabbath at all in the temple, and the ſervile works which are done about holy things are not ſervile. In confirmation of this argument, our Saviour adds, that all that work, by which the Jewiſh Prieſts profaned the ſabbath, was done only for the ſervice of the temple, whereas the ſervice done by his diſciples to their Lord, was ſervice done to one much greater than the temple, both in reſpect of dignity, as being a divine perſon, and of ſanctity, as being not only relatively holy, but ſanctified even in his human nature, by inhabitation of the Spirit, and of the fulneſs of the Godhead in him; what therefore might be done for the ſervice of the temple, might much more be done for the ſervice of one much greater than the temple. (3.) Our Saviour argues ſtill à comparatis, by way of compariſon, thus; the obſervation of the reſt preſcribed by the law, was only the obſervance of a ritual command, like that of ſacrifice; the feeding of the hungry was a moral precept, God therefore by declaring he would have mercy, rather than ſacrifice, ſufficiently declared he would diſpenſe with theſe ritual precepts, when the obſervation of them did obſtruct the rules of charity and mercy; and this was alſo ſuitable to that declaration of the Jew, that to love our neighbour as ourſelves, is more than all burnt-offerings and ſacrifices, Mark 12. 33. (4.) Chriſt argues thus, that which is inſtituted for the ſake of another thing, muſt yield to the good of that for whoſe ſake it was inſtituted; but the reſt of the ſabbath was inſtituted for the ſake of man, tired with the labours of the week, therefore it is to yield to the good of man. (5.) The words following, For the Son of man is Lord alſo of the ſabbath; or as they are, Mark 2. 28. ὥστε Κύριός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ τοῦ σαββάτου, are differently interpreted by learned men; Grotius conceives, that the phraſe, the Son of man, hath no relation to Chriſt, but only ſignifies man in in general; his reasons are these, the first is taken from the connection of these with the foregoing words in St. Mark, thus, The sabbath was made for man, not man for the sabbath, therefore the son of man is Lord also of the sabbath. Now this consequence will not follow from the preceding words, if by them we understand Christ, but it directly follows from them, if by that phrase we understand mankind in general. (2*dly*,) Did this relate to Christ's authority over the sabbath, it seems to be an intimation of his power to abrogate or dissolve the sabbath, which power he was so far from asserting, that he declares he came not to dissolve the law, but to fulfil it. And they who were so highly offended with him for the works of charity he did upon the sabbath day, had he openly asserted his power to abrogate it, would have been much more offended with him, and would have needed no lesser matter of accusation against him; this being by their law a capital crime. And, (3*dly*,) Because this would have been a plain asserting, that he was the Christ; whereas he never spake thus to the people, or the Pharisees, nor would he suffer his disciples to declare it: But the Reverend Dr. Hammond and Dr. Lightfoot, conceive, this phrase must signify him who is the Son of man, κατ' ἐξοχὴν by way of eminence. (1.) Because this phrase is used eighty eight times in the New Testament; and in all other places, doth unquestionably signify our blessed Lord. (2.) Because, where this phrase occurs, Dan. 7. 13. all the ancient Christians, and even the Jews, expound it, not as Mr. Cl. here doth, of man in general, but say expressly, this is the King Messiah; and that the Rabbins did rightly expound the words of Daniel concerning him: Christ therefore speaking of himself still in this language to the Jews, must be supposed to use it in the sense they understood it in Daniel; and so he plainly seemeth to interpret himself, by saying, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man coming in the clouds, Matth. 26. 64. He saying this in answer to the question of the High Priest, Art thou the Christ? ver. 63. And (3.) He who before had argued, that his disciples might lawfully do this in his service, because one greater than the temple was here, ver. 6. might also argue from his power, as the Prophet sent from God to the Jews, for the exemption of his disciples in cases of necessity, and greater good from the rest of the sabbath, especially since Christ was only greater than the temple, as being emphatically the Son of man: Nor is it difficult to answer the arguments of Grotius. For, (1.) If we render the word καὶ, denique, as Brugensis and Maldonate; or adhuc, moreover, as it is sometimes used in Homer, there will be in these words of Mark, no consequence from the former, but a new argument like to that of St. Matthew, ver. 6. Here is one greater than the temple. But, (2.) According to the ordinary import of that word, the consequence runs plainly thus, The sabbath was made for the good of man; so that the Son of man, who came not to destroy mens lives, but to save them, must have power in such cases, as concern the good and welfare of mankind, to dispense with the strict rest required by the law of the sabbath.

And this affords a sufficient answer to the second argument of Grotius; it being not asserted, that Christ here challengeth a power to abrogate or dissolve the sabbath, but only such a power as the Jews allowed to their own Prophets in cases of necessity and of higher importance, to dispense with the rest from labour required by the letter of it, as he sufficiently does by justifying the works of mercy he did on that day, by this aphorism, that it is lawful to do good on the sabbath day.

To his third argument, I answer, That our Saviour not only permits others to assert, he was the Christ, or the Messiah, as in the case of Andrew, John 1. 42. of Philip, ver. 46. of Nathaniel, ver. 50. and especially of John the Baptist, who was sent on purpose to bear witness to him, that he was the Son of God; but he himself sufficiently, and often doth it, declaring not only to the blind man, John 9. 35, 37. that he was the Son of God, but also to the Pharisees and Jews, insomuch that they attempt to stone him for it, John 10. 31. and saying to them, If ye believe not that I am he, ἐγώ εἰμι, John 8. 24, 28. ye shall die in your sins; which is as much as, I am the Christ; for what is absolutely, ἐγώ εἰμι, Mark 13. 6. Luke 21. 8. is, I am the Christ, Matth. 24. 5. so that our Saviour only did forbid his disciples to divulge this before his resurrection, for the reasons assigned, Note on Chap. 9. 30.

To these arguments used by our Saviour here, we may add two others in St. Luke, where, Chap. 13. 15, 16. Christ argues thus, That if they loosed their ox or ass, from the stall on the sabbath day, and led them to water, much more might he loose a daughter of Abraham, who had been bound by Satan eighteen years, on that day. And, again, Chap. 14. 15. Seeing when your ox, or ass, falls into a pit on the sabbath day, you draw them out of it on the same day, much more may I cure an hydropick man on that day; where the argument is plainly a minori ad majus; it being a greater charity to work for the benefit of man on that day, than for the good of beaſts; where Chriſt again, as Capellus and Lightfoot have obſerved, argues from the Jewiſh canons, which permitted them not only to draw water for their beaſts, but alſo to lead them out to water on the Sabbath day: and though the latter Jews, from hatred to Chriſt, will not allow the drawing of a beaſt out of a pit on the Sabbath, yet is it certain, both from thoſe words of Luke, they could not anſwer him a word, Ch. 14. 6. and from their canons, cited by Dr. Lightfoot on the place, that they anciently allowed this. And this is ſtill more evident from the words cited from the Septuagint, allowing them to do what was requiſite, σῶσαι ψυχὴν, to preſerve all life; from whence (*) Tertullian and St. Jerom have obſerved, that the law allowed them to do on the Sabbath, quod fiet omni animæ, & quæ ad animi ſalutem pertinent, thoſe things which belonged to the preſervation of life.

Our Lord's laſt argument is taken from the law of circumciſion, which required, that their children ſhould be circumciſed on the eighth day, though that were the Sabbath; and circumciſion was a work of conſiderable labour: If then, ſaith Chriſt, the reſt of the Sabbath might be broken for the circumciſion of an infant, though that were a ritual precept, ſurely it may be ſo, to reſtore health to a man who hath been diſeaſed thirty-eight years; and this was alſo ſuitable to the canons of the Jews; their wiſe men ſpeaking thus, They do all things neceſſary to circumciſion on the Sabbath day, though this may ſeem profane on that day, Pirk. Eliez. c. 29. p. 65.

Ver. 10. [b] Ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτὸν, λέγοντες, They aſked him, ſaying, Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath day?] This is not contrary to what St. Mark, Chap. 3. 4. and St. Luke, Chap. 6. 9. ſay, that Chriſt asked them; for both are true, that they asked him, Whether it were lawful to heal? And he replies, by ſaying, I will ask you alſo, whether it be not lawful to do good on the Sabbath day?

Ver. 17. [c] That it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by Iſaias the prophet, ſaying, Behold my ſervant, whom I have choſen.——He ſhall not ſtrive nor cry.] Here many phraſes are to be explained for the due underſtanding of theſe words: As, 1ſt, I will put my ſpirit upon him, and he ſhall ſhew judgment to the Gentiles; where the ſhewing κρίσιν, judgment, being the effect of his having the ſpirit upon him, muſt reſpect all the righteous laws he was to deliver, by virtue of this unction, in his Father's name, according to the uſual acceptation of the word κρίσις, judgments, for the laws of God in the Old Teſtament; as when God is ſaid to have given to his people, Δικαιώματα καὶ κρίσεις, ſtatutes and judgments, Ex. 21. 1. Deut. 4. 5. to teach, ver. 14. and command them to keep his ſtatutes and judgments, Deut. 30. 16. Now it is obſervable from Mark 3. 6, 7. that when the Phariſees held a council to deſtroy him, he recedes from them to the ſea of Galilee, whither came to him a great multitude from Galilee, from Idumea, and beyond Jordan, and from the parts about Tyre and Sidon; and by teaching them, and doing his miracles before them, he ſhewed judgment to the Gentiles.

He ſhall not ſtrive nor cry, neither ſhall any man hear his voice in the ſtreets, i. e. he ſhall not be contentious, or ſet forth himſelf with noiſe, or tumult, or oſtentation of his doings; and this was here fulfilled by his ceaſing to diſpute any longer with thoſe Phariſees, who, when they could not anſwer him a word, conſult, how they might deſtroy him; and by his ſtrict charge to the multitudes he had healed, that they ſhould not make him known.

A bruiſed reed ſhall he not break, and ſmoaking flax ſhall he not quench. Here, ſaith St. Jerom, Qui peccatori non porrigit manum, & qui non portat onus fratris ſui, he that ſtretcheth not forth his hand to the ſinner, and he that beareth not the burden of his brother, he breaks the bruiſed reed; & qui modicam ſcintillam fidei contemnit in parvulis, and he that contemneth the ſmall ſpark of faith in little ones, quenches the ſmoaking flax. Now, though Chriſt went from that place to avoid the rage of the Phariſees, the Text informs us, that he ceaſed not to heal the multitudes, and to inſtruct them, ver. 15. Mark 3. 10. And by continuing ſtill ſuch acts of charity to the ſouls of all that were diſpoſed to hear, though they were yet weak in faith, and by healing all that came unto him for relief, he fully anſwered this character.

Ἕως ἂν ἐκβάλῃ εἰς νῖκος τὴν κρίσιν, till he bring forth judgment into victory, i. e. according to moſt interpreters, till he hath made his Goſpel and his righteous law victorious over all its enemies; and to this ſenſe, the words of the Prophet, Iſa. 42. 4. till he hath eſtabliſhed judgment in the earth, agree. But the phraſe εἰς νῖκος, doth often ſignify to the end, to the utmoſt, or for ever. See the Note on 1 Cor. 15. 54. whence others probably interpret the words thus, till the time come, that he ſhall execute his judgment on the ſtubborn unbelieving Jews, ſo that wrath ſhall come upon them to the uttermoſt; and they being thus rejected, the Goſpel being taken from them, and their houſe left deſolate, in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt.

(*) Adv. Marcion. l. 4. c. 12. & l. adv. Jud. c. 4, 5. in Iſa. 58. F. 97. M.

Ver. 24. ὁ δὲ Φαρισαῖοι ἔλεγον ὅτι Οὗτος οὐκ ἐκβάλλει δαιμόνια εἰ μὴ ἐν τῷ Βεελζεβοὺλ, But the Phariſees ſaid, He only caſteth out devils by Beelzebul the Prince of the devils.] That which made the Phariſees thus to calumniate our Saviour's miracles, was this, that they found the people induced by them to believe he was the Son of David, ver. 23. or the Chriſt; thus when they heard the people murmuring, John 7. 31. The chief Prieſts and Phariſees ſend men to take him, ver. 32. and this they did not only from an apprehenſion, that if this belief obtained, it might bring the power of the Romans upon them, John 11. 48. but chiefly, becauſe it would put an end to their credit with, and authority over the people, they being ſtill repreſented by our Lord, as blind guides, and the worſt of hypocrites.

The word Beelzebul, or, as St. Jerom hath it better, Beelzebub, ſignifies the Lord of a fly; which was a name the heathens gave not only to Hercules, but even to Jupiter, the Prince of their gods; as doth (c) Pauſanias in Eliacis, and (d) Clemens Alexandrinus in his Protrepticks, and the epithets given to him teſtify. Though it is more probable that the Jews took this name from the Philiſtines, where Baalzebub was worſhipped, 2 Kings 1. 6. as the God of Ekron, and what the heathens fabulouſly write of the temples of Hercules and Jupiter (e) Divinitus illo neque canibus, neque muſcis ingreſſus eſt, That the deity kept the flies from them; that the Jews ſay of their temple, that, in domo mactationis non conſpecta eſt muſca, A fly was not ſeen in the ſlaughter-houſe, Pirk Avoth. c. 5, 6, 7, 8. Note alſo that as the * Jews held there was one who was, Caput omnium diabolorum, the chief of all the devils; ſo alſo did the heathens, for † Porphyry ſaith, that they who did evil by enchantments, τύτοις μάλιστα καὶ τὸν πρώτιστον αὐτῶν ἐπιμῆσαι, chiefly worſhipped them and their preſident, and that ἡ πρώτιστος αὐτῶν δύναμις, the power that preſided over them would be deemed the greateſt God.

Ver. 27. ε Καὶ εἰ ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Βεελζεβοὺλ ἐκβάλλω τὰ δαιμόνια· And if I by Beelzebub caſt out devils, by whom do your children caſt them out?] That it was the cuſtom of the Jews to caſt out devils by the invocation of the name of the moſt High, or of the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, we learn from Juſtin Martyr, who ſpeaks to (f) Trypho the Jew thus, If any of you do exorciſe devils by the name of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, perhaps he will obey you. And from (g) Irenæus, who ſaith, All things are ſubject to the moſt High, and by invocation of his name, even before the Advent of our Lord, men were ſaved from evil ſpirits, and all kinds of demons. (h) Joſephus informs us, that God gave this art to Solomon againſt devils, that he ſhould teach it, εἰς ὠφέλειαν καὶ θεραπείαν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, for the profit and healing of men, and that he left behind him, τρόπους ἐξορκώσεως, thoſe ways of exorciſing by which thoſe devils were ſo effectually caſt out, as never to return again. Thus then our Saviour ſeems to argue, you doubt not but your exorciſts, who uſe the name of God, the God of Abraham, &c. do caſt out devils by virtue of that name, it will then be matter of your condemnation, who paſs ſo favourable a judgment upon them, to paſs ſuch an unjuſt cenſure upon me, in whom you ſee far greater evidences of the finger of God, in caſting out all manner of evil ſpirits, and healing all kinds of diſeaſes; and whereas Epiſcopius objects againſt this interpretation, that it is not certain that theſe exorciſms were uſed by the Jews in Chriſt's time; this is an evidence he had not read theſe authors, for Joſephus doth expreſly ſay, καὶ αὐτὴ μέχρι νῦν παρ' ἡμῖν ἡ θεραπεία πολλῶν ἰσχύει. That this way of curing demoniacks did even then prevail among them; and gives an inſtance of one Eleazer, who, before Veſpaſian, his ſons and ſoldiers, τοὺς ὑπὸ τῶν δαιμονίων κατεχομένους ἀπολύοντα τούτων, delivered them from demons who were poſſeſſed with them. And Irenæus ſaith in the forementioned place, Judæi uſque nunc hac ipſa advocatione damonas effugant, The Jews to this day expel devils by this invocation. (i) Theophylus, that εἰ δαιμονιῶντες ἐλύοντο καὶ μέχρι τῆς δεῦρο ἐξορκίζονται κατὰ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ ὄντος Θεοῦ, till that very time thoſe that were poſſeſſed were exorciſed by the name of the true God. And (k) Origen, That the names of the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, being uſed by the Jews, ἐν τοῖς καθ' ἑαυτοὺς δαίμοσιν, in the incantation of devils, did great miracles; racles; and therefore were uſed to this effect not by them only, but by all others who uſed magick and inchantments. We read, Luke 9. 49. of one among the Jews, who did caſt out devils by the name of Jeſus, tho' he neither followed him, nor his diſciples; and ſome conceive this queſtion of our Lord relates to ſuch, it being a ſtrong preſumption of the divine power, and the miſſion of Chriſt, that his name was ſo powerful even in their mouths, who did not own him; but becauſe we read of one only that did this, and find not that the Phariſees thought better of him, than of Chriſt himſelf, I prefer the former expoſition of theſe words.

Ver. 28. [f] Εἰ δὲ ἐγὼ ἐν πνεύματι Θεοῦ ἐκβάλλω τὰ δαιμόνια, &c. But if I by the Spirit of God do caſt out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come unto you.] How Chriſt did miracles, and caſt out devils by the Spirit of God, ſee Note on Chap. 3. The inference of Chriſt from this is clear, that he was the Meſſias promiſed to ſet up the kingdom ſpoken of by Daniel; for ſeeing in their own opinion their Meſſias was to erect this kingdom, that divine aſſiſtance which proved that he was now come who was the Meſſiah, muſt alſo prove the kingdom of God was come; and ſeeing that the kingdom of Satan was by this power overthrown, they reaſonably might think the kingdom of God was ready to be ſet up, and that one ſtronger than he was come among them, ver. 29.

Ver. 30. [g] Ὁ μὴ ὢν μετ' ἐμοῦ κατ' ἐμοῦ ἐστι, He that is not with me, is againſt me.] He that ſides not with me contending againſt Satan and his kingdom, is againſt me, as being unwilling that his kingdom ſhould be deſtroyed. And he that in doing this work is not againſt me, but caſts out devils in my name, tho' he doth not yet follow me, is for me, Luke 9. 49, 50.

Ver. 31. [h] Ἡ δὲ τοῦ πνεύματος βλασφημία οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται τοῖς ἀνθρώποις· But the blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt ſhall never be forgiven unto men.] Againſt the Holy Ghoſt, i. e. againſt the miracles done by him, Theoph. Of this blaſphemy ſee the Appendix.

Ver. 32. [i] Οὔτε ἐν τούτῳ τῷ αἰῶνι, οὔτε ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι, Neither in this age, nor the age to come.] Hence the Papiſts argue for the remiſſion of ſome ſins in purgatory, after this life is ended, which are not by God remitted here. But the ſcripture knows only two times for the remiſſion of ſins, one here upon earth, Matth. 9. 6. to the believer, and penitent perſon; and the other at the day of judgment, when the great Judge ſhall pronounce the ſentence of abſolution to all his faithful ſervants, when the times of refreſhing ſhall come from the preſence of the Lord, Acts 3. 19, 20. and they ſhall find mercy in that day, 2 Tim. 1. 18. Chriſt therefore ſaith, this blaſphemy of the Holy Ghoſt ſhall neither obtain remiſſion now, nor at the great day of our accounts; that is, it ſhall not at all be remitted, for that this is the true import of this phraſe, is evident from St. Mark, ſaying, he that doth thus blaſpheme, οὐκ ἔχει ἄφεσιν εἰς αἰῶνα, ſhall never find remiſſion, Chap. 3. 29. but is obnoxious to eternal judgment; and from St. Luke, declaring abſolutely, οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται, he ſhall not be forgiven, Chap. 12. 10. This being a common mode of ſpeaking among the Jews; thus (l) R. Eliezer proves, that the Samaritans have no portion in the world to come, becauſe it is ſaid, it belongs not to you to build with us in this world, or in the world to come; and a ſick man is introduced, requiring his ſon to give him the water and meat which the phyſician had forbidden, threatning, if he refuſed, not to forgive him in this world, nor in the world to come; i. e. never to forgive him. And indeed the Jews thought that the pangs of death might expiate ſins, but they held, Nullam eſſe peccati expiationem poſt mortem, that there was no expiation for ſin after death; and therefore could not uſe this phraſe in the Popiſh ſenſe.

Ver. 36. [k] Λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν ὅτι πᾶν ῥῆμα ἀργὸν· But I ſay unto you, that of every idle word that men ſhall ſpeak, they ſhall give an account at the day of judgment.] Agreeable to this is that of (m) Plato, χάριν ἢ πλημμελῶν λόγων βαρυτάτη ζημία, Grievous is the damage of light and volatile words, for a divine Nemeſis is appointed to overſee theſe things: Now the light idle words in Plato, are plainly words ſpoken of their parents, or to the defamation of perſons they ought to have in veneration; here then is one ſenſe of the phraſe, that ſcandalous, ſlanderous reviling of thoſe we ought to venerate, and who have deſerved well of us, will render us obnoxious to condemnation at the day of judgment; and to this ſenſe the very Context leads: The ſcandalous defamatory words the Phariſees had here ſpoken of our Saviour's perſon and miracles, giving occaſion to theſe words, (n) Cicero farther ſaith, that appellatur a philoſophis, ἀργὸς λόγος, cui ſi pareamus nihil omnino eſt quod agamus in vita, the philoſophers call that an idle word, which if we hold to, there is nothing left for us to do, no ſervice to the gods, no acts of virtue or charity; ſo that what is obſtructive to piety and goodneſs, as was this ſaying of the Phariſees to the admiſſion of our Saviour's doctrine, on which the true love of God, and of our brother, did eſpecially depend, is emphatically ἀργὸς λόγος. Others think that ῥήματα ἀργὰ, here ſignifies falſe words, becauſe because in the Hebrew דברים כטלם vain words, hath this signification; as when they say, that prophecy contains the pure truth, but in dreams are דברים כטלים false things contained; to be sure the words here intended must not simply be words unedifying, or which do not directly tend to the glory of God, from which men of great business and conversation cannot be wholly free; but wicked words, proceeding from an evil heart: For our Lord having heard these words of the Pharisees, speaks thus to them, O generation of vipers, how can ye being evil speak good things, since out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, ver. 34. and 35. An evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth evil things; and then connects them thus, I say unto you therefore; whence it is evident, that the words here stiled idle words, were such as demonstrated the speaker to be an evil man, out of an evil heart speaking evil words: See Kettlewell, of groundless scruples, lib. 5. cap. 5.

Ver. 38. [l] Θέλομεν ἀπὸ σοῦ σημεῖον ἰδεῖν, We would see from thee a sign.] They had seen a withered hand made whole, ver. 13. a devil cast forth, and a blind and dumb man see and speak, ver. 22. The sign which they require farther must therefore be a sign from heaven, as we read, Chap. 16. 1. Luke 11. 16. viz. the sign of the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, Dan. 7. 13. In this our Saviour doth at present refuse to gratify them, the time of his coming thus, being after his resurrection, even when he was to come to the destruction of their nation, Matth. 24. 30. And therefore at his death he speaks thus unto them, Verily I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven, Matth. 26. 64. See Additions N° 16.

Ver. 40. [m] Οὕτως ἔσται ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ τῆς γῆς τρεῖς ἡμέρας καὶ τρεῖς νύκτας· So shall the Son of man be in the heart of the earth three days and three nights.]

Object. Against the truth of these words it is objected, that Christ was in the sepulchre only two nights, one whole day, and two parts of a day, and so could not be there three days and three nights.

Answ. In answer to this objection note,

1*st*, That the Hebrews began their computation of a natural day, from the evening or night preceding. So we read, Gen. 1. 5. and the evening and the morning were the first day. So Dan. 8. 14. unto 2300 evenings and mornings shall the sanctuary be cleansed. So Lev. 23. 32. from evening to evening shall ye celebrate your sabbath. Hence both St. Mark and Luke observe, that Christ taught in the synagogue on the sabbath day, Mark 1. 21, 32. Luke 4. 40. and when the sun was set, and so the sabbath ended, they brought their sick unto him; so that in their phrase to say, so many evenings and mornings, days and nights, is the same as to say so many natural days; for in the measuring of any time which contains in it both days and nights, a day is always taken in that sense in which it includes both day and night. Moreover, the Greek language hath its compounds, and so is able to express a natural day by the word νυχθήμερον, but the Jews have no such compound words, and therefore cannot otherwise express a natural day, but by these two words, day and night. So Gen. 7. 4. I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights. 1 Sam. 30. 12. That Egyptian did eat no bread, nor drink water three days and three nights. Exod. 24. 18. Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights.

2*dly*, Note, that it is a (o) received rule among the Jews, that a part of a day is put for the whole; so that whatsoever is done in any part of the day, is properly said to be done that day; since then our Lord was in the grave one whole natural day, and part of two other natural days, he might truly be said, according to their computation, to be in it three days and three nights. Note,

3*dly*, That it is very usual to reckon that to be done in so many days, or so many days and nights, which is done so as that the action begins in any part of the first, and ends in any part of the last day; so 1 Kings 20. 29. They encamped against one another seven days, and in the seventh day the battle joined. And Esther saith, Chap. 4. 16. Fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day, I and my maidens will fast also, and then will I go in unto the King; and yet Chap. 5. 1. she goes in to the King on the third day. So Luke 2. 21. When eight days were accomplished for the circumcision of the child, they called his name Jesus; and yet the day of his birth and of his circumcision, were two of these eight days, and the compleat days were only six. So St. Luke saith, that about eight days after these words, he took Peter, John and James, and went up into the mount, Luke 9. 28. But St. Matthew, Chap. 17. 1. and St. Mark, Chap. 9. 2. tell us it was six days after, i. e. including the day he spake the words, and the day he went up into the mount, it might be reckoned eight, excluding them, it was only six. Since then our Saviour was in the grave part of Friday, and the evening or night before, must, by the Hebrew computation, be accounted to that day; seeing he was in the grave all Friday night and Saturday, seeing he was in the grave all Saturday night, night, and part of the morning of the day following, and that morning with the precedent evening make a third natural day, he may, according to the Hebrew computation, be truly ſaid to have been three nights and three days in the heart of the earth. See Note on Mark 8. 31.

Ver. 42. [n] Πλεῖον Σολομῶνος ὧδε, A greater than Solomon is here.] God therefore having promiſed to Solomon ſuch wiſdom that, as there was none like him before, (among meer men,) ſo ſhould thereafter ariſe none like unto him, 1 Kings 3. 12. He that was greater in wiſdom than Solomon, muſt be more than a man.

Ver. 45. [o] Οὕτως ἔσται καὶ τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ τῇ πονηρᾷ· So ſhall it alſo be to this wicked generation.] These words ſeem plainly to apply the preceding parable to the unbelieving Jews of that age, and therefore to import, that the devil, who by the labours of Chriſt, and of his diſciples, had been caſt out of ſo many of them, finding no reſt among the heathens, from whoſe perſons and temples the Chriſtians would every where expel him, and finding the Jewiſh nation, by their prodigious wickedneſs and obſtinate incredulity, ſtill more prepared than ever to receive him, would return unto them, and render them more incredulous, contumacious, and obdurate, more impure and wicked, hypocritical and blaſphemous, than they were before, till he had brought them to deſtruction.

CHAP. XIII.

1. THE ſame day (that his mother came to him, Matth. 12. 46.) went Jeſus out of the houſe, and ſat by the ſea-ſide:

2. And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, ſo that (to avoid the preſſure of the multitude,) he went into a ſhip and ſat (near the land,) and the whole multitude ſtood on the ſhore.

3. And he ſpake many things to them in parables, ſaying, (hearken, Mark 4. 3.) Behold a ſower went forth to ſow;

4. And when he ſowed, ſome ſeeds fell by the way-ſide, (and were trode upon, Luke 8. 5.) and the fowls (of the air, Mark 4. 4.) came and devoured them up.

5. Some fell upon ſtony places, where they had not much earth (to cover and feed the root,) and forthwith they ſprang up, (and withered, Luke 8. 6.) [a] becauſe they had no deepneſs of earth (to take root in.)

6. And (ſo) when the ſun was up they were ſcorched, and becauſe they had not (deepneſs of) root, they withered away.

7. And ſome fell among thorns, and the thorns ſprang up (with them) and (overgrowing them,) choaked them, (and ſo theſe ſeeds yielded no fruit, Mark 4. 7.)

8. But other (ſeed) fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, (according to the goodneſs of the ground,) [b] ſome an hundred fold, ſome ſixty fold, ſome thirty fold.

9. (And having ſaid this, he added, Mark 4. 9. Luke 8. 8. he) [c] Who hath ears to hear, let him hear. (See Chap. 11. 15.)

10. And (when he was alone, Mark 4. 10.) the diſciples came and ſaid unto him, [d] Why ſpeakeſt thou to them in parables? (and alſo asked him the meaning of the parable, Luke 8. 9.)

11. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, (I ſpeak not to you, who prize and improve the doctrine I impart, in parables,) becauſe to (ſuch as) you it is given to know the myſteries of the kingdom of heaven, (or what is obſcurely delivered concerning it,) but to them (who ſlight and neglect what is plainly taught them,) it is not given (to know them.)

12. [e] For whoſoever hath, (i. e. duly improves the knowledge which he hath,) to him ſhall be given (more,) and he ſhall have more abundance; but whoſoever hath not, (i. e. who by making no uſe of it, is as if he had it not,) from him ſhall be taken away even that he (unprofitably) hath.

13. (Whence you may learn, that) Therefore ſpeak I to them in parables, becauſe (they are like to thoſe inconſiderate and ſlothful men, of whom it is proverbially ſaid, becauſe of their neglect to act according to their knowledge, that) they ſeeing ſee not, and hearing they hear not neither do they underſtand.

14. [f] And (ſo by their ſhutting thus their eyes againſt the light, and ſtopping their ears againſt inſtruction,) in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Iſaias, which ſaith, By hearing ye ſhall hear and ſhall not underſtand, and ſeeing ye ſhall (or will) ſee, and ſhall (or will) not perceive; (it being with them now, as it was with the ſame people then.)

15. For this people's heart is waxed groſs (hath been made thick or condenſated, ſo that the word cannot pierce into it,) and their ears are dull of hearing, (Gr. they have heard heavily with their ears,) and their eyes they have cloſed (againſt the light,) leſt at any time they ſhould ſee with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and ſhould underſtand with their heart, and ſhould be converted, and I ſhould heal them, (and their ſins ſhould be forgiven them, Mark 4. 12.)

16. But

16. But blessed are your eyes for they see, and your ears for they hear, (the things belonging to this kingdom, well worthy of your regard.)

17. For verily I say unto you, that [g] many Prophets and righteous men have desired to see the things which ye see, (the advent of the promised Messias,) and have not seen them, and to hear those things which ye hear, (the mysteries of the kingdom of God revealed,) and have not heard them.

[Mark 4. 13. And he said unto them, know ye not this parable, and how then will ye know all parables, as it becometh them to do, who are to reveal the mysteries of this kingdom to others?]

18. Hear ye therefore the (meaning of the) parable of the sower; (He that soweth is the Son of man, the seed sown is the word of God, Luke 8. 11.)

19. [h] When any one heareth the word of the kingdom (of God,) and understandeth it not, (i. e. considereth not of it,) then cometh the wicked one, (the prince of the air, Eph. 2. 2.) and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart; this is he, (i. e. the person signified by him,) which received the seed by the way-side.

20. But he that received the seed into stony places, (Gr. but he that is sown upon stony places,) the same is he, (i. e. he is the emblem of him) that [i] heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it.

21. Yet hath he not root in himself, but (having not received this seed fully into his heart, nor duly considered what he must do, and suffer to retain it there, he) dureth (only) for a while; for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by, (i. e. presently) he is offended.

22. He also that received seed among the thorns, is he that heareth the word, [k] and the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches (and the pleasures of life, Luke 8. 14. and the lusts of other things entering into it, Mark 4. 19.) choak the word, and he becometh (so far) unfruitful, (as to bring no fruit unto perfection.)

23. But [l] he that (is represented as one that) received seed into the good ground, is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it, (and receives it into a good and honest heart, Luke 8. 15.) which also beareth fruit (with patience, ibid.) and bringeth forth some an hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty. (What is here added, Mark 4. 21, 22, 23, 24. is here accommodated to this parable.)

24. Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven, (the success of the Gospel,) is (may be) likened to (that of) a man who sowed good seed in his field:

25. But whilst men, (to whom the management of this field was committed,) slept, [m] his enemy came and sowed tares (or cockle) among the wheat, and went his way, (and this was not presently perceived.)

26. But when the blade was sprung up and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also:

27. So (Gr. then) the servants of the householder, (to whose conduct this field was committed,) came and said unto him, (whose servants they were,) Sir, didst thou not sow (only) good seed in thy field, from whence then hath it tares?

28. He (answering) said unto them, An enemy (to me and the good seed) hath done this; the servants (then) said unto him, [n] Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29. But he said, Nay, (do not this now,) lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat (growing) with them.

30. Let both grow together until the (time of) harvest, and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles, to burn them, but (then) gather the wheat into my barn. (The parable inserted, Mark 4. 26, 27, 28. is there explained.)

31. Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, (whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God, and with what comparison shall we compare it? Mark 4. 30.) The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took and sowed in his field, (or garden, Luke 13. 19.)

32. Which indeed (when it is sown, Mark 4. 31.) [o] is the least of all seeds, but when it is grown (up) it is the greatest amongst herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches of it, (Luke 13. 19.) (and like to this will be the progress of the Gospel.)

33. Another parable spake he unto them, (saying,) The kingdom of heaven, (the doctrine of the Gospel) is like (for its powerful influence,) to leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened (by it.)

34. All these things spake Jesus to the multitude in parables, (as they were able to hear, Mark 4. 33.) and without a parable spake he not unto them; (though he after interpreted all these parables to his disciples, Mark 4. 34.)

35. [p] That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Prophet (David,) saying, (Psal. 78. 2.) I will open my mouth in parables, I will utter things which have been kept ſecret from the foundation of the world.

36. Then Jeſus ſent the multitude away, and went into the (an) houſe, and his diſciples came unto him, ſaying, Declare, (explain) unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

37. He anſwered, and ſaid unto them, He that ſoweth the good ſeed is the Son of man.

38. The field is the world, the good ſeed are the children of the kingdom, (who obey the precepts of it,) but the tares are the children of (Satan) the wicked one, (whoſe works they do, John 8. 44.)

39. The enemy that ſowed them, is the Devil, the harveſt is the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels.

40. ¶ As therefore (at the time of harveſt) the tares are gathered, and burnt in the fire, ſo ſhall it be in the end of this world.

41. (For then) The Son of man ſhall ſend forth his angels, and they ſhall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them that do iniquity;

42. And ſhall caſt them into a furnace of fire, (and) there ſhall be wailing and gnaſhing of teeth.

43. Then ſhall the righteous ſhine forth as the ſun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear let him hear.

44. Again, the kingdom of heaven is like to treaſure hid in a field, the which when a man hath found, he hideth (or conceals his finding) it, and for joy thereof goeth and ſelleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

45. Again, the kingdom of heaven is like to a merchant-man, ſeeking goodly pearls,

46. Who when he had found one pearl of great price, he went and ſold all that he had, and bought it; (ſo muſt thoſe who deſire the bleſſings of the kingdom of heaven, be ready to part with all their earthly bleſſings, to poſſeſs and ſecure it to themſelves.)

47. [r] Again, the kingdom of heaven is like to a net which was caſt into the ſea, and gathered of every kind (good and bad fiſh,)

48. Which, when it was full, they drew to ſhore, and ſat down, and gathered the good into veſſels, but caſt the bad away;

49. So (likewiſe) ſhall it be at the end of the world, (for) the angels ſhall come forth, and ſever the wicked from among the juſt,

50. And ſhall caſt them into the furnace of fire, (and) there ſhall be wailing and gnaſhing of teeth, (or the extremity of miſery.)

51. (Then) Jeſus ſaith unto them, Have ye underſtood all theſe things? They ſay unto him, Yea, Lord.

52. Then ſaid he to them, Therefore every ſcribe which is inſtructed to the kingdom of heaven, is like to a man that is an houſholder, who bringeth forth out of his treaſure things new and old, (to feed his family; for, ſo muſt you produce from Moſes and the Prophets, and from the doctrines belonging to this heavenly kingdom, what you ſee needful to feed God's family and houſhold.)

53. And it came to paſs, that when Jeſus had finiſhed theſe parables, he departed thence:

54. And when he was come (thence with his diſciples, Mark 6. 1.) into his own country, he taught them in their ſynagogue (on the ſabbath day, Mark 6. 2.) inſomuch that they (who heard him) were aſtoniſhed, and ſaid, Whence hath this man this wiſdom, and theſe mighty works (which are done by him?)

55. Is not this the carpenter's ſon? (Mark 6. 3. the carpenter; ſee the Note there:) Is not his mother called Mary? And (are not) his [s] brethren (called) James and Joſes, and Simon and Judas?

56. And his ſiſters, are they not all with us? (Bearing no marks either of like power or wiſdom;) whence (then) hath this man all theſe things?

57. And they were offended in him, (or ſcandalized at him, by reaſon of his mean original, and humble circumſtances;) but Jeſus ſaid unto them, A Prophet is not without honour, ſave in his own country; and in his own houſe, (there uſually he is moſt deſpiſed.)

58. And he did not many mighty works there (ſave only that he laid his hands upon a few ſick perſons, and healed them, Mark 6. 5.) becauſe of their unbelief.

Ver. 5. [a] Ἐ Τ'ΘΕ'ΩΣ ἀνέτειλε, διὰ τὸ μὴ ἔχειν βάθος γῆς· It forthwith ſprang up, becauſe it had no deepneſs of earth.] Thus Quintilian ſaith of rath-ripe wit, that it rarely comes to maturity, comparing it to thoſe ſeeds, which being ſown on the ſurface of the earth, ſpring up quickly, becauſe the root goes not deep into it; Illud ingeniorum præcox genus non temere unquam pervenit ad frugem——non multum præſtat, ſed cito——nec penitus immiſſis radicibus nititur, ut quæ ſummo ſolo ſparſa ſunt ſemina celerius ſe effundunt. Inſtit. l. 1. c. 3. p. 16, 17.

Ver.

Ver. 9. ε Ὁ ἔχων ὦτα ἀκούειν, ἀκουέτω· He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.] This is a proverbial expression used by Christ, when he spake of matters of great importance, which deserved a serious consideration, Matth. 11. 15.——13. 43. Rev. 2. 7, 11, 17, 29.——3. 6, 13, 22.——13. 9. by which he excites them who had good inclination to, and a good judgment and perception, as to things divine, throughly to weigh and consider of the things spoken.

Ver. 10. d Διὰ τί ἐν παραβολαῖς λαλεῖς αὐτοῖς; Why speakest thou to them in parables? It is certain, not only that the Jewish doctors and all the Wise Men of the East, taught by parables, משלי משלים παραβολαῖς παραβολεύεσθαι, Expressing their minds by parables, as St. Mark speaks in their own phrase, Chap. 4. 30. but also that some of our Lord's parables, as that of the rich glutton, Luke 16. that of the foolish virgins, Matth. 25. and others were taken from the Jews. See Sheringham, Præf. ad Joma. Yet, because this way of teaching had in it somewhat of obscurity, and the doctrine contained under the covert of these parables, was not so easy to be apprehended by the vulgar sort, the disciples here enquire, Why speakest thou to them in parables? And to this question, for the satisfaction of others, I shall give a larger answer: Let it be noted then,

1*st*, That albeit this way of teaching was somewhat cloudy and obscure, yet was it intelligible to the attent and searching auditor, as will appear from that expression with which our Saviour doth so oft conclude his parables, viz. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear: Accordingly, our Lord being to instruct the multitude by parables, Matth. 15. 10. he saith unto them, Hear and understand: And when his disciples asked the meaning of that parable, he reprehends them, saying, Ἀκμὴν καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀσύνετοί ἐστε; Are ye also yet without understanding? intimating, That it was not so much the obscurity of his words, as their own dulness, and want of understanding, which made them not perceive the import of his doctrine; and again, Mark 4. 13. he speaks by way of admiration to them, saying, Know ye not this parable?

2*dly*, This method of instruction was not without its uses and advantages, seeing hereby it was visible who were the υἱοὶ τῆς σοφίας, sons of wisdom, who had a cordial love to divine things, and an inflamed desire after them, and thought it worthy of their care and pains to search them out, and so were persons fitly qualified for the reception of the Gospel light. It was the custom of the disciples of the Jewish doctors, when they understood not the meaning of their parables, to go unto their Rabbi's to enquire the meaning of them; as did our Lord's disciples ask of him the meaning of those parables they understood not. And this Christ's hearers might have done, had they not been indisposed to receive the doctrines which he taught, and chosen rather to be held in error by the scribes and Pharisees, than to receive instruction from the mouth of Christ. (2.) Such lessons, as they are best remembered, so having once obtained to their sense, they will stick closer to us; for the time spent in the unfolding of them, makes the idea the more fixed and lasting in the brain.

3*dly*, That Christ thus spake to them in parables, did not proceed from his unwillingness to instruct them, but from their indisposition to receive his doctrine, delivered more plainly to them: Of this St. Mark informs us, by saying, Chap. 4. 33. He spake the word to them in many parables, as they were able to hear it. For, those parables the scripture mentions, were either such as were obvious in themselves, as that of Dives and Lazarus, of the rich man pulling down his barns, Luke 12. 16. their chusing the uppermost seats at feasts, Chap. 14. 7. or such as would, had they with greater plainness been delivered, have sowred, and enraged the leading Jews, and stirred them up to a more violent opposition to his doctrine, and a more quick endeavour to destroy his person; they being either such as did proclaim him the Messiah, and the Son of God, which they still looked upon as blasphemy, as that which stiles him the good shepherd, and concludes them wolves and robbers; or, such as contradicted their traditions, and told them, it was not the uncleanness of the hands, or outward man, but the defilement of the heart, which made them loathsome in the eye of God; which doctrine did much offend the Pharisees, Matth. 15. 12. or, such as did upbraid their stubbornness and disobedience, as did the parable of the vineyard planted by the husband-man; the parable of the two sons, of which the eldest promised fair, but did not what he promised; or, such as taxed their pride and self-conceit; as did the parable touching the arrogant thanksgiving of the Pharisee, Luke 18. 9. or else, such as told the great propagation, and increase of the Gospel among the heathens, as did the parable of the leaven, and of the grain of mustard-seed; or such as did foretel the ruin and unchurching of the Jewish nation, as did the parable of cutting down the unfruitful fig-tree, and the decree, that they who refused, upon invitation, to come to the wedding supper, should not taste thereof; or, such as prophesied, that the kingdom of God should be taken from them; or, that their sloth in not improving the talents which they had received already, should be puniſhed with the utter deprivation of them. Now, all theſe things were ſo offenſive to the Phariſees, as had they plainly been delivered to them, they would have provoked them to that rage, which might have quite diſcouraged his young diſciples, and hindered the performance of thoſe works which were preparatory to his reſurrection, and to the glorious appearance of his kingdom. Beſides the parables already mentioned, we have only thoſe recorded here and in the parallel Chapter of St. Mark; of which two only recorded were ſpoken to the multitude, viz. the parable of the ſeed and of the tares; the reſt, when he had ſent the multitude away, to his diſciples, ver. 36. and both might probably reflect upon the Jews, as being the bad ground and the tares mentioned in them.

Laſtly, Conſider, that what Chriſt thus delivered here, did not contain the fundamental precepts and doctrines of the Goſpel, they being delivered in the audience of the people, with ſufficient clearneſs, Matth. the 5th, the 6th, the 7th, but only the myſteries relating to the progreſs of the Goſpel, and the event of it among Jews and Gentiles: Now, even the Jews acknowledge that the predictions of this nature, were uſually taught in allegorical, improper, and parabolical expreſſions, they being not ſo needful to be known, as were the fundamental rules of faith and manners. Moreover the reaſon, here aſſigned, why our Saviour ſpake ſo obſcurely to them was their own wickedneſs and perverſeneſs, which indiſpoſed them to receive profit by his more plain diſcourſes; for therefore, ſaith Chriſt, ſpeak I to them in parables, becauſe they ſeeing, ſee not, and hearing, do not hear or underſtand. Now this, both in the Scripture and in other authors, is a proverbial expreſſion, concerning men ſo wicked and ſo ſlothful, that either they attend not to, or will not follow the cleareſt intimations and convictions of their duty: Thus to a revolting and rebellious people, which had caſt off the fear of God, the Prophet Jeremy ſpeaks thus, Chap. 5. 21. Hear now this, O fooliſh people and without underſtanding, which have eyes and ſee not, which have ears and hear not: And God ſpeaks to Ezekiel thus, Son of man, thou dwelleſt in the midſt of a rebellious houſe, which have eyes to ſee, and ſee not, they have ears to hear, and hear not, for they are a rebellious houſe, Chap. 12. 2. This is a frequent form of ſpeech in (a) Philo, who ſpeaking of thoſe that were addicted to wine and ſenſual pleaſures; he ſaith, Ὁρῶντες οὐκ ὁρῶσι, καὶ ἀκούοντες οὐκ ἀκούουσι, they ſeeing, ſee not, and hearing, do not hear. And (b) again, Ὁρῶντες ἔστιν ὅτε οὐκ ὁρῶμεν, it ſometimes happens, that ſeeing, we ſee not, and hearing, we hear not, viz. when the mind is more intent upon other things. (c) Demoſthenes mentioned this as a παροιμία, or a proverb, Ὀρῶντας μὴ ὁρᾶν, καὶ ἀκούοντας μὴ ἀκούειν. Yea, ſometimes this phraſe is uſed in a good ſenſe, to ſignify men, who will not hearken to any ſolicitations to wickedneſs, but ſtop their ears, and ſhut their eyes againſt them. Thus ὁ βαρύων τὰ ὦτα, he that ſtoppeth his ears from hearing of blood; καμμύων τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, he that ſhutteth his eyes, that he may ſee no evil, he ſhall dwell on high, Iſa. 33. 15, 16. Now, hence it evidently follows, that the phraſe, to them it is not given to know the myſteries of the kingdom, only imports, that to them I allow or vouchſafe not a clearer knowledge of theſe things, whom I find too much diſpoſed to ſlight and to neglect, but indiſpoſed to receive and profit by them; and therefore, by the rule of contraries, to you it is given to know them, can only ſignify, to you I think fit to allow and vouchſafe the knowledge of them, as finding you diſpoſed to attend to, and to improve them: Nor is there any ſenſe more frequent in Scripture of the phraſe, I give, or give not, than this, I allow, vouchſafe, permit, or think fit, that ſuch a thing be done or not done; this being the ſenſe of the phraſe, when mention is made of the days of life which God hath given us, Eccleſ. 5. 18.——8. 15.——9. 9. of the ſore travel which God hath given, (i. e. allotted,) to the ſons of men, Eccleſ. 3. 10. Give not thy holy one to ſee corruption, Pſal. 16. 10. Give not my feet to ſlide, Pſal. 66. 1. Give not thy mouth to cauſe thy fleſh to ſin, Eccleſ. 5. 6. Give not thy ſtrength to women, Prov. 31. 3. Give not ſleep to thine eyes, Pſal. 132. 4. Prov. 6. 4. And when we ſay ſuch a one is given to wine and to women, i. e. he allows himſelf thoſe liberties or licentious practices.

Ver. 12. ε Ὅστις γὰρ ἔχει· For whoſoever hath, to him ſhall be given:] From the words, whoſoever hath not, ſhall be taken away that which he hath, it is manifeſt, That not to have, is not to have profitably, and to improvement: For what a man abſolutely hath not, cannot be taken from him. Whence it muſt follow, that τὸ ἔχειν here, muſt be ſo to have, as to improve it duly. So Phavorinus ſaith, That ἔχειν to have, is ἐπιμελεῖσθαι καὶ εὐλαβεῖσθαι, to take care of and preſerve. Caſaubon obſerves, That ἔχειν, in the Greek, doth ſometimes ſignify, to have a thing with increaſe: So Sophocles in Ajace πρὸς γὰρ τοῦ ἔχοντα ὁ φθόνος ἕρπει, he that abounds, is envied; where the Scholiaſt notes, that ἔχειν is put for εὖ ἔχειν. And in Democritus θαυμάζειν τοὺς ἔχοντας, is to admire the rich. So, not to have, is not not to uſe what we have, as in that of the Proverbs, Chap. 13. 7. There are who are rich, μηδὲν ἔχοντες, and having nothing, as not having power to eat of their labours: Thus (*) Ariſtotle ſaith, That a man who hath knowledge, and uſeth it not, as being drunk or mad, may be ſaid, ἔχειν πως, καὶ μὴ ἔχειν, to have it in a manner, and not to have it. See Matth. 25. 29. See Additions N° 17.

Ver. 14. [f] Καὶ ἀναπληροῦται ἐπ' αὐτοῖς· And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Iſaiah, &c.] The Apoſtle Paul informs us, That what the law ſaith, it ſpeaks to them, of all times and ages, that are under the law, Rom. 3. 19. So what the Prophets of the Jews ſaid, muſt in like caſes belong to the Jews of all times; though ἐπ' αὐτοῖς, may be here rendered concerning them; and ſo the meaning may be only this, That what was ſaid by Iſaiah of the men of his times, was as truly fulfilled concerning the Jews of our Saviour's time; they being as indiſpoſed to hearken to the words of this great Prophet, as were the former Jews to attend to the words of Iſaiah.

Ver. 17. [g] Πολλοὶ προφῆται καὶ δίκαιοι ἐπεθύμησαν ἰδεῖν ἃ βλέπετε καὶ οὐκ εἶδον· Verily I ſay unto you, That many Prophets and wiſe men have deſired to ſee the things that ye ſee, and have not ſeen them;] i. e. many Prophets who propheſied of the coming of the Meſſiah, and many righteous men to whom God familiarly ſhewed himſelf, as he did to Abraham and the Patriarchs; many Kings, Luke 10. 24. from whoſe ſeed he was to ſpring, and whoſe kingdoms and perſons were types of the Meſſiah, deſired to ſee before their eyes the things which ye thus ſee, and have not ſo ſeen them, they only ſeeing them afar off in the promiſes made to them concerning theſe days, Heb. 11. 13. and to them it was revealed, that not to themſelves, but to our times they miniſtred the things which are now revealed, 1 Pet. 1. 11, 12.

Ver. 19. [h] Παντὸς ἀκούοντος τὸν λόγον τῆς βασιλείας καὶ μὴ συνιέντος· When any one heareth the word and underſtandeth it not.] Chriſt cannot here intend to ſignify that his word ever becomes unprofitable to any, either through the natural weakneſs of their underſtandings, which renders them unable to diſcern his mind; or through the darkneſs or obſcurity of the word preached: Since this would lay the reaſon of the unprofitableneſs of it, not in the hearers, who cannot be ſuppoſed blame-worthy, becauſe the underſtanding, God hath given them, is weak; but in the Preacher, who taught it ſo obſcurely that they were not able to diſcern it. The Greek word συνίημι, which we render underſtand, here ſignifies to ponder, to conſider of, to lay to heart, and to obſerve in order to action, to conſider; ſo Prov. 21. 12. συνιῶν δίκαιος, the righteous man wiſely conſiders the houſe of the wicked, Pſal. 41. 1. Bleſſed is he that conſidereth the poor, Gr. ὁ συνιῶν ἐπὶ πτωχὸν, Pſal. 106. 7. Our Fathers in Egypt, οὐ συνῆκαν, conſidered not thy wonders: And that thus it here ſignifies, appears, (1.) Becauſe the following degree of hearers, are ſuch as are affected ſomething with the word preached, for they receive it with joy, v. 20. The firſt degree muſt therefore comprehend ſuch men as are not thus affected with it, it making no impreſſion on their hearts. (2.) Becauſe the devil is ſaid to ſnatch away this word, leſt they ſhould believe it. Now faith being an act of the underſtanding, he could not fear they ſhould believe what he knew they did not underſtand; and this induſtry of Satan to ſnatch the word out of our hearts, as it diſcovers his enmity againſt the progreſs of the Goſpel, ſo doth it highly commend the excellence and efficacy of it; for were it not of great importance to preſerve it there, he would not be ſo induſtrious to ſnatch it thence; and were it not, when there, a powerful inſtrument to work within us that faith which purifies the heart, why doth he do this leſt we ſhould believe? Why is it then that men do call this quick and powerful word, this word of life, a dead letter? And when they daily by experience ſee that the perſuaſions both of themſelves and others, are often prevalent, why do they think that God's can be of no effect without a miracle?

Ver. 20. [i] Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τὸν λόγον ἀκούων, καὶ εὐθὺς μετὰ χαρᾶς λαμβάνων αὐτὸν, This is he who hears the word, and anon with joy receives it.] Here he who is repreſented by the ſtony ground, (1.) Hears the word, and doth πρὸς καιρὸν πιστεύειν, for a time believe it, Luke 8. 13. but then he only doth ſo for a time: And hence we learn that it is not ſufficient that we at preſent do believe, profeſs, and practiſe ſuitably to the truth delivered, unleſs we do continue ſo to do unto the end, and bring forth fruit with patience, Luke 8. 15. for by comparing the Evangeliſts, we learn that it is in effect all one to be ἄκαρπος unfruitful, Matth. 13. 22. Mark 4. 19. and to bring no fruit to perfection, Luke 8. 15. (2.) He receives the word with joy, and is at preſent much affected with it, though afterwards he is offended at it; whence alſo it appears, that it is not ſufficient to render us good Chriſtians, that we at preſent are ſomewhat affected with the word, receive it with ſome joy, delight, and pleaſure, unleſs it doth produce ſincerity and conſtancy in our obedience to all its precepts, even thoſe which are moſt grievous to fleſh and blood.

Ver. 22. [*] Καὶ ἡ μέριμνα τ̃ αἰῶνος τούτου, καὶ ἡ ἀπάτη τ̃ πλούτου, And the care of this life, and the deceitfulneſs of riches, καὶ αἱ ἡδοναὶ τ̃ βίου, and the pleaſures of life, Luke 8. 14. καὶ αἱ περὶ τὰ λοιπὰ ἐπιθυμίαι, and our luſtings after other things, Mark 4. 19. entering in, choak the word.] Here are enumerated all thoſe things which choak the word of God, and render our profeſſion of religion unprofitable to the welfare of our ſouls.

1*ſt*, Ἡ μέριμνα τ̃ αἰῶνος τούτου, Such a concernment for this preſent life, as renders us diſtracted, and tormented with the fears of loſing it; ſo that we cannot think of parting with it without horror, which makes us falter in the practice, and even fall off from the profeſſion of it; or αἱ μέριμναι thoſe diſtracting worldly cares, which fill our heads ſo full of contrivances, and ſo employ our time, that we are not at leiſure ſeriouſly to think upon, and carefully purſue the concernments of our ſouls.

2*dly*, The love of the deceitful riches of the world; for when they ſo far enter into our hearts, as that we are βουλόμενοι πλουτεῖν, very deſirous to be rich, this eagerneſs to have them, tempts us to ſin, that we may gain them, and ſin again, that we may keep them, and will not ſuffer us to part with them as we ought, either for the relief of others, or for the welfare of our own ſouls; whence, ſaith our Lord, Ye cannot ſerve God and mammon; and he that loveth the world, ſaith St. John, the love of the Father is not in him, for the friendſhip of this world is enmity to God, Jam. 4. 4.

3*dly*, The pleaſures of life, i. e. either thoſe which are the works of the fleſh, and ſo exclude us from the kingdom of heaven, as fornication, uncleanneſs, laſciviouſneſs, drunkenneſs, gluttony; or thoſe which, tho' they be not ſinful in their nature, or ſuch as Chriſtianity reſtrains us wholly from, as v. g. the pleaſures of the ſtage and theatre, of gaming, and of recreations of like kind, yet when our deſires are ſtrongly carried out after them, when we ſpend that time in the purſuit of them, which makes us neglect our duty to our God, our neighbours, or our own calling and concerns; when they miniſter temptations to fraud, to covetouſneſs, to contention, paſſion, ſwearing, fretfulneſs, or idleneſs; or often caſt us into the company of looſe, profane, debauched perſons, by whoſe example and converſation we may be endangered; and notwithſtanding we are ſo enſlaved to, or ſo much under the power of them, that we cannot deny ourſelves theſe liberties, then are we φιλήδονοι, lovers of pleaſures more than God.

4*thly*, Αἱ περὶ τὰ λοιπὰ ἐπιθυμίαι, Our luſtings after other things; as (1.) The luſts of the eye, or our deſires of gay apparel, rich furniture, ſtately buildings, great attendance and equipage; or ſuch as by St. John are ſtiled the pride of life, deſire of popular applauſe, or of high eſtimation in the world, of advancement to high poſts, and to great places above others; or laſtly, our exceſſive love unto our relatives, our parents, wives, our children, or our friends; for when theſe affections prove temptations to ſin, as the exceſs of them ſtill doth, they will be then obſtructive of that influence, the word of life ſhould have upon us: St. John informs us, that all theſe are not of the Father, but of the world, that if we love or ſet our hearts upon them, the love of the Father is not in us, 1 John 2. 15, 16. and therefore Chriſt requires us to deny ourſelves in all theſe things, to hate, i. e. to love them leſs than him, that we may be his diſciples.

Ver. 23. [1] Ὁ δὲ ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν τὴν καλὴν σπαρείς, But that which is ſown upon good ground, is he who heareth the word, and conſiders of it.] And brings forth fruit, Luke 8. 15. οἵτινες ἐν καρδίᾳ καλῇ καὶ ἀγαθῇ κατέχουσι, καὶ καρποφοροῦσιν ἐν ὑπομονῇ, Who retain it in a good and honeſt heart, and bring forth fruit with patience. What this good and honeſt heart, or man that hath it, is, we may learn from heathen authors. Thus (d) Ariſtotle tells us, that this name, καλὸς καὶ ἀγαθὸς was by them given ἐπὶ τ̃ τελείως σπουδαίου, to one that is entirely good, ὃς τ' ἀγαθὰ πάντα ὄντα ἀγαθὰ ἔχει, who approved of all things that were truly good, and who was not corrupted by riches and dominion; and from the requiſites in him, which were wanting in all the other grounds; for whereas he, who was repreſented by the ſeed ſown by the way-ſide, did not σωτήναι conſider of it, he that receives the word into a good heart is σωτὴρ, one that conſiders duly of it, he lays before his eyes the benefits he may receive, and the afflictions he may ſuffer by adhering to it; what he muſt do to enjoy theſe bleſſings, and what he muſt be ready to part with that he may ſecure them. (2.) Whereas in the ſtony ground the ſeed was only retained for a while, and then caſt out, it ſoon roſe up, and as ſoon withered; the ſeed ſown in the good and honeſt heart, κατέχει, is there retained, and brings forth fruit with patience: and (3.) Whereas in the thorny ground it is ſo choaked as to become unfruitful where it is, or οὐ τελεσφορεῖ it brings forth no mature fruit, no fruit that can prevail, or get up above theſe thorns; in the good heart it brings forth fruit unto perfection, prevails and triumphs over all ſenſual and worldly appetites, over our love to life, and our moſt near relations, and becomes fruitful, abounding

Ver. 25. [m] Ὁ ἐχθρὸς ἔσπειρε ζιζάνια ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ σίτου, The enemy sowed tares in the midst of the wheat.] Hence some collect, that even these tares must be members of the Church of Christ, as well as the good seed; which if it only signify, they by profession may be so, is in itself true; but if it be designed to prove, that they are true members of that body, of which Christ Jesus is the head, that cannot follow from these words; For (1.) Our Saviour saith expressly, the field is not the Church, but the world; (2.) The seed sown in this field by Christ is good seed, the children of the kingdom, ver. 38. the just, ver. 43. they therefore only can belong to him, because they only are sown by him; the tares were sown in it by the envious man, that is the Devil, ver. 28. the enemy of Christ, and of his Church, ver. 25. they are sown while the overseers of the Church were asleep, and are expressly called, the children of the Devil, ver. 38. And is it reasonable to conceive, that the Devil, the great enemy of the Church, and of its Head, should beget members of his Church, since there is no communion betwixt Christ and Belial, 2 Cor. 6. 15. or that the Devil's children should be the members of Christ's body?

Ver. 28, 29. [n] Θέλεις οὖν ἀπελθόντες συλλέξωμεν αὐτά; ὁ δὲ ἔφη, Οὔ. Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? and he said, Nay.] Vain hence is the collection of the Erastians, that the wicked, and those that cause offences, are not by excommunication to be excluded from the communion of the Church, seeing the field in which these tares spring up is not the Church, but the world; and Christ in the reddition of the parable takes no notice of this question, or of the answer to it. Nor doth this place prove, that the Magistrate may not cut off evil doers, seeing this was not spoken to them, but to the ministers of Christ's Church.

Ver. 32. [o] Ὃ μικρότερον μέν ἐστι πάντων τῶν σπερμάτων, Which is the least of all seeds, but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs.] The Jews give a wonderful account of the growth and increase of this seed, viz. There was a stalk of mustard-seed in Siehin, from which sprang out three boughs, of which one was broke off, and covered the tent of a potter, and produced three cabs of mustard; R. Simeon, B. Calipha said, A stalk of mustard-seed was in my field, into which I was wont to climb, as men do into a fig-tree, Buxtorf. in voce Chardal. See Additions N° 18.

Ver. 35. [p] Ὅπως πληρωθῇ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ τοῦ προφήτου, That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Prophet, saying, I will open my mouth in parables, Psal. 78. 2.] Here Mr. Cler. notes from St. Jerom on this place, that he had read in some copies, quod dictum est per Prophetam Esaiam, which was spoken by the Prophet Esaiah; and because no such thing was found in that Prophet, I believe, saith he, it was taken away by some prudent man; but I am apt to think that it was first written per Asam Prophetam, the 77th Psalm being intitled, A Psalm of the Prophet Asaph; and that the first transcriber, not understanding what was meant by Asaph, thinking it a mistake in the writer, corrected it, by putting in the word Isaiah; and that in his notes on the 78th Psalm, he saith, This was objected by Porphyry against the Evangelist St. Matthew, that he was so ignorant as to say, quod scriptum est per Isaiam, which was written by Isaiah; but yet he is forced to confess, that in all the ancient copies there are no footsteps to be found, of the reading which St. Jerom speaks of; neither Chrysostom, Theophylact, nor any of the ancient fathers, except Jerom, make any mention of it; it is not extant in any of the ancient versions, nor saith St. Jerom any thing of Porphyry, in his genuine work upon St. Matthew. And this I think sufficient to justify our reading against some single corrupt Latin copy, in which St. Jerom, if we may believe him, found it otherwise. The sense therefore may be this, Our Saviour spake in parables, that what David, filled with a prophetick spirit, said of himself, might be fulfilled also in that Son of David, of which he was a type. For he being our great lawgiver, might more truly say, Hear my law, O my people.

Ver. 40. [q] Ὥσπερ οὖν συλλέγεται τὰ ζιζάνια καὶ πυρὶ καίεται, οὕτως ἔσται ἐν τῇ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου. As therefore tares are gathered together, and burnt in the fire, so shall it be in the end of the world.] From this, as well as other places, it seems probable, that the wicked shall not be cast into everlasting fire till the end of the world, that being the time when Christ will place the goats on his left hand, and say unto them, Depart from me, ye wicked, into everlasting fire, Matth. 25. 41. And when those whose names are not in the book of life, are to be cast into the lake of fire, Rev. 20. 15. See the Note on 2 Tim. 4. 8. See Additions N° 19.

Ver. 47. [r] The kingdom of heaven is like to a net, &c] Because this net contains both good and bad fish; hence some conclude, that bad men are members of that Church, which is Christ's body, as well as good: But (1.) It is neither the Church visible nor invisible, but διδασκαλία τῶν ἁλιέων τοῦ δόλου, the doctrine of the Apostles, made by Christ fishers of men, which which is here compared to a net. So Theophylact. (2.) Theſe bad fiſh are no ſooner pulled unto the ſhore, but the fiſhermen ſit down, and caſt them away, and thereby ſhew they belonged not to this kingdom. Moreover, the ſcope of this parable is not to ſhew, who do at preſent belong to Chriſt's kingdom, but who hereafter ſhall be excluded from the kingdom of heaven.

Ver. 55. Καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, &c. And are not his brethren James and Joſes, and Simon and Judas?] It is now paſſed into a matter of faith, that the Virgin Mary was ἀεὶ παρθένος, ever a virgin, and hath been ſtiled an hereſy to hold the contrary; whereas I know not how it conſiſts with good divinity to make that an article of divine faith, which is founded on no divine revelation; or with our ſixth article, to make that neceſſary to be believed, which confeſſedly is not contained in Holy Scripture. (e) St. Baſil plainly diſtinguiſhes it from things neceſſary to be believed, and leaves it among the things not curiouſly to be enquired into, as his words plainly intimate. And though (f) Origen ſaith, That they who ſay ſhe after married, do not prove it, and that the Virgin had no other ſon but Jeſus, κατὰ τοὺς ὑγιῶς περὶ αὐτῆς δοξάσαντας, according to thoſe, who thought ſoundly of her, yet he lays no brand upon the contrary opinion. However it is certain that theſe words do not prove that Mary, the mother of our Lord, had any offſpring; but ſay all the ancients, before St. Jerom, they were the children of Joſeph, by a former wife, which died before his eſpouſal to the Bleſſed Virgin. St. Jerom attempts to prove, that James and Joſes here mentioned were not the children of the Virgin mother, but of her ſiſter, Mary the wife of Cleophas; for John 19. 25. we read thus, There ſtood by the croſs of Jeſus his mother and his mother's ſiſter, Mary, the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. There were there, ſaith Matthew, Chap. 27. 56. and Mark, Chap. 15. 40. Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the Leſs, and of Joſes; whence he concludes, that James and Joſes, ſtiled here the brethren of our Lord, were not the ſons of Mary his mother, but of her ſiſter, Mary the wife of Cleophas; and hence infers, that they are only called his brethren, according to the language of the Jews, as Lot is called Abraham's brother, Gen. 13. 8. as being the ſon of his brother, Gen. 12. 5. and as the word brother is uſed, Gen. 29. 12. Lev. 10. 4. i. e. becauſe they were his couſin-germans. But this will not neceſſarily follow; for they might be the ſons of Joſeph by the wife of Cleophas, who, ſaith Theophylact, dying without iſſue, Joſeph, according to the law, took her to himſelf, and of her begat James and Joſes, Simon and Judas. But Antonius de Dominis, in a very accurate diſcourſe upon this queſtion, gives us a better anſwer to this argument of St. Jerom, by ſaying, The mother of Jeſus in St. John, is the ſame perſon with the mother of James and Joſes in St. Matthew and St. Mark; and that Mary, the wife of Cleophas, called by St. Mark, Salome, and by St. John, the ſiſter of the mother of our Lord, was the mother of the ſons of Zebedee; for, ſaith he, it ſeems evident, that the three women, named by the three evangeliſts, were in all of them the ſame perſons; as therefore, Mary Magdalen is the ſame, ſo Mary the mother of the ſons of Zebedee, and Salome, ſo called by St. Mark from her family, and the ſiſter of the mother of our Lord, muſt be the ſame; and then, Mary, the mother of our Lord, and the mother, i. e. ſtep-mother of James and Joſes, muſt be the ſame alſo. And this anſwer I like beſt, (1.) Becauſe it retains the proper ſignification of the word brethren, which is always retained both in the Old and the New Teſtament, when there is profeſſedly an enumeration of brethren. (2.) Becauſe it ſeems plain, that the Jews ſpeak ſtill of his brethren and ſiſters, even in the ordinary ſenſe of the word, even as they eſteemed him the carpenter's ſon, and Mary his mother. So here, and Chap. 12. 46. Mark 6. 3. John 6. 42. And James here mentioned, is by (g) Joſephus expreſly ſtiled, ἀδελφὸς Ἰησοῦ, the brother of Jeſus, called the Chriſt. (3.) They ſeem alſo to have lived with his mother; whence we find them ſo oft together, as when it is ſaid, Thy mother and brethren ſeek thee, Matth. 12. 46. His mother and brethren, are they not here with us? i. e. do they not dwell at Capernaum? He went down to Capernaum, and his mother and his brethren, John 2. 12. (4.) This agrees beſt with antiquity; for Dr. Pearſon confeſſeth, This was always the concurrent judgment of antiquity till St. Jerom's time; that theſe were indeed the brethren of our Lord: And Spalatenſis ſhews, That many of the Fathers embraced the opinion, that the mother of our Lord in St. John, was the ſame perſon whom St. Matthew ſtiles the mother of James. De Repub. Eccleſ. l. 2. c. 2. p. 114, 115, 116, 117.

CHAP. XIV.

1. AT that time (that Chriſt had ſent out his diſciples, to preach the Goſpel, to caſt out devils, and to heal diſeaſes, and they by virtue of his name had been ſucceſsful in that work, and thereby ſpread his name abroad, Mark 6. 12, 13, 14. Luke 9. 6, 7.) Herod the Tetrarch (of Galilee, Luke 3. 1.) [a] heard of the fame of Jeſus.

2. And (after ſome heſitation and enquiry, Luke 9. 7, 8.) he ſaid to his ſervants, (I incline to their opinion, who ſay,) [b] This is John the Baptiſt, [c] he is riſen from the dead; and therefore, (though before he did no miracle, John 10. 41. now) mighty works do ſhew forth themſelves in him, (to clear his innocence, and confirm his miſſion.)

3. (And he had cauſe to be thus anxious and perplexed at this matter;) For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him (with a chain,) and put him in priſon [d] for Herodias ſake, his brother Philip's wife, (who having agreed with Herod to divorce herſelf from her own husband, at Herod's return from Rome, was married to him, and cohabited with him as his wife, Mark 6. 17. Joſeph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 7. p. 626. C.)

4. For, (ſhe was thus incenſed againſt him becauſe) John (had) ſaid to him, It is not lawful for thee to have her (as thy wife.)

5. [e] And when (at the inſtigation of Herodias) he would have put him to death, (he could not think fit to do ſo, for) he feared the multitude, becauſe they counted him [f] as a Prophet.

6. But when Herod's birth-day was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced before them (that were preſent,) and (her dancing) pleaſed Herod.

7. Whereupon he promiſed with an oath, to give her whatſoever ſhe would aſk, (even to the half of his kingdom, Mark 6. 23.)

8. And ſhe, being [g] before, (ſhe asked any thing,) inſtructed of her mother, ſaid, Give me here John Baptiſt's head in a charger.

9. And the king was ſorry, (that ſhe aſked a thing ſo ungrateful to the people, ſo unagreeable to his birth-day, and ſo dangerous to himſelf;) nevertheleſs, for the oath's ſake, (which he had made,) and (for the ſake of) them which ſat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her, (i. e. that it ſhould be given to her.)

10. And (accordingly) he ſent (an executioner, Mark 6. 27. and he went,) and beheaded John in the priſon.

11. And his [h] head was brought in a charger, and given to the damſel, and ſhe brought it to her mother.

12. And his diſciples came, and took up the body (of the Baptiſt,) and buried it, and went and told Jeſus (what had happened to him.)

13. When Jeſus heard (of this, and the account which his Apoſtles ſent forth by him, Chap. 10. 5. gave of all that they had done and taught, Mark 6. 30. Luke 9. 10.) [i] he departed (with them) thence by ſhip, into a deſart place, apart (from the multitude, which came ſo continually to them, that they had not time to eat, Mark 6. 31.) and when the people had heard (thereof, or whither he was gone, viz. to the deſart of Bethſaida, Luke 9. 10.) they (took a compaſs by land, and) followed him on foot out of the cities; (ſeeing the ſigns that he had done, John 6. 2. and they got before him to the place where he was to land, Mark 6. 33.)

14. And Jeſus went forth (out of the ſhip unto a mountain, and there ſat with his diſciples, John 6. 3.) and ſaw a great multitude (come to the place,) and he was moved with compaſſion toward them, (and ſpake unto them of the kingdom of God, Luke 9. 11.) and he healed their ſick.

15. And when it was evening, (after that Chriſt had enquired of Philip, making trial of his faith, for that was done when Jeſus ſaw the multitude, John 6. 5.) his diſciples came (together, Luke 9. 12.) to him, ſaying, This is a deſart place, (where no victuals are to be had,) and [k] the time is now paſt, (or, the day is ſpent;) ſend the multitude away, that they may go into the villages and buy themſelves victuals.

16. But Jeſus ſaid unto them, they need not depart (to buy victuals;) give ye them to eat, (having learned of Andrew what meat was there, John 6. 9.)

17. And they ſay unto him, (Shall we go then and buy two hundred pennyworth, (i. e. Six pound five ſhillings worth) of bread for them to eat? He ſaith unto them, How many loaves have you here? And they, upon enquiry, ſay,) We have here but five (barley) loaves, and two (ſmall) fiſhes. (And what are they among ſo many? John 6. 9.)

18. And he ſaid, Bring them hither to me.

19. And he commanded (his diſciples, Mark 6. 39. to make) the multitude to ſit down upon the graſs, (by hundreds and fifties in a company, Luke 9. 14. Mark 6. 39, 40.) and (when they were thus ſat down, he) took the five loaves, and the two fiſhes, and looking up to heaven, [l] he bleſſed, (or gave thanks to God for them,) and brake (the loaves, Mark 6. 41.) and gave the loaves (thus broken) to his diſciples, and the diſciples (gave them) to the multitude; (and the two fiſhes divided he among them all.)

20. And they did all eat, and were filled; and, (when our Lord had ſaid to his diſciples, Gather up the remaining fragments, that nothing be loſt, John 6. 12.) they took up of the fragments that remained, twelve baſkets full.

21. And they that had eaten (of the five loaves, and two ſmall fiſhes,) were about five thouſand men, beſides women and children.

22. And ſtraightway Jeſus (knowing that the multitudes deſigned to make him a King, John 6. 15. and that this might be pleaſing to his diſciples,) conſtrained his diſciples to get into a ſhip, and to go before him unto (Capernaum on) the other ſide (Bethſaida) while he ſent the multitudes away.

23. And when he had ſent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain apart to pray; and [m] when the evening was come, he was there alone.

24. But the ſhip was now in the midſt of the ſea, toſſed with waves, for the wind was contrary;

25. [n] And in the fourth watch of the night, Jeſus (ſeeing them toiling in rowing, Mark 6. 48.) went unto them, walking on the ſea, (and ſeemed willing to have paſſed by them;)

26. And when the diſciples ſaw him walking on the ſea, (not perfectly diſcerning in the twilight who he was,) they were troubled, ſaying, It is [o] a ſpirit, (or an apparition) and they cried out for fear.

27. But ſtraightway Jeſus ſpake unto them, ſaying, Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid.

28. And Peter anſwered him, and ſaid, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come to thee upon the water, (for having thy commiſſion, I believe I may ſafely do it;)

29. And he ſaid (unto him,) Come; and when Peter was come down out of the ſhip, he walked on the water to go to Jeſus;

30. But when (his mind diverting him from the conſideration of Chriſt's power) he ſaw the winds boiſterous, (attending to them) he was afraid, and beginning to ſink, he cried out (to Jeſus,) ſaying, Lord, ſave me.

31. And immediately Jeſus ſtretched forth his hand, and caught him, and ſaid unto him, [p] Oh thou of little faith, wherefore didſt thou doubt?

32. And when they (Chriſt and Peter) were come into the ſhip, the wind ceaſed, (and the ſhip was preſently at the land whither they went, John 6. 21.)

33. Then they that were in the ſhip came and worſhipped him, ſaying, [q] Of a truth thou art the Son of God.

34. And when they were gone over, (the ſea of Galilee from Bethſaida back to Capernaum, John 6. 17.) they came into the land of Genneſaret. (See the Note on Ver 22.)

35. And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, (he having been with them before, Luke 5. 1.) they ſent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diſeaſed;

36. [r] And beſought him, that they might only touch the hem of his garment; and as many as touched (it,) were made perfectly whole.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XIV.

Ver. 1. [a] Heard of the fame of Jeſus.] Interpreters here enquire, why he heard not of the fame of Jeſus ſooner, and ſay, the reaſon might be this; Becauſe he was at Rome at the beginning of our Saviour's preaching, and when he wrought his former miracles; but the true reaſon why Herod then began to take notice of the fame of Jeſus, ſeems rather to be this, That now theſe miracles were wrought, not only by himſelf in perſon, but by others in his name.

Ver. 2. [b] Οὗτος ἐστὶν Ἰωάννης, This is John the Baptiſt:] So St. Matthew and St. Mark, but St. Luke ſaith, he was perplexed, διηπόρει, he doubted, he enquired, becauſe it was ſaid of ſome, that John was riſen from the dead, and ſpake of that to his ſervants as the moſt probable opinion, deſiring notwithſtanding to ſee him, Luke 9. 9. that ſo he might more perfectly diſcern, whether he was John, or not.

Ibid. [c] Ἠγέρθη, He is riſen from the dead.] Hence it appears, that this was ſaid by Herod, and ſome others, not from any belief of the Pythagorean Metempſychoſis, or tranſition of ſouls from one body to another, after the death of the firſt body; for this cannot be called in any propriety of ſpeech, a reſurrection of the body; nor could the ſoul of John now dead, enter into the body of Chriſt, which had for thirty years been informed with another ſoul. Neither the Jews nor the philoſophers ever maintained any ſuch tranſition of ſouls. This therefore muſt be underſtood of the ἀναζίωσις, or reviviſcence of the Baptiſt, whom all the Jews accounted as a Prophet, ver. 5. it being the opinion of the Jews, that ſome of their Prophets ſhould ariſe at the coming of the Meſſiah; and it ſeemed leſs wonderful to them, that they who raiſed others, whilſt they lived, as did Elias and Eliſha, and whoſe dead bones revived a dead corps, 2 Kings 13. 21. ſhould do ſo.

Ver. 3. [d] For Herodias sake, his brother Philip's wife.] That Josephus here differs from the Evangelists, making Herodias the wife, not of his brother Philip, but of another brother named Herod, ought not to make us doubt the truth of what St. Matthew here, St. Mark, Ch. 6. 17. and St. Luke Ch. 3. 19. unanimously assert, touching a matter so well known, when they writ that they could not be ignorant of it; especially if we consider that the (a) Jewish Chronicles and Gorionides agree with the Evangelists; for Gorionides saith, Herodias was first married to Philip, and then taken away from him by Herod Antipas. The old (b) Hebrew Chronicle saith, Uxorem fratris sui Philippi, ipso vivente, junxit sibi matrimonio, quæ liberos ex fratre ejus susceperat; & tamen is eam duxit uxorem: And an (c) old Chronicle of the second temple, saith, Antipas Philippi fratris sui uxorem accepit, ex qua ille liberos ante genuerat; i. e. Antipas married the wife of his brother Philip, he being yet living, and having had children by her. See additions, No. 20. Which agrees with what (d) Josephus saith of his other Herod, Ἡρωδίας ἡ ἐπὶ συσχόντι ἐγγήσασα τῷ πατρίῳ, Ἡρώδῃ γαμῇ, τῷ ἀνδρὸς ὁμοπατρίου ἀδελφῷ, διαστᾶσα ζώντος, Herodias, in contempt of the laws of her country, married again to Herod, the natural brother of her husband, separating herself from him whilst living, and having had a child by her; she therefore was guilty both of incest and adultery, by the law of Moses, in thus agreeing, μεταστήσασθαι πρὸς αὐτὸν, to divorce herself from her former husband yet living, and to marry to Herod Antipas; and therefore the Baptist might well say to him, It is not lawful for thee to have her for thy wife.

Ver. 5. [e] Καὶ θέλων αὐτὸν ἀποκτεῖναι, And when he would have put him to death.] To reconcile this with Mark 6. 19. where it is said that Herodias would have put him to death, but could not prevail with Herod so to do; it may be said Herod was willing enough to do it, but was with-held from the action, partly out of fear of the people, and partly by the checks of his conscience, as knowing John to be a just and holy man, whose death might therefore be avenged on him by a righteous God, as the Jews, saith (e) Josephus, thought it was, by the destruction of his army.

Ibid. [f] Ὡς Προφήτην, i. e. for a Prophet.] This being, as the ancients note, Ὡς, οὐχ ὁμοιώσεως, ἀλλὰ βεβαιώσεως, not of similitude, but of confirmation: So Neh. 7. 2. Αὐτὸς ὡς ἀνὴρ ἀληθὴς, He was a true man, and one that feared the Lord. See the Note on Rom. 9. 32.

Ver. 8. [g] Προβιβασθεῖσα, Before admonished.] i. e. before she asked any thing, but not before the offer made by Herod; for St. Mark, who relates this whole story more fully, in many other circumstances says, That upon it she went out, and said to her mother, What shall I ask? and came in again by her instruction, to ask the head of the Baptist.

Ver. 11. [h] And his head was brought, &c.] Note here, that very remarkable seems the providence of God, in avenging the death of this holy man, upon Herod, Herodias, and her daughter: For,

1*st*, As the war betwixt Herod and Aretas, King of Petrea, was caused by Herod's wicked contract with Herodias, to reject the daughter of Aretas, his lawful wife, and to marry with Herodias, his brother Philip's wife; so Josephus declares, that the Jews looked upon the putting John to death, as the cause of the miscarriage of Herod's army, (f) God being angry with him for the death of John the Baptist.

2*dly*, Herodias envying the glory of King Agrippa, who had that honour given him by Caius, prevailed with her husband to go to Rome, and accuse Agrippa: whereupon Caius deprived Herod of his government, and her of her money, and gave both to Agrippa, banishing Herod and Herodias to Lyons in France; which, saith (g) Josephus, was done in punishment of her envy, and of his readiness to hearken to her solicitations. And,

3*dly*, Of her daughter it is related, that she going over the ice in winter, the ice brake, and she slipt in to the head, which at last was severed from her body by the sharpness of the ice, idque non sine Dei numine, God requiring her head for that of the Baptist's, she desired; which if true, was a wonderful providence.

Ver. 13. [i] Ἀνεχώρησεν ἐκεῖθεν, He departed thence into a desart place,] to avoid the fury of Herod, say interpreters; teaching us, by his example, to avoid dangers by all lawful means. See Chap. 12. 15. But there seems no reason in the context, why he should be afraid of Herod, who had done nothing to incense him; it therefore seems more probable, from the collation of these words with those in St. Mark, that he went to this desart to give some respite and refreshment to his wearied disciples.

Ver. 15. [k] Ἡ ὥρα ἤδη παρῆλθεν, The day is now ſpent.] Ὥρα, both in Greek and Latin, ſignifies a day; ſo the Greek word often ſignifies, eſpecially among the Phyſicians; ſo Galen, l. 7. c. 2. ψύχον ὥραν μίαν, they are chill an hour, is preſently interpreted ὁπὶ ἡμέραν μίαν, for one day; ſo in (h) Virgil, Nunquam te craſtina fallet hora, i. e. dies poſtera. So hora ultima, hora mortis, is the day of death.

Ver. 19. [l] Εὐλόγησε, He bleſſed.] Here it is diſputed, whether Jeſus, by this benediction multiplied the loaves and fiſhes by a miraculous power; or, whether he gave thanks to God for them: That Chriſt multiplied the bread and fiſhes by a miraculous power, all allow; but the queſtion is, whether this be intended by the word εὐλόγησε, he bleſſed; or whether the import of this word be this, he gave thanks to God for them: That it is the latter, will be evident from theſe conſiderations, (1.) That what is here εὐλόγησε, he bleſſed, is in St. John, εὐχαριστήσας ἔδωκε, giving thanks, he gave the bread: And what is in this Chapter, εὐλόγησε, he bleſſed, is in the following Chapter in the like caſe, taking the ſeven loaves and two fiſhes, εὐχαριστήσας giving thanks, he brake and gave to his diſciples, ver. 36. and ſo, in like manner, in St. Mark, Chap. 8. 6. (2.) That Chriſt bleſſed, looking up to heaven, which is an indication, that this action was directed not to the bread, but to his heavenly Father. (3.) In the inſtitution of the Lord's ſupper, that which in St. Matthew and St. Mark, is εὐλογήσας, he bleſſing, brake the bread, is in St. Luke and St. Paul, εὐχαριστήσας, giving thanks, he brake it. See Matth. 26. 26. Mark 14. 22. Luke 22. 19. 1 Cor. 11. 24. Yea, both St. Matthew, Chap. 26. 27. and St. Mark, Chap. 14. 23. ſpeaking of the cup, ſay, εὐχαριστήσας, that Chriſt giving thanks, gave it to them; which ſhews, that εὐλογεῖν and εὐχαριστεῖν, to bleſs, and to give thanks, are in ſenſe the ſame thing. And whereas it is objected, that St. Luke plainly refers this benediction to the bread, by ſaying, εὐλόγησεν αὐτοὺς, he bleſſed them, Luke 9. 16. it may be anſwered, that in ſome ancient MSS. the words run thus, εὐλόγησεν ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, he bleſſed over the loaves; which agrees well with the ſenſe given of the words. (2.) That this is an elliptical form of ſpeech, to be ſupplied thus, εὐλόγησε Θεὸν ἐπ' αὐτῷ, he bleſſed God over them; it being familiar both with the Greeks and Hebrews, to put εὐλογεῖν τίνα, for εὐλογεῖν Θεὸν ὁπὶ τινὸς, to bleſs a thing, for bleſſing God over it. So 1 Sam. 9. 13. εὐλογεῖν θυσίαν, to bleſs the ſacrifice, is to give thanks to God for the peace-offering before they dined upon it. So 1 Cor. 10. 16. the cup of bleſſing, ὁ εὐλογοῦμεν, which we bleſs, is the cup for which we give thanks, according to the cuſtom of the Jews, with whom the Beracoth, or the benediction of the bread, is conceived in theſe words, Bleſſed art thou, O Lord our God, the King of the world, who produceſt bread out of the earth; the benediction of the wine runs thus, Bleſſed art thou, O Lord, the King of the world, who createſt the fruit of the vine; and ſo in the benediction of their table and of their fruits. See Buxtorf. de cœna domini. § 46. and 74 de Synag. Jud. 12. p. 254, 255. Laſtly this is confirmed by theſe words of St. John, Chap. 6. 23. Other ſhips came by the place where they had eaten bread, εὐχαριστήσαντος τοῦ Κυρίου, the Lord having given thanks.

Ver. 23. [m] Ὀψίας δὲ γενομένης, the evening being come.] We learn from this and other places, that the word evening ſometimes imports the time from the declining of the ſun, ſometimes the time beginning at ſun-ſetting, or when it began to be dark; the one was called δείλη πρωΐα, or the firſt evening, ſay (i) Euſtachius and Phavorinus, the other, ſera veſpera, or the latter evening, when the ſun is ſetting. So thou ſhalt kill the paſſover between the two evenings, Exod 12. 6. About the going down of the ſun, Deut. 16. 6. So Joſhua 10. 26. They hanged upon the trees until the evening, and v. 27, at the time of the going down of the ſun they took them down; at the firſt of theſe evenings the diſciples deſire Jeſus to diſmiſs the multitude, for the day was declining, ἤρξατο κλίνειν, it began to decline, Luke 9. 12. or dinner-time was paſt; in the ſecond of them Jeſus is left alone, and his diſciples were got to ſea. How Chriſt's praying is conſiſtent with his Deity, ſee Note on John 11. 41, 42.

Ver. 25. [n] In the fourth watch of the night.] Which are thus numbered, at even, at midnight, at cock-crowing, and in the morning, Mark 13. 35. So that it began to be morning before he came to them; hence he both ſaw them toiling from the land, and they him alſo walking on the ſea. Note, that to walk upon the ſea is made the property of God, who alone ſpreadeth the heavens, and treadeth upon the waves of the ſea, Job 9. 8.

Ver. 26. [o] A ſpirit,] That the Jews had then an opinion of hurtful ſpirits walking in the night is evident from the ſeventy, who render, from the peſtilence walking in darkneſs, ἀπὸ πρόσματος πνεύματος διαπορευομένου ἐν σκότει, from the fear of the devils that walk in the night, ἢ ἀπὸ δαιμονίου μεσημβρινοῦ, and

Ver. 31. [p] Ὀλιγόπιστε, O thou of little faith.] Of the indications of this little faith, see the Note on Matth. 6. 30. Christ suffered Peter thus to doubt, say interpreters, that finding by experience the weakness of his faith, he might by prayer and industry endeavour to increase it, and ascribe the whole strength of it to God.

Ver. 33. [q] Ἀληθῶς Θεοῦ υἱὸς εἶ, Thou truly art the Son of God.] Episcopius here expounds this phrase, truly thou art the Messias, or that King, to whom God hath given divine power to help us; for, saith he, it is probable the Apostles then knew nothing of the eternal generation of the Son of God; and true it may be, they had no accurate idea of such an eternal, necessary generation of the Son of God, as the schools mention; nor do I believe, that any of the unbelieving Jews had such a notion of this phrase, and yet we find them accusing our Lord of blasphemy, and making himself equal with God, by saying, that he was the Son of God. Seeing then our Saviour had given so many instances of his omnipotence and divine power by multiplying loaves and fishes so wonderfully, as none could do but he who had power to create; (2.) By walking on the water, and causing the wind instantly to cease; why might not the Apostles from all these evidences conclude that the divinity resided in him? Even the Gergesens seem to have had some such extraordinary opinion of him, when they believed their sick should be healed only by touching the hem of his garment. This, saith Woltzogenius, was an evidence of their belief of a divine power residing in Christ, now where the divine power is, there must be the divinity, and where the power of God is, there is God.

Ver. 36. [r] And besought him that they might only touch the hem, &c. If these were the Gergesens who lay on the other side of the sea of Tiberias, and who formerly desired him to depart out of their coasts, Matth. 8. 34. their faith was thus increased with the fame of Christ's miracles.

CHAP. XV.

1. (WHEN Christ had miraculously fed five thousand, and was gone thence to Capernaum, John 6. 17.) Then came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, (who seeing some of Christ's disciples eat bread with unwashen hands, found fault, Mark 7. 2.) saying,

2. Why do thy disciples [a] transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread; (whereas the Pharisees and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders; and when they come from the market, except they wash they eat not; and many other things there be which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, brazen vessels, and of tables, Mark 7. 3, 4.)

3. But he answered, and said unto them, (I have greater reason to ask) Why do you also (Gr. even ye, who pretend to so much strictness in observing the commandments of men,) transgress the commandment of God by your tradition? (as certainly ye do.)

4. For [b] God commanded, saying, Honour thy father and thy mother, and (also said, Exod. 21. 17.) he that curseth father or mother, let him die the death, (shewing, that the violation of this law deserved death.)

5. But [c] ye (following your vain traditions) say, Whosoever shall say to his father or mother, It is a gift, (let it be no less forbidden to give it to thee, than to give of a thing devoted to God,) by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me,

6. And (having said this,) honoureth not his father and mother, (he doth only that which he ought to do, pronouncing him not only free from, but obliged not to observe this precept, Mark 7. 12.) thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.

7. Ye [d] hypocrites, [e] well did Isaias prophesy of you (by) saying, (that which being spoken of the Jews, and agreeing as much to you of this, as to them of that age, respecteth as well you as them, viz.)

8. This people draweth nigh to me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips, but (yet) their heart is far from me.

9. But in vain they do (think to) worship me, (by) teaching for doctrines the [f] commandments of men, (as doctrines necessary to be observed for acceptance with me.)

10. And (hereupon) he [g] called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear (all ye) and understand:

11. Not that which [h] goeth into the mouth defileth a man, (for there is nothing from without a man, that (by) entering into him can defile him, Mark 7. 15.) but that which (being in the heart) cometh out of the mouth; this (I say) defileth a man. (He that hath ears to hear, let him hear, Mark 7. 16.)

12. Then (he being entred into the house from the people, Mark 7. 17.) came his disciples, and said unto unto him, Knoweſt thou that the Phariſees were [i] offended after they heard this ſaying?

13. But he anſwered and ſaid, [k] Every plant (Gr. nurſery of plants) which my heavenly Father hath not planted, ſhall be rooted up; (theſe blind guides, and uſurpers of that authority over mens conſciences, which they have not received from God, ſhall by him be rooted out.)

14. [l] Let them (therefore) alone (to the divine judgment for) they be blind leaders of the blind; and if the blind lead the blind, they both ſhall (at laſt) fall into the ditch.

15. Then anſwered Peter (and by him the diſciples, Mark 7. 17.) and ſaid unto him, Declare to us (the meaning of) this parable.

16. And Jeſus ſaid, Are ye alſo yet [m] without underſtanding?

17. Do not ye yet underſtand, that whatſoever entreth in at the mouth, goeth into the belly, and is caſt out into the draught, (and ſo cannot defile the man, becauſe it entreth not into the heart, to raiſe up evil motions there, or it affects not the mind? Mark 7. 18, 19.)

18. But thoſe things which [n] proceed out of the mouth, come forth from the heart, and they defile the man, (in the ſight of that God who loveth purity in the inward parts.)

19. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts (or reaſonings) murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, falſe witneſs, blaſphemies, (covetouſneſs, wickedneſs, deceit, laſciviouſneſs, an evil eye, pride, fooliſhneſs, Mark 7. 22.)

20. Theſe are the things which defile a man, but to eat with unwaſhen hands defileth not a man.

21. Then Jeſus went thence, and departed into the coaſts of Tyre and Sidon; (and he entred into an houſe, and would have no man know it, but he could not be hid from them, Mark 7. 24.)

22. And behold a woman of [o] Canaan, (whoſe young daughter had an unclean ſpirit, heard of him, and) came out of the ſame coaſts, (and fell at his feet, Mark 7. 25.) and cried to him, ſaying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David, my daughter is grievouſly vexed with a devil, (I beſeech thee caſt him forth.)

23. But he anſwered her not a word, and his diſciples came and beſought him, ſaying, (grant her requeſt, and ſo) ſend her away, for ſhe (ſtill) crieth after us.

24. But he anſwered and ſaid (to them) [p] I am not ſent but to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, (to preach to, and work miracles firſt among them.)

25. Then came ſhe (the ſecond time) and worſhipped him, ſaying, Lord, help me.

26. But he anſwered and ſaid (to her, let the children firſt be filled, Mark 7. 27. for) [q] it is not meet to take the childrens bread, and to caſt it to dogs.

27. And ſhe ſaid, [r] Truth (Gr. I beſeech thee) Lord, yet (ναὶ γὰρ, for even) the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their maſter's table, (or of the childrens crumbs, Mark 7. 28.)

28. Then Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid unto her, O woman, [s] great is thy faith, be it unto thee, even as thou wilt, (the devil is gone out of thy daughter; and when ſhe was come to her houſe, ſhe found it ſo, Mark 7. 29, 30.) and her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

29. And Jeſus departed from thence, and came nigh to the ſea of Galilee, and went up into a mountain, and ſat down there.

30. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them thoſe that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and caſt them down at the feet of Jeſus, and he healed them.

31. In ſo much that the multitude wondered, when they ſaw the dumb to ſpeak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to ſee, and they glorified the God of Iſrael.

32. Then (the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Mark 8. 1.) Jeſus called his diſciples to him, and ſaid, I have compaſſion on the multitude, becauſe they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat, and I will not ſend them away faſting, leſt they faint in the way, (for ſome of them came from far, Mark 8. 3.)

33. And his diſciples ſay unto him, Whence ſhould we have ſo much bread in the wilderneſs, as to fill ſo great a multitude?

34. And Jeſus ſaith unto them, How many loaves have you? and they ſaid, Seven, and a few little fiſhes.

35. And he commanded the multitude to ſit down on the ground.

36. And he took the ſeven loaves, and the fiſhes, and gave thanks (to God for them,) and brake them, and gave to his diſciples, and the diſciples to the multitude.

37. And they did all eat, and were filled, and they took up of the broken meat that was left, ſeven baſkets full.

38. And they that did eat were four thouſand men, beſide women and children.

39. And he ſent away the multitude, and took ſhip, and came into [t] the coaſts of Magdala, (of Dalmanutha, Mark 8. 10. which was within the bounds of Magdala.)

ANNOTA-

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XV.

Ver. 2. [a] ΔΙΑΤΙ οἱ μαθηταί σου παραβαίνουσι τὴν παράδοσιν τῶν πρεσβυτέρων; Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread.] Of this tradition of the elders, let it be noted,

1*st*, That they held it a thing plainly unlawful, and highly criminal, to eat meat, or common bread, till they had washed their hands; hence do the Pharisees find fault with Christ's disciples, and stile their hands unclean, because they were not washed, Mark 7. 2. Hence doth the Pharisee, who invited Christ to dinner, wonder that he washed not his hands before dinner, Luke 11. 38. For their Canon saith, Whosoever despiseth the washing of hands is worthy to be excommunicated, he comes to poverty, and will be extirpated out of the world. And (a) Buxtorf citeth from their Talmud this expression, that he that eats bread with unwashen hands, does as bad as if he lay with a whore. And they say, Rabbi Eliazer Ben Hazar was excommunicated by the Sanhedrim, because he contemned the washing of hands. And that R. Aquiba being in prison, and not having water enough to drink, and to wash his hands, chose to do the latter, saying, It was better to die with thirst, than transgress the tradition of the elders. Note,

2*dly*, That this washing of hands before meat was not required by any written law of God, and so the neglect of it could not be unlawful by virtue of any divine law, but only as being a transgression of the tradition of the elders; hence Christ ranks it among the traditions of men, ver. 9. And (b) Maimonides saith, that it depended on the words of the scribes; and it is by Christ, speaking to the Pharisees, called your tradition, ver. 3. 6. And yet they held it as a thing necessary, because, say they, (c) The words of the scribes are lovely above the words of the law, and more weighty than the words of the law, or the Prophets.

3*dly*, They placed a great piece of religion and sanctity in washing thus their hands, and looked upon them who neglected this as men of a defiled soul. Thus Maimonides saith, "The religi"ous of old did eat their common food in clean-
"ness, and took care to avoid all uncleanness all
"their days, and they were called Pharisees; and "this is a matter of the highest sanctity, and the "way of the highest religion; namely, that a "man separate himself, and go aside from the vul-
"gar, and that he neither touch them, nor eat,
"or drink with them; for such separation con-
"duceth to the purity of the body from evil
"works, the purity of the body conduceth to the "cleansing of the soul from evil affections, and
"the sanctity of the soul conduceth to the like-
"ness of God." Hence they reckon this among the means to obtain eternal life, saying, Whosoever hath his seat in the land of Israel, and eateth his common food in cleanness, and speaks the holy language, and recites his phylacteries, morning and evening, let him be confident that he shall obtain the life of the world to come; and against this our Saviour teacheth, that to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man, because it defileth not the heart. Thus have you seen how the Pharisees taught these commandments of men for doctrines, i. e. things necessary to be believed and done, and parts of God's worship; and so how free the ceremonies of the church of England must be from this guilt, they being reckoned not as necessary, but in themselves things indifferent; not used for sanctification, but only for order and decency; not reckoned as any parts, but only circumstances of worship. See Bishop Sanderson's Sermon on Matth. 15. 9.

Ver. 4. [b] Ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἐνετείλατο, λέγων, τίμα τὸν πατέρα σου, καὶ τὴν μητέρα σου, καὶ ὁ κακολογῶν πατέρα, &c. For God commanded, saying, Honour thy father and thy mother; and he that curseth father or mother, let him die the death.] Here observe,

1*st*, That the commands of Moses are to be received as the commandments of God; for what is here, God commanded, is, Mark 7. 10. Moses commanded.

2*dly*, That to honour parents is, not only to reverence them, but to afford them all the necessaries of this present life, according to that of the Jerusalem Targum on Deut. 15. 4. Honorare est viaticum providere, To honour, is to make provisions for them. And, according to the Jewish Canons, a son is bound to afford his father, meat, drink, and cloaths, to cover him, to lead him in and out, and to wash his hands, face, and feet. And according to (d) Hierocles, he is to honour them, σωμάτων ὑπηρεσίᾳ, καὶ χρημάτων χορηγίᾳ, with the service of his body, and his goods; and this, saith he, justice required him to do readily and bountifully. (e) Philo declares, that παίδων ἴδιον, οὐδὲν ὃ μὴ γονέων ὄντων, children have nothing which is not their parents, as having either received it from them, or having received from them them the faculties by which they procure it, that therefore they can never recompenſe them, and are both inhuman and ungodly, if they neglect to ſuccour them; and that the very heathens taught the ſame: And that this is the frequent import of the word τίμη; ſee Note on 1 Tim. 5. 3, 8.

3*dly*, That which we render curſeth, is in the Greek κακολογῶν, to ſlight, contemn, or ſet light by father or mother. So Ezek. 22. 7. Πατέρα καὶ μητέρα ἐκακολόσαν, they ſet light by father and mother; and that death ſhould be the puniſhment of thoſe who abuſed their parents, is ſuitable to the laws of heathens, ὁ ὑβρίζων τὸν αὐτὸς πατέρα μὴ μητέρων ἢ ἀτίας, That he who reviled his father, ſhould not live. Sopater ad Hermogenem.

Ver. 5. c Ὑμεῖς δὲ λέγετε ὃς ἂν εἴπῃ τῷ πατρὶ ἢ τῇ μητρὶ, Δῶρον ὃ ἐὰν ἐξ ἐμοῦ ὀφεληθῇς· But ye ſay, Whoſoever ſhall ſay to his father or mother, It is a gift by which thou mayſt be profited by me, &c.] This phraſe Δῶρον or Corban doth not import, that he who ſaid this had conſecrated his goods to ſacred uſes, or obliged himſelf to do ſo, but only that he had, according to the doctrine of the ſcribes, by vow obliged himſelf not to give any thing to him, to whom he thus ſpake; for Δῶρον ἔστω is the ſame with קרבן among the Jews, which ſignifies a thing forbidden, and ſo imports, it is no leſs forbidden to give thee any thing of this, than if it were a Corban, or a thing conſecrated to God. So (e) Maimonides ſaith, Sit mihi Corban iſta maſſa panis, i. e. Let it be as much forbidden as what is conſecrated; let that maſs of bread be to thee a ſacred thing. So that whoſoever ſaid, Let it be Corban, whereby I may be profitable to thee; they, by their theology, declared him bound by a vow not to relieve him, to whom he had ſaid thus, though he was his father, unleſs they would abſolve him from his vow: And by thus not ſuffering him to do any thing to his needy parents, by reaſon of this raſh and wicked vow, they made the commandment of God void, and ſuffered them to ſlight and deſpiſe their parents by their tradition. Note alſo, that the following words running thus, Καὶ οὐ μὴ τιμήσει τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ, καὶ μητέρα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἠκυρώσατε τὸν ἐντολὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ· The whole perhaps may be thus rendered, But ye ſay, Whoſoever ſhall ſay to his father or mother, Let it be a gift by which thou mayeſt be profited by me, he ſhall not then honour his father and his mother; therefore you make void the commandment of God by your tradition, καὶ ſignifying both then and therefore. St. Mark adds ver. 13. Καὶ παρόμοια πολλὰ τοιαῦτα ποιεῖτε, And many ſuch like things do ye. Thus (f) Philo ſpeaks of ſome, ſο καὶ φύσιν ἄμικτοι καὶ ἀκοινώνητοι, unſociable and uncommunicable by nature, or ſo traſported by anger, that ὀργῇ τὴν ἀδιότητα πιστοῦν τῶν ἤθων, they confirm their inhumane manners by an oath, ſaying, that they will not receive ſuch a one to their table, or under their roof, ἢ πάλιν τῷ δεῖνι μὴ παρέξειν ὠφέλειάν τινα, or that they will afford no help to ſuch a one. And Dr. (g) Pocock, ſaith, they have a canon to this effect, Vota cadere in res mandati, That vows reach even to things commanded, or take place as well in things required by the law, as things indifferent; and that a man may be ſo bound by them, as that he cannot, without great ſin, do what God had by his law, required to be done: So that if he made a vow, which laid upon him a neceſſity to violate God's law, that he might obſerve it, his vow muſt ſtand, and the law be abrogated.

Ver. 7. Ὑποκριταὶ, Ye hypocrites.] Our Lord here and elſewhere calls the Phariſees hypocrites, not only becauſe they placed the worſhip of God, and great ſanctity and religion, in ceremonies of human invention, and pretending to a regard to purity and religion, did nothing out of pure reſpect to God's glory, but did all their works to be ſeen of men, Matth. 6. 2. But alſo, becauſe, being ſo ſuperſtitiouſly careful to avoid the outward pollution of the body, by abſtaining from touching any thing that was unclean, and waſhing their hands when they thought they might have done it, and even their pots, and cups, and beds; they left that which was within, viz. their hearts full of hypocriſy and iniquity, uncleanneſs, extortion and exceſs, Matth. 23. 25, 26, 27. Luke 11. 39. Only here note, that we muſt not be forward from Chriſt's example to pronounce men hypocrites, becauſe we have neither that authority nor knowledge of the heart which he had, to authoriſe us ſo to do.

Ver. 9. f Μάτην δὲ σέβονταί με διδάσκοντες διδασκαλίας ἐντάλματα ἀνθρώπων· But in vain do they worſhip me, teaching for, or, as doctrines, the commandments of men.] The commandments of men here, are things enjoined by mere human authority, as is plain from theſe words of St. Paul, Col. 2. 22. Touch not, taſte not, handle not, which are all ἐντάλματα ἀνθρώπων, the commandments of men; though they come from their Cochmim, or wiſe men, though they be the traditions of the elders, or governors of the church, ver. 2. though they come from thoſe ſcribes and Phariſees, which ſat in the chair of Moſes, Matth. 23. 2. Yet, without a divine inſtitution, they are only the commandments of men. To teach theſe these commandments of men as doctrines, is to enjoin them, or impose them on the consciences of others, as things necessary, or things to be observed for their goodness; as the Pharisees did this washing of hands, counting those sinful and defiled who neglected so to do; and as parts of God's worship, for otherwise they could not strictly and properly be said to worship God in vain, by teaching and observing these things. Seeing then it is certain that the Romanists have many ecclesiastical constitutions, in which they place great sanctity, and which they judge as necessary to be observed, and that as parts of religious worship, which yet are only the traditions of their elders, or of those who sit in St. Peter's chair, as did the scribes and Pharisees in that of Moses, and which do also make void the commandments of God; as doth the doctrine of the worship of images, communion in one kind, and prayer in an unknown tongue; in vain must they also worship God, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

Ver. 10. Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος τὸν ὄχλον· And calling the multitude, he said unto them all, Hear, and understand.] From these words spoken to all the multitude, and the words, Mark 7. 16. spoken to the same persons, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear, it is evident that, in our Lord's judgment, the whole multitude was capable of understanding those things which the Pharisees did not, and by which the traditions of the scribes, Pharisees and elders, were overthrown; and that for this, nothing more was requisite than ears to hear, or good attention to Christ's sayings. Moreover, if these things parabolically spoken, could, and ought to be understood by the multitude, as from this exhortation to the multitude, and the reproof of Christ's disciples for not apprehending this, is manifest; much more must those things which concern their duty, and are delivered plainly, be easy to be understood by them: And from those words, They are blind guides, and if the blind lead the blind, they will both fall into the ditch, it follows, that sometimes the multitude neither ought, nor can, without their utmost peril, follow the guidance of their ecclesiastical superiors.

Ver. 11. [h] Οὐ τὸ εἰσερχόμενον εἰς τὸ στόμα κοινοῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον· That which goeth into the mouth, polluteth not the man, i. e. by touching him;] i. e. the man is not unclean in God's sight, because such meat or drink hath touched him, and so he needeth not to be washed from that defilement; if it defile at all, it doth it either from the quality, as being by God forbidden, and so the disobedience; or from the quantity, and so the excess defiles: Whence by the rule of contraries, it follows, that nothing can sanctify by being touched, which confounds all worship of reliques; and that nothing by entering into the mouth can make us holy, that is more pure or acceptable in the sight of God; and so the sacramental elements do not sanctify the body, by the touch, but the soul only, by the due disposition of mind with which we receive them, because they go not into the heart, they operate not upon the spirit of man. Christ himself, whilst he was upon earth, made many whole, as to their bodies, by touching them; and many, by virtue of their faith, were healed by touching him; but we read of none whose minds or hearts were sanctified only by touching of his sacred body. Ceremonial and Judaical sanctity sometimes required freedom from touching a polluted body, ὁσιότης δὲ ἀληθείας, Christian holiness is the work only of the spirit, and consists wholly in the renewal of the mind, and of the bent and inclinations of the heart, and so ariseth not from the corporeal, but the spiritual manducation of the sacred elements; and were it otherwise, why would not the sacrament sanctify, as well by being received into the hand, or laid upon the breast, as by being put into the mouth? Or, why should it more sanctify the heart it comes not to, than the draught, through which, even by the confession of the (h) Romanists, it sometimes goes, as in case of a lientery? This doctrine is expressly taught by (i) Origen, in these words: Τὸ ἁγιαζόμενον διὰ λόγου Θεοῦ, καὶ ἐντεύξεως οὐ πρὸς ἴδιον——λέγω ἁγιάζειν τὸν γραμμένον, That which is sanctified by the word of God, and prayer, sanctifies not him that useth it on its own account, for then it would sanctify him that receives it unworthily; nor would any upon that account, be sick, weak, or fall asleep, as St. Paul saith some did, 1 Cor. 11. 30. Καὶ ὅτι τοίνυν τοῦτο Κυρίου ἡ ὠφελία τοῦ χρωμένου ὅταν ἁγιασθῇ τοῦ τε καθαροῦ τῇ σωφρόνησι μιᾶλαμβάνει τοῦ ἄρτου· and so in the receiving the Lord's body, the profit ariseth by receiving the bread with a mind undefiled, and a pure conscience, καὶ τὸ ἁγιαζόμενον βρῶμα διὰ λόγου Θεοῦ καὶ ἐντεύξεως, καθ' αὑτὸ μὲν τὸ ὑλικὸν εἰς τὴν κοιλίαν χωρεῖ, καὶ εἰς ἀφεδρῶνα ἐκβάλλεται, and so the meat, sanctified by the word of God, and prayer, according to its material part, goes into the belly, and is cast out into the draught. And here it is to be wondered, that the learned

Moreover, Can the meer accidents be truly βρῶμα, meat? Are they the bread conſecrated by the word and prayer, or that which may be eaten unworthily? Are they ὕλη τ ἄρτε, the ſubſtance of the bread, or σῶμα τυπικὸν καὶ συμβολικὸν, Chriſt's typical body? Let Huetius ſhew one inſtance from primitive antiquity, where meer accidents are ſo called, or confeſs he wreſts theſe words to a ſenſe of which Origen never thought.

Ver. 12. i Οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἀκούσαντες τ λόγον ἐσκανδαλίσθησαν· The Phariſees hearing this word, were ſcandalized;] i. e. they were induced by it, not to reject their own, but Chriſt's doctrine, and to deny him to be the true Meſſiah: And this ſcandal ſeems to have had its riſe from a falſe opinion which obtained among them, that the meats forbidden them by the law of Moſes, were therefore forbidden; becauſe, as (l) Maimonides ſaith, alimentum habent vitioſum, they yield a vitious or corrupt nouriſhment; or, as (m) Joſephus ſaith, becauſe the things they were permitted to eat, were τὰ μὲ οἰκειωθησόμενα ἡμῖν τ ψυχαῖς, accommodated to, or convenient for their ſouls; but the things forbidden were τὰ ἐναντιωθησόμενα, contrary to them; and they, by eating them, did μιαίνεσθαι, eat that which defiled the ſoul; they therefore were ſcandalized at our Saviour's doctrine, becauſe they judged it contrary to the law. See the Note on Matth. 18. 6.

Ver. 13. k But he anſwered and ſaid, Πᾶσα φυτεία, Every nurſery of plants which my Father hath not planted, ſhall be rooted out;] that is, ſaith Theophylact, Τὰς τ πρεσβυτέρων διδασκαλίας καὶ τὰ Ἰουδαϊκὰ ἐντάλματα λέγει ἐκριζωθῆναι, He ſpeaks of the extirpation of the traditions of the elders, and the Judaical precepts, and this is certainly true of thoſe commandments of men: But the context inclines us to interpret this of the hypocritical ſect of the Phariſees, for they are the perſons ſcandalized, ver. 12. and the blind guides, ver. 14. and therefore are in likelihood the φυτεία, or plantation mentioned in this verſe. Eor tho' I find them in the chair of Moſes, Matth. 23. 2. I find not that they had any divine commiſſion to be teachers of the people; tho' what they or any man truly taught from Moſes, was to be obſerved. Our Saviour ſeems rather to compare them to thieves and robbers, John 10. 1. See the Note there. And whatever might be their firſt inſtitution, they were ſo degenerated from it into blind and pernicious guides, as not to be of God's planting, and therefore to be rooted out. See Additions N° 21.

Ver. 14. l Ἄφες αὐτὸς, Let them alone;] regard not what they ſay, or do, againſt me, or my doctrine, ſeeing they ſay, and do it out of the blindneſs of their minds. Hence obſerve,

1*ſt*, That the ſcandal of wicked and perverſe men, is only ſo to be avoided, as that we do not ceaſe to do our duty, or as to refuſe their pernicious doctrines and deſtructive courſes.

2*dly*, That ſometimes the vulgar are obliged not to believe, or comply with the rules of their eccleſiaſtical ſuperiors, becauſe it is their duty never to follow them into the ditch.

Ver. 16. m Ἀκμὴν καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀσύνετοί ἐστε; Are ye alſo ſtill without underſtanding?] That therefore this parable was not underſtood by them, muſt be aſcribed not to the obſcurity of it, but to the prejudices and ſlowneſs of underſtanding that were in his diſciples.

Ver. 22. o Καὶ ἰδὺ γυνὴ Χαναναία· And behold, a woman of Canaan, Mark 7. 26. γυνὴ ἑλληνὶς καὶ Συροφοινίκισσα, a Gentile of Syrophœnicia.] The ſame perſon who is called one of Canaan in the Hebrew, is in the ſeptuagint a Phœnician. So Exod. 6. 15. we read of Shaul, the ſon of a Canaaniſh woman, ſeventy, Σαὰλ ὁ ἐκ τ Φοινίσσης, Gen. 46. 10. τ Χαναναίτιδος, Exod. 16. 35. they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan, ſeventy, ἐκ μέρους τ Φοινίκης, Joſh. 5. 12. they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan, ἐκαρπίσαντο ἐκ τ χώρας τ Φοινίκης. Now ſeeing (n) Pliny doth inform us, Syria circumfundi Phœnicem, that Phœnicia is comprehended in Syria, the Phœnician woman muſt be a Syrophœnician woman; and Phœnicia being alſo Canaan, (Bochart. Phaleg. l. 4. c. 34, 36.) ſhe muſt be a Canaaniti∫h woman. See the Note of Dr. Hammond here.

Ver. 24. p Οὐκ ἀπεστάλην, I was not ſent but to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael:] By the loſt ſheep of Iſrael, we are to underſtand the whole nation of the Jews, who being as ſheep diſperſed, having no ſhepherd, are therefore called loſt ſheep, Matth. 9. 36.——10. 6. Not vouchſafing her one word of anſwer, becauſe they thought ſuch perſons wholly neglected by God, and unworthy to be regarded by them. And, (2.) calling her dog, according to the common ſaying of the Jews, that the nations of the world were likened to dogs, whereas they were God's ſons and daughters. See the Notes on Luke 15. 1, 2. and on Philip. 3. 2.

Ver. 27. r Ἡ δὲ εἶπε, ναὶ, Κύριε· But ſhe ſaid, I beſeech thee, Lord.] The word ναὶ, as the Hebrew נא, imports beſeeching, as they ſay; nay, is it not put, but in the way of petition; ſo Gen. 18. 30, 32. I pray thee, let not my Lord be angry, Gen. 19. 7. אל נא, I pray you, brethren, do not ſo wickedly, Num. 12. 13. נא רפא לה I pray thee, heal her, Philem. 20. ναὶ ἀδελφὲ, I pray thee, brother: So alſo it is uſed in profane authors: So (o) Ariſtophanes, ναὶ πρὸς τῶν θεῶν, I pray thee by the gods; ſo (p) Euripides, ναὶ πρὸς σῆς τῆς δεξίας ἐυωλένου, I pray thee by that fair right hand.

Ver. 28. s Μεγάλη σου ἡ πίστις· Great is thy faith:] That having no promiſe to rely upon, and ſuffering ſo many repulſes with ſuch ſeeming contempt, thou ſtill retaineſt a good hope of my kindneſs and mercy, great is thy faith. The faith of thoſe who firmly rely upon God's promiſe, and are not by great temptations and afflictions moved from their confidence, is praiſeworthy; but highly excellent is their faith, who depending only on his goodneſs, do place an humble confidence in God: Whence we may learn, that the faith of the Gentiles is not only pleaſing to God, but ſometimes more excellent than that of thoſe to whom the promiſes belong, viz. when upon a leſſer motive it brings forth equal fruits.

CHAP. XVI.

1. THE Phariſees alſo with the Sadducees came, (Gr. and the Phariſees and Sadducees coming) and [a] tempting (him) deſired him that (Gr. they tempting him, deſired that) he would ſhew them a ſign from heaven.

2. He anſwered, and (Gr. but he anſwering) ſaid unto them, When it is evening, ye ſay it will be fair weather, for the ſky is red, (and bright without clouds.)

3. And in the morning (ye ſay) it will be foul weather to day, for the ſky is red and lowring, (the clouds obſtructing the brightneſs of the ſun.) O ye hypocrites, ye can diſcern the face of the ſky, (have ſkill enough to diſcern what kind of weather it is like to be, by what at preſent ye obſerve in the colour of the ſky,) but can ye not diſcern (can ye not then diſcern) [aa] the ſigns of the times? (Can you not diſcern from the heavenly doctrine which I preach, and the mighty miracles by which I confirm it, the ſign of the Son of man coming among you? it is a ſure ſign of your hypocriſy, that after all this, you are ſtill doubting of it, and requiring farther ſigns to confirm this. I therefore ſay to you, not without grief of ſpirit for your unbelief, Mark 8. 12. that)

4. A wicked and adulterous generation ſeeketh after a ſign, and there ſhall no (farther) ſign be given to it, but the ſign of the Prophet Jonas, (for as his being preſerved three days in the whale's belly, and then caſt out ſafe on the dry land, was a ſign of his being a true Prophet, ſent to preach to Nineveh, and call them to repentance; ſo my being buried three days in the earth, and then riſing up thence, ſhall be to you a ſign that I am alſo a Prophet, ſent from God to call you to repentance,) and (having ſaid this,) he left them, and (going in a ſhip to the other ſide of the ſea, Mark 8. 13. he) departed (from them.)

5. And when his diſciples were come (to him) to the other ſide, they had forgotten to take bread, (having but one loaf with them in the ſhip, Mark 8. 14.)

6. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, [b] Take heed, and beware of the leaven of the Phariſees and of the Sadducees; (i. e. of their doctrines and manners, which ſwell and ſour its diſciples, as leaven doth the bread with which it is mixed.)

7. And they reaſoned among themſelves, ſaying, (he ſpeaks thus to us) becauſe we have taken no bread with us.

8. Which when Jeſus perceived, he ſaid unto them, O ye of little faith, why reaſon ye (thus) among yourſelves, (as if ye were like to famiſh) becauſe ye have brought no bread, (and are bid to beware of the leaven of the Phariſees?)

9. Do ye not yet underſtand, (nor conſider) neither remember the five loaves (which fed the number) of five thouſand, and how many baſkets ye took up? (even twelve.)

10. Neither the ſeven loaves (which fed the number) of four thouſand, and how many baſkets ye took up? (even ſeven; have you your hearts yet hardned? having eyes, ſee ye not, and having ears, hear ye not? Mark 8. 17, 18. If it be otherwiſe,)

11. How is it that ye do not underſtand that I ſpake (this) not to you concerning bread, that ye ſhould beware of the leaven of the Phariſees, and of the Sadducees, (as knowing by theſe inſtances, I cannot be unable to provide bread for myſelf and you, and therefore could not upon that account ſpeak of bread?)

12. Then underſtood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Phariſees and of the Sadducees.

13. When Jeſus came (with his diſciples, Mark 8. 27.) into the coaſts of Cæſarea Philippi, he aſked his diſciples, (being alone with them, Luke 9. 18.) ſaying, [c] Whom do men ſay that I the Son of man am?

14. And they ſaid, Some ſay that thou art [d] John the Baptiſt (riſen from the dead,) ſome (that thou art) Elias, (the forerunner of the Meſſiah,) and others (that thou art) Jeremias, or one of the Prophets; (they thinking none alive holy enough to be a Prophet ſent from God.)

15. He ſaith unto them, But whom ſay ye that I am?

16. And Simon Peter anſwered, and ſaid, Thou art [e] Chriſt, the Son of the living God.

17. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Bleſſed art thou Simon Bar (the ſon of) Jona; for [f] fleſh and blood hath not revealed it (this) unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven; (this faith thou couldſt not learn from the teſtimony of man, but only from divine teſtimony, that of my doctrine and my miracles, which the Father that is in me, enables me to teach and do.)

18. And (as a ſuitable return to this confeſſion,) I ſay alſo unto thee, that thou art (by name) [g] Peter, (that is, a Rock,) and upon (thee who art) this Rock, I will build my church; (laying the firſt foundation of it upon thy preaching to the Jews, Acts 2. 41, 47. and to the Gentiles, Acts 10. 5, 44, 48——15. 7.) and the [h] gates of hell, (i. e. death itſelf) ſhall not prevail againſt it, (ſo as to hinder that reſurrection to eternal life, which I have promiſed to thoſe that believe in my name, John 6. 39, 40, 44, 54.)

19. And I will give unto thee the [i] keys of the kingdom of heaven, (the power of making laws to govern my church) and whatſoever thou (aſſiſted by my ſpirit,) ſhalt bind on earth, ſhall be bound in heaven, and whatſoever thou ſhalt looſe on earth ſhall be looſed in heaven, (i. e. thy doctrine, taught by that ſpirit concerning things required, forbidden, or allowed to Chriſtians, ſhall be confirmed there.)

20. [k] Then charged he his diſciples, that they ſhould tell no man that he was Jeſus the Chriſt, (till after his reſurrection, Chap. 17. 9.)

21. [l] From that time forth (that they might not be ſhaken in this faith, by what ſhould afterwards befal him) began Jeſus to ſhew to his diſciples, how that he (the Son of man) muſt go to Jeruſalem, and ſuffer many things, (and be rejected) of the elders and chief prieſts, and ſcribes, and be killed, and (notwithſtanding that he ſhould by God) be raiſed again the third day, (and this he ſaid to them openly, Mark 8. 32.)

22. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, [m] ſaying, Be it far from thee, Lord, this ſhall not be unto thee.

23. But he turned, and (looking on his diſciples, Mark 8. 33.) ſaid to Peter, [n] Get thee behind me, Satan, (thou who art to me a tempter, and to the good of men an adverſary,) thou art an offence to me, (as being a ſolicitor to me to diſobey the will of my Father,) for thou (in this) favoureſt not the things that be of God, but thoſe that be of men, (regarding more what is pleaſing to men than God.)

24. Then ſaid Jeſus to his diſciples, (and to the multitude, Mark 8. 34.) [o] If any man will come after me, let him (reſolve upon it that it will be neceſſary for him to) deny himſelf, and take up his croſs (daily, Luke 9. 23.) and (ſo only will be prepared to) follow me.

25. [p] For whoſoever will (chuſe rather to) ſave his life, ſhall loſe it, and whoſoever will (be ready to) loſe his life for my ſake (and the Goſpel's, Mark 8. 35.) ſhall find it, (either graciouſly preſerved here, or improved into life eternal.)

26. (And this it beheveth all to do,) For what is a man profited, if he ſhall gain the whole world, and loſe his own ſoul (or life,) or what ſhall a man give in exchange for his ſoul?

27. [q] For

27. [q] For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his (holy) angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works; (being ashamed of, or not owning them who are ashamed of him, or of his words, in this wicked and adulterous generation, Mark 8. 38. but rewarding them who profess him, and adhere to his doctrine.)

28. [r] Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here who shall not taste of death till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom, (or the kingdom of God coming with power, Mark 8. 39. and the Son of man giving a plain experiment of his intended future judgment, by the severe punishment he will execute upon the unbelieving and disobedient Jews of this age.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XVI.

Ver. 1. [a] ΠΕΙΡΑΖΟΝΤΕΣ αὐτὸν, Tempting him,] i. e. making trial, whether he was able to do this, or not, or doubting, whether he could shew such a sign as the Son of man, according to Daniel, was to do. See the Notes on Matth. 4. 7. and Matth. 12. 38. And because they came to him with an appearance of their willingness to be convinced that he was the Messiah, could they see proofs sufficient of it; whereas they had already resisted the clearest evidence that he was the Christ, and so indeed came not to be convinced that he was so, but hoping he would fail in the attempt, and so appear not to be so; therefore Christ calls them both hypocrites.

Ver. 3. [aa] Σημεῖα τῶν καιρῶν· The signs of the times,] that is, say Grotius and the Syriack, the signs of these times; but this seems needless; οἱ καιροὶ, the times, or seasons, both in the Old and New Testament, signifying set times and seasons appointed by God; and those were either ordinary and stated times, as when the luminaries of heaven are said to be appointed εἰς σημεῖα καὶ καιροὺς, for signs and for seasons, Gen. 1. 14. Psal. 104. 19. and God is said to have given to the heathens, προτεταγμένους καιροὺς the seasons appointed from the beginning of the world, Acts 17. 26. or extraordinary seasons in which God had determined to visit his people, either in mercy, or in judgment; so καιρὸς, and καιρὸς πέρας, time, and the period of time, is often used in Daniel, Chap. 7. 22.—8. 19.—11. 27, 29. In the New Testament Christ is thus said to come in the fulness of time, and in the dispensation, τοῦ πληρώματος τοῦ καιροῦ of the fulness of times, Eph. 1. 10. and at his advent the phrase runs thus, πεπλήρωται ὁ καιρὸς, the time is fulfilled, Mark 1. 15. So when Christ's Apostles ask, Wilt thou now restore the kingdom to Israel? Christ answers, It is not for you to know, χρόνους ἢ καιροὺς, the times or seasons, Acts 1. 17. In this sense the Apostle saith to the Thessalonians, it is not needful to write to you, περὶ τῶν χρόνων, καὶ καιρῶν, of the times and seasons, 1 Thess. 5. 1. in this sense is it said of Christ's signal coming to destroy Jerusalem, ὁ καιρὸς, the time is near, Luke 21. 8, 24. Now all such seasons had their prognosticks, which are here stiled the signs of the times. See Additions, No. 22.

Ver. 6. [b] Προσέχετε ἀπὸ ζύμης τῶν Φαρισαίων, καὶ Σαδδουκαίων· Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the Sadducees,] Mark 8. 15. and of Herod. See the Note there. This leaven, v. 12. is interpreted to be the doctrine of those sects, as διδαχὴ imports, both doctrines to be believed, and traditions, or ordinances to be received from them; and so it is a caution to avoid the precepts of those men who place the sum of their religion and worship in outward performances, which avail nothing to the sanctification of the soul: And such were the traditions of the scribes and Pharisees; and also such doctrines as tended to subvert religion, by cutting off all hopes of future blessings after this life, and turning the kingdom of God into an earthly and a worldly kingdom, as did the doctrine of the Sadducees. Dr. Lightfoot saith, that leaven, in the notion of the Jews, did seldom signify doctrines, but generally affections and pravity of heart, which signification also it generally bears in Scripture; sometimes relating to hypocrisy, as in a like place, Luke 12. 1. Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy; and sometimes to the leaven of malice and wickedness, opposed to sincerity and truth, 1 Cor. 5. 8. This being fitly compared to leaven, because it puffeth up our spirits, and sours our tempers. See Note on 1 Cor. 5. 8.

Ver. 13. [c] Τίνα με λέγουσιν ἄνθρωποι εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?] Some look upon these words, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου the Son of man, as a gloss crept into the text, but it is read by Irenæus, l. 3. 20. by Epiphanius, by Chrysostom, St. Jerom, Theophylact, and all the versions, and therefore it is reasonably questioned. Others look upon these words as of no special signification, because not mentioned by St. Mark, or St. Luke, the first saying only, Whom do men say? Chap. 8. 27. the other, Whom do the people say that I am? Chap. 9. 18.

As-

As if I ſhould ſay, the words given, Luke 22. 19. or broken, 1 Cor. 11. 23, 24. were of no ſpecial ſignification, becauſe they are not mentioned by the Evangeliſts St. Matthew and St. Mark, Matth. 26. 26. Mark 14. 22. Dr. Lightfoot's conjecture is, that Chriſt here inquires not barely, whether the people thought him the Chriſt, but what kind of perſon they thought him to be, the Jews then doubting of his original, who was to be the Meſſiah, and whether he was to come from the living or the dead. And evident it is, that the word τίνα often relates to the quality. So John 8. 53. τίνα, whom makeſt thou thyſelf? 1 Sam. 17. 55. בן מי the ſon of what kind of perſon is this youth? and thus it may retain its uſual import.

Ver. 14. [d] Οἱ μὲν Ἰωάννην τὸν Βαπτιστὴν, ἄλλοι δὲ Ἠλίαν, ἕτεροι δὲ Ἰερεμίαν, &c. Some John the Baptiſt, others Elias, others Jeremias, or one of the Prophets.] Perhaps they who held Chriſt to be Elias, did not think him the promiſed Meſſiah, but only his fore-runner, this being the received opinion of the whole nation, that Elias was to come before the Meſſiah, and to anoint him when he came. They who thought he was John the Baptiſt riſen from the dead, ſpeak ſuitably to the opinion of the Phariſees, who, ſaith (a) Joſephus, held there was for good men, ῥᾳστώνην πρὸς ἀναβίωσιν, an eaſy return to life again: That he was Jeremias, or one of the Prophets, was the conſequent of an opinion that prevailed in that nation, that the Meſſias was to come not from the living, but from the dead, they thinking none of that age of piety ſufficient to bear him, and thinking that the reſurrection was to begin with his kingdom, might eaſily be induced to think, he ſhould be one that ſhould riſe from the dead. And then God having ſaid peculiarly of Jeremiah, Before I formed thee in the belly, I knew thee, and before thou cameſt out of the womb, I ſanctified, and I ordained thee a Prophet to the nations, Chap. 1. 5. and v. 10. See I have ſet thee over the nations, and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to deſtroy, and to throw down, to plant, and to build; and this being in their opinion the great buſineſs of the King Meſſiah, to pull down all the nations that ruled over them, and make them tributaries and ſervants to the Jews; for this cauſe might they pitch on him, as the fitteſt perſon to be their Meſſiah. And then, in theſe words, I ſee no footſteps of a Metempſychoſis, but only of a reſurrection, according to thoſe words of St. Luke, Chap. 9. 19. Others ſay, that one of the old Prophets was riſen again.

Ver. 16. [e] Σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος, Thou art the Chriſt, the Son of the living God.] Here let it be noted,

1*ſt*, That what Peter here profeſſeth, was before the faith, and the acknowledgment of all Chriſt's diſciples; for they coming out of the ſhip, ſaid, ἀληθῶς Θεοῦ υἱὸς εἶ, truly thou art the Son of God, Matth. 14. 33. And therefore Peter himſelf ſaith of them, as well as of himſelf, we know, and have believed, that thou art Chriſt, the Son of the living God, John 6. 69.

2*dly*, But whereas ſome conclude, that theſe words, the Son of the living God, ſignify nothing more than the Meſſiah, becauſe St. Mark relates the anſwer of Peter thus, thou art the Chriſt of God; and what in St. Matthew, Chap. 26. 63. runs thus, Art thou the Chriſt, the Son of the living God? is in St. Luke, Chap. 22. 67. Art thou the Chriſt? I own that hence it may be gathered, that he that was the Chriſt, was alſo the Son of God; but yet I think there is this difference betwixt the two phraſes, that the one reſpects his office, the other his original, tho' perhaps neither Nathaniel, John 1. 50. or the other Jews, nor the Apoſtles uſed it in that ſublime ſenſe in which the Chriſtians did always take it.

Ver. 17. [f] Σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα οὐκ ἀπεκάλυψέ σοι· Fleſh and blood hath not revealed this to thee, but my Father which is in heaven.] That fleſh and blood, both in the ſcripture, and the Jewiſh writers, conſtantly ſignifies man, as being compounded of fleſh and blood, ſee the Note on Gal. 1. 16. So that the import of the words is this, What others ſay of me, thou haſt learned from men, but this faith thou haſt profeſſed concerning me, tho' it required in thee an attention to, a due conſideration of, and an aſſent to the proofs given of it, yet theſe proofs being the doctrine taught from God, and the miracles wrought in confirmation of it, being wrought by the finger of God, the faith itſelf muſt be acknowledged to be the reſult, not of human induſtry or wiſdom, but of divine revelation; and in learning of it thou muſt be ſaid to be θεοδίδακτος taught of God; the doctrine believed being the words of God, and the miracles which confirm it being wrought by the power of God. They who carry this higher, and ſay, that Peter had a peculiar revelation of this matter, not vouchſafed to any others, and that without this he could not have owned and embraced Chriſt, as the Son of God, muſt not only ſuppoſe the like ſpecial revalation given to Nathaniel, contrary to our Lord's own words, John 1. 51. Becauſe I ſaid, I ſaw thee under the fig-tree, believeſt thou? And to the Centurion, who ſeeing the earthquake, and the things which were done when Jeſus ſus gave up the Ghoſt, ſaid, Truly this was the Son of God, Matth. 27. 54. and to all others who had the ſame faith; but muſt excuſe all thoſe Jews, who did not believe this, it being not in their power to do ſo, for want of this peculiar revelation; whereas our Saviour ſtill appeals to the works that he had done among them, as to ſufficient teſtimonies that he was the Chriſt, the Son of God, John 5. 36, 37. —— 8. 18. —— 10. 25, 38. —— 14. 11. And alſo ſaith, Except ye believe that I am he, ye ſhall die in your ſins, John 8. 24.

Ver. 18. ἐγὼ δέ σοι λέγω ὅτι σὺ εἶ Πέτρος, And I ſay unto thee, thou art Peter.] Here note,

That in theſe words, our Lord doth ſpeak not in the general to his Apoſtles, but in particular to Peter, and that that promiſe was made particularly to him, ſeems evident from theſe conſiderations;

1ſt, That the text informs us, that Simon Peter, Simon the ſon of Jona, made that confeſſion, which gave occaſion to theſe words, and that our Lord ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ did anſwer him, as followeth: As if he ſhould have ſaid, As thou Peter haſt ſaid of me, that I am Chriſt, ſo ſay I now of thee, that thou art Peter; if therefore of the reſt of the Apoſtles, it cannot properly be ſaid, thou art Peter, much leſs that they were ſons of Jona, our Lord muſt ſpeak only to him who properly was ſo: And if the text ſaith expreſly, that our Lord ſpake to him, and doth not mention any others that were ſpoken to, it is a plain addition to the text to ſay, that our Lord equally did ſpeak to others. Moreover, when our Lord put the queſtion to them all, Whom do men ſay that I am? and they in general replied, Some thought that he was John the Baptiſt, ſome ſaid he was Elias, ſome Jeremias, or one of the Prophets; our Lord inquires farther ὑμεῖς δέ, whom do you Apoſtles ſay I am? Now to this queſtion, had they continued all to anſwer, as ſome imagine, they in the perſon of St. Peter did; why is it not ſaid as before, οἱ δὲ εἶπον, they ſaid, but only St. Peter anſwered? why doth not Chriſt continue, as before, to ſpeak to them in the plural number, but ſo peculiarly direct his ſpeech to the ſon of Jona.

2dly, Moreover, that Chriſt here promiſed to build his Church upon St. Peter, ſeems farther evident, becauſe theſe words contain a manifeſt alluſion to the name of Peter, and to that Syriack name of Cephas, which our Lord had given him, both which do ſignify a rock or ſtone; as if our Lord had ſaid, Thou art by name a rock, and ſuitable to that name ſhall be thy work and office; for upon thee, i. e. upon thy preaching, as upon a rock, ſhall the foundation of my Church be laid: Now the whole grace of this alluſion is intirely loſt, unleſs we do expound this paſſage of St. Peter's perſon, and not of his confeſſion, or the object of it. As therefore when God ſaid to Abraham, Thy name ſhall be called Abraham, for a father of many nations have I made thee, Gen. 17. 5. and to Jacob, Thy name ſhall be called Iſrael, for as a Prince thou haſt prevailed with God and men, Gen. 32. 28. the following words are ſtill the reaſon of the name; ſo may it rationally be conceived, that when Chriſt ſaid to the ſon of Jona, Thou art Peter, the following words, which are joined to them with a conjunction copulative, and on this rock will I build my Church, contain the reaſon of that appellation.

3dly, The demonſtrative article, this, contained in the words, this rock, do plainly intimate, that our Lord promiſed to build his Church upon that rock, he had now mentioned; now of what rock did he make mention in any other words than the foregoing? Thou art Peter, i. e. thy name doth ſignify a rock.

4thly, It cannot rationally be doubted, but that our Lord intended to ſay ſomething ſingular to Peter, as the reward of his ſo ſingular confeſſion; if we conſider either the words preceding, Bleſſed art thou, Simon Bar-Jona, for fleſh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee; or the immediate preface of them, κἀγὼ δέ σοι λέγω, And I do alſo ſay to thee, that thou art Peter; but had Chriſt ſpoken not of St. Peter, whom he had formerly called Cephas, when he made mention of the rock, on which he did intend to build his Church, but either of himſelf, or the confeſſion of St. Peter, he had ſaid nothing ſingular concerning this Apoſtle; Chriſt's building of his Church upon himſelf, or on this truth, that he was the Meſſiah, or the Son of God, being no ſingular reward of Peter. Laſtly, when our Lord adds in the enſuing words, And I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, i. e. I will cauſe thee firſt to open the kingdom of heaven by preaching to the Jew, and Gentiles, and laying the foundation of a Church among them; it is evident by the connection of the words, he ſpeaks of Peter. When therefore he had ſaid in the foregoing words, upon this rock I will build my Church, why ſhould we not conceive he ſpeaks of the ſame perſon? But then alſo let it be noted, that by this explication of the words which I contend for, all the pretences of the Pope of Rome, to be ſucceſſor of St. Peter, are not eſtabliſhed, but moſt effectually overthrown; as will be evident, if we conſider the promiſe, that our Lord would build his Church upon him, and how that promiſe was fulfilled.

1*ſt*, Then obſerve that our Lord ſpeaks here of his Church, not as a thing in preſent being, or as a building now erected, but as hereafter to be raiſed, and therefore doth not ſay, οἰκοδομῶ, I build at preſent, but οἰκοδομήσω, upon this rock I will hereafter build my Church, the Chriſtian Church, commencing after our Saviour's reſurrection and aſcenſion; of ſuch a Church to be hereafter founded by St. Peter's preaching to the Jew and Gentile, and the baptizing of men converted by his preaching, our Lord here plainly ſpeaketh in this text. If then the Pope would be St. Peter's ſucceſſor in this affair, he muſt not ſit at Rome, lording it there over God's heritage, but muſt in perſon go to the unbelieving Jews and heathen world, as Peter did, and labour by his preaching to convert the Turk, the Jew, the infidel; and when he hath ſo done, and ſettled Chriſtian Churches there among them, he may then have a better title to be St. Peter's ſucceſſor than now he hath.

2*dly*, Obſerve this promiſe punctually was fulfilled, by our Lord's uſing St. Peter's miniſtry, in laying the foundation of a Chriſtian Church among the Jews and Gentiles, and in his being the firſt preacher to them of that faith, which he doth here confeſs, and making the firſt proſelytes to it; we therefore, ſuitably to this promiſe, find that Peter laid the firſt foundations of a Church among the Jews, by the converſion of three thouſand ſouls, Acts 2. 41. who, when they gladly had embraced St. Peter's doctrine, were all baptized; and then we firſt find mention of a Chriſtian Church, in theſe words, And the Lord added daily to the Church ſuch as ſhould be ſaved, ver. 47. And the ſame Apoſtle laid the firſt foundation of a Church among the Gentiles, by the converſion of Cornelius and his friends, Acts 10. for though we read before of perſons in Samaria converted, and baptized by Philip the Evangeliſt, he being one of them who were diſperſed through the regions of Judea and Samaria, upon the perſecution that aroſe concerning Stephen, yet doth the Holy Ghoſt inform us, that they who were thus ſcattered, preached the word to none, but only to the Jews, Acts 11. 19. nor could they, ſuitably to their avowed principles, do otherwiſe, ſeeing they deemed it a thing unlawful to go in to, or to converſe with the uncircumciſed, Acts 11. 3. and had no apprehenſions that God would grant repentance unto life to the Gentiles, ver. 18. Wherefore, to qualify St. Peter for this work, the Lord doth by a viſion convince him of the lawfulneſs of preaching the glad tidings of ſalvation to the heathen world, and of converſing with them for that end; and in purſuance of this promiſe made to Peter, he commands Cornelius to ſend, not to Jeruſalem to James and John, not to Damaſcus for St. Paul, but to Joppa for St. Peter, whom Chriſt had by this promiſe appointed for that work, that from him, he might hear thoſe words by which he and his whole houſhold ſhould be ſaved. And in relation to this promiſe of our Lord, as well as the completion of it by the converſion of Cornelius, it ſeems to be that this Apoſtle doth, in the ſynod met at Jeruſalem, ſpeak thus, Men and brethren, you know how that a good while ago, ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων, God choſe me out among you, that by my mouth the Gentiles ſhould hear the word, Acts 15. 7. He therefore was aſſuredly the perſon who firſt preached the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and by doing ſo opened the kingdom of heaven to them; he was the perſon choſen by Chriſt to perform this work; he was choſen by him, ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων, from the beginning of Chriſt's preaching, when he was called Cephas, with relation to it. Nor is this expoſition any new fancy of my own, it is as ancient as (b) Tertullian, who ſaith, that Chriſt did perſonally confer this honour on St. Peter, ſaying, upon thee will I build my Church; ſic enim exitus docuit, in ipſo eccleſia exſtructa eſt, i. e. per ipſum, ipſe clavem imbuit, ſo the event doth teach, the Church was built on him, that is, by him, he hanſel'd firſt the key, he preached that ſermon by which three thouſand Jews were brought into the faith; he laid the firſt foundation of a Church among the Gentiles, he firſt by baptiſm gave them entrance into the kingdom of heaven. He was, ſaith Ambroſe, ſtiled the Rock, becauſe he laid the firſt foundations of faith among the nations. I conclude therefore, that the plain import of theſe words is this, that the Apoſtle Peter, by preaching firſt to the Jew and Gentile, and by baptizing thoſe to whom he preached, ſhould lay the firſt foundations of the Chriſtian Church, and that againſt the Church thus planted by him, the gates of hell ſhould not prevail. This being ſo, it is evident, that in this matter St. Peter neither hath, nor can have a ſucceſſor, and that it is abſurd to claim a title of ſucceſſion to this prerogative of St. Peter, this being in effect to ſay, that the foundations of the Church of Chriſt are not yet laid, and to pretend to a commiſſion to perform at preſent, what was fully done above a thouſand ſix hundred years ago.

Ibid. [h] Καὶ πύλαι Ἅδου οὐ κατισχύσουσιν αὐτῆς, And the gates of hell ſhall not prevail againſt it.] Here by the gates of Hades ſome underſtand the prevalence of ſchiſm and hereſy, of wickedneſs and vice. So Jerom, Ego portas inferi eſſe reor vitia & peccata, vel certe hæreticorum doctrinas; others do underſtand the ſubtilty of Satan, the power of his temptations and aſſaults; but if we do examine the import of this phraſe, the gates of Hades, as it is uſed by all the ancient Greeks, the Jewiſh writers, the Old Teſtament, and the tranſlation of the ſeventy interpreters, we ſhall be ſatisfied that it is never uſed by them to ſignify the power of hereſy, or ſchiſm, ſin, or Satan, and therefore cannot be rationally ſuppoſed here to bear that ſenſe, but it conſtantly is uſed by them, to ſignify the ſtate of death, the place, or receptacle of the dead, into which ſouls departed enter, or elſe the entrance into that place. To make this evident, conſider,

1*ſt*, That the Hebrew Sheol, and the Greek Ἅιδης, which anſwers to it in the tranſlation of the ſeventy, doth ſignify both in the ſcriptures, the Jewiſh writers, and the ancient fathers, and more ancient heathens, the place and receptacle of the dead, Ἅιδλω νεκρῶν χωρίον, exponunt Græci, ſaith the learned Windate. The Greeks call the place of the dead, Hades, Ἅιδης ὁ τάφος, Hades is the ſepulchre, ſaith Heſychius; by Sheol is not meant the place of the damned ſpirits, ſaith Mr. Ainſworth, but of all that go out of the world; whence in the Chaldee paraphraſe it is ſtiled the houſe of the grave, or the place of burial. Accordingly the ancient Greeks aſſigned one Hades to all that died, whence they ſo often ſay, πάντας ἁπλῶς θνητοὺς Ἅιδης δέχεται, all that die are in Hades, all men ſhall go to Hades, ἐν Ἅιδου οἰκήσουσι ψυχαὶ, δικαίων τε καὶ ἀδίκων, both juſt and unjuſt go to Hades, ſaith Caius, a Roman preſbyter.

2*dly*, This place of Hades is generally repreſented as a great houſe, or receptacle, which hath doors, and bars, and keys, and gates, by which the dead are ſaid to enter; hence in the Poets we find frequent mention of the houſe of Hades, and the gates of Hades. Hence Job cries out, Sheol Bethi, Hades is my houſe; and they who die are ſaid, καταβῆναι εἰς Ἅιδου δόμους in Euripides, εἰς δόμον Ἅιδου, in Homer, i. e. to go to the houſe of Hades.

3*dly*, The place or receptacle of the dead being thus repreſented by the ancients, as an houſe that hath its doors and gates; death in their language is repreſented as the gate, or entrance into Hades; to die, or to deſcend into the grave, is in their language to go down, to be brought down to, and to paſs through the gates of Hades, as in thoſe words of Homer, ἐχθρὸς γάρ μοι κεῖνος ὁμῶς Ἅιδαο πύλῃσιν, I hate him to the gates of Hades, who does not ſpeak as he thinks; where the Scholiaſt informs us, that this is περίφρασις θανάτου, a periphraſis of death, ἢ Ἅιδου πύλαν ἀνοίξει, he ſhall knock at the gates of Hades, that is, he ſhall die, ſaith Theocritus; and thus Theognis bewailing the miſeries of human life, concludes, it is beſt of all not to be born, or being born, ſhut the gates of Hades as ſoon as may be. Accordingly to live again is in their language to leave, or open the gates of death, or Hades. Thus, in Euripides, the chorus ſings, That if Eſculapius were there, Alceſtis might then leave Ἅιδου πύλας the gates of Hades, and return to life, for he can raiſe the dead: And when Menippus came from the grave, he ſpeaks thus, That he came from the gates of Hades; and ſuitably to this old notion of the gates of Hades, is the conſtant uſage of the phraſe in the Old Teſtament and Jewiſh writers. The writing of Hezekiah after his recovery begins thus, I ſaid, in the cutting off of my days, πορεύσομαι ἐν πύλαις Ἅιδου, I ſhall go to the gates of Hades, I am deprived of the reſidue of my years, I ſhall no longer be in the land of the living, Iſa. 38. 10, 11. And what is in the Hebrew, שַׁעֲרֵי מָוֶת, the gates of death, is by the ſeventy tranſlated πυλωροὶ Ἅιδου for ſo God puts the queſtion to Job, Will the gates of death open to thee? i. e. Canſt thou command the dead to live? or, Haſt thou ſeen the gates of Hades, Job 38. 17. Thus they who are even at death's door, are in the language of the Pſalmiſt, ſaid, ἐγγίζειν ἕως τῶν πυλῶν θανάτου, to draw nigh to the gates of death, Pſal. 107. 18. And when Ptolemæus Philopater threatened καταπίμπλειν πεῖσι Ἅιδου Ἰουδαίους, to kill all the Jews, and the elephants were ready to fall in upon them, they cried to the Lord to have mercy on them, ἤδη πρὸς πύλαις Ἅιδου καθεστῶτες, being juſt at the point of death, Maccab. 3. ult. And when God ſhews his power in reſtoring men from ſuch a ſtate, he is then ſaid to lift them from the gates of Hades; as in thoſe words, Thou haſt the power of life and death, καθάγεις εἰς πύλας Ἅιδου καὶ ἀνάγεις. Thou bringeſt down to the gates of Hades, and raiſeſt up again, Wiſd. 16. 13. Accordingly, when Theodoſius had pardoned ſome, whom juſtice had condemned to die, Themiſtius tells him, he raiſed them to life, ἐκ τῶν πυλῶν ἀχέροντος. from the gates of hell: Nor did (a) Euſebius doubt the truth of this expoſition of the words; for he declares, That God had hereby promiſed, that the Church ſhould not be overcome by death, and that by virtue of this one voice, Upon this rock——and the gates of hell ſhall not prevail againſt it: the Church continues not ſubdued by her enemies, nor yielding to the gates of death. (b) St. Cyril of Jeruſalem gives the ſame import of the words, ſaying, That Chriſt called Lazarus ἐκ Ἅιδου πυλῶν, from the gates of Hades, or death's door: And Photius, that when the dead are drawn, τ̃ πύλων ᾍδε, from the gates of death to life again, this is a demonſtration of divine virtue. (c) Theodoret ſaith, He was caſt into ſo great peril by the hereticks, as to be brought, εἰς αὐτὰς τ̃ ᾍδ᾽ πύλας, even to the gates of Hades. So that in all languages, with which I am acquainted, this ſeems to be the plain and conſtant import of the phraſe; and therefore in thoſe words, it ſeemeth reaſonable to conceive, it is a promiſe, that even death itſelf ſhould not prevail againſt the genuine members of Chriſt's Church, or that they ſhould enjoy a happy reſurrection. Now from this expoſition we may learn how vainly theſe words are produced, to prove that any Church or Council is infallible, or that the Church of Rome hath a juſt title to that privilege; for, if the gates of Hades do never ſignify in any ancient writer, or any Eaſtern language, Hereſy, or Error; to interpret theſe words of a ſecurity from error promiſed to the Church, muſt be to wreſt them from their plain and conſtant ſenſe, to ſuch an import as they never had in any language then in uſe.

(a) Præp. Evang. l. 1. c. 5. p. 8. C.

Ver. 19. [i] Καὶ δώσω σοι τὰς κλεῖς τ̃ βασιλείας τ̃ οὐρανῶν, And I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.] Here note,

1*ſt*, That our Lord, by giving theſe keys to St. Peter, cannot be reaſonably ſuppoſed to give him a ſupremacy over the reſt of the Apoſtles, or over the whole Church of Chriſt, becauſe the text informs us, that theſe keys were given to St. Peter, that with them he might bind and looſe; now, whatſoever binding and looſing may import, it is ſure, doth equally belong to all the reſt of the Apoſtles; Chriſt having ſaid to them in general, as fully as he did to Peter, Verily I ſay unto you, Whatſoever ye ſhall bind on earth, ſhall be bound in heaven; and whatſoever ye ſhall looſe on earth ſhall be looſed in heaven, Matth. 18. 18. See the words expounded there. Note,

2*dly*, That the uſe of a key being to open a door or gate, Chriſt here promiſes to Peter, that he ſhould be the perſon who ſhould firſt open the gate of the kingdom of heaven both to Jew and Gentile, by making the firſt converts among both, and letting ſome of both into the Church; but then it is evident that both James and John exerciſed this office independently upon Peter, in converting thoſe of the circumciſion as well as he; and that St. Paul was, by way of excellency, and by virtue of his miſſion, the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, Rom. 11, 13.——15. 16. Gal. 1. 16.——2. 8. 1 Tim. 2. 7. 2 Tim. 1. 11. and opened the kingdom of heaven to far more Gentiles than ever Peter did, Rom. 15. 18, 22. And therefore had this key of the kingdom of heaven given to him as much as to St. Peter.

Ver. 20. [k] Then charged he his diſciples, ἵνα μηδενὶ εἴπωσιν ὅτι αὐτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστός, that they ſhould tell no man that he was Jeſus the Chriſt, i. e. till after his reſurrection, when they were by office to be his witneſſes, and to declare to others that he was the Chriſt, becauſe then they could do it, not only without ſuſpicion of confederacy, but with greater advantage and better ſucceſs, after that Chriſt had taken poſſeſſion of his kingdom, and had teſtified this, by his ſitting down at the right hand of power, and by ſending down upon them the Holy Ghoſt, to enable them to confirm this teſtimony; and when he was no longer to be ſubject to thoſe humble circumſtances, and to that death which might divert them from receiving him under the character of the Son of God; whereas had his own diſciples publickly declared him to be the King of the Jews, and the Son of God, whilſt he was on earth, as this would have looked like a confederacy between them and their Maſter, ſo might it have encouraged the attempt of the Jews to come and make him a King, John 6. 15. eſpecially when he was ſhortly to go up to Jeruſalem in royal triumph, Chap. 21. 8, 9.

Ver. 21. [l] Ἀπὸ τότε ἤρξατο δεικνύειν μαθηταῖς αὐτ̃, ὅτι δεῖ αὐτὸν ἀπελθεῖν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, From that time he began to ſhew to his diſciples, that he was to go up to Jeruſalem, and to ſuffer many things of the elders.] To what hath been hinted in the Paraphraſe, that he was to go up to Jeruſalem, becauſe a Prophet could not ſuffer out of that city, Luke 13. 33. he being to be tried by the Sanhedrim, which ſat there; add alſo, that he was to be condemned by the rulers, and thoſe who had the authority of life and death, that ſo being condemned and put to death by them, who bore the title of God's vicegerents, he might more properly be ſaid, to be ſmitten of God, and afflicted, Iſa. 53. 4. though alſo in an higher ſenſe, it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him, and put him to grief, by laying on him the inquity of us all, ver. 6.

Ver. 22. [m] Ἵλεώς σοι Κύριε, Far be it from thee, Lord.] This is a phraſe very frequent in the Old Teſtament, and always uſed by way of abomination and abhorrence, anſwering to חלילה־לך in the Hebrew; and it is always rendered either μηδαμῶς σοι, as Gen. 18. 25. 1 Sam. 2. 30.—— 12. 23.——20. 9.——22. 15.——24. 6. or μὴ γένοιτο, Gen. 44. 7, 17. Joſ. 22. 29.——24. 16. 1 Kings

(c) Tom. 3. Ep. 81. p. 954.

1 Kings 21. 3. i. e. abſit, or nequaquam, and ſo is well rendered by us, far be it from thee: A like phraſe, חלילה־לי, is thrice rendered by the Septuagint, Ἱλεώς μοι, 2 Sam. 20. 20.——23. 17. where it is rendered, far be it from me; ſee 1 Maccab. 2. 21. and when Jehovah is added to it, and it is Ἱλεώς μοι ὁ Θεὸς, or μὴ γένοιτό μοι ὁ Θεός, 1 Kings 21. 3. it is rendered, my God forbid it, 1 Chron. 11. 19. and this ſome think, is the full import of the words here, ὁ Θεὸς being underſtood, and therefore render them, God be merciful to thee, Sir.

Ver. 23. [n] Ὑπαγε ὀπίσω μου, Σατανᾶ, Get thee behind me, Satan.] 'Tis ſomewhat ſtrange, that Origen, Hilary, Jerom, and St. Auſtin, ſhould conceive, that Chriſt ſhould only mean, Sequere meam ſententiam, follow my opinion, rather than thine own, theſe words being doubtleſs a reprehenſion of St. Peter, with ſome vehemence and indignation, as, under a pretence of charity, ſhewing himſelf an adverſary to Chriſt, as the word Satan ſignifies, Numb. 22. 32. 2 Sam. 19. 23. 1 Kings 5. 4. ——11. 14. Pſal. 109. 6. and doing the work of Satan, by tempting him to diſobey his Father's will and command, John 10. 18. and to decline a work ſo neceſſary for the ſalvation of ſouls; and being more concerned for the advancement of that temporal kingdom the Jews expected from their Meſſiah, than for the glory of God, and the good of ſouls.

Ver. 24. [o] Εἴ τις θέλει ὀπίσω μᾶ ἐλθεῖν, If any man will come after me, let him deny himſelf, &c.] See Note on Mark 8. 34. and on Luke 14. 27.

Ver. 25, 26. [p] Ὃς γὰρ ἂν θέλῃ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ σῶσαι, ἀπολέσει αὐτὴν, For whoſoever will ſave his life, ſhall loſe it.] That the word ψυχὴ ſhould be here rendered life, rather than ſoul, in the ſublimer acceptation of the word, ſeems highly probable, from theſe conſiderations: (1.) Becauſe Chriſt, who came to ſave mens ſouls, could not require of any perſons, that they ſhould loſe their ſouls in the worſt ſenſe, but only that they ſhould lay down their lives for his ſake. (2.) Becauſe in the Old Teſtament, this phraſe continually occurreth in this ſenſe, where τηρεῖν τὴν ψυχὴν, Prov. 13. 3. ——16. 17.——19. 16——23. 14. σῶσαι τὴν ψυχὴν, Amos 2. 14, 15. is, to preſerve life, ῥύσαι τὴν ψυχὴν, Pſal. 6. 4.——7. 1, 2. is, to deliver us from death, ἀπολέσαι τὴν ψυχὴν, Pſal. 26. 9. to loſe life, or die. (3.) Becauſe it frequently occurs in profane authors in this ſenſe, as when we read in (d) Agathias, What if we gain all Perſia, τὰς δὲ ψυχὰς ἐζημιωμένοι; but loſe our lives? And Achilles in (e) Homer, ſays, ὃ γάρ ἐμοὶ ψυχῆς ἀντάξιον ἄλλο, Nothing is comparable to my life. Laſtly, The benefit which will accrue to us by loſing of this life, follows in the reward ſuch perſons ſhall receive at Chriſt's coming: And I humbly conceive our Saviour's argument may be to this effect; it is natural for all men to have the greateſt regard for the preſervation of their lives, whence they ſo frequently declare, (f) τιμιώτερον οὐδὲν ἢ ὠφελιμώτερον ἄλλο, that nothing is more precious or deſirable, nothing is fit to be given in exchange for it; he therefore will act moſt ſuitably to this natural principle, who continues ſtedfaſt in the Chriſtian faith and doctrine, for his life will be prolonged happily for ever; whereas he that forſakes it, will loſe his intereſt in this promiſe of eternal life. For, the Son of man will come to render to every man according to his works, to them, who have been faithful to him to the death, eternal life; whereas the unbelievers and apoſtates ſhall not ſee this life, but ſhall be certainly obnoxious to the ſecond death.

Ver. 27. [q] Μέλλει γὰρ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔρχεσθαι ἐν τῇ δόξῃ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ, μετὰ τῶν ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ, For the Son of man ſhall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, &c.] I do not think that there is any neceſſity of interpreting theſe words of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, to make them comport with the verſe following: They ſeem more plainly to relate to the day of judgment. For, (1.) The expreſſions are parallel to thoſe which are elſewhere unqueſtionably meant of that great day, as Matth. 25. 31. The Son of man ſhall come in his glory, and all his holy angels with him, and ſhall place the goats on his left hand, &c. 2 Theſſ. 1. 7. In the revelation of the Lord Jeſus from heaven, with his hoſt of angels, the wicked ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction from the glory of his power. See Matth. 13. 41, 49. Jude 14. (2.) The words, Then ſhall he render to every man according to his works, cannot relate to the Jews only; thoſe words, in all other places, plainly relating to the day of judgment; as Rom. 2. 6, 16. Rev. 22. 12. whereas at the deſtruction of the Jewiſh nation, he only rendered to them according to their works. The words may therefore be thus paraphraſed: There is no cauſe why any man ſhould fear to loſe his life for my ſake, or think himſelf wiſe in preſerving it, by denying me; for the Son of man will come in the glory of his Father, who hath made him Judge both of the quick and the dead, and then he will render a reward of eternal life, to them who have ſuffered for his ſake, and ſubject them to eternal death, who have been aſhamed of him, and of his words; nor have you cauſe to doubt of his power, thus to judge and inflict puniſhments on men, ſince he will ſhortly give a ſignal experiment of it, in inflicting the ſevereſt puniſhments on the unbelieving Jews. For,

Ver. 28. [r] Αμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, εἰσὶ τίνες τῶν ὧδε ἑστηκότων, Verily, I ſay unto you, there are ſome of them who are ſtanding here, who ſhall not taſte of death, till they ſee the Son of man coming in his kingdom.] It ſeems wonderful, that ſome, both ancient and modern interpreters, ſhould conceive this paſſage relates to our Lord's transfiguration on the mount, mentioned in the following Chapter; ſince (1.) The ſeeing that, could not be the ſeeing Chriſt's coming in his kingdom; his kingdom being not begun till after his reſurrection, when all power in heaven and earth was given to him, Matth. 28. 18. (2.) It was as true of all the Apoſtles, as of Peter, James, and John, that they ſhould not taſte of death, till after that viſion, which happened but ſix days after theſe words were ſpoken, Chap. 17. 1. Nor did Chriſt at his transfiguration, render to any one according to his works. Nor, (3.) Can theſe words be underſtood of the great day of judgment; there being none ſtanding there, who did not die long before that time; and to taſte of death, in the Jewiſh phraſe, ſignifies no more: Thus, when Chriſt ſaid, He that believeth in me, ſhall never die; the Jews repeat his words thus, He ſhall never taſte of death, John 8. 52. And to be ſure, it can import no more, when it is ſaid of Chriſt, He taſted death for every man, Heb. 2. 9. Accordingly the Jews ſay, The firſt Adam was worthy not to taſte of death. Nor, (4.) Can we underſtand this of Chriſt's reſurrection and exaltation to the right hand of God, and the miſſion of the Holy Ghoſt; for this being ſaid not long before his paſſion, it is not reaſonable to conceive, Chriſt ſhould with an aſſeveration ſay, ſome ſtanding here ſhall not taſte of death, till they ſee that which was to happen in leſs time than half a year: It is therefore more probable, that this is ſpoken of Chriſt's coming after forty years, to the deſtruction of the Jewiſh church and nation, and to render to them according to their works; for this was to happen in that generation, Matth. 24. 34. and St. John, and many ſtanding there, might ſee it; that alſo is repreſented as the παρουσία, or coming of the Son of man, Matth. 24. 3, 27, 39, 44. then was the Son of man to come, John 21. 22. Heb. 10. 37. with power, Matth. 24. 30. and great glory, Mark 13. 26. and with his angels, Matth. 16. 27. and to come in the clouds, Rev. 1. 7. and then was the kingdom of God near, Luke 21. 31. Well therefore might this glorious advent of the Son of God, in ſo great majeſty, and ſuch reſemblance of his ſecond coming at the day of judgment, be introduced as a juſt ground to believe, and to expect that day, viz. a time when Chriſt ſhould puniſh with deſtruction from his preſence, all that did not believe and obey his Goſpel, as he had then puniſhed the unbelieving Jews, and that he ſhould afterwards ſay to all his enemies, as he then ſignally did to the Jews, Bring theſe mine enemies that would not I ſhould reign over them, and ſlay them before me, Luke 19. 27. And this interpretation fully agrees with thoſe words of Chriſt, Matth. 24. 30. then ſhall they (the Jews,) ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with great power and glory; and, Matth. 26. 64. After a while, ye ſhall ſee the Son of man ſitting at the right hand of the power of God, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

CHAP. XVII.

1. [a] AND after ſix days (from the diſcourſe had with his diſciples, till the day of his aſcent; ſee Note on Mark 9. 2.) [b] Jeſus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart, (which he intended to pray there, Luke 9. 28.)

2. And (whilſt he was praying, Luke 9. 29. he) was transfigured before them, and his face did ſhine as the ſun, and his raiment was white, (and ſhining, Luke 9. 29.) as the light.

3. And behold, [c] there appeared to them Moſes and Elias talking with him, (of his deceaſe which he ſhould accompliſh at Jeruſalem, Luke 9. 31.)

4. Then anſwered (i. e. ſpake) Peter, and ſaid unto Jeſus, Lord, it is good for us to be here; if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moſes, and one for Elias.

5. While he yet ſpake, behold a bright cloud overſhadowed them, and behold a voice (came) out of the cloud, which ſaid, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed, hear ye him; (according to the prediction of Moſes, Deut. 18. 15. him ſhall ye hear.)

6. And when the diſciples heard it, they fell on their faces, and were ſore afraid.

7. And Jeſus came and touched them, and ſaid, Ariſe, and be not afraid.

8. And when they had lift up their eyes (which were heavy with ſleep, Luke 9. 32.) they ſaw no man ſave Jeſus only.

9. And

9. And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, [d] Tell the vision to no man, (no, not to your fellow disciples,) until the Son of man be risen again from the dead.

10. And (upon this charge) his disciples asked him, saying, (If the appearance of Elias must be so great a secret, even till thy departure,) [e] Why then say the scribes, that Elias must first come (to anoint the Messias, and make him manifest to Israel?)

11. And Jesus answered, and said unto them, Elias truly shall come first, and restore all things; (i. e. he indeed is to come first for this end, according to the words of the Prophet Malachi, Chap. 4. 6.)

12. But (then) I (also) say unto you, That (the) Elias (of whom he spake) is come already; and they knew, (i. e. acknowledged) him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed; (the Pharisees rejecting his baptism, and blaspheming him as one that had a devil, Luke 7. 30, 33.) likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

13. Then the disciples understood, that he spake to them of John the Baptist, (as of that Elias which was for to come.)

14. And (the day following, Luke 9. 37.) when they were come to the multitude, (he saw them about his disciples, and the scribes questioning with them, and asked them, What they inquired about? Mark 9. 14, 16. and) there came unto him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying,

15. Lord, have mercy on my son, (my only son, Luke 9. 38.) for he is a lunatick, and sore vexed (with a dumb spirit, Mark 9. 16.) for (this spirit taketh him, and suddenly he cries out, and he shakes him; so that he foameth again, and bruising him, hardly departeth from him, Luke 9. 39. yea,) oft-times he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water;

16. And (in thy absence) I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him, (and this raised the question betwixt the Pharisees and lawyers, and thy disciples.)

17. Then Jesus answered, and said, (unto these Pharisees and scribes;) [f] O faithless and perverse generation, How long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? Bring him hither to me: (Luke 9. 42. And as he was yet coming, the devil threw him down, and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming, Mark 9. 20. And Jesus asked his father, How long is it ago, since this came to him? And he said, Of a child, ver. 21. But if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us, ver. 22. And Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth, ver. 23. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief, ver. 24.)

18. And (when) Jesus (saw that the people came running together, Mark 9. 25. he) rebuked the devil, and (saying to him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee come out of him, and enter no more into him; the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and) he departed out of him, (but so as to leave him as one dead, insomuch that many said, He is dead; but Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up, and he arose, Mark 9. 24, 25, 26.) and the child was cured from that very hour.

19. Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, (when he was come into the house, Mark 9. 28.) and said, Why could not we cast him out?

20. And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief, for verily I say unto you, [g] If ye have faith as a grain of mustard-seed, (a small degree of active growing faith,) you shall say to this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove, and nothing (relating to your office) shall be impossible to you; (i. e. you shall through faith, be enabled to do very extraordinary things for the promotion of the Gospel, and to remove the greatest obstructions to the progress of it, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5.)

21. [h] Howbeit, this kind (of devils) goeth not out but by (faith, acquired by) prayer and fasting.

22. And while they abode in Galilee, (as they were privately going through it, Mark 9. 29.) Jesus said unto them, The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men,

23. And they shall kill him; and the third day he shall be raised again; and they (not understanding what he meant by the death and resurrection of the Messiah, Mark 9. 32. Luke 9. 45. or how to reconcile it with their received notion, that their Messiah should not die, John 12. 34.) were exceeding sorry.

24. And when they were come to Capernaum, (where Christ and Peter dwelt, Matth. 8. 14.) they that received the tribute money, (that every Jew yearly paid to the temple,) came to Peter, and said (to him,) Doth not your master pay tribute?

25. He saith, Yes: And when he was come into the house (of Peter,) Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? [i] Of whom do the Kings of the earth take custom or tribute, of their own children, or of strangers? (i. e. of others only, who are not of their sons, or of their own family.)

26. Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free; (i. e. then this tribute which is paid to God for his temple, belongs not to me to pay, who am his Son.)

27. [k] Notwithstanding

27. [k] Notwithſtanding, leſt we ſhould offend them, (i. e. ſeem to them, who know nothing of this reaſon of my exemption, to contemn the temple, and the ſervice of it, for which this tribute is deſigned;) go thou to the ſea, and caſt an hook, and take up the fiſh that firſt cometh up; and when thou haſt opened his mouth, thou ſhalt find a piece of money (worth two ſhillings and ſixpence, or two half ſhekels;) that take, and give unto them (as the two half ſhekels due) for me, and thee, (who dwell at Capernaum.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XVII.

Ver. 1. [a] Καὶ μεθ' ἡμέρας ἓξ· And after ſix days.] See Note on Mark 9. 2.

Ibid. [b] Παραλαμβάνει ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὸν Πέτρον, Jeſus taketh with him Peter, James, and John:] Theſe being afterwards to be great pillars of the Church, eſpecially of the circumciſion, Gal. 2. 9. Chriſt changes their names, admits them here to this viſion in the mount, he takes them with him, when he raiſes the ruler of the ſynagogue's daughter to life, Mark 5. 37. and in his agony, Matth 26. 37.

Ver. 3. [c] Καὶ ἰδοὺ ὤφθησαν αὐτοῖς Μωσῆς, καὶ Ἠλίας μετ' αὐτοῦ, συλλαλοῦντες· And behold there appeared to them Moſes and Elias talking with him.] Becauſe Chriſt commands his diſciples to tell no man, τὸ ὅραμα the viſion, ver. 9. hence ſome conjecture, that Moſes and Elias were not truly there, or ſeen by them, but only that they had in their phantaſy or imagination, an appearance of them; but this is very improbable: For St. Luke ſaith expreſly, That thoſe two talked with him, and ſpake of his exit, which he was to accompliſh at Jeruſalem; and that all this was done whilſt theſe diſciples were aſleep, and had ſeen nothing; adding, that after they were awake, they ſaw two men ſtanding with them, Luke 9. 30, 31, 32. See alſo Mark 9. 4. And therefore this by St. Luke is ſtiled, not ὅραμα a viſion; which, when it is repreſented to the fancy, happeneth rather to men in a ſleep, than after they awake, but, ὀπτασία a repreſentation of the thing to their eyes. It is therefore probable that God might preſerve both their bodies to this end; for the body of Elias was carried up into heaven, 2 Kings 2. 11. the body of Moſes was not found; it diſappeared ſaith (a) Joſephus; he aſcended, ſay the Jews, and miniſtred to God in the heavens: But the text ſaying expreſly, that he was buried in a valley in the land of Moab, over againſt Beth Peor: Or as the Hebrew, He, i. e. God, buried him, ὑπὸ τῶν ἁγίων ἀγγέλων, by his holy Angels; ſaith (*) Epiphanius, his body muſt be raiſed, or miraculouſly appear. And to this burial by angels perhaps refers that altercation mentioned by St. Jude, betwixt Michael and the Devil, touching the body of Moſes; the coming of theſe two great Prophets, one the deliverer, the other the reſtorer of the law of Moſes; when God ſaid of Chriſt, This is my beloved Son, hear him, ſhewed that the law was henceforth to give place to the Goſpel preached by him. Moreover, that theſe were two men, as St. Luke ſpeaks, their eyes informed them; that they were Moſes and Elias, their talk together might declare; for how elſe Peter ſhould learn who they were, but either from their diſcourſe with Chriſt, or Chriſt's diſcourſe with him, and his aſſociates, as he went up into the mount, that he was going to meet with them, I am not able to imagine.

Ver. 9. Μηδενὶ εἴπητε τὸ ὅραμα, Tell no man the viſion,] the thing that ye have ſeen; not the reſidue of the diſciples, that they be not troubled that they were not admitted to ſee it; not thoſe believers that now follow me, that they be not ſcandalized at my ſufferings after ſo glorious a transfiguration.

Ver. 10, 11, 12. [e] Why ſay the ſcribes, &c.] See Note on Mark 9. 11, 12, 13.

Ver. 17. [f] Ὦ γενεὰ ἄπιστος καὶ διεστραμμένη· O faithleſs and perverſe generation, how long ſhall I be with you? &c.] That Chriſt ſaid not this to his Apoſtles, appears, (1.) From thoſe words, bring ye him to me, they being ſpoken, not to them, but to the multitude, Mark 9. 20. among whom were the ſcribes, ver. 16. (2.) Becauſe if Chriſt had ſpoken thus to them, they could not have been ignorant of the reaſon why they could not caſt out this devil, and ſo they could not have put this queſtion to Chriſt, Why could not we caſt him out? ver. 28. the reaſon of it, if theſe words were ſpoken to them, being clearly given here, viz. their want of faith. Nor (3.) doth Chriſt ſpeak this to the father of the lunatick; for, (1.) he was not faithleſs, but only, ὀλιγόπιστος, one of little faith. (2.) It ſeems not proper to ſay to one man, Oh faithleſs generation! (3.) There ſeemeth to be nothing in the father which deſerved this ſharp rebuke, he coming very humbly on his knees to Chriſt, to beg this mercy for his ſon, ver. 15. and ſaying to him with ſuch ardor, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief, Mark 9. 23. upon which ſaying, his ſon was ſtraightway cured.

It therefore is to be noted from St. Mark v. 14,

(a) Antiq. lib. 4. c. 8. p. 132.

v. 14, 16. that the scribes were then disputing with Christ's disciples, and perhaps insulting over them, as having found out a distemper which could not be cured by his name and power; whence Christ asks them, what it was about which they disputed? ver. 15. It therefore seems most probable, that Christ spake this to them, to whom at other times he used the same language, stiling them, a wicked and adulterous generation, Matth. 12. 39. ——16. 4. Luke 11. 29.

Ver. 20. g Ἐὰν ἔχητε πίστιν ὡς κόκκον σινάπεως, ἐρεῖτε τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ· If ye have faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye may say to this mountain——and nothing shall be impossible to you.] By faith as a grain of mustard-seed, some understand a faith that groweth and increaseth as a grain of mustard-seed, Matth. 13. 31, 32. or faith as strong and active in the heart as mustard-seed is on the palate; and that because Christ elsewhere, for the removing of a mountain, i. e. to perform things most difficult, (see Note on Matth. 21. 21.) requires, πίστιν Θεοῦ, faith in God, which seems to signify an excellent faith, Mark 11. 22, 23. faith without doubting, Matth. 21. 21. (2.) Because St. Paul reckons faith able to remove mountains, as an indication of the strongest faith, 1 Cor. 13. 2.

Now, according to this exposition, the sense runs thus: Did your faith increase according to the examples of God's power you have had before your eyes; as a grain of mustard-seed grows up to be the greatest of all herbs, so would your faith transmount, and grow superior to all difficulties.

But Buxtorf, in the word Chardal, doth inform us, that a grain of mustard-seed was proverbially used among the Jews, pro re minima, for the least thing, as he there shews by many examples; and therefore it is probable, that Christ, speaking to them who were accustomed to this phrase, used it in their sense, for the least sincere faith in God, which they who fear, Mark 4. 40. or doubt, James 1. 6. seem not to have. So that the import of these words seems to be this: If you, who are commissionated by me, and by the Father which sent me, to work all kinds of miracles needful to confirm my doctrine, in my name, had the least measure of that faith which casts out fear and doubting of success in the discharge of your office, you might perform things most difficult, and even this faith in its effects would be most mighty.

Ibid. You shall say to this mountain, &c.] See Additions, No 23.

Ver. 21. h Τοῦτο δὲ τὸ γένος οὐκ ἐκπορεύεται, εἰ μὴ ἐν προσευχῇ καὶ νηστείᾳ· But this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting;] i. e. but by the faith which is to be acquired by prayer and fasting. And this is not said to express the pertinacy of this kind of devils, or the power which the great sins of the possessed had given them over him, this person being thus possessed, παιδιόθεν, from his youth, or childhood; but to inform his disciples, that this miraculous faith, being the special gift of God, was to be sought for by flagrant devotion, that it might never be wanting to them.

Ver. 25. i Οἱ βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς ἀπὸ τίνων λαμβάνουσι τέλη; Of whom do the Kings of the earth receive tribute or custom, of their own children, or of strangers?] That our Lord speaks here of the half-shekel paid every year, by all Jews above twenty years old, to the temple, for the buying the daily sacrifice, and other things necessary for the worship of God, appears, (1.) From the word δίδραχμα, used ver. 24. for the Jews, saith (b) Josephus, δυὸ δραχμὰς ἀνὰ πᾶν ἔτος εἰς τὸ ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις νεὼν συντέλειν. paid yearly two Attick drachms for the use of the temple at Jerusalem; and this they did, according to the precept requiring of them the half-shekel, called by the Septuagint τὸ δίδραχμον ἅγιον, Exod. 30. 13. Neh. 10. 32. (2.) Because our Saviour's argument why he should not pay this tribute, as being the Son of that King to whom it was paid, holds not with reference to the other tribute paid to Cæsar, he being not the Son of Cæsar, but of God.

Ver. 27. k Ἵνα δὲ μὴ σκανδαλίζωμεν αὐτούς· Lest we should offend them;] i. e. give them occasion to say, that I despise the temple, and its service, and teach my disciples so to do, pay a στατῆρα, or a piece of money of the value of two drachms, saith Phavorinus, for me, being here at Capernaum, and for thee, having thy house there, Matth. 8. 14. By which example Christ teacheth us to avoid the scandal and sinister suspicions of men, though they be groundless, with some detriment to ourselves, especially when they have not means sufficient clearly to convince them, that as the Son of God, he had his freedom. The scandal of the Pharisees proceeding not from ignorance, but pure malice, he is not thus concerned to avoid, Ch. 15. 12.

heaven? (i. e. who ſhall have the chief place of dignity and advantage in the kingdom of the Meſſiah.)

2. And Jeſus (being willing by this emblem to ſatisfy this diſpute, as far as it was uſeful to them,) called a little child unto him, and (taking him up in his arms, Mark 9. 35. he) ſet him in the midſt of them;

3. And ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, [b] Except ye be converted (from theſe ambitious and covetous deſires,) and become as (free from them, as are) little children, ye ſhall not (be fit to) enter into the kingdom of heaven; (which chiefly requires of its members humility, and a contempt of the world.)

4. Whoſoever therefore ſhall humble himſelf, (and be) as (free from all thirſt after worldly dignities and honours, as is) this little child, the ſame is greateſt (and moſt uſeful) in the kingdom of heaven; (for this frame will render him willing to miniſter even to the meaneſt of my members.)

5. And (that you may not be unwilling thus to miniſter to thoſe my little ones, know that) whoſoever ſhall receive one ſuch little child in my name, (tho' in this reſpect alſo he be a little child, as being lately born anew, and yet tender in the faith, ſhall be reſpected as one that) receiveth me.

6. [c] But whoſo ſhall offend (and drive from the faith) one of theſe little ones that believe in me, [d] it were better for him that a milſtone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the ſea, (i. e. that he ſuffered the ſureſt temporal deſtruction.)

7. Wo (therefore) to the world becauſe of offences, (i. e. of ſcandals which obſtruct the receiving of, or cauſe weak perſons to deſert the faith,) [e] for it muſt needs be (through the unreſtrained iniquity of men) that offences (of this kind ſhould) come; But wo to that man by whom the offence (which procures this ruin either to himſelf or others) comes.

8. Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend (or be a means of ſcandal to) thee, (or others, ſo as to bring this wo upon thee,) cut them off, and caſt them from thee, (i. e. quit whatſoever cauſeth this ſcandal, how dear and uſeful ſoever it may ſeem to be, for) it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands, or two feet, to be caſt into everlaſting fire.

9. And (likewiſe) if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and caſt it from thee, it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be caſt into hell-fire.

10. Take heed (therefore) that ye deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones, (as not regarding whether ye offend them or not,) [f] for I ſay to you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven; (i. e. the angels of heaven, which are miniſtring ſpirits to them, ſtand always in the preſence of God ready to receive his commands concerning them, ſo highly are they valued by them; I ſay, deſpiſe them not.)

11. For the Son of man is come to ſave that which was loſt, (and ſo by ſcandalizing them to their ruin, you will act in contradiction to the deſign of his advent, and of him that ſent him; for,)

12. How think ye, if a man have an hundred ſheep, and one of them be gone aſtray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and ſeeketh that which is gone aſtray?

13. And if ſo be that he find it, verily I ſay to you, he rejoiceth more (at the finding) of that ſheep, than (at the ſeeing) of the ninety and nine which went not aſtray.

14. Even ſo (is the joy of God for the recovery of a loſt ſinner,) it is not (therefore) the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of theſe little ones ſhould periſh (by any ſcandal put before them.)

15. (And in this concern to ſave others, it becomes you to imitate him;) [g] Moreover, if (then) thy brother ſhall treſpaſs againſt thee, go (firſt) and tell him his fault (friendly) between thee and him alone; if he ſhall (ſo) hear thee, (as to confeſs and amend it,) thou haſt gained thy brother.

16. But if he will not (thus) hear thee, (do not preſently give him over, but) then take with thee one or two more, (it being ſaid, Deut. 19. 15. One witneſs ſhall not riſe up againſt any man for any iniquity, but) that in (at) the mouth of two or three witneſſes, every word (or matter relating to his condemnation) may be eſtabliſhed.

17. And if he ſhall neglect to hear them, tell it to the Church, (i. e. make it a matter of publick cognizance,) but if he neglect to hear the Church, let him be to thee as an heathen man, and a publican, (among the Jews, one wholly neglected by thee, and not thought fit to be converſed with.)

18. [h] Verily I ſay unto you, whatſoever (things) ye ſhall (thus) bind on earth, (declaring them actions rendering men obnoxious to God's diſpleaſure,) ſhall be bound in heaven, (i. e. ſhall make them guilty before God;) and whatſoever ye ſhall looſe on earth, (or by this means ſhall exempt from guilt,) ſhall be looſed in heaven.

19. (And if he being thus convinced of his ſins, deſires you to join in prayers with him, your prayers ſhall be accepted; for) [i] Again I ſay unto you, that if two of you ſhall agree on earth, as touching any any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

20. For where two or three are gathered together in my name (requesting a blessing for my sake,) there am I in the midst of them; (i. e. with them, to speed their petitions.)

21. [k] Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him, (shall it be) till seven times? (as some of our doctors gather from these words, for three transgressions, and for four, Amos 1. 3.)

22. Jesus saith unto him, I say not to thee (as they do) Until seven times, but until seventy times seven.

23. [l] Therefore (in this) is the kingdom of heaven likened to a certain King, who would take account of his servants.

24. And when he had begun to reckon (with them) one was brought to him, who owed him ten thousand talents, (i. e. 875,000 l.)

25. But (and) forasmuch as he had not (wherewithal) to pay, his Lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, (as the Eastern manner was, Lev. 25. 39, 41. Isai. 50. 1. Neh. 5. 5, 8.) and payment to be made (by the sale of them.)

26. The servant therefore fell down (at his feet) and worshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

27. Then the Lord of that servant was moved with compassion (towards him,) and loosed him, and (frankly) forgave him the debt.

28. But the same servant (who had thus kindly been dealt with by his master,) went out and found one of his fellow-servants, who owed him an hundred pence, (i. e. 3 l. 2 s. 6 d. a Roman penny being seven pence halfpenny,) and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest (me.)

29. And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet (likewise,) and besought him, saying, (as he had done to his master,) Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

30. And (but) he would not (bear with him,) but went and cast him into prison till he should pay the debt.

31. So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry, (for both him that thus suffered, and the unkindness of this servant to him,) and (they) came and told to their Lord all that was done.

32. Then his Lord, after that he had called him, said to him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that (great) debt (which thou owedst to me, merely) because thou desiredst me (so to do.)

33. Shouldst not (then) thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had pity upon thee?

34. And his Lord was wroth (with him,) and delivered him to the tormentors, (gaolers) till he should pay all that was due to him.

35. So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also to you, if ye, from your hearts, forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XVIII.

Ver. 1. [a] Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ προσῆλθον οἱ μαθηταὶ τῷ Ἰησοῦ· At that time came the disciples of Jesus to him, saying, Who is greatest in the kingdom of heaven?] St. Mark saith, Christ put this question to them, and they held their peace, Chap. 9. 33. St. Luke, that they had been disputing this point among themselves, and Christ knowing the reasoning of their hearts, took a child, Chap. 9. 46, 47. Now these seeming differences are to be reconciled thus; that Jesus going to Capernaum, the disciples followed him, λέγοντες πρὸς ἑαυτούς, discoursing among themselves, Mark 9. 33. Who of them was to be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven; and when they came to him into the house, Jesus knowing what was still upon their hearts, and they were still pondering among themselves, Luke 9. 47. asks them, what was it you discoursed of in the way? which they being ashamed to tell him, kept silence, Mark 9. 33, 34. then Christ, who understood well what it was, endeavours by his example of a little child, to cure this distemper. That the participle λέγοντες, relates not here to Christ, as if they put the question, but to themselves, as I have here expounded it, is evident: (1.) From their silence, when asked touching this matter; and St. Luke's note, that Jesus, perceiving the thoughts of their hearts, did this; for had they put that question to Christ, how could they, or why should they hold their peace; or what need was there of saying, Jesus knowing their hearts, did this, in a matter which they had uttered to him with their mouths? (2.) To a question it is usually said, Jesus answered, or answering, did so or so, which is not here said; thus, when he rebuked the winds, the Apostles wonder, λέγοντες, saying among themselves, What manner of person is this? Matth. 8. 27. the multitude wondered, λέγοντες, saying among themselves, we never saw it thus before, Chap. 9. 33. So Chap. 14. 26.—— 16. 7.——19. 25.——21. 9, 10. and v. 25. οἱ δὲ διελογίζοντο παρ' ἑαυτοῖς, λέγοντες, and they reasoned, saying among themselves, Chap. 22. 23. Then came to him the Sadducees, οἱ λέγοντες, thoſe who ſay there is no reſurrection. So Chap. 23. 16.—— 26. 8.——27. 54.

Ver. 3. [b] Ἐὰν μὴ στραφῆτε καὶ γένησθε ὡς τὰ παιδία· Except ye be converted, and become as little children, you cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven.] In that temporal kingdom of the Meſſiah, which the Jews expected, they thought they ſhould have rule over all nations, having them for their ſervants, and all their wealth flowing in to them; and then the twelve muſt naturally think, that they ſhould have the preference above other Jews, and be advanced to higher poſts of honour and grandeur, and have a greater affluence of outward bleſſings than other Jews; and ſeeing the King Meſſiah muſt have ſome officers of higheſt rank, they concluded it muſt be ſome of them, tho' they could not agree who of them were the fitteſt for, or beſt deſerved theſe high poſts of honour: Now our Saviour's kingdom being not of this world, and therefore nothing of this nature being to be expected from him, but rather that his followers, and the Apoſtles more eſpecially, ſhould ſuffer the loſs of all things, and lie under the utmoſt infamy, Chriſt plainly tells them, that theſe inclinations, deſires, and expectations, were inconſiſtent with their being members of that ſpiritual kingdom, which he was to erect, ſince they who followed him chiefly on theſe accounts, when they ſaw no ſuch thing could be expected from him, but rather the quite contrary, muſt deſert him; and therefore here requires them to fit them for this kingdom, to become, as to theſe things, like little children, who are abſolutely free from all contrivances, and deſigns of this nature, never concerned in the leaſt for empire and dominion over others, or for increaſe in wealth, or great poſſeſſions, and know not what a poſt of honour, or what wealth means; this, ſaith our Lord, being that which will remove all that obſtructs your entrance into my kingdom, and make you the moſt eminent ſubjects of it, v. 4. and ſo ſhall be regarded by me; for to encourage all men to ſhew the greateſt kindneſs to them, I let them know I will accept, and will reward all kindneſs done to them, as if it were done to my own ſelf, and will ſeverely puniſh all that ſhall offend them, v. 5, 6.

Ver. 6. [c] Ὃς δ' ἂν σκανδαλίσῃ ἕνα τῶν μικρῶν τούτων τῶν πιστευόντων εἰς ἐμέ· But whoſo ſhall offend one of theſe little ones that believe in me.] It ſeemeth needleſs to note, that Chriſt here ſpeaketh not of little ones by age, (they being both incapable of faith, and free from ſcandal,) but by quality and temper of ſpirit; to ſcandalize one of theſe little ones, is to occaſion his ruin, and falling off from the faith, by our ſinful actions; as is apparent, (1.) From theſe words, ver. 14. It is not the will of their heavenly Father, that one of thoſe little ones ſhould periſh. (2.) From the ſeverity of the wo, and puniſhment here threatened to him that ſcandalizeth, it were better for him that a milſtone were hanged about his neck, &c. even ſo much better, ſaith St. Jerom, as it is to ſuffer a ſhort, than an eternal puniſhment, the offending eye and hand cauſing us to be caſt into hell-fire, v. 8, 9. and this ſenſe the word uſually beareth in the Goſpel, as when Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 11. 6. Bleſſed is he that ſhall not be offended in me, and Chap. 13. 21. that the ſtony ground when perſecution comes is preſently offended, i. e. falls off from the faith; that when tribulation ariſeth, many ſhall be offended, Matth. 24. 10. i. e. their charity ſhall wax cold, nor will they perſevere to the end, ver. 12, 13. that the hand and eye do ſcandalize, when they cauſe the whole body to be caſt into hell-fire, Matth. 5. 29, 30. So the Jews were ſcandalized at Chriſt's mean riſe and parentage, Matth. 13. 57. Mark 6. 3. Luke 7. 23. and at his words, v. 12. the Phariſees, Matth. 15. 12. the multitude, and many of his diſciples, John 6. 61, 62, 66. So Chriſt's diſciples were ſcandalized for a ſeaſon at his paſſion, their faith then failing, Matth. 26. 31, 33. Luke 24. 21. and Chriſt forewarns them of what they were to ſuffer, that they ſhould not be ſcandalized, John 16. 1. And that this is the conſtant import of this phraſe in the New Teſtament, ſee Note on Rom. 14. 21. Falſe therefore is it, that they who truly do believe in Chriſt, and are of the number of thoſe whom God would not to periſh, ver. 14. cannot be ſo offended, as to fall from the faith, and periſh. And were this ſo, wherein lies the force of this pathetical diſcourſe, and why are ſuch dreadful woes and puniſhments denounced to deter men from doing what not only is in itſelf impoſſible, but which they alſo who are thus threatened, muſt believe to be ſo.

Ibid. [d] It were better ἵνα κρεμασθῇ μύλος ὀνικὸς ἐπὶ τὸν τράχηλον αὐτοῦ· That a milſtone were hanged about his neck, and he caſt into the depth of the ſea.] Grotius here thinks, that this refers to a cuſtom of drowning among the Syrians; but for this, he cites only from Euſebius, inſtances of men drowned in the ſea, and of a ſtone hung at the feet of the Martyr Ægypius, but nothing of any perſons who had a milſtone hung about their necks. Jerom upon the place, ſaith, that he ſpeaks according to the cuſtom of the province; the puniſhment of greater criminals among the ancients being this, that they ſhould be drowned in in the deep, with a ſtone bound about them. Now of this cuſtom, ſaith Dr. Lightfoot, there is no mention, either in the law, or in the rabbins: But Dr. Alix ſaith, it was cuſtomary for them, καταβύθισις, in mare Sodomæ dejicere lapide annexo, to caſt execrable men into the dead ſea with a ſtone tied to them; and that there be divers places in the Miſnah which prove this. And certain it is from (a) Diodorus Siculus, and others, that this was the ancient puniſhment of ſacrilegious perſons to be caſt into the ſea. That this cuſtom obtained in Greece, we learn from the Scholiaſt in (b) Ariſtophanes, who ſaith, that when they drowned any one, they hanged a weight about his neck. To which cuſtom the (c) Poet alludes, by ſaying, he would hang a litigious man about his neck. And Suetonius ſaith of the tutor and ſervants of Caius, that Auguſtus ſuperbe & avare in provincia graſſantes oneratis gravi pondere cervicibus præcipitavit in flumen, in Oct. Aug. Cap. 67. for the pride and covetouſneſs by which they infeſted the province, caſt them into the river with a great weight about their necks.

Ver. 7. [e] Ἀνάγκη γὰρ ἐστιν ἐλθεῖν τὰ σκάνδαλα, It is neceſſary that offences ſhould come, but wo to the man by whom the offence cometh.] The neceſſity here mentioned is not a neceſſity ariſing from any act of God ordaining, or procuring that ſcandals ſhould come, or withdrawing, or not affording that grace which is abſolutely neceſſary to prevent their coming, ſince otherwiſe it could be no offence to ſcandalize, i. e. to do what it was not in my power to help; nor could it deſerve ſuch ſevere woes and dreadful puniſhments, ſince no man deſerves puniſhment for doing what he could not help, and God himſelf made neceſſary for him to do; nor could there be any force in, or ground for the following exhortation, ſee that ye deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones; for to admoniſh any one not to do, what is neceſſary that he ſhould do, and what I who admoniſh him declare to be ſo, ſeems palpably abſurd. The neceſſity here mentioned is therefore only conditional, on ſuppoſition of the wickedneſs of men not hindred, the ſubtilty and malignity of Satan, and the ſelf-denial required of all who would embrace the Goſpel; whence nothing could be expected but that many ſhould be ſcandalized at, and be unwilling to embrace the Goſpel upon theſe terms, and many who had once embraced it ſhould flie off from it. And this ſeems to be hinted in thoſe words, Wo to him by whom the ſcandal comes; which repreſents him as the proper cauſe of it; and from the words thus varied by St. Luke, Chap. 17. 1. ἀνένδεκτόν ἐστι, it is not to be expected that offences ſhould not come; which word makes this ſenſe preferable to that of Grotius, that this is neceſſary ratione finis, to the ends of divine providence, for tho' it be neceſſary that God ſhould permit men to do that which he hath foretold ſhall happen, as in the crucifixion of our Lord; yet otherwiſe, as ſaith the ſon of Syrach, God hath no need of the ſinful man, Eccluſ. 15. 12. to accompliſh the deſigns of his providence, but rather foreſeeing that he will be ſo, he makes him his inſtrument to fulfil them. See Additions N° 24.

Ver. 10. [f] For I ſay unto you, Ὅτι οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτῶν ἐν οὐρανοῖς, that their angels in heaven do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.] Here St. Jerom's note is this, Great is the dignity of thoſe little ones, ſeeing every one of them, from his birth, hath an angel delegated to preſerve him. This many of the fathers did aſſert, as (d) Jerom, of all ſouls; but others ſaid, this was the privilege only of the juſt, as you may ſee in Petavius; and yet I think that neither of theſe opinions concerning one particular angel having the cuſtody of one ſoul, as his continual charge, hath any good foundation in the holy ſcriptures; certain it is, that in this place Chriſt ſaith not, their angel, but their angels behold the face of God; nor ſays he, that theſe angels belong to all, but only to theſe little ones, nor that they always do attend upon their perſons, but that they ſtand before the face of God, ready to receive his commands, either to help them in their exigencies, or puniſh them who injure them; hence then it follows not that they have always an angel preſent with them, but only that the angels in general are miniſtring ſpirits to them, Pſal. 34. 8. Heb. 1. 14. See the Note Acts 12. 15. And whereas theſe angels are ſaid to behold the face of God continually, that only ſeems to ſignify their intimacy in the court of heaven, expreſſed by Raphael, by going in and out before the glory of the Holy One, Tob. 12. 15. and their attendance on him as his retinue. Servants, or as meſſengers of his, that do his pleaſure, Pſal. 103. 21. thus ſpeaks the angel Gabriel of himſelf, I am Gabriel, ὁ παρεστηκὼς ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, who ſtand before God, Luke 1. 19. and ſo the Queen of Sheba, of Solomon's ſervants, Bleſſed are thy ſervants, οἱ παρεστήκασι ἐνώπιον σου πάντοτε, who ſtand always before thee, 1 Kings 10. 8.

Ver. 15. ε Ἐὰν δὲ ἁμάρτηση εἰς σὲ ὁ ἀδελφός σου If then thy brother ſhall treſpaſs againſt thee, go, and tell him his fault betwixt thee and him alone,—— 17, let him be to thee as an heathen man or a publican;] i. e. the Son of man being come to ſave that which was loſt, v. 11. and God being unwilling that one of his little ones ſhould periſh, when thou ſeeſt any one in danger to be loſt, or periſh by his ſins committed againſt thee, uſe this method to reclaim him; and if it fail, let him be to thee as a heathen or publican is to the Jews. So I interpret theſe words, becauſe Chriſt neither neglected publicans or heathens, but freely converſed with both, in order to their converſion, never ceaſing to attempt the cure of any, till they become incorrigible, as in this caſe, the brother admoniſhed ſo oft in vain is ſuppoſed to be, and therefore to be one of whoſe ſalvation we have as little hope, as the Jews had of heathens and publicans.

" The Papiſts hence argue for the infallibility " and final deciſions of all doctrines by the Church " Catholick, concluding thus, If he who will not " hear the Church is in the judgment of God him- " ſelf, to be held as a publican or heathen, merely " becauſe he doth not hear her; and if God will " ratify in heaven her judgment here on earth, as " is aſſerted in the following verſe; then cannot " the Church err in any matter belonging unto " faith, becauſe it is impoſſible that God ſhould " approve her error in any matter of faith, or " require us under this penalty to hear her."

But the command to tell the offence of our private brother, is not a command to tell it to the Church-Catholick met in council; for then this precept could not have been obeyed for the firſt three centuries, no ſuch council ever meeting till the time of Conſtantine. Then, (2.) the Church muſt always be aſſembled in ſuch a council, becauſe doubtleſs there are, and will be always perſons thus offending againſt their Chriſtian brethren. And (3.) then every private perſon muſt be obliged at what diſtance ſoever he be from it, and how unable ſoever he may be to do ſo, to travel to this council, and lay his private grievance before them: all which are palpable abſurdities. Chriſt therefore only commands the offended perſon to tell this to the Church, or particular community of which he is a member, as will be evident from the like rule preſcribed among the Jews, and practiſed by the primitive Chriſtians. Thus in the book (e) Miſchar Happenenim the wiſe man ſaith, If thy brother offend againſt thee, reprove him between him and thee alone, and if he hear thee thou haſt gained him; if he hear thee not, take with thee one or two brethren, who may hear it; if then he hear thee not, count him a vile perſon. And in the book Muſar, He that reproves his brother, muſt do it firſt without witneſſes, betwixt his brother and himſelf alone; if he amend, it is well; if not, take ſome companions, that thou mayeſt ſhame him before them; if neither this way ſucceed, he ought to ſhame him, and lay open his fault before many; nor is any thing more common among Jewiſh writers, than to excommunicate the obſtinate perſon, publico præconio, with proclamation made in the ſynogogue. And therefore, this telling it to the Church, is in (f) Juſtin. M. admoniſhing him, when his obſtinacy needs it, κοινῶν, publickly; and the conſequent excluding him from the ſociety, being done according to St. Paul's direction to his Corinthians, συναχθέντων ὑμῶν, when they were gathered together, 1 Cor. 5. 4. is therefore ſtiled by him, ἐπιτιμία ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν, the puniſhment inflicted by many, 2 Cor. 2. 6.

Ver. 18. h Verily I ſay unto you whatſoever things ye ſhall bind on earth, ἔσται δεδεμένα ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, ſhall be bound in heaven; and whatſoever things you ſhall looſe on earth, ſhall be looſed in heaven.] For explication of theſe words, let it be noted,

1*ſt*, That Chriſt ſaith not what perſons ye ſhall bind on earth; but what things; which ſeems to intimate, that our Lord ſpeaks primarily of things and only conſequentially of perſons to be bound and looſed as having contracted guilt by, or as being abſolved from the guilt of thoſe things. Note,

2*dly*, That λύειν, to looſe, in ſcripture and the Jewiſh writers, hath relation to ſin and the pardon of it: So Job 42. 9. Job prayed for his three friends, and God accepted the face of Job, καὶ ἔλυσεν ἁμαρτίαν αὐτοῖς, and forgave their ſin: So Eccluſ 28. 2. Forgive the injury of thy brother; and ſo when thou prayeſt, ἁμαρτίαι σου λυθήσονται, thy ſins ſhall be forgiven: And then, by the rule of contraries, τὸ δῆσαι, to bind, muſt be to retain their ſins or leave them under the guilt, and obnoxious to the puniſhment of them. Thus, becauſe a vow or oath renders us obnoxious to puniſhment upon a tranſgreſſion of it, the perſon thus vowing or ſwearing, is ſaid to bind his ſoul by a bond, Num. 30. 4, 11. And in the Jewiſh phraſe, to bind, is to forbid, under the penalty of God's diſpleaſure: So Numb. 11. 28. Moſes, Maſter forbid them; Oſarnun, bind them, ſaith the Chaldee; and to looſe, is to permit the doing this or that, and to pronounce them free from ſin and and punishment, or God's displeasure, though they do it. So in this very Chapter, the Lord of that servant had compassion on him, and ἀπέλυσεν, he loosed him, and forgave him the debt: And the woman that had a spirit of infirmity, is said to be loosed from it, Luke 13. 12. by the remission of the temporal punishment inflicted on her for her sin: This being premised, these words may have a threefold interpretation.

1*st*, The first is that of the fathers, That whosoever doth thus admonish his brother as our Lord commands, if he refuse to hearken to his admonition, and herefore be esteemed by him as a heathen, he is bound by him, and shall be bound in heaven, and being moved by his admonition to that repentance which obliges his brother to remit his sin, shall be loosed in heaven. So (g) Origen. He speaks not thus, say (h) Chrysostom and Theophylact, to the ruler of the Church, but to the injured person: For not he whom the priest alone, but those whom the offended persons bind or loose, are bound and loosed. And when thou, saith St. (i) Austin, holdest thy brother an heathen or a publican, thou hast bound him upon earth; when thou hast procured his amendment, solvisti eum in terra, thou hast loosed him upon earth. Now this solution and ligation, which, saith Origen, agrees best with the context, being the work of any Christian, who doth thus thrice admonish, and reprove his brother, and who being the person injured, is the most proper to loose or pardon the offence, can be no evidence of any infallible authority annexed to it, unless we do suppose all private Christians to be infallible; and so, according to this import of them, these words cannot be fitly used to plead for an infallible authority in the governors of the Church.

2*dly*, Others say with St. Jerom here, These words are spoken to the Apostles, to whom our Lord directeth his discourse in this whole Chapter; and this may be confirmed from St. Luke, who tells us, that when our Lord had warned them, against giving scandal to his little ones, and bid them, when their brother sinned against them, to rebuke him, Chap. 17. 5. that the Apostles said unto him, Lord, increase our faith; when therefore he saith here, λέγω ὑμῖν, I say unto you, he must speak to the Apostles.

Moreover, our Lord had spoken these very words to St. Peter, Chap. 16. 19. where they can have no relation to this matter of reproof, and therefore may be well supposed here to give the like authority to his Apostles in the general. Let it be then remembered, that to bind, is to declare a thing forbidden, i. e. not to be done, under pain of the divine displeasure; to loose, is to absolve from obligation to do, or to abstain from such an action, or to say, God will not hold us guilty for the doing, or omitting of it. In which sense Isis in (k) Diodorus Siculus seems to say, Ὅσα ἐγὼ δήσω, οὐδεὶς δυνήσεται λύσαι, I am the Queen of this country, and whatsoever things I bind, (require or forbid, under pain of my displeasure,) no man can loose, (or exempt you from punishment upon disobedience:) And then the sense of these words will run thus: Nor shall you only in these cases, have power as Christians, to loose your repenting, and bind your obstinately offending brother; but as you are my Apostles, to whom I have promised my spirit, to teach you all things, and lead you into all truth, John 16. 13.——14. 26. Whatsoever things ye shall bind on earth, or shall declare to be forbidden under pain of my displeasure, shall render them indeed obnoxious to my wrath; and whatsoever things ye shall loose on earth, (though once required by divine authority, of those who owned the law of Moses,) shall be loosed in heaven, and men shall be allowed to do them without incursing my displeasure. And in this sense, this promise is the foundation of our obligation to believe and obey all the commands and doctrines of the Apostles, and of the cessation of the ritual precepts of the law of Moses.

3*dly*, Others conceive, these words were spoken to the Apostles and their successors, and that they give them power to excommunicate the stubborn criminal, and to absolve the penitent: But then, (1.) It is confessed on all hands, that this power of excommunication and absolution belongs severally to every priest; according to those words of (l) Lombard, omnes & soli sacerdotes recipiunt potestatem clavium, all priests, and they alone have the power of the keys; and then, surely it makes nothing for infallibility. (2.) The text plainly speaks of matters criminal, which are the only object of the Church's censure, and not of articles of faith: Now even Romanists themselves acknowledge, that the Church may err in paſſing judgment of theſe things, becauſe in caſes of this nature, ſhe depends on human teſtimony; and therefore it is certain, that nothing can be hence concluded, concerning the infallibility of councils, or any articles of faith defined by them.

Ver. 19. [l] Πάλιν λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι ἐὰν δύο ὑμῶν συμφωνήσωσιν, Again I ſay unto you, That if two of you ſhall agree upon earth, as touching any thing that they ſhall aſk, &c. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, &c.] Here again,

1*ſt*, One ancient expoſition of theſe words refers them to the offended perſon, and the injurious perſon repenting of his ſin, of whom it may be reaſonably ſuppoſed, that he will not only aſk God pardon for his ſin, but will intreat his offended brother to aſſiſt him in ſo doing, and then theſe words aſſure him, that the prayer of faith put up in the name of Chriſt, ſhall obtain his pardon; the prayer of faith being effectual, not only for the recovery of the ſick, but alſo for the remiſſion of his ſins, James 5. 14, 15. This expoſition of the words, we find twice in (m) St. Baſil, and in other fathers; but it is liable to this objection, that it reſtrains theſe words to one particular, viz. the pardon of the penitent; whereas it is, περὶ παντὸς πράγματος, concerning any thing that they ſhall aſk. And therefore,

2*dly*, Others reſtrain theſe words to the Apoſtles, looking on them as a promiſe peculiarly made to them, as thoſe words, I ſay to you, ſeem to inſinuate; ſo (n) Chryſoſtom, Euthymius, and Theophylact: And then the coherence will run thus, viz. And you may be aſſured of this aſſiſtance of the ſpirit, in any matter reſpecting the diſcharge of your apoſtolical function, if you unanimouſly conſent to aſk it in my name, i. e. by interceding to the Father in my name; according to theſe words of Chriſt, Hitherto have ye aſked nothing in my name; aſk, and ye ſhall receive, John 16. 24. and ver. 26. In that day ſhall ye aſk the Father in my name: Thus do they pray for ſigns and miracles to be done in the name of Jeſus; and doing this they were all filled with the Holy Ghoſt, Acts 4. 29, 30, 31. Now, according to either of theſe interpretations, it is evident, that theſe words can afford no argument for the infallibility of councils in their deciſions.

Ver. 21. [k] Then came Peter to him, and ſaid, Lord, Ποσάκις ἁμαρτήσει εἰς ἐμὲ ὁ ἀδελφός μου, καὶ ἀφήσω αὐτῷ, ἕως ἑπτάκις; How oft ſhall my brother offend againſt me, and I forgive him, till ſeven times?] The determination of the rabbins in this caſe, runs thus, That three offences are to be remitted, but not the fourth; and this they gathered from thoſe words, For three tranſgreſſions, and for four, I will not turn away my wrath, Amos 1. 3. St. Peter puts the three and four together, as perhaps others of their doctors did, and aſks, Whether he muſt forgive till ſeven times? Of this forgiveneſs, ſee Note on Matth. 6. 14, 15.

Ver. 23. [l] Διὰ τοῦτο ὡμοιώθη ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν, The kingdom of heaven may be likened to a certain King, &c.] i. e. ſo will God deal with Chriſtian profeſſors under the Goſpel, as this King did with his ſervants: From this parable ſome inferences may be practically, ſome doctrinally made. The practical inferences are theſe; (1.) From ver. 33. οὐκ ἐδεῖ καὶ σὲ, ſince I forgave thee ten thouſand talents, oughteſt not thou to have forgiven thy fellow-ſervant his hundred pence? We learn the equity of this unlimited forgiveneſs of our brother here required, becauſe our God, and Saviour, have forgiven us more numerous and heinous ſins, than our brother is capable of committing againſt us. (2.) The Lord forgiving here his ſervant, becauſe he had not wherewith to pay, ver. 25, 27. and being angry with him, becauſe he would not have compaſſion on his fellow-ſervant; but went and caſt him into priſon, not having patience with him till he ſhould pay the debt: This ſeemeth to bear hard on thoſe unmerciful and unchriſtian creditors, who caſt poor men, who they know have nothing to pay, into priſon for their debt; augmenting thus their debt by the gaolers fees, and rendering them leſs able to pay than they were before; and ſo rendering their brother's ſtate more miſerable, and their debt from him as deſperate as ever. For ſure, he that bids us lend, hoping for nothing again, will not allow us to impriſon, where nothing can be hoped for; and it is to be feared, that men ſo unmerciful may find but little mercy at that day: For, if it be a crime that will be then objected to our condemnation, that we did not viſit Chriſtians when in priſon, what will it be to caſt them into priſon?

The doctrinal obſervation, which truly ſeems to be inferable from this text, is this, That ſins once forgiven, may by our forfeiture of that pardon by our miſdemeanors, be again charged upon us: For after this Lord had forgiven his ſervant the whole debt, ver. 27. he being angry with him for his unmerciful deportment towards his fellow-ſervant, delivers him to the tormentors, till he ſhould pay all that was due to him, ver. 34. and then then it follows, so likewise will my heavenly Father do to you, ver. 35. The conclusion from this place, saith Dr. Hammond, is this, That God's pardons in this life are not absolute; but, according to the petition of the Lord's prayer, answerable to our dealings with others, and so conditional, and are no longer likely to be continued to us, than we perform the condition.

Object. It remains only, that I answer the objection of Crellius from this place, against the satisfaction of our Lord, viz. "That in this parable, God is compared to a King, remitting "a great debt to his servant, without satisfac- "tion or payment made, only because he desired "him, and requiring others to imitate his com- "passion towards their fellow-servants; where- "as, if God remits no sin, without requiring sa- "tisfaction, he is not duly represented, by a "King that remits a debt, merely because his "servant begged him so to do; nor can we by "this example be induced to a free forgiveness "of our brother's sins, without a satisfaction "made to us: For, how can we be moved to "such forgiveness by his example, who will not "forgive our sins without satisfaction made to "his justice?"

Answ. To this a plain and satisfactory answer will arise from these considerations,

1*st*, That all a Governor can inflict on the account of sin, is punishment; all that the sinner can undergo by reason of it, is some penal evil; and therefore, all that forgiveness of the sinner can imply, is the exempting him from punishment, or from the evil to which he was obnoxious by sin.

2*dly*, That by admitting another to suffer in my stead, I am as much forgiven as I could be, did he not suffer in my stead, because I am as much freed from suffering any punishment on the account of my offence; and, how can I be more forgiven, than I am by such an act, as removes from me the whole punishment, as much as if I never had offended? That God requires such conditions as faith and repentance, in order to our freedom from the guilt of sin, is by the Socinians themselves allowed to be no bar to the freedom of God's grace and mercy in the pardon of it: The reason is, because there is nothing of suffering contained in these conditions, and so nothing by way of satisfaction or punishment for sin required. Hence then it is evident, That the example of this forgiveness may reasonably induce us, to require no satisfaction of him who hath offended us, because God required none of us when we had offended. And the parable here may well press us to a free forgiveness of our brother, by the example of that God, who hath required no suffering at all from us in order to the pardon of our sins.

CHAP. XIX.

1. AND it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judea, beyond Jordan, (to the place where John was baptizing at the first, John 10. 40.)

2. And great multitudes followed him, and (he taught them as he was wont, Mark 10. 1. and) he healed them there.

3. [a] The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife (as some of our doctors say) for every cause?

4. [b] And (but) he answered, and said unto them, Have ye not read, that he who made them at the beginning (of the creation, Mark 10. 6.) made them male and female?

5. And said (also,) For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh.

6. Wherefore (by virtue of this institution) they are no more twain, but one flesh; what therefore God hath joined (thus) together, let no man (by divorcing) put asunder.

7. [c] They say unto him (if this be so) Why did Moses then command to give (to the woman) a writing of divorcement, and (so) to put her away? (He answering (to this,) saith unto them, What did Moses command you? Mark 10. 3. Then they said, Moses permitted (us) to write a bill of divorce, and to send her away, ver. 4. Then,)

8. He saith unto them, Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts (writ that commandment unto you, Mark 10. 5. by which he) suffered you to put away your wives; but from the beginning it was not so, (no divorce being allowed or practised before.)

9. [d] And (therefore) I (who came to reduce things to their primitive perfection,) say unto you, (That under the Gospel dispensation) Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery (with that other;) and whoso marrieth her that is put away committeth adultery (with her.)

10. His disciples say unto him, [e] If the case of the man be so with his wife (that he must be still bound to her,) it is not good to marry.

11. But

11. But he ſaid unto them, [f] All men cannot receive this (that) ſaying, ſave (but) they (only) to whom it is given; (i. e. they only can lead a pure ſingle life, who by a ſpecial gift of God, are enabled ſo to do; ſome indeed muſt do it.)

12. For there are ſome eunuchs, which were ſo born from their mother's womb; and there are ſome eunuchs which were made eunuchs of men; and (ſome reſolve upon it, that they may be fitter to ſerve God without diſtraction; for) there be eunuchs that have made themſelves (as) eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's ſake: (And here the rule is this;) He that is able to receive it, let him receive it. (He that by this ſpecial gift of God is enabled to retain his virgin, may do well to do ſo.)

13. [g] Then were there brought to him little children, that he ſhould (touch them, and) put his hands on them, and pray (over them,) and (but) his diſciples rebuked them (that brought them.)

14. But Jeſus (being much diſpleaſed at this action of his diſciples, Mark 10. 14.) ſaid (unto them) Suffer little children, and forbid them not to come to me; for of ſuch is the kingdom of heaven; (nor ſhall any man enter into it, who becomes not like unto them, Mark 10. 15.)

15. And he laid his hands on them, and (bleſſing them) departed thence.

16. And behold one came, and ſaid to him, Good maſter, what good thing ſhall I do, that I may have eternal life?

17. And he ſaid to him, [h] Why calleſt thou me good? (i. e. Why giveſt thou me a title not aſcribed to your renowned Rabbins, nor due to any mere man? Thinkeſt thou, there is in me any thing more than human, or that the Father dwelleth in me? This thou oughteſt to believe, if thou conceiveſt this title truly doth belong to me, ſeeing) there is none good but one, that is, God: But (to thy queſtion, I ſay,) [i] if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

18. He ſaith unto him, Which? Jeſus ſaid, (Thou knoweſt the commandments to be theſe, Mark 10. 19.) Thou ſhalt do no murder; Thou ſhalt not commit adultery; Thou ſhalt not ſteal; Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſs:

19. Honour thy father and thy mother, and thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf.

20. The young man ſaith to him, (maſter,) All theſe things have I kept from my youth up: What lack I yet?

21. Jeſus (then beholding him, loved him, Mark 10. 21. and) ſaid to him, (one thing is yet lacking to thee,) [k] if thou wilt be perfect, (fully inſtructed in the higheſt duties of my doctrine, they are theſe,) Go, and (now I require it,) ſell that thou haſt, and give to the poor, and thou ſhalt have treaſure in heaven; and come and follow me, (taking up thy croſs, Mark 10. 21.)

22. But when the young man heard that ſaying, he went away (from Chriſt) ſorrowful; for he had great poſſeſſions (on earth, which he could not part with for treaſures in heaven.)

23. Then ſaid Jeſus to his diſciples, verily I ſay to you, that a rich man ſhall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

24. And again I ſay unto you, [l] It is eaſier for a camel (or a cable-rope) to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man (who truſteth in his riches, Mark 10. 24.) to enter into the kingdom of God.

25. When his diſciples heard it, (this) they were exceedingly amazed, ſaying, Who then can be ſaved?

26. But Jeſus beheld them, and ſaid unto them, With men this is impoſſible, but with God all things are poſſible; (i. e. Human perſuaſion can hardly thus take off mens hearts from the world, but the power of God can do it.)

27. Then anſwered Peter, and ſaid unto him, Behold, we have forſaken all, and followed thee; what ſhall we have therefor?

28. And Jeſus ſaid to them, Verily I ſay to you, that ye who have (thus) followed me (now) [m] in the regeneration, (or this new ſtate of things,) when the Son of man ſhall ſit in the throne of his glory, ye alſo ſhall ſit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael; (i. e. you ſhall be the chief miniſters in my kingdom, to preach that doctrine to the Jews, by which they ſhall be judged, Luke 22. 29. See the Note.)

29. And every one that hath forſaken houſes, or brethren, or ſiſters, or father, or mother, or wife or children, or lands for my name's ſake, [n] ſhall receive an hundred fold (now in this life with perſecution, Mark 10. 30. i. e. they ſhall have more and greater bleſſings than they part with here,) and ſhall inherit everlaſting life (hereafter.)

30. But many that are (now) firſt, ſhall be laſt; and (they that are now) the laſt, ſhall be firſt; (i. e. the Jews, to whom the bleſſings of this kingdom are firſt to be offered, ſhall be the laſt that ſhall partake of them; and the Genilte, to whom they are to be offered after them, ſhall firſt enjoy them.)

ANNO

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XIX.

Ver. 3. [a] AND the Pharisees came unto him, tempting him, and saying, εἰ ἔξεστιν ἀνθρώπῳ ἀπολῦσαι τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ κατὰ πᾶσαν αἰτίαν; Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?] The school of Hillel taught, That a man might put away his wife for any cause, because this divorce was permitted, if she found not grace in his eyes, Deut. 24. 1. and this was suitable to the current practice and exposition of these words. For that which we render, The Lord saith, he hateth putting away, Mal. 2. 16. is by the Chaldee and the Septuagint rendered thus, The Lord saith, ἐὰν μισήσας, ἀπόστελλε, If thou hatest, thou shouldst put her away. And the son of Syrach saith, Chap. 25. 26. If she go not as thou wouldst have her, cut her from off thy flesh, give her a bill of divorce, and let her go. And (a) Josephus saith, the law runs thus, He that would be disjoined from his wife, καθ' ὁτιοῦν αἰτίας, πολλαὶ δ' ἂν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τοιαῦται γίνοιντο, for any cause whatsoever, as many such causes there are, let him give her a bill of divorce: And he confesseth, that he himself (b) put away his wife after she had born him three children, μὴ ἀρεσκόμενος αὐτῆς τοῖς ἤθεσι, because he was not pleased with her behaviour. The school of Sammah determined on the contrary, that the wife was only to be put away for adultery, because it is said, Because he hath found some uncleanness in her. The Pharisees seek the resolution of this question from Christ, tempting him, i. e. to induce him to decide this question, either against the law of Moses, or else, as he must do, against the determination of one of these two famous schools, and so to render him offensive to them.

Ver. 4. [b] But he answering, said unto them, Have ye not read, that he who made them at the beginning, made them ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ, male and female? —— καὶ ἔφη οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν, and they two shall be one flesh;] i. e. God, by making them at first male and female, made them so, that they might cleave together, so as to become one flesh; and when they have, after a mutual consent to enter into that relation, done so, they are no more two, but one flesh; and therefore are not to be separated, unless by cleaving so unto another, they have made themselves one flesh with that other. That this is the effect of this conjunction with one another, seems evident, (1.) From those words of the Apostle, 1 Cor. 6. 16. Know ye not, that he that is joined to an harlot, is one body with her; for two, saith he, i. e. God, shall be one flesh. And (2.) From the inference ὥστε, so that they, after this conjunction, are no more two, but one flesh; and those whom God from the beginning hath thus framed, and of whom he hath thus spoken, let no man put asunder: God himself, who binds, may see cause to permit in some cases the solution of this obligation, to prevent cruelty, and other mischiefs, as he did to the Jews, by reason of the hardness of their hearts, allowing a divorce; but, without such permission, no man ought to do it. There seems to be something like this in that of (c) Hierocles, that ἐπὶ γάμον ἔκλεινεν ἡ φύσις, Nature prompts us to marriage, in that she hath made us συνδυαστικὰς, so that two should live together, and have one common work to beget children. And that tale of (d) Plato, in his Convivium, That man at first was made male and female, and that Jupiter cleft them asunder, and so there was a natural love of one to the other, ἐπιχειροῦν ποιῆσαι ἓν ἐκ δυοῖν, καὶ ἰάσασθαι τὴν φύσιν τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην, endeavouring to make one again of two, and to heal human nature, seems to be only a corruption of the story in Genesis, that Eve was made out of Adam's rib. See Additions No 25.

Ver. 7, 8. [c] They say unto him, Τί οὖν Μωσῆς ἐνετείλατο δοῦναι βιβλίον ἀποστασίου, καὶ ἀπολῦσαι; Why then did Moses command, to give her a bill of divorce, and put her away?] Here it is to be noted, that Moses commanded no man to divorce his wife, but only ἐπέτρεψεν; he permitted in some cases the doing of it; but then he acting in this as God's minister, it must be a divine permission. Note, 2*dly,* That it was a limited permission, viz. only to do it after such a manner, viz. by writing a bill of divorce, and putting it into her hand; for, if this might have been done by word of mouth, or otherwise, it might have occasioned great evil on both sides; for the woman might have pretended, when she liked another better than her husband, that she had been divorced, and so might marry him; and the man might rashly have divorced his wife upon any little quarrel; and never be in a condition of having her any longer as his wife: To prevent which divorces upon such a sudden pet, it was the custom to ask the person who came for a bill of divorce, before they delivered it to him, Whether his yea were yea? i. e. whether he continued in a settled resolution to put away his wife. See Note on 2 Cor. 1. 17. But the great question is, Whether this permiſſion excuſed this divorce from ſin, or only from puniſhment? That it could not excuſe him that divorced his wife, from ſin, is argued, (1.) Becauſe our Saviour decides this queſtion negatively, and that by reaſon of God's own inſtitution, founded upon nature, ver. 4, 5. and repreſents the permiſſion mentioned by Moſes, as contrary to it, ver. 8. Now all tranſgreſſion of divine law is ſin. (2.) Becauſe Chriſt ſaith, this permiſſion was only granted to them for the hardneſs of their hearts. Now, whatſoever is done upon that principle is ſinful. (3.) And eſpecially, ſince otherwiſe it follows, that divorces are only evil, becauſe forbidden, and ſo are only ſins againſt a poſitive command, and not forbidden, becauſe evil, or becauſe contrary to the law of nature; and then, either adultery can be no ſin againſt the law of nature, or elſe Chriſt could not truly ſay, that he that putteth away his wife, and marries another, committeth adultery againſt her.

But, on the other hand, that this permiſſion excuſed thoſe Jews, who made theſe divorces according to the law, not only from puniſhment by man, but alſo from fault before God, and more eſpecially from being guilty of adultery, is evident, (1.) From the permiſſion given to the woman thus divorced, to marry with another, Deut. 24. 2. which plainly ſhews the bond of matrimony muſt by it be diſſolved, ſince otherwiſe this muſt be a permiſſion to be an adultereſs. (2.) From the prohibition of the perſon thus divorcing her, to receive her again as his wife; which yet he was bound to do, if the bond of matrimony ſtill continued; and ſhe was ſtill in truth his wife. And, (3.) becauſe otherwiſe the whole commonwealth of Judea, by a divine permiſſion, muſt be filled with adulteries, and with a ſpurious offſpring. To anſwer therefore to the former arguments:

1*ſt*, It is granted that, as our Saviour ſays, theſe divorces were indeed contrary to the equity and genuine intention of God's primitive inſtitution of matrimony; but then it muſt be added that God by Moſes diſpenſed with his own inſtitution; and that Chriſt only ſays, that, under his new law, this diſpenſation ſhould not obtain, but that he would have his diſciples to act according to the primitive inſtitution.

2*dly*, In anſwer to the ſecond argument, it may be ſaid, that what was permitted to the Jews, by reaſon of the hardneſs of their hearts, was no leſs permitted, than what they were allowed to do, by reaſon of the indifference of the thing. Whatſoever therefore was the cauſe of this permiſſion, it is certain, that which was permitted could not at the ſame time be forbidden, and therefore could not be a fault, or that which God would puniſh in them.

3*dly*, To the third argument it may be anſwered, That a thing may be ſaid to be according to the law of nature two ways: (1) Becauſe nature doth direct us to it by the proviſions it hath made for ſuch an end; in which ſenſe it is natural for women to give ſuck to their children; or by the relation in which it hath placed us, in which ſenſe the Apoſtle ſaith, that even nature teacheth the woman to be covered in the church aſſemblies, and to wear long hair; ſee the Note on 1 Cor. 11. 13. or by the frame and conſtitution of things, in which ſenſe man and wife are one fleſh, and therefore ought not to ſeparate from one another. And Chriſtians ought, where greater reaſon doth not interveen, to act according to that which is thus ſuitable to the law of nature. Or, (2.) Becauſe the law of nature doth require it as neceſſary in reaſon to be done, or doth forbid it, by reaſon of ſome moral turpitude, which always of neceſſity adhereth to the action; in which ſenſe it may be ſaid, that divorces and polygamy are not againſt a law of nature, but only againſt a poſitive command. And whereas it is objected, that then adultery will be no ſin againſt the law of nature, I anſwer, that as adultery imports the lying of an huſband with another who is confeſſedly not his wife, or of a wife with another whom ſhe knows not to be her huſband, it is unqueſtionably a ſin againſt the law of nature, as being contrary to faith plighted by them; contrary to juſtice, as being giving that to others which is not your own; and contrary to the good of families and commonwealths, as filling them with a ſpurious offſpring, and looſing the bonds of conſanguinity and affinity. But then, if the polygamiſt then uſed only thoſe to whom by matrimony he was contracted, there was not the like injury or injuſtice done: Nor can I think that Abraham, Jacob, David, and other pious men, would have had more wives, or wives and concubines, had this been a plain violation of the law of nature; nor would God have ſo highly approved of them, had they lived in adultery. And, if divorce untied the bond of matrimony, it gives that liberty to each party, which cannot be allowed of whilſt that bond continues; and ſo there could not be the ſame cauſe of blame or guilt in their cohabiting with another; it therefore may be granted that theſe were rather ſins againſt a poſitive or natural directive, than a moral precept or law of nature.

Ver. 9. [d] And I ſay unto you, Ὃς ἂν ἀπολύσῃ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, εἰ μὴ ἐπὶ πορνείᾳ, καὶ γαμήσῃ ἄλλην, μοιχᾶται, Whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, except cept it be for fornication, and ſhall marry another, committeth adultery.] Here it ſeems evident that Chriſt preſcribes a new law, which had not before obtained among the Jews; divorce being permitted to them for other cauſes: For, though it be ſaid, Deut. 24. 1. he muſt find ſome matter of uncleanneſs in her, yet that cannot ſignify fornication or adultery, ſeeing for theſe things ſhe was by the law to die by ſtoning, if ſhe committed fornication before her marriage was compleated, Deut. 22. 24. by ſtrangling, ſay the Jews, in caſe of adultery, ver. 22. (2*dly*,) Becauſe this divorce was permitted to all, except the perſon who falſly pretended he found her not a maid; for that law ſo peculiar to him, he may not put her away all his days, Deut. 22. 19. ſhews that others were permitted ſo to do. Now adultery, being a ſin againſt the law of nature, could be permitted upon no account. And, (3*dly*,) any other, excepting only the High Prieſt, Lev. 21. 7. might marry her who was thus put away, Deut. 24. 2. whereas it could be lawful for no man to commit adultery with her. See alſo the Note on Mark 10. 10, 11.

Moreover, whereas all commentators I have met with, by fornication here do underſtand adultery, or the defiling of the marriage-bed, I incline rather to take the word in its proper ſenſe, for fornication committed before matrimony, and found after cohabitation. (1.) Becauſe Chriſt, ſpeaking of this divorce here and elſewhere, doth never uſe the word μοιχεία, which ſignifies adultery, but always πορνεία, Matth. 5. 32. which word, both among Jews and Gentiles, doth properly import the ſin of unmarried perſons lying one with another, and ſo being made one body, 1 Cor. 6. 16. It is not therefore likely that Chriſt receded from the known and common acceptation of the word. (2.) The puniſhment of adultery after marriage, was ſtrangling; after ſponſalia, ſtoning; divorce not being mentioned in either caſe; but ſimple fornication was not thus puniſhed by the Jews. And, (3.) by this interpretation the law of marriage is by Chriſt reduced to its primitive inſtitution; that conjunction with another makes them both one fleſh; and ſo the woman who had thus tranſgreſſed, was to be diſmiſſed, becauſe ſhe before was one fleſh with another, and therefore could not be ſo with the man to whom ſhe afterwards did marry. Note alſo hence, that according to either interpretation, where it is lawful to put away the wife, it is ſo to marry again. For, (1*ſt*,) ſuch were the divorces of the Jews, of which Chriſt ſpeaks. And, (2*dly*,) Chriſt by pronouncing ſuch divorces, as were not for this cauſe, adulterous in him that married another, doth plainly inſinuate, there was no ſuch crime committed in this caſe, and then the marriage muſt be diſſolved by that act. See Additions, N° 26.

Ver. 10. e If the caſe of a man be ſo with his wife, it is not good to marry.] If under the prohibition of divorce, that of polygamy had not been contained, there would have been no cauſe for this inference of Chriſt's diſciples, ſeeing they might have had a remedy, by taking one or more other wives, whom they loved better; nor would there have been any ground for Chriſt's diſcourſe, of making themſelves eunuchs for the kingdom of God. See Additions, N° 27.

Ver. 11. f Οὐ πάντες χωροῦσι τὸν λόγον τοῦτον, All men cannot receive this ſaying;] i. e. All men cannot live ſingle, and abſtain from matrimony: Whence it follows, that men and women are not by monaſtical vows to be obliged ſo to do, becauſe none ought to be by vow obliged to do that which they cannot perform without ſin. (2.) By adding, that they only can do this, to whom it is given, he ſhews this is a ſpecial gift, according to theſe words of St. Paul, I would have all men to be as I am, but every man hath his proper gift, 1 Cor. 7. 7. Now that which all men may obtain by prayer, temperance, and faſting, and ſuch like ordinary means, cannot be called a ſpecial gift, or a gift proper to ſome. And, (3.) Some, ſaith Chriſt, have made themſelves eunuchs, i. e. abſtained from matrimony for the kingdom of heaven, i. e. to be more expedite in preaching the Goſpel, or more fit to regard only the things of the Lord, 1 Cor. 7. 34. He that can receive it, let him receive it, which laſt words ſufficiently intimate all men cannot do ſo.

Ver. 13, 14. g They brought unto him little children, that he ſhould put his hands upon them, and pray;] This being the Goſpel uſed by our Church at the celebration of infants baptiſm, it will be neceſſary to ſhew the fitneſs of it for that purpoſe. Note therefore,

1*ſt*, That theſe little children being ſtiled, τὰ βρέφη, infants, Luke 18. 15. and taken up in Chriſt's arms, Mark 10. 16. it is plain that they were children not yet come to the age of diſcretion; for βρέφος, according to Euſtathius and Phavorinus, is, τὸ ἄρτι γεγονὸς παιδίον, καὶ τρεφόμενον ἀπὸ τῆθης, a new-born child, nouriſhed from the teat, from his birth, till he be four years old. So 1 Pet. 2. 2. whence they do not come to Chriſt, but are brought to him.

2*dly*, They ſeem to be brought to Chriſt by thoſe who believed he was a Prophet ſent from God, not from thoſe who had other thoughts of him; for why ſhould they deſire for their children his prayers, or the impoſition of his hands?

3*dly*, Theſe children were not brought to be healed of any bodily diſtemper, for then the diſciples would not have hindred them, but that he ſhould bleſs them, and pray over them; which ſhews that they were capable of ſpiritual bleſſings, and may receive advantage by prayers, and that he might lay his hands upon them. Now this impoſition of hands could not be to prepare them for any office, nor ſeems it deſigned to procure to them any remiſſion of ſin, of which the Jews conceived not infants guilty, (tho' this would prove them capable of ſome means by which their ſins might be pardoned,) but to obtain for them ſome ſpiritual bleſſing appertaining to the kingdom of God; or (as Dr. Lightfoot ſaith, by this rite to admit them into the number of his diſciples, or) to own them as belonging to his kingdom. And,

4*thly*, From the reaſon why Chriſt would have them ſuffered to come to him, viz. for of ſuch is the kingdom of God; it appears there is ſomething in little children, why they ſhould not be hindred from coming to him, beſides their being emblems of humility; for this they are as much when they come not, as when they come; now what can that be, but the fitneſs of them to be early dedicated to the ſervice of God, and to enter into covenant with him by rites appointed by him for that end. And hence the ancients looked upon this as a ſufficient ground for (c) infants baptiſm, as appears even from (d) Tertullian, whilſt he ſhews his diſlike of the euſtom.

Object. But, ſay the Antipædo-baptiſts, Chriſt neither did baptize them, nor command the Apoſtles to do it.

Anſw. That is not to be wondered at, if we conſider, that they already had entred into covenant with God by circumciſion, and Chriſtian baptiſm was not yet inſtituted; and, 2*dly*, That the baptiſm, then uſed by John and Chriſt's diſciples, was only the baptiſm of repentance, and faith in the Meſſiah, which was for to come, Acts 19. 4. of both which infants were incapable, but not of being conſecrated to God from their infancy, as Samſon, Judg. 13. 7. and Samuel, 1 Sam. 1. 11. or of entering into covenant with God, Deut. 29. 11, 15. as all the male infants of the Jews did by circumciſion. 2*dly*, Chriſt here ſpeaks not of thoſe children only, but of children in general, ſuffer little children to come to me, he adds a reaſon common to them all, for of ſuch is the kingdom of heaven; which if it import, they are fit to be admitted into Chriſt's Church and kingdom, as they were into the Jewiſh Church; they muſt be fit to receive Chriſtian baptiſm, that being the only means of entering into Chriſt's kingdom; if he means only that they are fit emblems of humility, what reaſon can be hence given, why they ſhould on this account be brought to Chriſt, that he might lay his hands upon them? or why ſhould he be ſo diſpleaſed that they ſhould be forbidden to come to him? See Additions N° 28.

Ver. 17. [h] Τί με λέγεις ἀγαθόν; οὐδεὶς ἀγαθὸς εἰ μὴ εἷς, ὁ Θεὸς, Why calleſt thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God.] Here it is acknowledged, that many of the moſt (e) ancient fathers, read God my Father. That other reading of ſome (f) fathers, why aſkeſt thou me concerning good? is neither in the Syriack, nor in any of the Evangeliſts, and ſo it ſeemeth to be only of a later date. Now from this place the Socinians argue thus againſt the Deity of Chriſt; he to whom the title of Good doth not belong, cannot be God moſt High; by our Lord's own words this title belongs not to him, but only to God the Father; and therefore God the Father muſt be God alone: And whereas ſome of the Poſt-nicene fathers anſwer, that this young man ſaid, Good Maſter, out of flattery or ignorance, looking upon Chriſt as a meer man, and ſo Chriſt anſwers, Why calleſt thou me good, whom thou doſt not acknowledge to be God? This, ſay they, is an addition to the text, without any ground from Chriſt's words, yea, in oppoſition to them, he ſaying, that one thing only was lacking to him, viz. that he ſhould ſell all, &c. whereas the knowledge that Chriſt was God muſt alſo be lacking to him, and ſo two things, according to the Trinitarian hypotheſis. To this it might be anſwered, that when our Lord ſaith, one thing is lacking to thee, he reſpects not his knowledge, but his practice, intending not to ſay what was lacking in him as to the knowledge of himſelf, for it appears not this young man owned him as the promiſed Meſſiah; but to inſtruct him what was yet lacking to perfect his obedience to the commandments of God. Or, 2*dly*, That the Deity of Chriſt being not then revealed ſo fully as afterwards it was, might not then be neceſſary ceſſary to be believed to ſalvation. But not to inſiſt farther on this anſwer; I reply,

2*dly*, That Chriſt may be ſuppoſed to ſpeak to this young man thus, Thou giveſt me a title which is never given to your moſt renowned rabbins, and which agrees to God alone; Doſt thou therefore think there is any thing in me more than human, or that the Father dwelleth in me? This thou oughteſt to believe, if thou conceiveſt this title truly doth belong to me, ſeeing there is but one that is good, that is God. To confirm this interpretation let it be conſidered, that Chriſt in preaching to the Jews aſſerted two things of himſelf; (1*ſt*,) That he was a Prophet ſent from God, even that Prophet that ſhould come into the world. (2*dly*,) That he had given them clear evidence of his commiſſion from his Father, by the works done by the power of God, which manifeſtly ſhewed that God dwelt in him, and that he was in the Father, and the Father in him, ſo that he and the Father were one; for ſo he ſpeaks, I and the Father am one; And if I do not the works of my Father, believe me not; but if I do, though you believe not me, believe the works, that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in the Father, John 10. 30, 37, 38.——14. 8, 9, 10. which words the Jews ſo apprehended that they pronounced him guilty of blaſphemy, for that being a man, he made himſelf God, John 10. 31, 33. He therefore might well ſay to this young man, Why calleſt thou me good maſter? unleſs thou believeſt I am a teacher ſent from God, ſeeing he who falſly pretends this, cannot be a good maſter, or a teacher of truth; nor canſt thou own me as a Prophet ſent from God, but from my works; from which I have proved, that I am in the Father, and the Father in me, yea, that I am one with the Father, and ſo partake with him of the title of Good.

3*dly*, Mareſius well anſwers, that the Father being the fountain of the whole Deity, muſt in ſome ſenſe be the fountain of the goodneſs and wiſdom of the Son. The Son, ſaith Dr. Bull, is rightly ſtiled, the perfect and adequate image of his Father's goodneſs, as he derives that goodneſs, as he doth all his other attributes with the divine nature, from the Father; and thus to be the fountain of good may belong only to the Father. Hence even the heathens have declared, that of all the perfections of the Deity, that of ἀγαθὸς good, was the moſt proper, he being only ſtiled by them good, who was (g) ὁ πάντα διδοὺς καὶ μηδὲν λαμβάνων, He who gave all to others, but derived nothing from them; and thence they placed goodneſs, ἐν μόνῳ τῷ ἀγεννήτῳ, in him only who was unbegotten. And in this ſenſe many of the Ante-nicene fathers owned that the word did ſignally and moſt excellently agree to the Father, and to Chriſt only by reaſon of the goodneſs derived with the divine nature to him, as being God of God; or ἐκ τῆς πρὸς ἀλλήλους σχέσεως, from the eſſential relation they had to each other: As (h) Clemens Alexandrinus well explains the matter, thrice ſaying, that the Father alone is good and juſt, and yet that the Son καθὸ ὁ λόγος ὢν αὐτὸς ἐν τῷ πατρὶ ἐστι, as being the Logos, as he is in the Father, is juſt, τὸ δὲ δίκαιον ἀγαθὸν, and what is juſt is good, and concluding Θεὸν ἕνα μόνον εἶναι, ἀγαθὸν, δίκαιον, δημιουργὸν, υἱὸν ἐν πατρὶ, that there is one only God, good, juſt, the maker of all things, the Son in the Father. (i) Novatian anſwers to them who objected to the orthodox, that they owned two Gods, that if Chriſt being Lord hinders not that of the Apoſtle, there is one Lord, ſo neither did Chriſt's being good, and God, hinder there being one God, and one that is good.

Ibid. εἰ δὲ θέλεις εἰσελθεῖν εἰς ζωὴν, τήρησον τὰς ἐντολάς. But if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.] This being Chriſt's anſwer to the young man's queſtion, What good thing ſhall I do, that I may inherit eternal life? I cannot think, as many ſeem to do, that Chriſt here directs him to that way to obtain that life, which neither was, nor could be ſufficient for that end; it being certain Chriſt elſewhere ſaith the ſame thing. For to the lawyer enquiring, What ſhall I do to inherit eternal life? Chriſt anſwers, Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbour as thyſelf; this do and thou ſhalt live, Luke 10. 25, 28. Now when men came ſeriouſly to enquire of him the way to life eternal, who can imagine he would deceive them, by directing them to a way, which he well knew was not ſufficient to obtain that end? Moreover it is very evident that God in the Old Teſtament promiſeth life to them who obſerve his commandments, and pronounces them, ſuch as, he that did them ſhould live by them, Lev. 18. 5. Ezek. 20. 11. promiſing to thoſe who obſerve them, that they ſhall ſurely live, and not die, Ezek. 18. 21.——33. 15. i. e. not die eternally, ſeeing he cannot be ſuppoſed to promiſe that they ſhould not die a natural death; it is alſo as certain, that they who walked before God, as Zacharias and Elizabeth, in all the commandments of God blameleſs, were righteous in his ſight, Luke 1. 6. and were ſaid to walk before him with an upright and a perfect heart, Pſal. 18. 21, 24. and to love him with all their heart and all their ſoul. See Note on Chap. 22. 37.

(i) Cap. 30.

It is therefore certain that all pious perſons under the Old Teſtament, obtained a right to life eternal, by this obſervance of the moral precepts of the law.

Object. But againſt this, it is objected, that when the young man had ſaid, all theſe have I kept from my youth, Chriſt yet requires him to ſell all that he had, that he might be perfect, and have treaſure in heaven.

Anſw. True; but then this one thing was contained in the precept of loving, honouring, and obeying God with all his heart, for ſure he loves not God above all things, who will not, when he doth require him, part with all things to enjoy God in heaven; nor doth he obey him ſincerely, and with a perfect heart, who, when he is required by his ambaſſador to forſake them, and follow him, refuſeth ſo to do.

Object. 2. It is farther objected, that the law required perfect obedience, and could not abſolve the ſinner from the guilt of ſin.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, that to require perfect obedience to his laws, is a thing abſolutely neceſſary on the part of God, both under the old and the new covenant; for ſin being the tranſgreſſion of the law, and perfect and unſinning obedience being the ſame, if God require under the new covenant, that I ſhould not tranſgreſs any of his laws, as he moſt certainly muſt do, he muſt require me not to ſin againſt them, and ſo he muſt require perfect, that is, unſinning obedience; and as ſincere obedience, which is the condition of our acceptance with God, under the new covenant, doth not procure the pardon of our ſins committed under that covenant, but the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſin, upon our repentance, ſo though the obedience to the moral law required under the old covenant, could not abſolve the ſinner from the guilt contracted by the violations of that law, yet doth God there alſo promiſe expreſly the like pardon to the penitent, that when the wicked man turneth away from his iniquity, he ſhall not die, but live, Ezek. 18. that when he ceaſeth to do evil, and learneth to do well, though his ſins were as crimſon, he ſhall be white as wooll, Iſa. 1. 17, 18. and that their offerings, which before were vain oblations, ſhould become ſacrifices of ſweet ſavour, and procure an atonement for their ſins, if not by virtue of his inſtitution, yet certainly by virtue of the Lamb ſlain from the beginning of the world. And that God required no obedience to his law as neceſſary to ſalvation, but that which pious Jews, by virtue of that grace which he was ready to afford them, might be able to perform, is hence apparent, that he not only promiſes life to them who did obey this law, but by the ſacred penmen doth pronounce them bleſſed, ſaying, Bleſſed is the man who meditates in this law day and night, Pſal. 1. 6. Bleſſed are they who always keep judgment and do righteouſneſs, Pſal. 119. 1, 2. that he that keepeth the law is bleſſed, Prov. 29. 18. and that in keeping of it there is great reward, Pſal. 19. 12. See Pſal. 119. 1, 2. Prov. 8. 32, 34. This bleſſing therefore and reward, all pious perſons did, and had juſt reaſon to expect; and yet it is certain they could not expect it on the performance of what it was not poſſible for them to do; though therefore God ſaid to them, Curſed, i. e. obnoxious to a curſe, is every one that continueth not in all things written in this law to do them; they might be certain from the expiation and atonement he had appointed to be made for ſin, and from the gracious promiſes made by him to the penitent, that they ſhould be exempted from the guilt, and conſequently from the curſe due to thoſe tranſgreſſions, tho' they might not expreſly know that this redemption was to be procured by the death of their Meſſiah.

Object. 3. But doth not the Apoſtle intimate, that the law could not give life, by ſaying, If there had been a law which could have given life, verily juſtification ſhould have been by the law, Gal. 3. 21. that the law worketh wrath, Rom. 4. 15. and that as many as are under the law are under the curſe, Gal. 3. 10.

Anſw. All theſe things prove, that the tranſgreſſions of this law did render them obnoxious to puniſhment for the guilt of it, and that the law itſelf only requiring obedience, could not abſolve the ſinner from the guilt of his diſobedience to it, and therefore could not procure juſtification to life for the ſinner, without an act of grace temperating the rigour of the law; but yet this proves not there was no pardon to be obtained for the ſinner, upon his repentance, and faith in God, allowing an atonement for his ſin; for then there could have been no place for repentance, or a propitiatory ſacrifice under the law, and ſo no juſtification, not only by the law, which is all St. Paul aſſerts, but no juſtification, that is, no freedom from the penalty denounced by it. As therefore under the Goſpel, our juſtification or abſolution from the guilt of ſin, ariſeth not from works, but grace through faith, and yet good works, and ſincere obedience are the conditions requiſite to ſalvation, and the means neceſſary to obtain it; and therefore of our love to God, and to our neighbour as ourſelves, it may ſtill be ſaid, Do this, and live; ſo under the law, obedience to the moral precepts of it, were the conditions of, and the means means requisite to obtain the same life, and therefore of sincere obedience to it, it might well be said, Do this, and live, especially seeing under the law, faith and repentance were required for the remission of the violations of it.

And, as it is necessary from the perfection of the divine nature, and his relation to us as a Governor, to require that we should not sin, i. e. transgress any of his laws, so it is also necessary, through the imperfection of human nature, that if he will enter into covenant with lapsed, sinful man, that covenant should be a covenant of grace, or should admit of favour upon his repentance; seeing all other covenants would depend, on man's part, on an impossible condition, which is apparently equivalent to none at all, it being in effect the same to promise or engage for nothing, as only to promise something upon a condition I cannot perform.

Ver. 21. [k] Εἰ θέλεις τέλειος εἶναι· If thou wilt be perfect, sell what thou hast, and give unto the poor.] That to be perfect is to be fully instructed in our duty, hath been proved, Note on 1 Cor. 2. 6. We speak wisdom among those that are perfect, i. e. saith Theodoret, ἐν τοῖς ἀλείπτοις, καὶ τελείαν δεξαμένοις πίστιν, among those whose faith is sincere and entire; hence to know in part is opposed to τὸ τέλειον, perfect knowledge, 1 Cor. 13. 9, 10. in this sense the word גמר is used by the Rabbins, as when they say, they constitute a judge who was not Gomar, i. e. fully instructed in the knowledge of the traditions of the fathers; and tell us that one came to Hillel to be made a proselyte, and he said, do not that to another, which is odious to thyself, that is the whole law, go thy way perfect, i. e. fully instructed in thy duty, Cod. Talm. Shabbath, f. 31. Now, 1*st*, hence then we may discern the vanity of the Popish gloss upon this text, viz. if thou wilt be perfect, that is, if thou wilt obtain an higher degree of eternal life, I give thee this counsel, not simply necessary to salvation, but to obtain an higher measure of it. For sure the young man needed not have went away so sorrowful, if without obeying this counsel, as they are pleased to call it, he might have obtained that eternal life he enquired after, and which contained the whole of his desire. Note,

2*dly*, That seeing Christ here requires him, not only to withdraw his heart from an inordinate love of his possessions, but actually to sell all, and give the money to the poor, we may be sure that this was only a particular command to this young man, to convince him of the insincerity of his pretended love to life eternal, and not a precept common to all Christians. For that there were rich men in the Church, we learn from 1 Tim. 6. 17. James 1. 10.——2. 2. the Apostle John had his own house; Peter permits the Christian to retain his own, Acts 5. 4. nor doth the Apostle bid the Corinthians sell all, and give alms, but only request them to give of their abundance, 2 Cor. 8. 13. So that if riches fall into the hands of one who knoweth how to use them to God's glory, and the relief of indigent Christians, as well as to the supply of his own needs, it seems a contradiction to conceive that God doth require him to part with them, and thereby divest himself of any further opportunity of promoting his glory, or doing good to his needy members. We are therefore only to do this upon the like occasions, viz. an express command from God, or when we find them an impediment to the securing our eternal interests, for then we must part with our right eye, or hand.

Ver. 24. [l] Εὐκοπώτερόν ἐστι κάμηλον διὰ τρυπήματος ῥαφίδος διελθεῖν· It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, &c.] There is no necessity of reading κάμιλος for κάμηλος, for that both signify a cable, or thick rope used by the mariners in casting anchors, [k] Euthymius, Theophylact, and Phavorinus testify; and that a camel is not here to be understood, Bochartus argues, (1.) Because the Hebrew proverb speaks only of an elephant, not of a camel. (2.) Because the Syriack and Arabick versions here mention not a camel, but a cable. (3.) Because the Jews, as (l) Buxtorf notes, use the same proverb of a cable rope; and (4.) Because there is some analogy betwixt drawing a thread, and a rope through the eye of a needle, but none at all between a camel and a thread. *Bochart. Hieroz. Ver. 28. [m] Ἐν τῇ παλιγγενεσίᾳ· In the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.] I know that Justin Martyr, and Irenæus, speak of a παλιγγενεσία, regeneration or renovation, which relates to their supposed Millennium, and others would refer this to the stoical renovation of the world, after its conflagration; but it is evident that neither of these opinions can here take place; not the supposed renovation of the world after the conflagration of it, since that must burn up all that remain of the twelve tribes of Israel, and so leave none of them remaining to be judged by Christ's Apostles. Dr. Lightfoot, finding that this judgment of the twelve tribes is promised to begin when the Son of man man ſits upon the throne of his glory, which he began to do ſoon after his aſcenſion, exerciſing his authority in heaven by ſending down the Holy Ghoſt on his diſciples, thinks they then ſat on theſe twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael, when they preached that Goſpel to them in Jeruſalem, Judea, and throughout their diſperſions, by which they were to be judged, and for contempt and diſbelief of which they were rejected, condemned, and expoſed to the ſevereſt puniſhment. Chriſt being mentioned throughout the book of the Revelations, as ſitting on his throne from the time of his conqueſt over death, and his aſcenſion into heaven, the doctrine of the Apoſtles, preached to the twelve tribes by the Apoſtles, and ſent to them in their Epiſtles, may be ſaid to judge and to condemn them, as the law of Moſes is ſaid to do ſo, John 5. 45. and the word of Chriſt, John 12. 47, 48. 1 John 3. 17, 18. And this ſeems to be confirmed by Chriſt's words to them, I appoint to you a kingdom, and ye ſhall ſit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael. But,

2*dly*, I grant the παλιγγενεσία here mentioned, may be referred to the conſummation of the world, and to the new heavens and earth, of which the Prophets ſpeak, but then I add, this παλιγγενεσία or new birth, is only that of the Church of Chriſt, that ζωοποίησις or new life, that ζωὴ ἐκ νεκρῶν life from the dead, ſhe ſhall receive when all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved, and the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall flow in to them. For,

1*ſt*, The perſons here to be judged are only the twelve tribes of Iſrael, which makes it more than probable, that the whole promiſe made to the Apoſtles reſpects their government over theſe tribes, coming in at the cloſe of the world, after the fall of Antichriſt; and that not by a reſurrection of their perſons, but by a reviviſcence of that ſpirit which reſided in them, and of that purity and knowledge which they delivered to the world, and chiefly by admiſſion of their Goſpel to be the ſtandard of their faith, and the direction of their lives.

2*dly*, It is obſervable, that the delivery of the Jews from their former captivities and miſeries, is always repreſented as a ζωοποίησις, a giving of life, and a reſurrection to the Jews. Seeing then their return from their captivity is in the ſtile of the Prophets uſually repreſented as a παλιγγενεσία, a reviving, or new life; why may not the time of their moſt glorious converſion, and collection from all the corners of the earth, be by our Saviour here repreſented under that known metaphor? See Additions N° 29.

Ver. 29, 30. [n] Shall receive an hundred fold, &c.] i. e. they ſhall have more and greater bleſſings than they part with, viz. a full content of mind, the comforts of an upright conſcience, the joys of the Holy Ghoſt, increaſe of grace, and hopes of glory; and ſhall have God for their Father, and be rich towards God, and have Chriſt for their Spouſe, and all good Chriſtians bearing that warm affection to them, which will render them more cloſely united to, and more affectionately concerned for them, than thoſe who were allied to them by the ſtricteſt bonds of nature. And that theſe words cannot reaſonably be interpreted of bleſſings to be conferred upon them after their reſurrection, will be evident from this, that they that are thought worthy to be the ſons of the reſurrection, ſaith our Lord, neither marry, nor are given in marriage, Luke 20. 35. Whence therefore ſhould they have theſe mothers, and theſe children, not to add wives, an hundred fold? They are made like to the angels at their reſurrection; and what ſhould ſuch angelical perſons do with, what advantage will they reap from an hundred houſes, or a like increaſe of land on earth?

If you reply, that theſe words of our Saviour relate not to the firſt reſurrection, of which this text, which ſpeaks of wives and children, is to be interpreted, but only to the ſecond and general reſurrection; I anſwer, That the words are general, and therefore muſt include all that are ſons of the reſurrection. Moreover, by admitting this double reſurrection, the firſt, in which they that are raiſed might marry, or have wives and children, and the ſecond, in which they could not; the objection or enquiry of the Sadducees is partly left unanſwered; for this diſtinction doth ſuppoſe a reſurrection, in which the ground of their enquiry might take place.

(2*dly*,) This wonderful increaſe is promiſed τῷ at preſent, ἐν τῷ καιρῷ τούτῳ, in this time of life, Mark 10. 30. Luke 18. 30. in oppoſition to what they ſhall receive in the age to come. Now the millennium is ſtill placed by Dr. B. in the age to come, after the conflagration of the world; this promiſe therefore cannot refer to his millennium, nor yet to any other which begins after the reſurrection of theſe perſons, for that time can with no propriety of ſpeech be ſaid to be now, nor can the bleſſings then received be ſaid to be received in this life. Moreover, theſe bleſſings are to be received μετὰ διωγμῶν, with perſecutions, it being the known obſervation of criticks and grammarians, that μετὰ with a genitive caſe ſignifies with, and denotes, ἐν αὐτῷ καιρῷ the ſame time, and only with an accuſative caſe ſignifies after, and denotes ὑστεροχρονίαν a following time; ſo that theſe perſecutions muſt be contemporary with with the enjoyment of these blessings, whereas a general peace, and freedom from all persecutions, is made a necessary character of the millennial state.

Lastly, These words afford an argument against the doctrine of the Millennium, because, according to them, the only blessing to be received, ἐν τῷ αἰῶνι τῷ ἐρχομένῳ, in the age to come, is life everlasting; which blessing is confined to heaven, and not to be enjoyed on earth, our house eternal being in the heavens, 2 Cor. 5. 1. and our inheritance eternal reserved in the heaven for us: And therefore they to whom the promise is here made, are not in the world to come to live a thousand years on earth, or to enjoy the temporal blessings promised here, because they are not to be enjoyed in the world to come, but now, in this present life; and because the only blessing promised in the world to come, is not to be enjoyed on earth, but is reserved in the heavens for us, 1 Pet. 1. 4.

CHAP. XX.

1. FOR (this, that the first shall be last, may be confirmed to you by this parable,) [a] the kingdom of heaven is like to a man that is an housholder, who went out early in the morning to hire labourers into his vineyard, (as Christ went first to call the Jews to come into it.)

2. And when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, (i. e. had told them what should be their wages,) he sent them into his vineyard.

3. And he went out about the third hour, (by his Apostles sent first to preach in their cities and villages, Matth. 10.) and saw others standing idle in the market-place,

4. And said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you, and they went their way.

5. Again, he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise, (preaching by his Apostles, assisted by the Holy Ghost, first to the Jews in Judea, and then in the dispersions.)

6. And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others, (i. e. the Gentiles,) standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7. They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us, (i. e. the Gospel hath not yet been preached to us;) he saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8. So when even was come, the Lord of the vineyard saith to his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

9. And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny; (i. e. the Gentiles had equal privileges and advantages with the Jews.)

10. But when the first (the Jews) came, they supposed that they should have received more, and (but) they likewise received every man a penny.

11. And when they had received it, they murmured against the good man of the house, (that he had no more regard to them than to other believers;)

12. Saying, these last have wrought but one hour (i. e. these Gentiles were only called at the last,) and thou hast made them equal to us (Jews) who have born the burden and heat of the day, (i. e. have been so long the sons of God, and the children of Abraham.)

13. But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong, didst thou not agree with me for a penny?

14. Take that thine is, and go thy way; I will give to this last even as to thee; (who dost not less partake of the blessings promised by the Messiah, because the Gentiles also do it.)

15. Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with my own? (to confer the blessings I have purchased as well upon the Gentiles as on thee, or) is thine eye evil because I am good (towards them?)

16. So the last shall be first, and the first last, (i. e. so the Gentiles believing in, and thankfully receiving Christ, shall become his Church and people, whilst the Jews, murmuring and falling off from Christ, because of this his kindness to the Gentiles, shall be excluded, and cast out from this kingdom, till the last,) for (though) many (of them) be called (by the preaching of the Gospel,) but few (of them will be) chosen, (or prevailed upon by believing, to become the Elect of God, Rom. 11. 5. 7.)

17. And Jesus going up to Jerusalem, took the twelve disciples, (who followed him, fearing what might befal him and them there, Mark 10. 32.) apart in the way, and said to them,

18. Behold we go up to Jerusalem, and the Son of man shall be betrayed to the chief priests, and to the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death;

19. And ſhall deliver him to the Gentiles, to mock, and to ſcourge, and to crucify him, and the third day he ſhall riſe again, (for all theſe things being written of him muſt be fulfilled, Luke 18. 31.)

20. [b] Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children, with her ſons, worſhipping him, and deſiring a certain thing of him.

21. And he ſaid to her (ſpeaking for them as they deſired,) What wilt thou? She ſaith unto him, Grant that theſe my two ſons may ſit the one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand in thy kingdom.

22. But Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid (to them,) Ye know not what ye aſk, (as being ignorant of the ſtate of my kingdom, which will rather call you to ſufferings after the example of your Lord, than to temporal advantages,) [c] are ye (then) able to drink of the cup that I ſhall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptiſm that I am baptized with? They ſay unto him, We are able.

23. And he ſaith unto them, Ye ſhall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptiſm that I am baptized with, (i. e. ſhall ſuffer as I muſt do,) [d] but to ſit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it ſhall be given to them (Gr. ſave to them) for whom it is prepared of my Father, (i. e. the higheſt gifts, and greateſt miniſtries in my kingdom, muſt be diſpenſed by me, according to the good pleaſure of my Father.)

24. And when the ten heard it, (i. e. what theſe had aſked,) they were moved with indignation againſt the two brethren, (for thus attempting to get that, which they thought themſelves as worthy of as they.)

25. But Jeſus (perceiving this,) called them unto him and ſaid, [e] Ye know that the Princes of the Gentiles exerciſe dominion over them, and they that are great exerciſe authority upon them (at their pleaſure, and ſo you expect it will be in my kingdom, eſpecially as to the Gentiles, that you Jews ſhall be lords over them, and they ſhall be your ſervants.)

26. But (let me tell you) it ſhall not be ſo among you (in the adminiſtration of my kingdom,) but whoſoever will be great among you (in my kingdom,) let him be your miniſter.

27. And whoſoever will be chief among you, let him be your ſervant, (for the chiefeſt offices in my kingdom are only the doing the greateſt ſervices to, and miniſters for the good of others.)

28. (It therefore muſt be with them) Even as (it is with) the Son of man, (who) came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter, [f] and to give his life a ranſom for many.

29. And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him.

30 And behold, two blind men ſitting by the way-ſide, when they heard that Jeſus paſſed by, cried out, ſaying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David.

31. And the multitude rebuked them, becauſe (that) they ſhould hold their peace, but they cried the more, ſaying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David.

32. And (then) Jeſus ſtood ſtill, and called them, and ſaid, What will ye that I ſhall do unto you?

33. They ſay unto him, Lord, (our requeſt is) that our eyes may be opened.

34. So Jeſus had compaſſion on them, and touched their eyes, and immediately their eyes received ſight, and they followed him.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XX.

Ver. 1: [a] THE kingdom of heaven is like to a man that is an houſholder.] Something like this parable being to be found in the Jeruſalem Talmud, as are many other of theſe parables in ſome of their ancient books, Mr. Cl. thinks it fitter to ſay, they afterwards uſed them in imitation of Chriſt, than that Chriſt, who was an inſpired teacher, ſhould take them from the Jews. But (1.) whoever conſiders the hatred they bore to Chriſt, will ſcarce believe, they would be concerned to imitate his ſayings: and ſeeing this inſpired teacher made frequent uſe of their proverbs, and, as ſome learned men aver, took almoſt the whole Lord's Prayer, from the prayers uſed by the Jews; why might not he, who uſed their parabolical way of teaching, by his divine wiſdom apply ſuch of their parables, as he ſaw proper for that purpoſe, to reſemble the ſpiritual matters of his kingdom, they being ſuch as would be leſs offenſive, and better be remembred, becauſe uſed by them, and familiar to them. To proceed then to the critical remarks upon this parable, and ſo on to the import of it: note,

1ſt, That theſe words, theſe laſt, μίαν ὥραν ἐποίησαν, are well rendered, have wrought one hour, for ſo ποιῶν ſignifies, as Dr. Hammond notes in theſe words of the book of Ruth, ποῦ ἐποίησας; where haſt thou wrought? Ruth 2. 19. and ſhe ſhewed her mother ποῦ ἐποίησε where ſhe wrought, and the name of the man μεθ' οὗ ἐποίησε with whom ſhe wrought, and in the book Eccleſiaſtes ποίημα is ſtill a work, and ποιεῖν to work; ſo τὸ ποίημα ποίημα τὸ πεποιημένον ὑπὸ τὸν ἥλιον is, the work wrought under the sun, Eccles. 2. 17. —— 4. 3. —— 8. 9. and Chap. 3. 9. So profit is τῷ πονοῦντι, to him that worketh in that which he laboureth. Note,

2*dly*, That ὀφθαλμὸς ἀγαθὸς, ver. 15, is a liberal, or bounteous eye. So Ecclus 35. 8. glorify God ἐν ὀφθαλμῷ ἀγαθῷ, by thy Bounty. So עין טוב is benignus oculus, see Buxt. in voce עין. See Dr. Hammond, Note B. and ὀφθαλμὸς πονηρὸς is the envious eye. See Note on Matth. 6. 22.

3*dly*, That the κλητοὶ here, are those who were called by Christ and his Apostles to the marriage feast or supper of the Gospel, offered to them with all its benefits, and yet slighted and refused by them, Luke 14. 18. The ἐκλεκτοὶ those among the Jews who embraced this call, and so are called by St. Paul ἐκλογὴ the election, and a remnant, κατ' ἐκλογὴν, according to the election of grace, Rom. 11. 6, 7. And by St. Peter, the elect, 1 Pet. 1. 1. —2. 9. For the import of this parable seems to be this, that the Jews who were first called to be God's people, and to whom the Gospel was first preached, and the blessings of the Messiah first offered, shall be, for their unbelief, rejected from being God's people, and so shall be the last in God's esteem, and shall be only made partakers of these blessings at the last; but the Gentiles, who therefore came not in before, because they were not called before, shall accept the gracious offer, and so become God's Church and people, and be preferred before the Jews, and first partake of the blessings of the Gospel. So that they who gloried in the title of being the first-born of God, and those who had served him so long, and therefore murmured that the Gentiles should be admitted to the same privileges and favour with them, and that without circumcision, or obedience to the law of Moses, and did on that account reject the Gospel, shall themselves be rejected, and put last; for though many of them are called both in Judea, and throughout their dispersions, yet few of them do, or will accept that call, or embrace the Christian faith. That this is the true import of this parable, we learn, (1.) From the connexive particle γὰρ for, which begins this Chapter, and thereby shews this parable is designed to prove what was said in the last verse of the former Chapter, and is repeated in the close of this parable, ver. 16. viz. that many which were first shall be last, and the last shall be first. And that this relates to the calling in of the Gentiles, and the rejection of the Jews, is evident from these words, Luke 13. 28, 29, 30. So there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the Prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves cast out; and they shall come from the east and the west, from the north and south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God, and behold, there are last which shall be first, and first which shall be last. For in these words Christ plainly shews, that the Gospel should be received by the Gentiles dispersed through all parts of the earth, and they should become the seed of Abraham by faith, whilst the Jews should be excluded from that kingdom, and by this, the last should be made first, and the first last; and the reason of this added, ver. 16. for many are called but few chosen, must respect the same Jews. Moreover, that this parable cannot relate to the rewards of another world, is evident from this, that amongst them, who receive those rewards, there can be no murmuring as here, against God, v. 11. no evil eye, or envy at the felicity of, or kindness shewed to others, as here, ver. 15. But the very preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles was a great mystery, Rom. 16. 25, 26. Eph. 3. 4, 5, 6. 1 Tim. 3. 16. For even the first believers preached only to the Jews, Acts 11. 19. St. Peter durst not do it till God by a vision told him that he should, Acts 10. and when he had done it, those of the circumcision condemn him for it, Acts 11. 2, 3. The unbelieving Jews could not hear it from St. Paul without crying out, away with such a fellow, it is not fit that he should live, Acts 22. 21, 22. And therefore they forbad the Apostles to preach to the Gentiles that they might be saved, 1 Thess. 2. 16. Yea, even the believing Jews murmured at their admission to the like privileges with them, without circumcision, and the observance of the law of Moses, and made great schisms in all the churches of the Gentiles upon that account, and the unbelieving Jews were enemies to the Gospel for their sakes, Rom. 11. 28. This therefore seems to be the cause of the murmuring, and evil eye, mentioned in this parable, which, saith Christ, was wholly without cause, since they had not the less share of the blessings of Abraham, and of the Messiah, because the Gentiles also, through God's free grace and favour to them, were made partakers of them. Note also, that the words, I will give to these last as unto thee, do not signify that God would give the blessings of the Gospel to these murmuring Jews, the kingdom of God being to be taken from them, and they being to be cast out into outer darkness, but only that they should be offered to both equally, and conferred upon them on the same terms of faith, there being no distinction betwixt Jew and Gentile in the Gospel dispensation, as under the Law there was. See Additions N° 31.

Ver. 20. [b] Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children, desiring, ver. 21. that her two ſons might ſit on his right hand, the other on his left, in his kingdom.] How this is to be reconciled with Mark 10. 35. ſee there. To ſit on his right hand, and on his left, is to have the moſt eminent places of dignity and honour after him: thus Solomon placed his mother on his right hand when he ſat upon the throne, 1 Kings 2. 19. to which alludes that of Pſal. 45. 9. Upon his right hand ſtands the Queen in gold of Ophir; and that among the Perſians was, μὲθ' αὐτὸν ἔχειν πρωτοδρείαν, to have the firſt ſeat after the King, Joſeph. Antiq. l. 11. c. 4. δεύτερον καθίζεσθαι Δαρείου, to ſit next Darius, or ἐζόμενον αὐτῷ, to ſit by him, Eſd. 3. 7.——4. 42. This the mother might be encouraged to aſk, becauſe of their alliance to Chriſt, and becauſe ſhe was a continual follower of him, and ſerved him ſo diligently; and ſhe might expect they ſhould be eminent in his kingdom, becauſe Chriſt had called them ſons of thunder, Mark 3. 17. and had admitted them and Peter at his transfiguration, Matth. 17. 1. and at other times, Mark 5. 37. when the reſt of the diſciples were excluded; however the reſt hearing of this ambitious requeſt of the two brethren, and being as deſirous, and, in their own opinion, as worthy of the ſame honour, as their frequent contentions about it teſtified, they had indignation againſt them, ver. 24. Now from this whole matter it appears, that none of Chriſt's diſciples imagined he had promiſed the ſupremacy to Peter, by thoſe words, thou art Peter; for then neither would theſe two perſons have deſired it; nor would the reſt have contended for it afterwards. Luke 22. 24.

Ver. 22. [c] Δύνασθε πιεῖν τὸ ποτήριον ὃ ἐγὼ μέλλω πίνειν, ἢ τὸ βάπτισμα, &c. Can you drink of the cup that I am about to drink of, and be baptized with the baptiſm with which I ſhall be baptized?] The word Cup, among ſacred and profane authors, ſignifies the portion, whether of good or evil, which befals men in this world; expreſſed by Homer, and others, by two cups in the hands of Jupiter, of which ſee Plutarch περὶ φυγῆς, p. 600. C. Accordingly the Pſalmiſt ſaith, In the hand of the Lord there is a cup, and the wine is red, and he poureth out the ſame; ἐκλινεν ἀπ' τούτου εἰς τοῦτο, he poureth out from one into the other, ſaith the Septuagint, but the dregs thereof ſhall the wicked drink, Pſal. 75. 9. Fire and brimſtone, ſtorm and tempeſt, being the portion of their cup. To drink of this cup, is to have a meaſure of afflictions, and to drink of the ſame cup, is to have the ſame meaſure of afflictions; as in theſe words of (a) Plautus, ut ſenex hoc eodem poculo, quo ego bibo, biberet, that the old man might drink of the ſame cup with me. See the uſe of this phraſe, Iſa. 51. 17, 22. Jer. 25. 15, 17, 28. Lam. 4. 21. Ezek. 23. 31, 32, 33. Matth. 26. 39, 42. John 18. 11. Rev. 14. 10.——16. 19.——18. 6. and Taubman on Plautus, Rudent. 3. 6. See Additions, N° 32. The metaphor of baptiſm, or immerſion in waters, or being put under floods, is alſo familiar in ſcripture, to ſignify a perſon overwhelmed with calamities; as when the Pſalmiſt complains, that the waves had gone over him, Pſal. 42. 7. that he was come into deep waters, Pſal. 69. 2. See Pſal. 88. 7. Cant. 8. 7. Jer. 47. 2. Ezek. 26. 19. Dan. 9. 26. Jon. 2. 3. And in this ſenſe Chriſt ſaith of his death, I have a baptiſm to be baptized with, Luke 12. 50. Of this cup the Apoſtle James drank, when he was killed by the ſword of Herod, Acts 12. 2. And St. John, when he was put into a furnace of hot oil, exiled to Patmos, and ſuffered many other things for the name of Jeſus.

Ver. 23. [d] But to ſit on my right hand and my left, is not mine to give; οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸν δοῦναι, ἀλλ' οἷς ἡτοίμασται ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρός μου, but to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.] The Arians of old, and the Socinians at preſent, hence note, that Chriſt here ſignifies, that there is ſome power which the Father hath reſerved to himſelf, and hath not committed to him; whence, ſay they, it follows, that he cannot be the ſame God which the Father is, becauſe he hath not the ſame power which the Father hath. But to this it is anſwered, that Chriſt cannot be here ſuppoſed to deny this power to himſelf, for then he muſt contradict himſelf, when he ſays, Luke 22. 29, 30. I diſpoſe to you a kingdom,——that you may ſit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael; and Rev. 3. 21. To him that overcometh will I give to ſit upon my throne, as I have overcome, and ſit with my Father on his throne; and ſurely he, to whom all power in heaven and earth is given, muſt have power to appoint the miniſters of his kingdom; whence the Apoſtle ſaith, there be divers adminiſtrations, but the ſame Lord of them, 1 Cor. 12. 5. Chriſt therefore only ſaith, he could give this to them only for whom it was appointed of his Father; and this he ſaith, not to ſignify a defect of power, but a perfect conformity to his Father's will; and that he could not do this without the motion and energy of the divine nature, which he calls the Father, abiding in him; ſaying, the Son can can do nothing of himself, but what he sees the Father doing, John 5. 19, 20. and can speak only what he hath heard from the Father, John 8. 38. which rather shews that the divine essence abideth in him, than that there is any want of power in him.

Ver. 25. ‹ Ye know that, οἱ ἄρχοντες τῶν ἐθνῶν κατακυριεύουσιν αὐτῶν, καὶ οἱ μεγάλοι κατεξουσιάζουσιν αὐτῶν, the rulers of the Gentiles have dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority over them; but it shall not be so among you.] Here, saith Wolzogenius, we may clearly perceive that Christ, in the person of his Apostles, understands all his faithful people, and forbids them, who will be his subjects, the exercise of all civil dominion; which is certainly false, since then he had forbid the dominion of parents over their children, and of masters over their servants; the contrary to which is evident from Eph. 6. 1, 5. Coloss. 3. 22. 1 Tim. 6. 1. where the power of parents over their children, and of masters over their servants, is confirmed.

2*dly,* If by these words the civil-magistracy should be forbidden in a Christian commonwealth, all order, all defence of good men, and punishment of evil-doers, would be taken away. For what must be done in this case, must the civil government of Christians be put into the hands of heathens? "I see no cause, saith Schlinctingius, "why a Christian should not rather exercise it "than any other man; for who is better than a "Christian? who, in the use of this authority will "be more just and moderate? who more diligent "in defending the good, and especially those "Christians who are God's peculiar people? who "is fitter to promote Christian truth and piety? "When the whole realm is Christian, can it be "better to commit the government to an adversary, than to an abettor of Christianity? since "God would have Kings themselves to come to the "knowledge of the truth, would he require them "at the same time to lay aside their government? "what could render them more alien from the "Christian faith, or be a greater reproach to Chri-"stianity, than to say it forbad them that govern-"ment which is instituted by the law of nature, "and is so necessary for all people? And how "contrary is this to that prediction, that Kings "should be their nursing-fathers? Moreover, it is "certain that the exercise of this civil power can "be no evil thing, since he who doth it is God's "vicegerent, the ordinance of God, the minister of "God for good; who then would have all Christians "discharged from what is lawful in itself, and "highly beneficial to them, and not rather wish "that all Kings were Christians, or that only Chri-"stians might be Kings?" And whereas Wolzogenius adds, that this empire consists not with Christian humility, which calls us to minister to others; now to command and minister is inconsistent. I answer that government is so far from being inconsistent with ministry, that all government, whose end is not our private, but the good of others, is, in respect of them, a ministry; hence is the highest power stiled the Minister of God for good to them, and said λειτουργῶν, to serve, or officiate for that very end, Rom. 13. 6.

But why then, saith he, did not Christ, the Head and King of the Church, exercise this office? I answer, who knows not that he is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, and is now in the actual exercise of his kingly office? He did not indeed exercise this dominion upon earth, because his kingdom was not of this world, and he would give no umbrage to Cæsar or the Jews, that he affected such a thing; and partly because he was to exercise his prophetick office upon earth, and go from his sufferings to the glory of his kingdom, and leave us an example of patience and humility, and of contempt of worldly grandeur.

2*dly,* It is certain that this text cannot condemn all ecclesiastical government, that being as necessary to an ecclesiastical society or community, as civil government to a civil society; hence among gifts distributed for the use of the Church, we read of governments, 1 Cor. 12. 28. we find the Apostles had their rod, 1 Cor. 4. 21. and power given of the Lord, 2 Cor. 10. 8. —— 13. 10. to deliver to Satan, 1 Cor. 5. 5. 2 Tim. 1. 20. and to revenge all unrighteousness, 2 Cor. 10. 6. And we have mention of those who are over us in the Lord, 1 Thess. 5. 12. and who are ἡγούμενοι, governors, to whom we must yield obedience, and submit ourselves, Heb. 13. 7, 17. and without this, that Christian discipline on which the welfare of the Church so much depends, could not be exercised. Nor,

3*dly,* Do I think Christ only here forbiddeth such dominion as is attended with tyranny, oppression, and contempt of their subjects, as some collect from the words κατακυριεύειν and κατεξουσιάζειν, which, say they, bear that sense, Neh. 5. 14, 15. —— 9. 37. Ezra 7. 24. Psal. 10. 5, 10. Ecclus 20. 8. (1.) Because St. Luke, Chap. 22. 25. uses only the words κυριεύειν and ἐξουσιάζειν, which bear no such ill sense. (2.) Because Kings and Governors among the Gentiles, and much less among the Jews, were not always guilty of this Male-administration. And, (3.) Because Christ does not oppose unto their government a just dominion, but a ministry only. (4.) Observe, that ἐξουσιάζειν, Neh. 9. 37. doth plainly signify to govern them according-

ing to their will; and this was plainly the government which obtained in the Eaſtern nations; the will of thoſe Kings was their law; and for this reaſon were they ſtiled αὐτοκράτορες; whereas your office being only to make known my will, you, ſaith Chriſt, ſhall have no ſuch government, no dominion over the faith of others, 2 Cor. 1. 24. ſhall command nothing for meer will and pleaſure, but your whole office ſhall conſiſt in being miniſters to the good of others. Whence, ſaith the Apoſtle, What is Paul, what is Apollos, but διάκονοι, miniſters by whom ye believed? 1 Cor. 3. 5. And we ourſelves are your ſervants, ſaith he, for Jeſus ſake, 2 Cor. 4. 5. Hence are they ſo often ſtiled Miniſters, and their work, a miniſtry to the ſaints, to the Gentiles, to the Church. And therefore, ſaith Chriſt, all the office any man can have in my kingdom, can be only a larger miniſtry to others; and in this he truly will reſemble me, who came not to be miniſtred to, but to miniſter.

Ver. 28. [f] Even as the Son of man came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter; καὶ δοῦναι τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ λύτρον ἀντὶ πολλῶν, and to give his life a ranſom for many. Here note,

1*ſt*, That whereas it is ſaid here, that Chriſt gave his life a ranſom for many; and Chap. 26. 28. that his blood was ſhed for many; and Heb. 9. 28. that Chriſt was once offered to take away the ſins of many: it doth not hence follow, that Chriſt died not for all; the word, πολλοὶ, many, being in other places uſed where all are certainly included: Thus when it is ſaid, Dan. 12. 2. That many who ſleep in the duſt, ſhall ariſe, ſome to everlaſting life, and ſome to everlaſting ſhame: This is certainly equivalent to that of Chriſt, John 5. 28, 29. The hour cometh, that all that ſleep in the grave, ſhall hear the voice of the Son of man, and ſhall come forth, they that have done good to the reſurrection of life, and they that have done evil to the reſurrection of condemnation. When it is ſaid, Rom. 5. 15. that through the offence of one, many died; this is equivalent to that of the ſame Apoſtle, that in Adam all Men died. 1 Cor. 15. 22. And when it is ſaid, ver. 19. That by the diſobedience of one, many were made ſinners; this is certainly equivalent to what is ſaid, ver. 12. Death paſſed upon all men, through that one man in whom all have ſinned. Note,

2*dly*, That from theſe words, he gave his life λύτρον ἀντὶ πολλῶν, a ranſom for many; it is evident, that Chriſt ſuffered in our ſtead, and gave his life inſtead of our lives, obnoxious to death, the wages of ſin, as is largely proved, Note on thoſe words, 1 Tim. 2. 6. He gave himſelf, ἀντίλυτρον ὑπὲρ πάντων, a ranſom for all; and will be farther evident from the like expreſſions in Scripture, in Jewiſh and in Heathen authors. Thus, Joſhua 2. 14. the agreement betwixt Raab and the ſpies runs thus, ἡ ψυχὴ ἡμῶν ἀνθ' ὑμῶν εἰς θάνατον, Let our lives die inſtead of yours, if ye utter not our buſineſs. So when Eleazar died, he is introduced by (b) Joſephus, ſpeaking thus, Καθάρσιον αὐτῶν ποιῆσαι τὸ ἐμὸν αἷμα, καὶ ἀντὶ ψυχῶν αὐτῶν λάβε τὴν ἐμὴν ψυχὴν, That God would accept his blood as a propitiatory ſacrifice for the Jews, and take his life inſtead of their lives. So (c) Alceſtis ſaith to Admetus, In honour of thee I die, that thou ἀντὶ τῆς ἐμῆς ψυχῆς, mightſt live inſtead of me. And (d) Porphyry from Aſclepiades, ſays, That the firſt ſacrifices were offered, ὑπὸ τίνας καιροὺς ψυχὴν ἀντὶ ψυχῆς αἰτούμενος, on ſome occaſions requiring life for life. See more of this, Outram de Sacr. l. 1. c. 22. And Pearſ. Vindiciæ Ignat. Par. 2. c. 15. p. 206, 207, 208. This being then the conſtant opinion both of Jews and Gentiles, that their piacular victims were λύτρα and ἀντίλυτρα, ranſoms for the life of the ſinner; and that he who gave his life for another, ſuffered in his ſtead, and to preſerve him from death; they could not otherwiſe judge, but that our Lord intended, by this expreſſion, to ſignify, that he gave his life inſtead of the lives of thoſe for whom he ſuffered: Vain here are the Socinians, when they ſay, this price was to be paid to Satan, who detained us captive; for the price is only to be paid to him that retains the captive, when he doth this for gain, to make money of him, as the Turks now do at Tripoli and Algiers, not when a man is detained in cuſtody, or priſon, for violation of a law; for then it is not the Gaoler, but the Legiſlator, to whom the price of his redemption muſt be paid, or ſatisfaction made. And Crellius in vain denies, that this price was paid to God, for Chriſt became our ranſom, as he offered up his life and blood for us; now he gave himſelf a ſacrifice and oblation to God, Eph. 5. 2. He offered himſelf without ſpot to God, Heb. 9. 14. He therefore paid the price of our redemption to God.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXI.

1. AND when they drew nigh to Jeruſalem, and were come (through Bethany,) to Bethphage, to the mount of Olives, then ſent Jeſus two of (his) diſciples, (Mark 11. 1. Luke 19. 29.)

2. Saying to them, Go into the [a] village over againſt you, and ſtraightway entering (into it,) ye ſhall find [b] an aſs tied, and a colt (tied) with her, (on which never man ſat, Mark 11. 2.) looſe them, and bring them to me.

3. And if any man ſay ought to you, (aſking, why you do this, Mark 11. 3.) ye ſhall ſay, The Lord hath need of them; and ſtraightway (hearing that) he will ſend them.

4. All this was done (by Chriſt,) that it might be [c] fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet (Zachary, Chap. 9. 9.) ſaying,

5. Tell ye the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy King cometh to thee, meek, and ſitting upon an aſs, and (that is) a colt, the foal of an aſs.

6. And the diſciples went, and did as Jeſus commanded them; (and they found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met, and they looſed them, Mark 11. 4. and the owners of the colt ſtanding by, ſaid, Why do ye looſe the colt? ver. 5. And the diſciples anſwered, We do as Jeſus, who hath need of him, commanded us, and then they ſuffered them, ver. 6. Luke 19. 31. 34.)

7. And (ſo they) brought the aſs and the colt, and put on (one of) [d] them, (to wit, the colt) their cloaths, and they ſet him thereon.

8. And a very great multitude [e] ſpread their garments in the way, others cut down branches from the trees, and ſtrewed them in the way, (as before a King; and as he was going down to the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of his diſciples began to praiſe God with a loud voice, for all the wonderful things that they had ſeen, Luke 19. 37.)

9. And the multitude that went before, and that followed (after) cried, ſaying, (As they did uſually at the feaſt of tabernacles,) Hoſanna to the Son of David; Bleſſed is (he) he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hoſanna in the higheſt; (wiſhing proſperity to him and his kingdom, from him that dwells in the higheſt heaven.)

10. And when he was come into Jeruſalem, all the city was moved, ſaying, Who is this?

11. And the multitude ſaid, This is Jeſus the Prophet of Nazareth, (a city) of Galilee.

12. And Jeſus went (the next day, Mark 11. 12.) into the temple of God, and [f] caſt out all them that ſold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the ſeats of them that ſold doves,

13. And ſaid to them, It is written, [g] My houſe ſhall be called the houſe of prayer (for all nations, Iſa. 56. 7.) but ye (by theſe practices) have made it a den of thieves (i. e. by turning it into a place of unjuſt gain, you have verified the complaint of the Prophet Jeremy, Chap. 7. 11. that it was become a den of robbers.)

14. And the blind and the lame came to him in the temple, and he healed them.

15. And when the Chief Prieſts and Scribes ſaw the wonderful things that he did, and the children crying in the temple, and ſaying, Hoſanna to the Son of David, they were ſore diſpleaſed,

16. And ſaid to him, Heareſt thou what theſe ſay? (Rebuke them for it, Luke 19. 39.) And Jeſus ſaith unto them, Yea, (I hear them fulfilling the prophecy of the Pſalmiſt; for) [h] have ye never read (theſe words, Pſal. 8. 2.) Out of the mouth of babes and ſucklings thou haſt perfected praiſe? (They therefore are excited by him to do that which your malice will not ſuffer you to do for the glory of God.)

17. And (having ſaid this) he left them, and went out of the city into Bethany, and he lodged there (with his diſciples, Mark 11. 11.)

18. Now in the morning, as he returned into the city, he hungred.

19. And when he ſaw a fig-tree in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon but leaves only; and (he) ſaid unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever: And preſently the fig-tree withered away; (by this example ſhewing, that the Jewiſh nation, which being watered with the Goſpel, brought forth no anſwerable fruit, was nigh unto curſing, and would ſuddenly be rejected by God, Heb. 6. 8.)

20. And when (Peter, Mark 11. 21. and) the diſciples ſaw it, they marvelled, ſaying, How ſoon is the fig-tree withered away!

21. Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, [i] If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye ſhall not only (be able to) do this, which is done to the fig-tree, but alſo, if ye ſhall ſay to this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou caſt into the ſea, it ſhall be ſo done.

22. And all things whatſoever ye ſhall aſk in prayer, believing, ye ſhall receive.

23. And [i]

23. And when he was come into the temple, the chief prieſts and the elders of the people came to him as he was teaching, and ſaid, [k] By what authority doeſt thou theſe things? and who gave thee this authority, (thus to controul us, and reprove our practices, to whom the government of the temple, and of the people is committed?)

24. And Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid to them, I alſo will aſk you one thing; which, if you tell me, I in like wiſe will tell you by what authority I do theſe things; (or, you may diſcern this without my telling you, for John bore witneſs to me, John 5. 33.)

25. The [l] baptiſm of John, whence was it? from (the God of) heaven, or of men (only?) And they reaſoned with themſelves, ſaying, If we ſhall ſay, From heaven, he will ſay to us, Why did ye not then believe him?

26. But if we ſhall ſay, Of men, we fear (leſt we ſhould be ſtoned by) the people; for all hold John as a Prophet.

27. And they anſwered Jeſus, and ſaid, We cannot tell: And he ſaid to them, Neither tell I you, by what authority I do theſe things.

28. But what think you (of this parable, which fitly repreſents your ſtubbornneſs in rejecting the doctrine of John?) [m] A certain man had two ſons; and he came to the firſt, and ſaid (to him,) Son, go, work to day in my vineyard.

29. He anſwered, and ſaid (to his father,) I will not: but afterwards he repented (of his undutiful denial,) and went.

30. And he came to the ſecond, and ſaid likewiſe: and he anſwered and ſaid, I go, Sir, and (but he) went not.

31. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They ſay unto him, The firſt (only:) Jeſus ſaith to them, (You fitly reſemble the ſecond ſon; and the publicans, whom ye ſo much deſpiſe, are liker to the firſt; for) Verily I ſay unto you, that the publicans and harlots (hearing John ſaying, Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; and repenting) go into the kingdom of God before you; (who are ſo far from going before them, in obedience to this command of God by John, that you deſpiſe it.)

32. For [n] John came to you (to inſtruct you) in the way of righteouſneſs, and ye believed him not, but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, when ye had ſeen (them do) it, repented not afterward, that ye (alſo) might believe him.

33. Hear another parable (reſembling God's kind dealings with you, and your evil returns to him:) [o] There was a certain houſholder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-preſs in it, and built a tower (in it,) and let it out to huſband-men, and went into a far country.

34. And when the time of the fruit drew near, he ſent (ſucceſſively) his ſervants to the huſbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it.

35. And the huſband-men took his ſervants, and beat one, and killed another, and ſtoned another, (as you have dealt with the Prophets, Matth. 5. 12.)

36. Again, he ſent other ſervants more than the firſt, and they did to them likewiſe, (in this alſo reſembling you; for which of the Prophets did not your fathers perſecute? Acts 7. 52.)

37. But laſt of all he ſent to them his (only) ſon, ſaying, (perhaps) they will reverence my ſon.

38. But when the huſband-men ſaw the ſon, they ſaid among themſelves, This is the heir, come, let us kill him, and let us ſeize on his inheritance.

39. And (accordingly) they caught him, and caſt him out of the vine-yard, and ſlew him, (as you will do, Chap. 20. 18.)

40. When the Lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what (think you) will he do to thoſe huſband-men?

41. [p] They ſay to him, He will miſerably deſtroy thoſe wicked men, and will let out his vineyard to other huſband-men, who ſhall render him the fruits (of it) in their ſeaſons.

42. Jeſus ſaith to them, Did you never read in the ſcriptures (thoſe words recorded, Pſal. 118. 22. The ſtone which the builders rejected, the ſame is become the head of the corner? This is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes: (Now you are thoſe builders, and I whom you reject, am that chief corner-ſtone.)

43. [q] Therefore I ſay to you, The kingdom of of God ſhall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

44. And whoſoever ſhall [r] fall on (or ſtumble at) this ſtone, (or through ignorance, or the prejudices he hath received from you, ſhall continue in his unbelief,) ſhall be broken (by it;) but on whomſoever it ſhall fall (in vengeance, as it will heavily upon you,) it will grind him to powder.

45. And when the chief prieſts and Phariſees had heard his parables, they perceived (at the laſt) that he ſpake of (what ſhould befal) them.

46. But when they ſought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, becauſe they took him for a Prophet; (and this at preſent reſtrained them from ſo doing.)

ANNOTA-

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XXI.

Ver. 2. [a] Πορεύεσθε εἰς τὴν κώμην τὴν ἀπέναντι ὑμῶν, Go to the village over against you.] This could not be Jerusalem that was against Christ, and his Apostles, as some gloss the words; that being not a village, but a city; but, as the (a) Arabian Geographer informs us, it was a little village two miles distant from the mount of Olives towards the south. See Bochart. Hieroz. l. 2. c. 17. col. 210.

Ibid. [b] Εὑρήσετε ὄνον δεδεμένην, καὶ πῶλον μετ' αὐτῆς, Ye shall find an ass bound.] Seeing all the other Evangelists testify, that the colt was bound, the words of St. Matthew must be filled up thus, And a colt bound with her.

Note also, that the other Evangelists make mention only of the colt, because our Saviour sat upon him only. See Note on v. 7. Note also here, a wonderful instance of Christ's prescience in the minutest matters, viz. 1. You shall find a colt, 2. On which no man ever sat, 3. Bound with his mother, 4. In bivio, 5. As you enter into the village; 6. The owners of which shall at first seem unwilling that you shall unbind him; 7. But when they hear the Lord hath need of him, they will let him go.

Ver. 4. [c] All this was done, ἵνα πληρωθῇ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ τοῦ προφήτου, that it might be fulfilled, which was spoken by the Prophet,——meek, and sitting, ἐπὶ ὄνον, καὶ πῶλον, upon an ass, and upon a colt, the foal of an ass;] John 12. 15. sitting ἐπὶ πῶλον ὄνου, upon the foal of an ass, which makes it reasonable to conceive, that καὶ here signifies, id est, as Vau oft does. See Note on Colos. 1. 2. Moreover, here note, (1.) That the ancient Jews refer this place of Zachary 9. 9. to the Messias. So Midras Coheleth, in Eccl. 1. 9. Such as our first redeemer was, (i. e. Moses,) such shall be the last, (the Messiah;) the first set his wife and children upon an ass, Exod. 4. 20. And so shall it be with the last, of whom it is said, Zachary 9. 9. He is poor, and sitting upon an ass. Nachmonides in Midras, upon Gen. 49. saith, The Messias is he of whom it is said, He is poor, and sitting upon an ass. This was a thing so well known, that they in the (b) Talmud introduce Sapores, King of the Persians, speaking thus to the Jews, You say, that your Messias shall come upon an ass, I will send him an horse. See more to this purpose in Bochart. Hieroz. l. 2. c. 17. col. 213, 214. Note also hence from (c) St. Chrysostom, an argument, that our Jesus was their true Messiah; they being not able to shew any other that came thus to them. See Examen Millii here.

Ver. 6, 7. [d] They brought the ass and the colt, καὶ ἐπεκάθισαν ἐπάνω αὐτῶν, and set him upon them,] ἐπ' αὐτῷ, upon him, Mark 11. 7. ὃς ἐπὶ τὸν πῶλον, upon the colt, Luke 19. 35. it seeming not probable to most interpreters, that in so short a journey Christ should ride upon them both; and three Evangelists mentioning only one, it seems necessary here, to admit of the figure called Enallage numeri, frequent in other places; so the ark rested upon the mountains of Ararat, Gen. 8. 3. i. e. upon one of them; the cities in which Lot dwelt, Gen. 19. 29. i. e. in one of which. See Gen. 23. 6. Jos. 7. 1. Matth. 27. 44. Luke 23. 39. John 12. 14. St. Matthew seems to add both, either in compliance with the words of the Prophet, or because he sat upon the colt, the ass going along with him, tho' Theophylact saith, they set him, ἐπάνω τῶν ἱματίων, upon the garments.

Ver. 8. [e] And a very great multitude, ἔστρωσαν ἑαυτῶν τὰ ἱμάτια ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ, Strewed their garments in the way, others cut down branches.] Here observe, that this strowing of cloaths, flowers and branches in the way, were ceremonies used toward great men, and especially to Kings and Emperors: Thus, saith (d) Herodotus, they went before Xerxes, passing over the Hellespont, μυρσίνῃσι στρωννύντες τὴν ὁδὸν, strowing the way with myrtle branches: Thus when Cato left his soldiers, to return to Rome, ὑπεστρώννυον τὰ ἱμάτια τοῖς ποσὶν ἢ βαδίζοι, they laid their garments in the way; which, saith (e) Plutarch, was an honour then done only τοῖς αὐτοκρατόρων ὀλίγοις, to few Emperors. And when the Captains proclaimed Jehu King, they put their garments under him, 2 Kings 9. 13. This therefore the people do now to Jesus, as being to proclaim him the King Messiah. (2.) Observe, That at the feast of tabernacles, it was the custom of the Jews, not only to sing Hosannas with the greatest joy, but also to carry branches in their hands, desiring, as the Jews still wish to do at this feast, that they may thus rejoice at the coming of their Messiah; whence, owning Jesus for the person, they use the Hosannas, and the rites observed at that feast, wishing prosperity to him and his kingdom, from him that dwelleth ἐν τοῖς ὑψίστοις, in the highest heavens, Luke 19. 38.

Ver. 12. [f] And Jeſus went into the temple of God, καὶ ἐξέβαλε πάντας τοὺς πωλοῦντας, καὶ ἀγοράζοντας ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, &c. and caſt out all thoſe that bought and ſold in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, &c.] Chriſt ſeems not here abſolutely to forbid this permutation; it being almoſt neceſſary for them who lived far from Jeruſalem, to bring up money to purchaſe ſacrifices and oblations there, rather than to bring them ſo long a journey, and ſuitable in equity to the law concerning tythes, Deut. 14. 24, 25, 26. But he condemns the avarice of the Prieſts, who, when theſe things were bought before in the ſhambles and markets of Jeruſalem, had, for their ſordid gain, now brought this merchandice into the houſe of God; and that this was done in honour of that ſacred place, is evident from the words following, Mark 11. 16. See the note there. The money-changers ſat there not only about the payment of the half ſhekel to the ſanctuary, but chiefly for the return of money from remote places; (this payment being made even by the Jews in their ſeveral diſperſions) that ſo they who came to Jeruſalem to worſhip, paying it to merchants at home, might have it ſafe from thieves, and from the trouble of carriage, at Jeruſalem.

Ver. 13. [g] And ſaith unto them, It is written, My houſe ſhall be called, οἶκος προσευχῆς a houſe of prayer, (to all nations, Mark 11. 17.) and ye have made it a den of thieves.] God ſaid by the Prophet, My houſe ſhall be called an houſe of prayer for all people, Iſa. 56. 7. So Iſa. 60. 7. i. e. an houſe dedicated to my worſhip; of which, prayer was eſteemed an eminent part, as is evident from Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple; which ſuppoſes, God's people ſhould continually pray in, or towards that houſe; and that they did ſo at the time of offering incenſe, we read, Luke 1. 10. Thither alſo went the Phariſee and the Publican to pray, Luke 18. 10. Thither alſo went the Heathen proſelytes of the gate, and therefore had a court ſtiled, The court of the Gentiles, and this made it an houſe of prayer for all nations: But you, ſaith Chriſt, by turning it into a place of unjuſt gain, i. e. of gain got by exactions tending to the loſs and damage of the people, have given juſt occaſion to apply to you thoſe words of Jeremy, Chap. 7. 11. My houſe is become a den of robbers in your eyes; you making a gain of that ſervice, which you ought freely to attend upon, having your tythes from them, and a ſhare of their offerings for that very end. See additions N° 33.

Ver. 15, 16. [h] Have you never read, that out of the mouths of babes and ſucklings I have ordained praiſe?] I do not ſee reaſon to ſay, Chriſt cites theſe words as a prediction of the things here done to him; but only to ſay, what was there ſaid, might well be accommodated to this action; for, if when that young ſtripling David, whoſe Son, according to the fleſh, I am, and who was an eminent type of me, conquered Goliath, that great enemy of God's people; all the women, probably attended with their children, came out of their cities, dancing and ſinging praiſe to God, 1 Sam. 18. 6. is it not reaſonable, that the multitudes ſhould ſing Hoſanna to the Son of David, coming to vanquiſh the Devil, that great enemy of his Church? And now that God hath raiſed up an horn of ſalvation for them in the houſe of his ſervant David, to deliver them from their enemies, and from the hands of all that hate them, Luke 1. 68, 74. that they ſhould ſing Glory to God in the higheſt, and wiſh proſperity to the kingdom he is now erecting.

Ver. 21. [i] Ἐὰν ἔχητε πίστιν καὶ μὴ διακριθῆτε, If ye have faith and doubt not,— καὶ τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ εἴπητε, if ye ſhall ſay to this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou caſt into the ſea, it ſhall be done.] That μὴ διακριθῶσι ſignifies not to diſcriminate, or put a difference; See Note on Rom. 14. 23. And ſo here it may import, If you have ſuch a faith as puts no difference between things you can, and things you cannot do, but makes you fully perſuaded, you can do any thing which tends to the glory of God, and is requiſite for the promotion of the Chriſtian faith, you ſhall be able to perform the moſt difficult things; for that is the meaning of that phraſe, to root up mountains: It being ſaid by the Jews of their doctors, which were able to ſolve the moſt difficult queſtions, ſuch a one is a rooter up of mountains. See Note on 1 Cor. 13. 2. Tho' therefore Nyſſen ſaith, that Gregory of Neocæſarea; and Jerom, that Hilarion removed mountains; yet I prefer the allegorical expoſition, eſpecially conſidering, that what is here a mountain, is Luke 17. 6. a ſycamore tree.

Note alſo, That theſe words muſt be reſtrained to the age of miracles, and to the perſons to whom they were ſpoken, the Apoſtles and firſt propagators of the Goſpel; it being certain from experience, that this is no ordinary and perpetual gift of Chriſtians: And that the thing here promiſed, was extraordinary, appears from the faith required to it, called by St. Mark, The faith of God; i. e. either the greateſt and moſt excellent faith, as πόλις μεγάλη τῷ Θεῷ, is a very great city, Jon. 3. 3. and ἀνὴρ τῷ Θεῷ, a very comely perſon, Acts 7. 20. So wreſtlings of God, Gen. 30. 8. mountains of God, Pſal. 36. 7. cedars of God, Pſal. 80. 11. Or elſe ſaith, that doth certainly perſuade us of God's extraordinary aſſiſt-ance: And that this respects the Apostles, is evident, because Christ elsewhere speaks this to them, on the account of that defect of faith which made them fail in casting out a devil, Matth. 17. 19, 20.

Ver. 23. [k] Ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιεῖς; By what authority dost thou these things, and who gave thee that authority?] This the Chief Priests and rulers ask, because the ordinary authority of teaching in the temple, was to be derived from them, of teaching elsewhere from their doctors. But yet it was a vain question, after they had seen his miracles, and knew he claimed a commission from God, and had told them that the works he had done in his Father's name bore witness of him, John 5. 36.

Ver. 25. [l] Τὸ βάπτισμα Ἰωάννου πόθεν ἦν, ἐξ οὐρανοῦ ἢ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων; The baptism of John whence was it, from heaven or from men?] From heaven, i. e. from God; for heaven here is not opposed to earth, but to men. So to sin against heaven, Luke 15. 18, 21. is to sin against God. See the Note there. John was a voice crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, Matth. 3. 3. He baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying to the people, that they should believe in him that was to come after him, that is, in Christ Jesus, Acts 19. 4. He came to give testimony to Christ, John 1. 7, 15. declaring that he was the Lamb of God, that took away the sins of the world, v. 29. whence it is evident that the Chief Priests and Pharisees could not own the baptism of John to be from heaven, but they must also own Christ to be the Son of God, and him concerning whom God had testified by a voice from heaven, and by the descent of the Holy Ghost upon him, that he was the beloved Son in whom he was well pleased; whence these great doctors chose rather to pretend ignorance, than to confess that truth which would condemn them. And whereas it is added, ver. 26. that all held John ὡς προφήτην, as a Prophet, this as, doth not import similitude, but that he was truly so; as when it is said, we have seen his glory, ὡς μονογενοῦς, as of the only begotten of the Father, John 1. 14. ὡς ἐξουσίαν ἔχων, as having authority, Mat. 7. 29. See Note on Rom. 9. 32. hence he is said to be a Prophet, Luke 20. 6. and ὄντως προφήτης, truly a Prophet, Mark 11. 32.

Ver. 28, 31. [m] A man had two sons.] By the first of these two sons, all the interpreters I have read, understand the publicans, by the second, the scribes and Pharisees; because Christ, in the close of this parable, ver. 32. seems so to interpret it. But yet it seems to me a probable conjecture, that by the first son, we may understand the Gentiles represented by the prodigal son, Luke 15. For it hath been noted on ver. 1, 2. of that Chapter, that publicans by the Jews were ranked with the Heathens, and that the Heathens were represented by the Jews as πόρναι harlots, and born of harlots. See the Note on John 8. 41. And when Christ came among them, or they came to him, he found them still more ready to believe in him, than the Jews, and more especially than the scribes and Pharisees; he not not finding such faith in Israel as in the Centurion, Matth. 8. 10, 11. and in the Syrophœnician woman, Mark 7. 29. See Chap. 14. 34, 35, 36. John 12. 20, 23, 24. So the import of it may be this; You Jews, who stile yourselves the sons of God, and you scribes and Pharisees, who pretend to so much religion, and so great zeal for God, and to be guides to others in the way of life, are not only more alien from it, when taught you by me and my fore-runner, than the publicans and harlots, but than those Gentiles are, whom you represent as such. See Additions N° 34.

Ver. 32. [n] For John came to you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not, &c.] So saith (f) Josephus, that the Baptist came to teach them virtue, and to come to his baptism, exercising τὰ πρὸς ἀλλήλους δικαιοσύνῃ, καὶ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν εὐσεβείᾳ. Righteousness towards one another, and piety towards God. It follows, but the publicans and harlots believed on him, and you afterwards repented not that ye might believe, &c. Christ here saith, that the publicans and harlots, προάξουσιν, go before you into the kingdom of God, ver. 31. not that the scribes and elders of the people of the Jews followed after them; for those scribes and Pharisees received not the baptism of John, Luke 7. 39. but that by their example they shewed them the way they ought to follow. Now from this parable note,

1*st*, That the scribes and Pharisees, and other Jews, might and ought to have been moved by the admonitions of the Baptist, and the example of the publicans, to repentance and faith; for why else doth Christ here blame them, that they were not prevailed on by these means to believe, and repent?

2*dly*, That therefore an internal, irresistible force, or power cannot be necessary to produce this repentance, and this faith. For, if the publicans and harlots were thus moved to repent, what wonder is it that they went before the scribes and Pharisees, who having no such powerful impulse, were left under an impossibility of repenting?

(f) Antiq. l. 18. c. 7. p. 626 G.

Why is it that it is repreſented as their crime, that they did not repent at the preaching of John, or follow the example of the Publicans, ſince the event ſhews, that no ſuch irreſiſtible motive to repentance, was contained either in the Baptiſt's preaching, or in their example?

Ver. 33. o There was a certain houſholder, &c.] For explication of this parable obſerve, that in it is repreſented,

1*ſt*, The favour and providence of God towards the Jewiſh Church and nation, as being the vineyard he himſelf had planted, and had watered with his heavenly dew, the waters of life, i. e. the doctrine of the law and the Prophets; he alſo had incloſed it and hedged about it, not only by his care and providence, but by his covenant of circumciſion, and his preſence with them, and his owning them for his own people above all the nations of the earth, Note,

2*dly*, That the huſbandmen to whom this vineyard was let out were the Prieſts and Levites, doctors and rulers of that Church and people; who are here repreſented not only as wanting in their duty, which was to make this vineyard fruitful, and to prepare it to receive his Prophets and meſſengers with due reverence, and eſpecially to receive his Son and their Meſſiah with faith, reverence and obedience; but even conſulted with, and ſpurred on the people to offer the moſt vile affronts unto them, and even to deſtroy his Son and their Saviour; for tho' Chriſt ſpake this parable to the people, Luke 20. 9. the Prieſts and Phariſees perceived that he ſpake of them, v. 45. when therefore it is here ſaid, they will reverence my Son, v. 37. theſe words, as Theophylact notes, Chriſt ſpake, not being ignorant what really they would do, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἁρμόττον προσχθῆναι καὶ τὸ εἰκὸς λέγων, but ſhewing what was fitting to be done, and they ought to have done; and therefore, Luke 20. 13. the phraſe is varied thus, ἴσως perhaps they will reverence my Son when they ſee him.

3*dly*, That this deportment of the huſbandmen, and of the people, led and excited by them to this murder of his Son, and treatment of his Prophets, would render them obnoxious to the heavieſt of divine judgments.

Ver. 41. p They ſay unto him, He will miſerably deſtroy thoſe wicked men:] How this is to be reconciled with St. Luke, ſee Luke 20. 16.

Ver. 43. q Ἀφθήσε᾽ ἀφ᾽ ὑμῶν ἡ βασιλεία τ̃ Θεῦ ἀπὸ τ̃τε, for this thing, i. e. the builders refuſing this ſtone, the kingdom of God ſhall be taken from you, &c.] Hence it is evident that God deſerted the Jewiſh Church, and let this ſtone ſo fall upon them, as to grind them to powder, becauſe of their rejecting the Meſſiah: The evidence that this affords to the truth of the Chriſtian faith, ſee in the preface to the Goſpels.

Ver. 44. r And he that falleth on this ſtone ſhall be broken, &c.] i. e. He that ſtumbles on this ſtone, whilſt he is here on earth, being offended at his doctrine, life or death, ſhall be broken by his fall upon it, as is the perſon ſtoned, by the ſharp ſtone he falls upon; but he, on whom this ſtone ſhall fall, when he is elevated to his throne of glory, ſhall be more violently ſhattered by it; as is the perſon ſtoned by the great ſtone, as big as two men can lift, thrown down violently upon his breaſt.

CHAP. XXII.

1. AND Jeſus anſwered (with relation to them) and ſpake to them again by parables, and ſaid,

2. The (doctrine of the) [a] kingdom of heaven, (preached to this nation) is like (to find a ſucceſs anſwerable) unto (that of) a certain King, who made a marriage for his ſon,

3. And ſent forth his ſervants to call them who were (to be) bidden to the wedding, (viz. the Apoſtles, and the ſeventy ſent to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, Matth. 10. 6. Luke 10. 1.) and (being thus lovingly invited) they would not come.

4. (Wherefore) Again he ſent forth other ſervants, (viz. the Apoſtles, and the hundred and eight on whom the Holy Ghoſt fell,) ſaying, Tell them that were bidden, Behold I have prepared my dinner, my oxen and fatlings are killed, and all things are ready, come (I pray you) to the marriage (feaſt.)

5. But they made light of it, (i. e. the invitation,) and went their way, one to his farm, another to his merchandiſe.

6. And the remnant (of them) took his ſervants, and intreated them ſpitefully, and ſlew (ſome of) them.

7. But when the King heard thereof, he was wroth, and he [b] ſent forth his armies, and deſtroyed thoſe murderers, and burnt up their city, (and ſo will this ſpiritual King deal with thoſe of this nation, who not only refuſe his invitation to partake of the bleſſings of the Goſpel; but alſo kill his meſſengers; he by the Roman army will deſtroy them, and their capital city.)

8. Then ſaith he to his ſervants, The wedding (feaſt) is ready, but they who were bidden were were not [c] worthy, (and therefore shall not taste of this feast.)

9. Go ye therefore into the [d] high-ways, (to the dispersion of the Jews, and to the Gentiles,) and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

10. So these servants went out into the high-ways, and gathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good, and the wedding was furnished with guests.

11. And when the King came in to see the guests, he saw there a [e] man which had not on a wedding-garment, (i. e. a faith, and conversation answerable to the design of the Gospel.)

12. And he saith to him, Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding-garment, and he was (as one) speechless.

13. Then said the King to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into utter darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, (so shall it be with the Jews, the children of the kingdom, Matth. 8. 12. Luke 13. 28.)

14. For [ee] many (of the Jews) are called (by) but few (of them) are chosen, (i. e. believers of the Gospel, See Note on 1 Pet. 2. 9.)

15. Then went the Pharisees (perceiving that this parable was designed against them,) and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

16. And (Accordingly) they sent unto him their disciples with the [f] Herodians, saying, (with insidious flattery,) Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man ('s person,) for thou regardest not the person of men.

17. Tell us therefore, what thinkest thou (in this case?) Is it [g] lawful to give tribute to Cæsar, or not? (that if he had said no, they might represent him as an enemy to Cæsar; if yea, as no friend to their nation.)

18. But Jesus perceived their wickedness, (i. e. their evil design,) and said (to them,) Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites, (endeavouring to ensnare me under pretence of reverence to me?)

19. Shew me the tribute money. And they brought to him a (Roman) penny:

20. And he saith to them, Whose is this image and superscription (that this money bears?)

21. They say to him (it is) Cæsar's. Then saith he to them, (this being an evidence that Cæsar's government hath obtained among you,) render therefore to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's; (i. e. the tribute due to his temple.)

22. When they had heard those words, they marvelled (at his wisdom;) and left him, and went their way.

23. The same day came to him the [h] Sadducees, who say that there is no resurrection (of the body,) and asked him;

24. Saying, Master, Moses said, If a man die having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother:

25. Now there were with us seven brethren, and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and having no issue, left his wife to his brother.

26. Likewise the second also, and the third, (and so on) to the seventh.

27. And last of all the woman died also.

28. Therefore in the resurrection, whose wife shall she be of the seven, for they all had her?

29. Jesus answered, and said unto them, Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, (declaring that there shall be a resurrection) nor the power of God (enabling him to effect it.)

30. (And as for your argument against it, it is grounded on a false supposition,) for in the [i] resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven, (in that they cannot die, Luke 20. 36. and so can need no reparation by new births.)

31. But as touching the [k] resurrection of the dead, (this, I say, is denied by you, because ye know not the scriptures; for) have ye not read that which was spoken to you by God, saying,

32. I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, (and so I own them still as my sons and children? now) God is not the God of (them who are to continue in the state of) the dead, but of the living, (his children being sons of the resurrection, Luke 20. 36.)

33. And when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

34. But when the Pharisees had heard, that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together.

35. Then one of them, which was a lawyer, (i. e. an interpreter of the law,) [l] asked him a question, tempting him, (i. e. making a trial of his skill,) and saying,

36. Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

37. Jesus said to him, Thou shalt [m] love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind; (i. e. above and before all other things, affecting them only with relation and subordination to God.)

38. This

38. This is the firſt, and great commandment.

39. And the ſecond is like to it, (viz.) [n] Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf.

40. On theſe two commandments [o] hang all the law and the Prophets (theſe being an abridgment of what is contained in them both.)

41. While the Phariſees were (thus) gathered together, Jeſus aſked them;

42. Saying, What think you of Chriſt, whoſe Son is he? they ſay to him, (he is) the Son of David.

43. He ſaith unto them, How then doth David in (the prophetical afflatus of the) Spirit call him Lord, ſaying,

44. The Lord ſaid to my Lord, ſit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footſtool.

45. If David then call him Lord, how is he his Son?

46. And no [p] man was able to anſwer him a word (to that enquiry,) neither durſt any man from that day forth aſk him any more queſtions.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XXII.

Ver. 2. [a] THE kingdom of heaven is likened ἀνθρώτῳ βασιλεῖ ὃς ἐποίησε γάμους, to a King who made a marriage for his ſon.] That γάμος ſignifies a marriage feaſt we learn from (a) Phavorinus, and others, on thoſe words of Homer, Od. α. v. 225. ἐλαστὶν ἧς γάμος. See Dr. Hammond on Matth. 9. e. And becauſe theſe feaſts continued ſometimes a week, or more, as we learn from thoſe words of Laban to Jacob, Gen. 29. 27. fulfil her week, i. e. keep a ſeven days feaſt for her marriage; and from Samſon, who at his marriage ἐποίησε πότον ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ, made a feaſt ſeven days, for ſo uſed the young men to do, Judg. 14. 10. therefore the word is γάμους in the plural, there being not many marriages, but many wedding feaſts at marriage. This ſenſe of the word is evident from ver. 4. my oxen and fatlings are killed, come, εἰς γάμους, to the marriage feaſt. The King here repreſents God the Father, the Son, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, deſcribed often as the ſpouſe of his Church, Matth. 9. 15.——25. 1. John 3. 29. 2 Cor. 11. 2. Apoc. 19. 7. the ſervants ſent to call them that were bidden, i. e. the Jews, invited by the Baptiſt, and our Lord calling them to repentance, becauſe the kingdom of God was at hand, might be the Apoſtles, and the ſeventy diſciples ſent at firſt only to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, Matth. 10. 5, 6. Luke 9. 2.——10. 1. The ſervants ſent again after the fatlings were killed, were the ſame Apoſtles and other ſpiritual perſons, ſent after our Lord's reſurrection with a new commiſſion, to be Chriſt's witneſſes in Jeruſalem, and throughout all Judea, Acts 1. 8. for the words Son, and the kingdom of heaven, repreſented by this parable, will not permit us to ſay theſe ſervants were the Prophets ſent before to the Jews. See Additions N° 35.

Ver. 7. [b] The King was wroth, πέμψας τὰ στρατόπεδα αὐτοῦ ἀπώλεσε τοὺς φονεῖς ἐκείνους, καὶ τὴν πόλιν αὐτῶν ἐνέπρησε, And ſending his armies deſtroyed thoſe murderers, and burnt up their city;] i. e. Upon their refuſal, he decreed to ſend the Romans to deſtroy the Jews, and burn their temple and their city; which they ſo fully performed, as to deſtroy, during thoſe wars, ſaith Joſephus, eleven hundred thouſand Jews, to burn their temple, conſume, and ſo lay waſte their city, as that all men conceived, ſaith Joſephus, it never could be built again.

Ver. 8. [c] Οἱ δὲ κεκλημένοι οὐκ ἦσαν ἄξιοι, But they that were called were not worthy;] They were not well diſpoſed to receive the Goſpel, not willing to repent, and believe, and entertain the preachers of it kindly, which is the indication Chriſt gives his Apoſtles who were ἄξιοι worthy, Matth. 10. 11, 13, 14. they were ἀμελήσαντες deſpiſers of this ſpiritual banquet, out of love to their ſecular intereſts; here ver. 5. they loved other things more than Chriſt, and the bleſſings of his kingdom; which he that doth, ſaith Chriſt, οὐκ ἔστι μου ἄξιος, is not worthy of me, becauſe he will not take up his croſs and follow me, Matth. 10. 37, 38.

Ver. 9. [d] Πορεύεσθε οὖν ἐπὶ τὰς διεξόδους τῶν ὁδῶν, Go therefore into the highways, &c.] i. e. to thoſe of the diſperſion; for after they had begun at Jeruſalem, and preached through Judea, they alſo were to preach the Goſpel to the other Jews, the ſeed of Abraham; this ſalvation being to be tendered to the Jews firſt, and alſo to the Gentile, Rom. 1. 16.——2. 10. Hence Paul ſaith thus to the Jews of Antioch, It was neceſſary the Goſpel ſhould be firſt preached to you, Acts 13. 45, 46. ——18. 6.——28. 28. and afterwards τοῖς ἔξω to thoſe who were without the covenant made to Abraham.

Ver. 11. [e] Εἶδεν ἐκεῖ ἄνθρωπον οὐκ ἐνδεδυμένον ἔνδυμα γάμου, He ſaw there a man not cloathed with a wedding garment.] Faith alone cannot be here the wedding garment, ſince to receive the invitation, and to come to the wedding ſupper, muſt import believing. By the man therefore who had not not on this garment, I conjecture we are to understand the false brethren of the Jewish nation, who preached Christ not sincerely, but out of contention, Phil. 1. 15. contending for the necessity of circumcision, and of the observation of the law of Moses to justification, and who by this subverted the souls of others, Acts 15. 1, 24, made Christ to die in vain, Gal. 2. 21. Christians to fall from grace, Gal. 5. 14. and the Apostles to labour in vain among the Gentiles, Gal. 4. 11. and of whom the Apostle saith, their end shall be according to their works, 2 Cor. 11. 15. That this man must represent the Jews is evident, (1.) Because he is cast out into utter darkness, where is weeping and gnashing of teeth, which Christ applies to the Jews, the sons of the kingdom, Matth. 8. 12. Luke 13. 28. whilst the Gentiles are said to come to this supper. (2.) Because the reason assigned of this punishment is this, that many are called, but few are chosen, ver. 14. for that this belongs peculiarly to the Jews, see Note on Chap. 20. 16. (3.) Christ had said in the former Chapter, that the kingdom of God should be taken from them; and here proceeding to discourse of the same thing, as appears from the connective particle. v. 1. of this Chapter, he shews how worthy the Jews would be of this punishment, as being either wholly refractory to God, calling them by his Son to the participation of these blessings, or coming to them without due preparations, as the false apostles, and deceitful workers did, or else by casting off that wedding garment they had once put on, as did those Jews whose charity waxed cold, Matth. 24. 10, 11, 12. and who being scandalized fell off from the Christian faith: It remains then that these backsliders, or these false apostles, must be the persons represented by the man not having on his wedding garment.

Ver. 14. [e] Many are called, but few are chosen.] This parable, saith Theophylact, respects the Jews who were called, but not elected, ὡς μὴ ἀκούσαντες, as not hearkning to God's Call; whence he infers, that ἡμῶν μὲν Θεὸς κέκληκεν, τὸ δὲ ἐκλεκτοὺς γεγενῆσθαι ἡμᾶς, ἐφ' ἡμῖν ἐστιν, our calling is of God, but that we are elect, or not, is from ourselves.

Ver. 16. [f] Μετὰ Ἡρῳδιανῶν, With the Herodians.] Here Jerom notes that some of the Latins ridiculously thought, they were called Herodians, who thought Herod was the Christ, See Additions N° 37. and sure this opinion must seem ridiculous to them who consider, that Herod was an alien, not a Jew of the seed of Abraham, or of the root of David, and was dead before Christ's return out of Egypt; whereas all thought that Christ was to be found, not among the dead, but the living, and many that he should never die, John 12. 34. See the Note on Matth. 16. 6.

Ver 17. [g] Ἔξεστι δοῦναι κῆνσον Καίσαρι, ἢ οὔ; Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæsar, or not? &c.] Here note, 1st, That though the question be only proposed thus, ἔξεστι; Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæsar, or not? Yet the decision in the affirmative, that it was lawful to pay it to Cæsar, was plainly a decision of the right of Cæsar to receive, and therefore to demand it, as being to them the minister of God. (1.) Because St. Paul hath plainly told us, that therefore pay we tribute to him to whom we lawfully do pay it, because he is the higher power, and the minister of God, Rom. 13. 6. And also because it is his due; for so it follows, render therefore to all τὰς ὀφειλὰς their dues, tribute to whom tribute is due; and this is still more evident from those words of Christ, render to Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and to God the things which are God's; where Christ seems to me, even to strike at the root of that corrupt opinion of the Gaulonites, and zealots, that they being God's people, were not to own any other as their Lord, by this distinction betwixt things belonging to Cæsar, viz. tribute, and things belonging to God, viz. the shekel of the sanctuary; but to omit this, either Christ, when he said, render to Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, spake to the purpose, and by way of answer to the question proposed, or he did not; to say he did not, is in effect to say, he spake impertinently, which I hope no Christian will affirm: If he spake to the purpose of the question, seeing he said, upon their owning the tribute money to bear Cæsar's image, by way of inference, ἀπόδοτε οὖν, Render therefore to Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, he as plainly intimates the tribute money did of right belong to Cæsar, as by saying render to God the things that are God's, that what he stiled the things of God, did of right belong to God. For those Jews who held that tribute was not to be paid to Cæsar, did so, because they apprehended it unlawful to own any other, as their Lord and Governor, but God, or one of their own nation whom he had appointed to rule over them. See the Note on 1 Pet. 2. 16.

I therefore cannot think with Grotius, that Christ here leaves the matter of right undecided; or, with Mr. Cl. that he doth not by his answer own that tribute was rightly demanded by Cæsar, seeing Christ could not then have said, by way of inference, Render therefore to Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and this right of Cæsar had its rise from their own act of submission to the Roman government, as formerly they had done to the Assyrian; which which national ſubmiſſion, with promiſe of fidelity, having obtained now about a hundred years, was a juſt ground for Cæſar's right. And therefore King (b) Agrippa tells them, that οἱ τὸ μὴ ὑπαχθῆν ἐκ διαδοχῆς εἰληφότες, they who had received this ſubjection by ſucceſſion from their anceſtors could not rebel without contumacy. And (c) Joſephus tells them, that to ſeek now to ſhake off the yoke χ μακρῆς ἐξελθεῖν χρόνου, when for a long time they had yielded to it, would ſubject them to an evil death. Note,

2*dly*, That our Lord anſwers from the received maxims of the Jews, that wherever the money of any perſon was owned as the current coin of the kingdom, there the inhabitants owned that perſon as their Lord and Governor; that is, they acknowledged him to be the higher power, and the miniſter of God in reſpect to them: Whence, he that doth adulterate, diminiſh, or counterfeit this coin, becomes guilty of the crime, Læſæ Majeſtatis: And David, tho' anointed by Samuel, is declared not to be their King whilſt Saul lived, becauſe Numiſma Saulis adhuc obtinet, the coin which had the image of Saul upon it, was ſtill the current coin. So that theſe captious men could take no advantage againſt him from this anſwer, becauſe it was founded upon their own received principles. Note,

3*dly*, That Chriſt juſtly calls theſe perſons hypocrites, becauſe they pretended to own him as a juſt perſon, and one who bore no reſpect to perſons, and yet came with deſign to accuſe him for an unjuſt deciſion: And (2*dly*,) Becauſe they, ſaith St. Luke, Chap. 20. 20. feigned themſelves to be ſuch as they were not, and to have that opinion of him which was far from their hearts; both which are manifeſt indications of groſs hypocriſy.

Ver. 23. [h] Προσῆλθον αὐτῷ Σαδδουκαῖοι, λέγοντες μὴ εἶναι ἀνάστασιν, The Sadducees came to him, ſaying, There is no reſurrection.] It is true, that the Sadducees held, That there was neither angel of any permanent, nor ſpirit of any ſeparate exiſtence from the body, Acts 23. 8. For their opinion, ſaith (d) Joſephus, τὰς ψυχὰς συναναιρεῖ τοῖς σώμασι, extinguiſhes ſouls together with the bodies; and that they rejected ψυχῆς τὴν διαμονὴν, both the duration of the ſoul, and future puniſhments and rewards; but then it is true alſo, that the Sadducees ſay, μὴ εἶναι ἀνάστασιν, that there is no reſurrection, Acts 23. 8. And hence the Jews introduce them, ſaying, (e) The cloud fails, and goes away; ſo he that deſcends into the grave, returns not from it. Nay, they denied, or at leaſt knew not that the power of God was ſufficient to raiſe the dead; for, ye err, ſaith Chriſt, not knowing the ſcriptures, neither the power of God, v. 29. And therefore, St. Paul, ſpeaking of the reſurrection from the dead, aſks, Why it ſhould be thought a thing incredible for God to raiſe the dead? Acts 26. 7, 8.

Ver. 30. [i] Ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει, In the reſurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but ὡς ἄγγελοι τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν οὐρανῷ εἰσι, are as the angels of God in heaven.] They are as the angels, not in all reſpects, but as to immortality and incorruptibility; and ſo they need no marriage to perpetuate their generations in the world: So ſaith St. Luke, They can die no more, but are ἰσάγγελοι, equal to the angels, Luke 20. 36. And that in this eſpecially, conſiſts their likeneſs to the angels, we learn from the like words of Philo, concerning Abraham, That leaving the world, (f) περιῆλθε τῷ Θεῷ λαῷ, καρπούμενος ἀθανασίαν ἴσος ἀγγέλοις γενόμενος, he was gathered to the people of God, having obtained incorruptibility, being made like to the angels. Vain therefore is the inference of the Papiſts hence, That the ſouls of the juſt ſee God as the angels do, and know of the converſion of ſinners: This likeneſs to the angels relating not to the qualities of their ſouls, but to the freedom of their bodies from corruption. Hence alſo it is evident againſt Heinſius, and others, on this place, that ἀνάστασις, even when it is not joined with fleſh, or body, ſignifies the reſurrection of the fleſh, or body; and when the reſurrection of the dead is mentioned, as here, it never bears any other ſenſe.

Ver. 31, 32. [k] Περὶ δὲ τῆς ἀναστάσεως τῶν νεκρῶν, But concerning the reſurrection of the dead,——I am the God of Abraham, &c.] Thoſe learned men are very much miſtaken who ſay, That Chriſt deſigned not here to prove the reſurrection of the body, but only the ἀναβίωσις, or life of the ſoul after death. For, (1*ſt*,) The argument of the Sadducees being taken from the ſuppoſition, that if there was a reſurrection, there muſt be marriage, and the perſons raiſed muſt be man and wife, as they were before, ſhews plainly, That they put the queſtion concerning the reſurrection of the body; for marriage belongs not to ſeparate ſouls, but only to perſons in the body: And therefore, if Chriſt ſaid any thing pertinent to their objection, and oppoſed his argument to that which they deſigned to diſprove, he muſt ſpeak of, and prove the reſurrection of the body. And

And therefore (g) Methodius well notes, that if Christ had not done this, but only had asserted the permanency of the soul, he had not answered, but confirmed the reasoning of the Sadducees against the doctrine of the Pharisees. (2dly,) Christ here declares the Sadducees thus erred, not knowing the power of God, ver. 29. Now that consists not in sustaining an immortal soul in life, but in raising the body from the dust to life, Acts 26. 8. Ephes. 1. 19, 20. Philip. 3. 21. Heb. 11. 19. And, (3dly,) This is extremely evident from the very words of Christ, both here, and in St. Mark and Luke: For, (1.) the question put to Christ is not put thus, If their souls live, whose wife is she? but, ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει, ὅταν ἀναστῶσι, in the resurrection, when they shall arise, whose wife shall she then be? Mark 12. 23. To which Christ answers thus, Ὅταν ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῶσι, When they rise from the dead, ver. 25. when they partake, τῆς ἀναστάσεως τῆς ἐκ νεκρῶν, of the resurrection from the dead, Luke 20. 35. they neither marry, nor are given in marriage: Now a time so determined, and respecting what should be hereafter, cannot refer to the present state of their souls, which in no sense are raised from the dead, but only to the future condition of their bodies. (2.) Christ manifestly declares the question was, περὶ τῶν νεκρῶν, ὅτι ἐγείρονται, concerning the dead, that they rise again, Mark 12. 26. touching the resurrection of the dead here; and that this was the thing he was to prove, from what they had read concerning Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Luke 20. 37. And the argument from them will appear strong and convincing, upon consideration of these following particulars:

1st, That God is the God and Father of them only who are his sons: Thus when God had chosen Israel to be his people in covenant, and promised to be their God, διαπεφώνως, or in distinction from others, he stileth them his sons, saying, υἱοί ἐστε, Ye are the sons of the Lord your God, Deut. 14. 1.——32. 18. Isa 45. 11. Or else his son, Israel is my son, my first-born; say then to Pharaoh, Let my son go, Exod. 4. 22, 23. Jer. 31. 20. Hos. 11. 1. And in the New Testament, ἔσομαι αὐτῷ Θεὸς, καὶ αὐτὸς ἔσται μοι υἱὸς, I will be to him a God, and he shall be to me a son, Rev. 21. 7. I will be to you a Father, and ye shall be to me sons and daughters, 2 Cor. 6. 18. Note,

2*dly*, That this υἱοθεσία, or sonship, imports the redemption of the body from corruption; for we wait, saith the Apostle, for the adoption, that is for the redemption of the body, Rom. 8. 23. The revelation of the sons of God expected, ver. 19. is there, deliverance from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God, ver. 21. And the Apostle proves, that our mortal bodies, dead because of sin, shall be raised by the Spirit of God dwelling in them, because they who have the Spirit of God are sons of God, from ver. 11. to 17. And in this very argument St. Luke expressly saith, that they that are thought worthy of the life to come, and of the resurrection from the dead, are, υἱοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ, τῆς ἀναστάσεως υἱοὶ ὄντες, the sons of God, as being children of the resurrection, Chap. 20. 36. Hence, because God, who is not the God of the dead, but of the living, is called the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. (*) Irenæus infers, that without doubt they live to God, cum sint filii resurrectionis, being the sons of the resurrection; and it is the same with him to be a son of God, and hæreditatem consequi incorruptelæ, to enjoy an incorruptible inheritance. Hence the Apostle saith, The sons of God must be the heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ, Rom. 8. 17. St. John, that they shall inherit all things, Rev. 21. 7. The author to the Hebrews, that God was not ashamed to be called the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, because he had prepared for them a kingdom, Heb. 11. 16. Nor were the Jews unacquainted with this notion of a son of God, as one who was to be rewarded by him after death; or of a son of Abraham, who was to be partaker of an happy resurrection. For thus the book of Wisdom introduceth the wicked speaking of the good man, μακαρίζει τὰ ἔσχατα δικαίων, καὶ ἀλαζονεύεται πατέρα Θεὸν, He pronounced the latter end of the just blessed, and boasts that he hath God for his Father; let us cut him off with a shameful death; εἰ γὰρ ὄντως ὁ δίκαιος υἱὸς Θεοῦ, for, if the just man be the son of God, he will receive him; and, by his words, there will be a visitation of him, Wisd. 2. 16,——20. Thus, saith he, they spake, because they knew not the mysteries of God, nor hoped for the reward of holiness, nor discerned the recompence of blameless souls; for God made man, εἰς ἀφθαρσίαν, for incorruption, and to be an image of his own immortality, ver. 22, 23. And again, The souls of the righteous are in the hands of God, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἅψηται αὐτῶν βασανισμὸς θανάτου, and their hope is full of immortality; in the day of their visitation they shall shine, Chap. 3. 1, 4. 7. And a third time, Then shall the righteous stand with great boldness before the face of them who afflicted them; and they shall say, We fools counted his life madness, and his end to be without honour; how is he numbred ἐν υἱοῖς Θεοῦ, among the ſons of God, and his portion is with the ſaints, Ch. 5. 1, 4, 5. The ſeven ſons mentioned in the Maccabees, are by Joſephus ſtill called Ἀβραὰμ παῖδες, children of the ſtock of Abraham; and as the book of Maccabees ſtill introduces them, declaring, that God ἀναστήσει ὑμᾶς εἰς αἰωνίον ἀναβίωσιν ζωῆς, would raiſe them up to life eternal, 2 Maccab. 7. 9, 23. And (h) Joſephus introduces their mother, comforting them with thoſe words of Solomon, Wiſdom is a tree of life to them that do her will; and thoſe of Ezekiel, εἰ ζήσεται τὰ ὀστᾶ τὰ ξηρά; ſhall theſe dry bones live? and thoſe words of God in the ſong of Moſes, I kill, καὶ ζῶ ποιήσω, and I will make alive; ſo he alſo declares of theſe (i) Martyrs, that dying for God, they alſo ζῶσι Θεῷ ὅπερ Ἀβραὰμ, καὶ Ἰσαὰκ, καὶ Ἰακὼβ, lived with God as do Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and all the Patriarchs, and (k) ran εἰς ἀθανασίας ὁδὸν, in the way of immortality, and that (l) Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, received them dying. He alſo mentions ἀναβίωσιν, reviviſcence of all that obſerve the law of Moſes, tho' they die for it, ſaying, that to them (m) ἔδωκεν ὁ Θεὸς γένεσθαι τὰ πάλιν, καὶ βίον ἀμείνω λαβεῖν ἐν παλιγγενεσίᾳ, God hath granted them to live again, and to receive a better life in reverſion, or at the revolution of all things. So then Chriſt's argument runs thus, Thoſe of whom God after their death is the God and Father, they ſhall riſe again, (for they muſt be the ſons of God, and therefore ſons of the reſurrection, to whom belongs the adoption or ſonſhip, i. e. the redemption of their bodies from corruption,) but God is the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, therefore they ſhall riſe again. See Additions N° 38.

Ver. 35. [l] Ἐπερώτησεν αὐτὸν ὁ νομικὸς· A lawyer aſked him, (ſee the Note on Mark 12. 28.) ποία ἐντολὴ μεγάλη ἐν τῷ νόμῳ; which is the great commandment in the law?] This was a famous queſtion among the Jews, ſome contending that the precept of ſacrifices was the greateſt, as is inſinuated, Mark 12. 33. See Pirk Eleezer, cap. 16. p. 33. Others were for the precept of the phylacteries, to whom Chriſt anſwers from what was written in the phylacteries.

Ver. 37. [m] Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart.] Note here,

1*ſt*, That this is a precept given to the Jewiſh nation, and ſo it follows that it ought to bear that ſenſe which is the certain import of it in all thoſe other places of the Old Teſtament, where it only doth occur, it being only found in the New Teſtament as a citation thence. It is therefore certain, that it doth not require us to love God in perfection of degrees, or in the elevated ſenſe contended for by ſome, but only to love him with a ſincere and a prevailing love. For,

1*ſt*, God's ſervants entred into a covenant to ſerve the Lord after this manner; thus Aſa gathered all Benjamin and Judah, and they entred into covenant to ſeek the Lord with all their heart, and with all their ſoul, 2 Chron. 15. 12. And good Joſiah, with all his people, made a covenant before the Lord, to walk after the Lord, and to keep his commandments with all their heart, and with all their ſoul, 2 Kings 23. 3. Now if in this covenant they promiſed to love God with every degree of every power, i. e. with the whole poſſibility of the ſoul, to make him not only the principal, but the only object of their love, they promiſed what they knew they never could, what to be ſure they never did perform. And why then is it ſaid, That the people ſtood to the covenant, and that God was found of them? But if they only promiſed love of ſincerity, and love to God above all other things, and that they would adhere to him and his ſervice, then may this phraſe import no more.

2*dly*, This God required them to do, to render them the objects of his grace and favour, promiſing to have mercy on them in their captivity on this condition. If from thence, ſaith Moſes, thou ſhalt ſeek the Lord thy God, thou ſhalt find him; if thou ſeek him with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, Deut. 4. 29. And again, If thou ſhalt return to the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compaſſion on thee, and will bring thee into the land which thy fathers poſſeſſed; and thou ſhalt poſſeſs it, and he will do thee good, Deut. 30. 2, 3. And upon this condition only doth Solomon deſire this mercy, ſaying, If they turn to thee with all their heart, and all their ſoul, in the land of their enemies, then hear thou their prayer and ſupplication, 1 Kings 8. 48. Now is it reaſonable to conceive, that God required ſuch an abſolute perfection of degrees in their affection and obedience, to qualify them for his favour under their captivity? If ſo, they muſt for ever have continued captives. Or, would he promiſe to reſtore them to their good land, and to do them good upon a condition that would not permit them either to deſire that pleaſant land, or any other temporal enjoyments, as their good? Sure the ſuſpenſion of his favour upon this condition, is a clear evidence, that this phraſe bears a milder ſenſe.

3*dly*, God doth acknowledge that some of them did actually love him thus, that King David had kept his commandments, and followed him with all his heart, saving in the matter of Uriah, 1 Kings 14. 8. and yet we find him guilty of mistrust of God's own promise, by saying, I shall one day perish by the hand of Saul, 1 Sam. 27. 1. of lying to Abimelech, Chap. 21. 2. of a rash oath, in swearing to cut off the house of Nabal, Chap. 25. 22. of injustice in giving a deceitful Ziba half the goods of Mephibosheth, 2 Sam. 19. 29. and of pride in numbring the people, Chap. 24. 1. God also testifies of good Josiah, that he turned to the Lord with all his soul, and all his heart, and all his might, 2 Kings 23. 24, 25. Since therefore God himself declares of men thus subject to imperfection, that they did thus love him, that love cannot require a perfection of degrees, but only a sincere and prevalent affection to him. This precept therefore must imply three things,

1*st*, That we are to love God above all things appretiativè, i. e. so as to prize him in our judgments above all things, to esteem him more valuable in himself, more beneficial to us, than all things else we can enjoy, according to that saying of the Psalmist, Thy loving kindness is much better than is life itself, Psal. 63. 3. to esteem him as the only felicity of our immortal souls; their chief and most desirable good, the only being in whom is perfect rest, entire complacency, and full satisfaction to be found, and consequently to look on all things else as loss and dung, compared to him. And whilst we retain this value for him, we can never prize or be concerned for any thing so much as his favour, nor refuse to part with any thing which tendeth to deprive us of it; we can never value any thing so much as to permit it to rival him, who is exceedingly more precious in our eyes, and more desirable to our souls, and so we cannot over-value any worldly thing. This therefore may be truly stiled, the loving him with all our mind.

2*dly*, That we are to love God above all things comparativè, i. e. with a superlative affection, so as to be ready always to prefer his favour before all other things. And this affection, this cleaving of our hearts unto him, must follow from the forementioned estimation of him: For if we fully are convinced, that there is infinitely more excellency in God, more happiness to be expected from him, than all the honours, pleasures, profits, interests, relations, and satisfactions of the world can tender, and so the highest reason that he should always be preferred before them, and that we should still cleave unto him in opposition to any other thing; it is certain he can have no rival in our hearts, nothing that stands in competition for our love, nothing we do not truly hate, and despise comparatively to his favour; nothing that can tempt us to depart from him, or to do the thing which will hazard his favour, or provoke his displeasure; and may we not then be said to love him with an entire and undivided heart?

3*dly*, That we are to love God above all things intensivè, that is, our desires must be more ardently inclined toward his favour, and the enjoyment of him; we must long, thirst, and pant more after him; rejoice more in his favour than in any other thing, be more concerned to retain it than to secure any worldly blessings, and be more satisfied in it than in marrow and fatness, and what more can the love of God with all our souls import? For seeing such a prevalence of our desires towards him, and delight in him, will not permit us to desire any thing in opposition to him, or against his will and pleasure; but will constrain us to quit all other interests, that we may happily retain our interest in him we thus desire, and delight in above all other things; it follows, that by thus loving God with all our souls, our love unto, or desire of the creature, can never be inordinate or irregular, and so can never be offensive to God; and then it cannot be forbidden by the command, to love the Lord our God with all our souls. In these things seems to be implied, or from them certainly will follow, that endeavour above all things to please him, that industrious care to serve and obey him, that vigorous employment of all our other faculties in his service, which will demonstrate, that we comparatively do not labour for the meat that perisheth, do not permit our secular employments, or our pursuit of any temporal enjoyments to impair our diligence in the securing our eternal interests; and therefore, that in the true import of the phrase, we love God with all our might, all other senses of it being inconsistent with that diligence in our callings, and that industry in our civil affairs, which God himself requires of us. And,

4*thly*, Hence it follows, that we are to love all other things only in way of relation, and subordination to God; for if we do co-ordinately love any other thing, we love it equally with God. And certainly if God requires us to love him with all our hearts, and all our souls, our love to other things must virtually be comprised in our love to God, or be dependent on it, or subservient to it, or else we must deprive him of some portion of the heart he calls for. Moreover, God being our ultimate and chiefest good, all other things can only be good as they conduce to the enjoyment, or service of him, and so are to be loved for him; that is, we muſt love them as they relate to him, as they enable us to ſerve him, as they are, or may be inſtrumental to his glory, or to our enjoyment of him.

And of this expoſition of theſe words we cannot reaſonably doubt, if we conſider that our Lord himſelf doth plainly ſeem to favour and approve of it, making that ſervice, and ſo that love which he requires from us, to conſiſt in that prevalence of affection, which enables us, in any competition betwixt the love of the world and the love of him, to cleave to God, and deſpiſe the world. This evidently is the import of theſe words, No man can ſerve two maſters, (when their ſervice and commands do interfere) for he will either hate the one, and love the other, he will cleave to the one, and deſpiſe the other; ye cannot (therefore) ſerve God and Mammon, Matth. 6. 24.

Again, Chriſt places the due love of himſelf in the prevalence of our affections to him above other things, ſaying, He that loveth father or mother, ſon or daughter, ὑπὲρ ἐμὲ, above me, is not worthy of me, Matth. 10. 37. Whence it muſt follow, by the rule of contraries, that he who loveth Chriſt more than father or mother, ſon or daughter, or any worldly intereſt whatever, muſt be worthy of him. From theſe two places it is therefore evident, that to love God ſo as to deſpiſe and to forſake all other things, to cleave unto him; to love God ſuperlatively, ſo as to have our affections more powerfully carried out after him than any other thing that is moſt dear unto us, is, in the ſcripture ſenſe, to love God with a whole and entire heart. And ſurely, if I love God, ſo as to love nothing which is contrary to him, or which he forbiddeth me to love, I can do nothing contrary to the love I owe to him. If I love him, ſo as to prize neither friendſhip, relations, fame, honour, pleaſures, riches, life, or any temporal concernments, ſo as to offend him by preſerving them, I do not inordinately love them, for obedience being the true teſt of love; where there is no neglect of obedience, there can be no want of love. Moreover if I prize nothing in compariſon with God in my mind, if I cleave to nothing in competition with him in my will, if I deſire nothing in compariſon with him in my affections, if I purſue nothing but with relation to his glory, and in ſubordination to his ſacred will, how can I be wanting in my duty to him? And if I be not wanting in my duty to him, how can I ſin againſt him?

Ver. 39. [n] Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf.] Here note, (1.) That by our neighbour here we are to underſtand every other perſon who is capable of kindneſs from us, and ſtands in need of help. So St. Paul expounds it, Rom. 13. 8. Owe no man any thing, but to love one another, for ὁ ἀγαπῶν τὸν ἕτερον, he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law, which ſaith, Thou ſhalt love, τὸν πλησίον, thy neighbour as thyſelf. This will be evident,

1*ſt*, From our Lord's anſwer to this enquiry, Who is my neighbour? for ſuch a caſe did he propound in demonſtration of this point, as did extort from a great Rabbi this frank confeſſion, that even a Samaritan diſcharging a great office of humanity towards a Jew, acted the part of a true neighbour to him, and conſequently that ſuch humanity and mercy was alſo due from any Jew to a Samaritan. Now ſcripture and the Jewiſh records do inform us, that there was the greateſt ſtrangeneſs and averſeneſs betwixt the Jew and Samaritan; they would have no converſe together, they would receive no kindneſs from one another; witneſs the queſtion which the woman of Samaria puts to Chriſt, How is it that thou, being a Jew, aſkeſt drink of me, who am a woman of Samaria? for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans, John 4. 9. Hence, ſaith the ſon of Sirach, two nations doth my ſoul hate, the Samaritans and the Philiſtines, Ecclus 50. 26. And hence that proverb of the Jews, that to eat fleſh with a Samaritan is as bad as to eat ſwine's fleſh. Now hence it clearly follows, that Chriſt, by ſhewing that the Jew and the Samaritan were neighbours, muſt teach us, that no difference of nation, or religion, no alienation of affections, can exempt us from owning any perſon as our neighbour, and that by ſaying, Go thou and do likewiſe, our Lord obligeth us to love them as we love ourſelves, and to be helpful to them in their need, according to our power.

2*dly*, This is apparent from all thoſe evangelical commands which do extend this duty to all men, and thereby ſhew that all men are to be beloved as neighbours; ſuch are theſe exhortations, As you have opportunity, do good to all men, Gal. 6. 10. See that none render evil for evil unto any man, but ever follow that which is good, both among yourſelves, and to all men, 1 Theſſ. 5. 15. To this intent are thoſe directions, to follow peace with all men, to be patient and gentle towards all men; ſuch, laſtly, is that fervent ſupplication of St. Paul to his Theſſalonians, The Lord make you to increaſe in love towards one another, and towards all men: All which expreſſions make it evident that, the affection of the Chriſtian muſt extend to all men, and that his neighbourhood is univerſal and unlimited.

3*dly*, This alſo will be evident from the example we are called to imitate in this affection, viz. the love and mercy of our God and Saviour; for we are to be followers of God as dear children, children, and walk in love, and to be perfect as our heavenly Father is perfect. Now God is good to all, and his mercies are over all his works, he is the Saviour of all men, this kindness he is willing to vouchsafe, this saving health he freely tenders, and joyfully imparts to the greatest of repenting prodigals; he is kind to the unthankful and the wicked, and maketh his sun to rise upon the just and the unjust; and in this he expecteth to be imitated by us, as ever we desire to be deemed his children, or to enjoy the blessings he hath prepared for them alone; thus our great teacher doth instruct us, I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, that you may be the children of your Father which is in heaven. Moreover, the kindness of our Lord to all his brethren, partakers of the same nature with him, disposed him to taste death for every man, and purchase their redemption with his precious blood, for he gave himself a ransom for all: since therefore we are called to imitate the love and kindness of our God and Saviour, our duty must be answerable to the divine grace, our charity must follow the example of our blessed Lord, and therefore every man must be our brother, not only as he is derived from the same common stock by nature, but as by grace we are partakers of the same universal and redeeming love. And,

4*thly*, If Christianity obligeth us to bear a brotherly affection towards the worst of enemies, to treat them with the greatest love and kindness, if without this affection to them we vainly do pretend to act as Christians, then must all men become the objects of the Christian's love. For as for friends, even nature and gratitude oblige us to bear affection to them, and if we do no more, our Lord informs us, that we do nothing which can intitle us to a reward from him, or shew we are advanced above the rank of publicans and sinners; for if you only love them which love you, what reward have you? do not even the publicans the same? And if you only do good to them who do good to you, what thanks have you, for sinners also do the same? Matth. 5. 46. Luke 6. 33. If then the worst, the most despiteful and disobliging of our enemies must, by the Christian, be thus loved, and therefore owned as his neighbour, what man can be excluded from that appellation?

To love this neighbour as ourselves, (1.) It is not necessary that we should love him from the same inward principles and dispositions which excite our affection to ourselves: For we by nature are so framed, that we are forcibly engaged to avoid that which is evil and afflicting to us, from that quick sense of pain and trouble it createth to us, and to pursue that which doth gratefully affect us, from the experience of that inward pleasure, joy, and satisfaction, which we reap from the enjoyment of it; but we find no proportionable inward sense of pain from that which is afflictive to our brother, nor yet of pleasure from what is advantageous, and grateful to him; and therefore cannot from the same inward principles be moved so strongly to prevent the pain, want, and infamy he may labour under, or to procure his pleasure and advantage. And therefore the divine wisdom saw it meet to supply this defect, by deterring us from the neglect of our regard towards our brother in his misery, by threatning the severest punishments to this want of mercy; and therefore, by the consideration of the greatest evils which might befal ourselves for that neglect, and to engage us to all the acts of kindness, charity and mercy to our brother in his misery, by the promise of the most excellent rewards, or of the choicest blessings, and so to move us to these duties from like principles of self-love.

2*dly*, This rule doth not engage us upon pain of God's displeasure to an absolute equality in our affection to our brother and ourselves, but only to make that affection which we bear to ourselves the rule and the direction for the expression of our love unto our brother; it saith, sicut teipsum, non quantum teipsum; it enjoins us to love our brother in all the instances in which we do express our love unto ourselves, but not in equal measure; for certainly my love unto myself must have priority unto the love I bear unto my brother, in all equal circumstances. For instance, if I see my brother in danger of his life, I am not bound to put my own in equal danger to preserve him, but only to do all I can, without incurring the like danger to prevent his death. If I perceive he is in want, the law of charity will not oblige me to put myself in equal want, but only to impart to him what I do not want. It doth not bind me to quench his thirst, or to allay his hunger with the meat or drink I want as much as he, but only with those viands I can minister without like sense of want. If he be in the pesthouse, or labours under an infectious disease, I am not bound to venture the procuring the same fatal malady, to comfort or relieve him under it, but only to afford him what comfort and relief I can, without endangering myself. The reason is apparent, from this very rule, because we cannot thus affect ourselves, and therefore cannot be obliged thus to love our brother; that is, no man can put his life in danger to prevent the danger of his life; no man can ſupply his own wants by parting with that he equally wants, and therefore no man can be obliged by this rule to this deportment towards others, nor can we rationally deſire that others ſhould do ſo for us, and therefore we cannot be obliged to do ſo for them. But then we abſolutely are obliged by it.

1*ſt*, To the greateſt freedom from all hatred, ill-will, or malice to our brother, all alienation of mind, or averſeneſs from doing offices of kindneſs to him; for no man hateth his own ſelf, or is averſe from doing kindneſs to himſelf, Eph. 5. 29.

2*dly*, To be careful that we never do him any injury, οὐδεὶς γὰρ ἑαυτῷ κακὰ βούλεται, for no man wiſheth evil to himſelf, and love worketh no evil to our neighbour, Rom. 13. 10.

3*dly*, That we ſtill retain a kind affection to him, and a readineſs to do him good; for we have always this goodwill to our own ſelves; and this is neceſſary, both that our charity may be acceptable to God, and that we may both ſeriouſly deſire, and as we have opportunity, to promote his good. And therefore,

4*thly*, We are to be as helpful to him as our circumſtances will permit, both in our words, our prayers, inſtructions, advice, admoniſhments and conſolations, and in our works, the labours of our hands, our bodies, and the expences of our purſe, that by thus ſerving and bearing one another's burdens, we may fulfil the law of love, Gal. 5. 14.

5*thly*, We are to ſympathize with, and commiſerate him in his afflictions, 1 Cor. 12. 26. and do what in us lies to alleviate his burdens, Gal. 6. 2. and to rejoice with him in his proſperity; for we in our proſperity rejoice, in our adverſity are ſorry. This therefore is a rule we are not only taught of God, 1 Theſſ. 4. 9. but we are taught it from our own ſelves; this being the great advantage of this rule, that it ſends us not to learn our duty from the great doctors of the world, but only to the law written on all our hearts, or to that celebrated rule of the philoſophers, noſce teipſum, know thy ſelf, reflect upon the inward motions of thy heart, and obſerve thy demeanour to thyſelf; and this will faithfully admoniſh thee, and make thee ſkilful to diſcern, what is the love and kindneſs which thou oweſt to others, and will enable thee to judge aright in all the inſtances of juſtice and humanity.

Ver. 40. ° On theſe two commandments hang all the law and the Prophets.] This is a metaphor taken from the cuſtom, mentioned by Tertullian, of hanging up their laws in a publick place, to be ſeen of all men; and it imports, that in them is compendiouſly contained all that the law and Prophets do require, in reference to our duty to God and man; for tho' there be ſome precepts of temperance which we owe to ourſelves, yet are they ſuch as we may be moved to perform, from the true love of God, and of our neighbour; for, if we truly love God, we cannot be wanting in them; for the love of God will make us humble, contented with our portion; it will preſerve us from all intemperance, impatience, and evil luſtings; it will make us watchful over ourſelves, to keep a good conſcience, and ſolicitous for our eternal weal; and the love of our neighbour will free us from all angry paſſions, envy, malice, and other perturbations which ariſe againſt him. See Examen Millii here.

Ver. 46. ᵖ Καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐδύνατο αὐτῷ ἀποκριθῆναι λόγον· And no man could anſwer him a word.] Hence it is plain, that the artifices which the Jews now uſe to evade this place, by ſaying, Theſe words belong to Abraham, or David, or as (n) Juſtin M. teſtifies, to Ezekiel, had not then obtained: For, if it had not then been the received opinion, that this Pſalm belonged to the Meſſiah, Chriſt would not have alledged it to this end, much leſs would he have put the ſcribes and Phariſees to ſilence by ſo doing. And whereas Woltzogenius here notes, that this place proves Chriſt is not God, becauſe he is here diſtinguiſhed from God by ſitting at his right hand: This we grant, according to that human nature, from which alone, he is ſaid to ſit at the right hand of God; and tho', as he replies, the human nature is no perſon, whereas it is the perſon of Chriſt which ſits at the right hand of God; this is nothing to the purpoſe: For, tho' it be Chriſt perſonally taken, who ſits at the right hand of God, yet he is not ſaid to ſit there according to his divine, but human nature; thus is it, The Lord of glory who was crucified, 1 Cor. 2. 8. yet he was not crucified as the Lord of glory.

1. THen ſpake Jeſus to the multitude, and to his diſciples,

2. Saying, ª The ſcribes and Phariſees ſit in Moſes's ſeat; (i. e. are the received interpreters of the law of Moſes.)

3. All therefore whatſoever they bid you obſerve, (according to that law,) that obſerve and do; but do not ye after their works, for they ſay, and do not (themſelves that which they teach to be the duty of others.)

4. ᵇ For

(n) Dial. p. 256.

4. [b] For they bind heavy burdens, and grievous to be born, and lay them on mens shoulders, but (are so forgetful of the mercy required by the law, that) they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers; (i. e. they will do nothing to remove those burdens from them that are oppressed with them.)

5. But (and) all their works they do to be seen of men, (i. e. for ostentation of piety; to which end) [c] they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, (as men highly concerned to remember the commandments of the Lord, writ upon these phylacteries, Num. 15. 38, 39.)

6. And (they) love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues,

7. And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.

8. [d] But be not ye called Rabbi, (guides, but only teachers and ministers of the word, which ye have learned from Christ;) for one is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren, (or equally his servants in this ministry.)

9. And call no man your father upon the earth; (i. e. be swayed by no man in matters of faith, as children are by the will of their fathers;) for one is your Father which is in heaven, (to whose will and precepts alone you owe an absolute subjection.)

10. Neither be ye called masters; for one is your Master, even Christ; (from whom ye receive what you communicate to others, and so ye have no power over the faith of men, as masters have over their servants, but are only stewards and dispensers of the mysteries of Christ.)

11. But he that is greatest among you, shall be your servant, (for the sake of Christ, 1 Cor. 3. 5. 2 Cor. 4. 5.)

12. And whosoever shall exalt himself (by acting not as a servant, but a lord and master,) shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself (to the meanest office in this ministry,) shall be exalted.

13. But woe to you scribes and Pharisees, (who are) hypocrites; for [e] ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men, (by your example, doctrine, and authority;) for ye neither go in (to it) yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entring (into it,) to go in.

14. Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; for [f] ye devour widows houses, and for a pretence, (that ye may be more trusted by them, ye*)* make long prayer (as devout persons;) therefore ye shall (for this hypocrisy,) receive the greater damnation.

15. Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, (who are) hypocrites; for ye compass sea and land: (go to all the regions of your dispersions,) to make one proselyte (to your religion;) and when he is made (so,) [g] ye make him two-fold more the child of hell, (more opposite to the Gospel, and the professors of it,) than yourselves.

16. Woe to you, ye blind guides, which say; [h] Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing (obligatory;) but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor; (i. e. he is obliged to perform his oath.)

17. Ye fools and blind; for (since ye swear by something sacred, let me ask,) Whether is greater the gold, or the temple that sanctifieth the gold? (i. e. makes it more sacred than any common gold.)

18. And whosoever shall swear by the altar, (you say) it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty, (if he do not perform his oath.)

19. Ye fools and blind; for whether is greater the gift, or the altar that sanctifies the gift? (which is therefore sacred, because offered on it.)

20. Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things (all gifts laid) thereon, (and by him to whom they are offered.)

21. And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by him that dwelleth therein.

22. And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by him that sitteth thereon.

23. Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; for ye pay tythe of mint, and anise, and cummin, and have [i] omitted the more weighty matters of the law, judgment, mercy and faith; these ought ye to have done, (because your own constitutions require them,) and not to leave the other undone, (which God especially requires.)

24. Ye blind guides, which [k] strain at a gnat, (i. e. who scruple things of the least moment,) and swallow a camel, (i. e. but venture freely on the grossest sins.)

25. Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; for ye (act as men intent to) make clean the outside of the cup, and of the platter, (to appear clean in the eye of men,) but within they are full of extortion and excess.

26. Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, (the inward motions of thy heart,) that the outside of them, (i. e. thy actions,) may be clean also.

27. Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; for [l] ye are like to whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead mens bones, and of all uncleanness; (and therefore have a white mark set upon them, that they may be avoided.)

28. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous to men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

29. Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; [m] because ye build the tombs of the Prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous,

30. And say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them, them, in (ſhedding) the blood of the Prophets.

31. Wherefore ye be witneſſes to (againſt) yourſelves, that ye are the children of them who killed the Prophets.

32. Fill ye up then, (Gr. and ye will fill up) the meaſure of your fathers (ſins, and ſhew greater malice againſt the Prophets now ſent by God to you.)

33. (For) Ye (are) ſerpents, ye (are a) generation of vipers, (i. e. more venomous againſt me and my diſciples, than ever your forefathers were againſt the old Prophets:) how (then) can ye eſcape the damnation of hell?

34. [n] Wherefore, behold, I ſend to you Prophets and wiſe men, and ſcribes, (i. e. true interpreters of the law and the Prophets:) and ſome of them ye ſhall kill, and crucify; and ſome of them ſhall ye ſcourge in your ſynagogues, and perſecute them from city to city:

35. [o] That upon you, (thus out-doing the malice of your forefathers againſt the Prophets, ſent to you by God,) may come, (the puniſhment of) all the righteous blood (of God's Prophets) ſhed upon earth, [p] from the blood of righteous Abel, to the blood of Zacharias, ſon of Barachias, whom ye ſlew, (i. e. ſtoned, 2 Chron. 24. 22.) between the temple and the altar.

36. Verily I ſay unto you, all theſe things ſhall come upon this generation.

37. Oh Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, thou that killeſt the Prophets, and ſtoneſt them which are ſent unto thee, [q] how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, (i. e. have treated you with the moſt tender affection,) but you would not (embrace my kind offers.)

38. Behold (therefore now,) your houſe is left unto you deſolate.

39. [r] For I ſay unto you, Ye ſhall not ſee me henceforth, (Gr. after a while,) till (the time cometh that) ye ſhall (would gladly) ſay, Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; (i. e. it would be joyful news to you indeed, to hear of a Meſſiah coming to deliver you from the impendent vengeance, and then you ſhall ſee him coming, not as a Saviour, but a ſevere avenger.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XXIII.

And elſewhere, refuting their doctrine touching divorce, Chap. 19. and touching oaths, ver. 16, &c. he therefore could not here ſay, without this reſtriction, that they ſhould do and obſerve all their commands, without a contradiction to his own frequent doctrine. (2.) Thus the word πάντα, all things, muſt be reſtrained, when the Apoſtle commands ſervants to obey their maſters, and children their parents, κατὰ πάντα, in all things, Coloſ. 3. 20, 22. and wives to be ſubject to their huſbands, ἐν παντὶ, in every thing, Epheſ. 5. 24. Thus (a) Iſidore Peluſiota teacheth us to interpret thoſe words. Note alſo, that Chriſt ſpeaks not here of the great Sanhedrin, or the chief prieſts; for when mention is made of them in the New Teſtament, this is ſtill under the name of Prieſts, Elders, Rulers, or Princes of the people; of whom here is no mention, but only of the ſcribes and Phariſees, who are ſaid to ſit in the ſeat of Moſes, becauſe they undertook to interpret the law of their great Prophet Moſes, either publickly to the people, or privately in the ſchools; and whilſt they determined things doubtful, and undetermined in the law, not contrary to the precepts of it, their deciſions were to be obſerved for order's ſake: Hence of the tything mint and cummin, not mentioned in the law of Moſes, but preſcribed by them, Chriſt ſaith, ταῦτα ἔδει ποιῆσαι, theſe things ought to be done, ver. 23.

writers מכות פרישים, the strokes of the Pharisees, as being such as made the service of God burdensome. But then, when I consider how punctual they pretended to be in the observance of them, what a reverence they had for them, even above the law of Moses, and how highly they were offended with Christ, and his Apostles, for not walking according to them; I am apt, with Menochius and Maldonate, to interpret those words, They will not move them with one of their fingers, not of their neglect to observe them themselves, but of their tenacious exacting of them without mercy, even from those whom they saw grieved, and oppressed with these burdens; and to refer those words, they say, and do not, to the things taught by them, according to the law, mercy, judgment, and the love of God. See Examen Millii here.

Ver. 5. c Πλαταύνουσι γὰρ τὰ φυλακτήρια αὐτῶν· They also do make broad their phylacteries.] What great holiness they placed in putting on these phylacteries, we learn from the Targum on Cant. 8. 3. which introduceth the Jews, speaking thus, I am chosen above all people, because I bind my frontals to my head, and my left hand, and my parchment is fixed to the right side of my gate, or door, so that a third part of it comes up to my bed, that the evil spirits may not hurt me; and yet very learned men think, these phylacteries are not commanded, Exod. 13. 9, 16. but that those words are only metaphorically to be understood, as a command to have God's laws perpetually before their eyes, and his deliverances always in remembrance; according to the like metaphor of Solomon, when he saith of the precepts of wisdom, Bind them about thy neck, and write them on the tables of thy heart, Prov. 3. 3. And that the like words, Deut. 6. 8, 9. are to be expounded by the foregoing words, ver. 6. The word which I command thee this day, shall be in thy heart; and Chap. 11. 18. Ye shall put my words in your heart, and in your soul: For, since these words, Deut. 6. refer to the whole law of Moses, it seems not reasonable to think, that God required them to write all the precepts of it, upon their phylacteries, or the posts of their doors.

See Additions N° 39.

Ver. 8. d Ὑμεῖς δὲ μὴ κληθῆτε ῥαββεί, εἷς γάρ ἐστιν ὑμῶν ὁ καθηγητής, Be not ye called Rabbi, fathers, guides.] Here note,

1*st*, That Christ cannot reasonably be supposed, to forbid either fathers to be so called by their children; this appellation being frequent in the sacred writers; or aged and spiritual persons to admit that title in the vulgar acceptation of it: For thus St. John stiles the aged, fathers, 1 John 2. 13. and St. Paul stiles himself, a father to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 4. 15. and to the Galatians, Chap. 4. 19. These titles therefore, which men inspired by the Holy Ghost, did use, after these words were spoken by our Lord, cannot be reasonably thought to be the thing forbidden by Christ.

2*dly*, Nor doth Christ here forbid these titles, only because they savoured of pride and affectation, but because they were a great entrenchment on God the Father and the Son, ascribing to those men who had usurped these names, what properly belonged to their heavenly Father; (so the reason here assigned shews, viz. Call no man your father upon earth, for one is your Father which is in heaven, i. e. to whom alone belongs that title;) and attributing to earthly guides and masters, what was due only to Christ our teacher and spiritual guide; Be not ye called Rabbi, for one is your Master, even Christ, ver. 8. Neither be ye called Masters, (guides or leaders;) for one is ὑμῶν ὁ καθηγητὴς, your Leader, even Christ, ver. 10. Note,

3*dly*, That the words, Rabbi, Father, Guide, Master, or Teacher, were the titles which were then usually by the Jews conferred on their wise men, the Fathers of tradition, or the men of the greatest understanding in the law of Moses; such persons they thought fit to salute, not in a common form of words, but by these pompous titles. Thus of Jehosaphat, they tell us, That when he saw a disciple of the wise, he would rise from his throne, embrace him, kiss him, and say to him, Abbi, Abbi, Rabbi, Rabbi, Mori, Mori; that is, my Father, my Rabbi, my Guide, or Teacher: These titles were esteemed so due to them, that they say, the Sanhedrim did twenty-four times excommunicate those, who gave not the honour of a Master to their Rabbins. Now, by the word Rabbi, they understood such a teacher, whom they stood bound to hearken to, depending on his words, and not disbelieving, swerving from, or doubting of the truth of what he taught. Hence doth Gamaliel advise the ignorant among the Jews, to get themselves Rabbies, that they may no longer doubt of any thing. And R. Eliezer saith, That he who separates from the school of his Rabbi, or teacheth any thing which he hath not heard from his master, provokes the divine majesty to depart from Israel: Maimonides saith, That men of the degree of Rabbi, were also called Abba, i. e. Father, and they took to themselves this title as well as that of Rabbi: Now, to these fathers, they ascribed the same high and incontestible authority. Hence Maimonides saith, That he that will be holy, must perform the words of the fathers; and they declare that the words of cabala, or the traditions of their fathers, were equal to the words of the law, and more to be regarded than the words of the Prophets; that a Prophet was not to be believed, except he could ſhew a ſign, or a miracle; but as for theſe elders, or fathers, they were to be believed without them; it being ſaid of them, Deut. 17. 11. According to the ſentence of the law, which they ſhall teach thee, and according to the judgment, which they ſhall tell thee, thou ſhalt do. The word Mar καθηγητὴς, which they uſed in Babylon, to ſignify one, who in Judea was called Rab, with them ſignifies a guide, and leader in the way of happineſs: And of this, ſaith St. Paul, they are confident, that they are guides to the blind, a light to them that ſit in darkneſs, inſtructers of the ſimple, and maſters of babes, Rom. 2. 17, 18, 19. and that ſo certainly, that their deciſions were not to be doubted of, but were to be reputed of equal authority with the determinations of the Prophets: For, ſaith (b) Maimonides, if a thouſand Prophets, who were equal to Elias and Eliſha, bring one interpretation, and a thouſand and one wiſe men produce one contrary to it, we muſt incline to the moſt, and be obliged rather to act according to the ſentence of theſe wiſe men, than that of the thouſand Prophets. In this explication of the thirteenth treatiſe of the Sanhedrim, he diſtributes men, who interpret the ſayings of the wiſe men, into three ranks; (1ſt,) Thoſe who ſay their words are to be interpreted according to the letter, as thinking, (c) ſapientes in omnibus indubitatæ veritatis in dictis ſuis, The wiſe men, in all their ſayings, of undoubted truth, meant only what they perceive by their words. (2dly,) Thoſe who illude the words of the wiſe, judging themſelves more wiſe and perſpicacious, and ſaying, (d) that they were deceived: Theſe he pronounces fools, and accurſed, for ſaying theſe things againſt thoſe great men, of whoſe wiſdom they were well aſſured: The words of the ſcribes, according to their blaſphemous ſayings, being (e) more amiable than the words of the Prophets, and more weighty; and, the words of the cabala equal to the words of the law. And even (f) Joſephus ſaith, That they who were of the ſect of the Phariſees, followed their guide, and thought it neceſſary to obſerve and contend for whatſoever he would command; the Sadducees held it a virtue to doubt of, or contend againſt the teachers of the wiſdom which their traditions contained; but they yielded ſuch honour to their anceſtors, that they durſt not be ſo bold as gainſay any thing that they had introduced as fit to be obſerved; where we have the διδάσκαλοι in expreſs words, the καθηγηὴ in the word ἡγεμόνες, guides, and fathers in the τῇ ἡλικίᾳ πρεσβύτερες, or the ancients; and all of them repreſented as perſons of whoſe doctrines none ought to doubt, and whoſe ſayings no man ſhould gainſay. And again, the Phariſees deliverd, νόμιμα πολλὰ, many things to be received as laws, which were not in the law of Moſes; from which, though the Sadducees diſſented, yet when they came to be magiſtrates, they were forced to ſubſcribe to them, (g) διὰ τὸ μὴ ἄλλως ἐπιτρέπεσθαι τοῖς πλήθεσιν, ſince otherwiſe they could not be endured by the multitude, among whom, ſo great was their authority, that though they ſpake againſt the King, or the High-Prieſt, (h) ἐνθὺς πιστεύεσθαι, they were preſently believed. And even the ſcripture informs us, that they taught for doctrines, or for things neceſſary to be obſerved, the commandments of men, Matth. 15. 9. and pronounced them accurſed who held contrary to their ſentiments, John 7. 47, 48, 49. The import therefore of theſe words ſeems to be this:

1*ſt*, That no man was to be called Father upon earth, ſo as that we ſhould yield an abſolute ſubjection to his will and pleaſure, or be abſolutely ſwayed and governed by it.

2*dly*, That we ſhould call no man Guide, or Maſter upon earth, no Fathers, no Church, no Councils, ſo as abſolutely to ſubmit ourſelves in the concernment of our eternal intereſts, to the conduct of their judgments, or give them dominion over our faith and conſcience; Chriſt being the ſole Guide and Teacher of his Church, commiſſionated by his Father to reveal his will, and teach us what is needful to be known, believed, or done, in order to ſalvation; and even his Apoſtles being only to be looked upon as the Miniſters and Ambaſſadors of Chriſt, and only to be credited as by their gifts; and by the miraculous powers derived from him, they taught men thoſe things he had commanded, and by his Spirit had revealed to them.

Ver. 13. ᶜ Κλείετε γὰρ βασιλείαν τῶν οὐρανῶν, Ye ſhut up the kingdom of heaven againſt men.] The buſineſs of a key being to open, and give entrance into a place; they who obſtructed this entrance, are here ſaid to ſhut the kingdom of heaven againſt men: And this the ſcribes and Phariſees did, (1ſt,) By their example; for, pretending to be guides to others, they themſelves refuſed to go

Ver. 14. [f] Καὶ κατεσθίετε οἰκίας τῶν χηρῶν, καὶ προφάσει μακρὰ προσευχόμενοι, Ye devour widows houses, and for a pretence make long prayers.] This sect, saith (i) Josephus, pretended to a more exact knowledge of the law, ὡ χάριν ὡς τὸ θεῖον περιστειλάμων ὑπῆκτο ἡ γυναικωνῖτις, on which account the women were subject to them, as pretending to be dear to God. And when (k) Alexandra obtained the government, they insinuated themselves into her, as being the exactest sect of the Jews, and the exactest interpreters of the law, and, abusing her simplicity, did as they listed, remove and dispose, bind and loose, and even cut off men. They were in such vogue for their long prayers, which they continued sometimes three hours, that perhaps they sold them as do the Roman priests their masses, or pretended others should be more acceptable to God for them; and so might spoil devout widows by the gifts or salaries they expected from them. Now this being only an hypocrital pretence of piety, must be hateful to God, and so deserve a greater condemnation. See Examen Millii here.

Ver. 15. [g] Περιάγετε τὴν θάλασσαν καὶ τὴν ξηρὰν ποιῆσαι ἕνα προσήλυτον ὑμῶν, You compass sea and land to make one proselyte,——and ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves.] It was the complaint of the Jewish nation, that their proselytes were the scabs of the Church, and hindred the coming of the Messiah, as being ignorant of the law, and bringing in revenge. (l) Justin Martyr informs us of them, that these proselytes did not only disbelieve Christ's doctrine, ἀλλὰ διπλότερον ὑμῶν βλασφημοῦσιν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, but were twice more blasphemous against him than the Jews themselves, endeavouring to torment and cut them (i. e. the Christians) off, whersoever they could, they being in this the instruments of the scribes and Pharisees.

Ver. 16. [h] Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν οἱ τυφλοὶ οἱ λέγοντες, ὃς ἂν ὀμόσῃ ἐν τῷ ναῷ, οὐδέν ἐστι, Wo to you which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing, &c.] Of this see the Notes on Chap. 5. 36. and observe, (1*st*,) That τὸ ὀφείλειν ὅρκον signifies to be obliged to perform his oath; so that they thought that other oaths might be violated without sin. (2*dly*,) That they so valued swearing by the gifts of the altar, ver. 18. because they brought in gain to them. (3*dly*,) Observe, that those words, He that sweareth by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things upon it, are to be thus understood, that he sweareth by him whose altar it is, for the accessory follows the principal; and an oath must be supposed to be by something which can testify to the truth, and punish the falshood of it; and so he that thus swears, must in all reason be supposed to swear by that God also, to whom the altar doth belong.

Ver. 23. [i] Καὶ ἀφήκατε τὰ βαρύτερα τοῦ νόμου, And omit the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith.] This is indeed the bane of all religion and true piety, to prefer rituals and positive institutions before the precepts of natural religion, which are always good and necessary upon their own account, and not only because commanded; and human institutions before divine; and this is a certain sign of gross hypocrisy. Faith in, or the love of God, (as it is, Luke 11. 42) is the foundation of all piety; mercy, of all that charity we shew to our brother; and judgment, of all righteous dealing. Now that the Pharisees wanted this faith and love to God, was visible from their hypocrisy; that they were full of rapine and injustice, we learn from ver 25. that they were a crafty sort of men, prone to envy and hatred, from Josephus, Antiq. lib. 17. cap. 3.

Ver. 24. [k] Οἱ διϋλίζοντες τὸν κώνωπα, τὴν δὲ κάμηλον καταπίνοντες, Who strain at a gnat, but swallow a camel.] Vain here is the suspicion of Cajetan, that camel cannot be the true reading, because no man can swallow it; he might as well have suspected the beam mentioned Chap. 7. because no man's eye can contain it. This the rulers and the Pharisees did, in not admitting the thirty pieces into the treasury, because it was the price of blood, and yet with those very pieces hiring Judas to procure the shedding that blood; and, by scrupling to enter the judgment-hall, lest they should be defiled, but not scrupling to shed the blood of the innocent, John 18. 28.

Ver. 27. [Παρομοιάζετε τάφοις κεκονιαμένοις, Ye are like to whited ſepulchres;] (Luke 11. 44. ὡς τὰ μνημεῖα τὰ ἀδηλα, as graves that appear not.) For explication and reconciliation of the words of the Evangeliſts, note, (1.) That they who touched any part of a ſepulchre, were by the law of Moſes polluted by it. Num. 19. 16. (2.) That therefore to avoid this pollution, the Jews were wont to put ſome ſign or mark upon it, by which it might be diſcerned to be a ſepulchre, and ſo might be avoided; for ſo their Canon runs, that if any man finds a ſepulchre, he is bound to put a mark upon it, that it be not an offence to others, ſince otherwiſe they might be in perpetual danger of contracting uncleanneſs; this mark they made with lime macerated with water, which made them appear white; and when theſe marks were worn out, and ſo the ſepulchres become ἀδηλα indiſcernible, the graſs being grown over them, and the herbs that grew upon them making them ὡραῖα beautiful, as to outward appearance, and like to other earth, ſo that men were in danger of being polluted by them, they were again marked and made white with lime; they are therefore ſaid to appear beautiful to men, by St. Matthew, for the ſame reaſon that they are ſtiled ἀδηλα indiſcernible by St. Luke, becauſe the white mark was worn out, or ſo covered over with graſs, and herbs, that it could not be diſcerned. Such, ſaith Chriſt, are ye Phariſees, appearing outwardly ſpecious, and fair to men, whilſt yet your inward parts are full of hypocriſy and iniquity. Vain then is the imaginary pretence of any contradiction in what Dr. Hammond here offers from Dr. Pocock, the whited ſepulchres being ſepulchres which at firſt had received this white mark, or cippus; but yet the ſight of it was loſt by the herbs growing up high enough to cover it, or by the rain waſhing it away.

Ver. 29, 30. [m] Ὅτι οἰκοδομεῖτε τοὺ τάφους τ προφητῶν, καὶ κοσμεῖτε τὰ μνημεῖα τ δικαίων, Wo unto you —— for ye build the tombs of the Prophets, and garniſh the ſepulchres of the righteous;] Wherefore ye be witneſſes to yourſelves, (i. e. you yourſelves witneſs) that ye are the children of them which killed the Prophets, ver 31, 32. fill ye up then, καὶ πληρώσατε, and ye will fill up the meaſure of your fathers cruelties in this kind; being now fitly compared to ſerpents and vipers for the venomous hatred you bear to me, the Prophet promiſed by Moſes, and thoſe ſent among you in my name, and will thereby ſhew you are their children, as well by diſpoſition, as by natural deſcent. The words in St. Luke, Chap. 11. 47, 48. run thus, Wo to you, for ye build up the ſepulchres of the Prophets, whom (you acknowledge that) your fathers killed ἄρα μαρτυρεῖτε, you therefore by this teſtify, that you are by nature the children of thoſe fathers, for they (i. e. their fathers) killed them, and you (the children of them) build their ſepulchres, (καὶ συνδοκεῖτε τοῖς ἔργοις τ πατέρων ὑμῶν) and by your hatred againſt me and mine, you farther ſhew your likeneſs to them in diſpoſitions alſo; ſo that I foreſee, that of thoſe wiſe men which I ſend to you, ſome of them you will perſecute, and ſome of them you will kill and crucify, and ſo will ſo far fill up the meaſure of their ſins, that upon you may juſtly fall the puniſhment of all the blood of the Prophets, and righteous men ſhed by your fathers, and by you their children in iniquity. All that can be objected againſt this paraphraſe, which makes the words of Luke ſo plain, and ſo exactly to agree with the words here, is, that it puts theſe words, καὶ συνδοκεῖτε τοῖς ἔργοις τ πατέρων ὑμῶν, and ye allow of the works of your fathers, in a parentheſis; of which we have examples in the New Teſtament ſufficient to juſtify the doing this; ſo Mark 12. 12. They ſought to lay hold upon him, (ἔγνωσαν γὰρ ὅτι πρὸς αὐτὸν τ παραβολὴν εἶπε, for they knew he ſpake this parable againſt them,) but they feared the people. Chap. 16. 3, 4. They ſaid, Who ſhall roll away the ſtone from the door of the ſepulchre? (καὶ ἀναβλέψασαι θεωροῦσιν ὅτι ἀποκεκύλισται ὁ λίθος, and looking up they ſaw it was rolled away,) for it was very great. Ver. 34. [n] Wherefore I ſend among you Prophets and wiſe men, and ſome of them ye ſhall kill and crucify, and ſome of them ye ſhall ſcourge, &c.] This they did, ſtoning Stephen, Acts 7. 59. cutting off James with the ſword, Acts 12. 2. ſcourging Peter and the Apoſtles, Acts 5. and perſecuting Saul and Barnabas from city to city. Ver. 35. [o] Ὅπως ἔλθῃ ἐφ' ὑμᾶς πᾶν αἷμα δίκαιον ἐκχυνόμενον ἐπὶ τ γῆς, That upon you may come (the national puniſhment of) all the blood ſhed in the land;] i. e. That it may come upon you, taking pleaſure in the works of your fathers, and by the ſame bloody actions filling up the meaſure of their ſins by killing your Meſſiah, the chiefeſt of all Prophets; and the wiſe men he ſent laſt of all to offer terms of pardon, and ſalvation to you: And this rendred their puniſhment not only equitable, but almoſt neceſſary; for it being the obſervation of their own wiſe men, from Gen. 15. 16. That God taketh not vengeance of a nation till they have filled up the meaſure of their ſins; the Jews of of that generation doing this to the utmost, and by their εὐδοκία, i. e. the pleasure which they took in doing, not only the like, but even more bloody actions, they becoming ex post facto, partakers with their fore-fathers in their sins; and being not deterred from the like actions by all the punishments which they had suffered by them in the captivity of their whole nation, they made it both equitable and necessary this punishment should fall upon that generation.

Ibid. ἀπὸ τ αἵματος τ δικαίου Ἄβελ ἕως τ αἵματος Ζαχαείου τ Βαραχίου, From the blood of righteous Abel (the first Prophet and preacher of righteousness, Heb. 11. 4. 2 Pet. 2. 5.) to the blood of Zacharia son of Barachias.] Here two things need to be explained, viz. who was this son of Barachias, and why he is mentioned rather than any of those righteous persons who were afterwards destroyed by the Jews. To the first question, I answer, 1*st*, That he could not be Zacharias, υἱὸς Βαραχιου, the son of Baruch, mentioned by (m) Josephus as μισοπόνηρος a hater of wicked things and persons, and therefore slain by the zealots ἐν μέσῳ τῷ ἱερῷ, in the middle of the temple. For, (1.) The name seems not the same, for as Baruch in Jeremiah and the Apocrypha is always called by the Septuagint, Βαρὺχ, so ברכיה is still rendered by them Βαραχίας, Isa. 8. 2. Zach. 1. 1, 7. and Neh. 3. we find Βαραχίας, ver. 4. and Βαρὺχ, ver. 20. which shews they were not the same names. (2*dly*,) The blood of Βαραχίας was the blood of a Prophet. Luke 11. 50, 51. whereas the Baruch mentioned by Josephus was no Prophet, nor doth it appear that he was a righteous person, he being an unbeliever, and one of those who rebelled against Cæsar; and, (3*dly*,) Christ speaks here of the Prophets whom ἀπέκτειναν, they had slain, not of one who was only to be slain a little before the destruction of Jerusalem, for then none of the people could have understood his meaning. Nor, 2*dly*, could he be Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, for as he was not owned by the Jews to be a Prophet, nor was he sent by God unto the Jews under that character; so (n) Origen confesseth that it cannot be proved from scripture, either that he was the son of Barachias, or that he was slain between the temple and the altar. And indeed that he was the son of Barachias is only said by Nicephorus out of Hyppolytus; that he was slain in the temple, is a tradition more current among the (o) ancients, but yet St. Jerom saith, it is only taken ex quibusdam apocryphorum somnis, from some dreams of apocryphal writers. And indeed the tradition is false in the foundation, that he was slain for placing the Virgin Mary in that apartment of the temple, which was proper to the virgins; whereas, tho' there was the court of women, yet there was no peculiar apartment for the virgins. Nor, (3*dly*,) Could it be Zacharias one of the minor Prophets, he living when the temple was in its ruins, and neither temple nor altar were set up again; nor do any of the Jewish historians say that he was slain at all, much less that he was slain between the temple and the altar: It remains therefore, (4*thly*,) That we here understand that Zacharias of whom we read, 2 Chron. 24. 20. that he said to the people, Why transgress ye the commandments of God, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the Lord, he hath forsaken you, and that the people stoned him in the court of the house of the Lord, and ver. 22. that dying he said, the Lord look upon it, and require it. But against this it is objected, Object. 1. That he was Zachariah son of Jehoiada, ver. 20. this here was the son of Barachiah.

Answ. St. Jerom testifies that the Gospel of the Nazarenes read the son of Jehoiada, and the word Barachiah signifying, praise God, as Jehoiada doth; why might not that be translated in Greek υἱὸς Βαραχίου, which was spoken in Syriack, the son of Jehoiada? Moreover, it is common among the Jews to change proper names, especially when they have any thing of the Shem Hamphoraſh, or Jehova in them, into words of like signification; so for Judas some used Thaddeus, of the same import, and from the same root חדיה and Jehojakim is the name given by the King of Egypt to Eliakim, 2 Kings 23. 34. 2 Chron. 36. 4. that is, he turned El into Jah; and why then may not here Jehoiada be turned into Barachiah?

Object. 2. But since Christ begins with Abel, the first Prophet and righteous person which was slain, why should he end with one slain before the destruction of the temple, and not in one near the time when he spake?

Answ. That Christ, speaking here of Prophets slain by the Jews, doth come to the lowest instance, no other Prophet being slain after by them; for if the tradition touching Isaias be true, he was slain, not by consent of the Jews, as was the the ſon of Jehoiada, but only by the cruelty of Manaſſes. 2*dly*, There could be no fitter inſtance than this was for our Saviour's purpoſe, whether we conſider the occaſion of this Prophet's death, the manner of it, or the judgments which enſued upon them for it. For,

1*ſt*, He died, as Chriſt and his Apoſtles were to do, for reproving the Jews for their tranſgreſſions and revolt from God, and was the ſon of one who had ſhewed great kindneſs to them.

2*dly*, He dying ſaid, the Lord look upon it, and require it, foretelling that God would, or deſiring that he would require his blood at their hands; which prayer God anſwered ſo fully, that in a year all the Princes of Judah and Jeruſalem were deſtroyed by the Syrians, and the ſpoil carried to Damaſcus, 2 Chron. 24. 23. And Joaſh, who commanded this murder, was ſlain by a conſpiracy of his own ſervants, ver. 25. And from this very time the ſtate of Judah and Jeruſalem grew worſe and worſe, till at laſt the city was broken up, and the temple burned, and the people captivated by Nabuzaradan; "who, ſay the Jews, "finding the blood of this Prophet bubling up in "the temple, enquired whoſe blood it was; and "when the Jews anſwered, it was the blood of a "Prophet ſlain by them, who had foretold all "they had ſuffered by Nabuzaradan, he ſlew "ninety four thouſand of the Rabbins, prieſts, "and members of the Sanhedrim, to appeaſe it. "Hence the Jews ſpeak of it as of blood pro-"voking God to anger, he will call to remem-"brance their iniquity, that they may be taken, "Ezek. 21. 23." This, ſaith Midraſh Coheleth, is the the blood of Zachariah. And when Jeremiah introduceth the Jews ſpeaking thus, Lam. 2. 20. Behold, O Lord, and conſider, ſhall the Prieſt and the Prophet be ſlain in the ſanctuary of the Lord? The Targum introduces the houſe of judgment, anſwering, Was it fit for you, even in the day of propitiation, to kill a Prieſt, and a Prophet, as you did Zachariah, the ſon of Iddo, in the houſe of the ſanctuary of the Lord, becauſe he would have withdrawn you from your evil ways?

Ver. 37, 38. ᾗ ποσάκις ἠθέλησα, How oft would I have gathered your children,——καὶ οὐκ ἠθελήσατε, and ye would not.] Here note,

That by Jeruſalem we are to underſtand, not only the inhabitants of the city, but of all Judea, as appears, (1.) Becauſe this is the import of the word elſewhere, when neither the city is mentioned, nor is it taken metaphorically for the heavenly Jeruſalem; as 2 Kings 19. 21. 2 Chron. 28. 10. Iſa. 37. 22. Lam. 2. 14, 15. Ezek. 9. 9. Joel 3. 6. Luke 2. 38.——23. 28. (2.) From the puniſhment denounced upon her, ſince that belongs to all whom Chriſt would have gathered, ver. 37. and to whom he wiſhed that they had known in their day the things belonging to their peace. Whence it follows,

1*ſt*, That Chriſt did very ſeriouſly deſire the converſion of thoſe Jews who continued in their impenitence and unbelief, as here he ſhews, by the ſimilitude of the affection of a hen to her chickens; and, Luke 19. 41, 42, 43. by his weeping over them.

2*dly*, That they whom he ſo ſeriouſly deſired to convert, would not be converted when they might have been ſo; for therefore were they not converted, becauſe they would not be gathered.

Ver. 39. ᾽ I ſay unto you that, Μὴ με ἴδητε ἀπάρτι, ἕως ἂν εἴπητε, Εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου, Ye ſhall not ſee me from henceforth, (Gr. after a while) till ye ſhall ſay, Bleſſed it he that cometh in the name of the Lord.] Theſe words, by the connexion of them with the former, thus, behold your houſe is left unto you deſolate, λέγω γὰρ, for I ſay, &c. ſeem manifeſtly to relate to the time of the deſtruction of the Jews, and to bear this ſenſe: You who have now with ſo much indignation heard the children and people ſaluting me thus: Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, after a while ſhall lie under ſo great calamities for the puniſhment of your infidelity, that you would be glad of a deliverer, to whom you might ſay theſe words. This may be alſo gathered from the word ἀπάρτι, after a while; for after Chriſt's aſcenſion they ſaw him not till he came to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, which, in the following Chapter, is ſo often ſtiled the time of the coming of the Son of man; the time when, ἀπάρτι, after a while they ſhould ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds, Matth. 26. 64. And Joſephus informs us, that when the Jews were nigh to deſtruction, they earneſtly expected their Meſſiah, or one coming in the name of the Lord to deliver them; and readily followed thoſe (p) falſe Prophets and deceivers, who promiſed them deliverance, and bid them, προσδοκᾶν ἤδη τὴν παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ βοήθειαν, expect help from God. If this expoſition be not allowed, I would willingly refer this to the time mentioned by St. Paul, Rom. 11. 26. When the deliverer ſhall come out of Sion, and turn away iniquity from Jacob, and ſo all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved, by their converſion to the Lord; and ſaying, Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; till which time their houſe ſhall be left to them deſolate, Luke 21. 24. And thus it is a commination, that after a while the kingdom of God ſhould be taken from the Jews of that age, and this calamity ſhould continue long on their poſterity.

CHAP. XXIV.

1. AND Jesus went out, and departed from the temple, and his disciples came to him, to shew to him the buildings of the temple.

2. And Jesus said to them, See ye not all these things? [a] verily I say unto you, there shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3. And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came to him privately, saying, [b] Tell us when shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming (to do these things,) and of the end of the world? (or τῆς αἰῶνος, of this age.)

4. And Jesus answered, and said to them, Take heed that no man deceive you.

5. [c] For (before this happeneth) many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ, and shall deceive many.

6. And (when) ye shall hear of wars, and rumours of wars, see that ye be not troubled; for all these things (or this) must come to pass, but the end (of the Jewish age and polity) is not yet.

7. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, [d] and there shall be famines and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.

8. All these are the beginnings of (their pangs of) sorrows.

9. [e] Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill (some of) you, and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.

10. And then shall many be offended, (i. e. fall off from the Gospel) and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another.

11. And many false Prophets shall arise, and shall deceive many.

12. And because iniquity (and persecution) shall abound, the love of many (to me and my doctrine) shall wax cold.

13. But he that shall endure to the end, the same shall be saved, (i. e. preserved from this destruction.)

14. And [f] this Gospel of the kingdom (of God) shall be preached in all the world, for a witness to all nations (that I am the Christ,) and then shall the end come (of that Church and polity.)

15. [g] When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, (i. e. the Roman army, Luke 21. 20.) spoken of by Daniel the Prophet, stand in the holy place, whoso readeth let him understand (what the Prophet there intends.)

16. [h] Then let them which be in Judea flee to the mountains, (take this opportunity to flee thence with the greatest expedition.)

17. Let him which sitteth on the house-top not come down to take any thing out of his house.

18. Neither let him who is in the field, return back to take (up) his cloaths.

19. And wo to them who are with child, and to them that give suck in those days, (and so are not in condition to flee swiftly and speedily out of this danger.)

20. [i] But (and) pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, nor on the sabbath-day, (not in the winter, when long and hasty journeys are most difficult; not on the sabbath-day, when your flight will render you obnoxious to the displeasure of the Jews.)

21. [k] For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no nor ever shall be (afterwards, and so your flight will be more hazardous.)

22. [l] And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved (or escape,) but for the elects (i. e. the Christians) sake, those days shall be shortened. (That this is the true import of the elect, see Note on Mark 13. 20.)

23. Then if any man shall say to you, Lo here is Christ, or there (he is,) believe him not.

24. For there shall (then) arise [m] false Christs and false Prophets, and (they) shall shew great signs and wonders, insomuch, that if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect, (i. e. do all that possibly they can to deceive even Christians by them.)

25. Behold, I have told you before (v. 5, 12. of these things.)

26. Wherefore [n] if they shall say to you, Behold he (i. e. Christ) is in the desert, go not forth (to seek him there, or if they shall say) behold he is in the secret chambers (of the temple) believe it not.

27. For (the coming of the Son of man will not be secret, or obscure, but) [o] as the lightning (which) cometh out of the east and shineth even to the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

28. For wheresoever the carcase is, (i. e. the Jews are,) there will the eagles, (the Roman armies, whose ensign is the eagle) be gathered together.

29. (And) [p] immediately after the tribulation of those days, shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heaven shall be shaken, (i. e. all the government both in Church and ſtate ſhall be overthrown, as it was by the zealots.)

Church

30. And then ſhall appear the [q] ſign of the Son of man (who is) in heaven (i. e. the Roman army coming to the deſtruction of the city, the temple, and people of Jeruſalem,) and then ſhall all the tribes of the earth (or land) mourn, and (then) ſhall they ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.

31. And [r] (then) he ſhall ſend his angels with a great ſound of a trumpet, (i. e. his meſſengers with the trumpet of the goſpel) and they ſhall gather together his elect (among the Gentiles) from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other, (Luke 13. 28, 29.

32. Now learn a parable of (from) the fig-tree, (for) when her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that ſummer is nigh.

33. So likewiſe ye, when ye ſhall ſee all theſe things (come to paſs,) know that it (i. e. the ruin foretold) is nigh, even at the doors.

34. [s] Verily I ſay to you, this generation ſhall not paſs, till all theſe things be (aſſuredly) fulfilled; (for,)

35. Heaven and earth ſhall paſs away (at the end of the world you enquire after,) but my words ſhall not paſs away (unperformed.)

36. But [t] of that day and hour (when they are thus to paſs away, you are not to enquire, for of that) knoweth no man, no not the angels of heaven, (nor the Son, Mark 13. 32.) but my Father only.

37. But (know in the general,) as (in) the days of Noe, (the flood, of which he propheſied, was unexpected) ſo ſhall alſo the coming of the Son of man be (at both theſe times.)

38. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying, and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entred into the ark,

39. And knew not till the flood came, and took them all away; ſo ſhall alſo the coming of the Son of man (then) be.

40. [v] Then ſhall (the providence of God be ſo remarkable in preſervation of his faithful people, that) two (ſhall) be in the field, the one ſhall be taken (by the Roman army,) and the other left.

41. Two (women ſhall be) grinding at the mill, the one ſhall be taken, and the other left, (and the like diſtinction will the angels make at the great day of judgment, Chap. 25. 32.)

42. Watch therefore, for ye know not (at) what hour your Lord doth come.

43. But know this, (this ye know,) that if the good man of the houſe had known in what watch (of the night) the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have ſuffered his houſe to be broken up.

44. Therefore be ye alſo [x] ready, for in ſuch an hour as ye think not (of) the Son of man cometh.

45. Who then is [y] a faithful and wiſe ſervant, whom his Lord hath made (a) ruler over his houſhold, to give them meat in due ſeaſon, (inſtructions ſuitable to their exigencies.)

46. Bleſſed is that ſervant whom his Lord when he cometh ſhall find ſo doing, (i. e. employed in preſerving them from apoſtacy in this hour of temptation.)

47. Verily I ſay to you, that he ſhall make him ruler over all his goods; (i. e. ſhall amply reward his fidelity.)

48. But if that evil ſervant ſhall ſay in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming, (and ſo begin to doubt the truth of it.)

49. And (by reaſon of this backſliding heart) ſhall begin to ſmite his fellow ſervants, (i. e. Chriſtians,) and to eat and drink with the drunken, (i. e. indulge himſelf in ſenſual pleaſures on this account, 1 Cor. 15. 32.)

50. The Lord of that ſervant ſhall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of.

51. And (for his perfidiouſneſs) ſhall [z] cut him aſunder, and appoint (him) his portion with the hypocrites, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XXIV.

Ver. 2. [a] Verily I ſay unto you, ὃς οὐ μὴ ἀφεθῇ ὧδε λίθος ἐπὶ λίθον ὃς οὐ μὴ καταλυθήσεται, there ſhall not be left here one ſtone upon another, which ſhall not be thrown down.] The exact completion of the things foretold in this Chapter, touching the deſtruction of the temple, city, and people of Jeruſalem, being an eminent confirmation of the truth of Chriſt's prophetick office, and of the Chriſtian faith, I ſhall, as they occur, take notice of them. And, (1ſt,) To compleat this prediction, (a) Joſephus doth inform us, that Titus commanded the ſoldiers, τὴν τε πόλιν ἅπασαν καὶ τὸν νεὼν κατασκάπτειν, to dig up the foundations both of the temple and city. (b) Eleazar in Joſephus, ſpeaking of of this house of God, saith, περιρίζω ἐκ βάθρων ἀνήρτασαι, it has been rooted up from the very foundations. The (c) Jewish Talmud and Maimonides add, that Turnus, (i. e. Terentius) Rufus, Captain of the army of Titus, did with a plow-share tear up the foundations of the temple, and thereby signally fulfil those words, Micah 3. 12. Therefore shall Zion for your sakes be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountains of the Lord as the high places of the forest. And, saith (d) Josephus, we may well admire the exactness of the time, for the burning of the temple, τῷ μηνὶ καὶ ἡμέρᾳ ἐπολόρκησε ὑπ' αὐτῶν, happened on the same month and day, on which it formerly was burned by the Babylonians.

Ver. 3. [b] Εἰπὲ ἡμῖν πότε ταῦτα ἔσαι, καὶ τί τὸ σημεῖον τῆς σῆς παρουσίας, καὶ τῆς συντελείας τοῦ αἰῶνος, Tell us when these things shall be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world.] (Gr. αἰῶνος, of the age.) This in St. Mark runs thus, tell us when these things shall be, καὶ τί τὸ σημεῖον ὅταν μέλλη ταῦτα πάντα συντελεῖσθαι, and what is the sign when these things shall be accomplished, Mark 13. 4. In St. Luke thus, when shall these things be, and what is the sign, ὅταν μέλλη ταῦτα γίνεσθαι, when these things are to be done, Luke 21. 7. From which places, compared with this, it appears that the three things here mentioned relate to the same time, and are only an enquiry to this effect; When wilt thou come to destroy the temple, and to put an end to the Jewish Church, and age? For what is the sign of thy coming in St. Matthew, is the sign when these things shall be done, in St. Luke; what is in St. Matthew συντέλεια the end of the age, is in St. Mark, the time when these things are about συντελεῖσθαι to be accomplished. (2*dly*,) Christ so answers to the question touching the sign of his coming, as manifestly to shew it was contemporary with the desolation of the temple, and polity of Jerusalem, saying, ver. 27. as the lightning cometh from the east, and shineth to the west, so shall be ἡ παρουσία, the coming of the Son of man; for ver. 28. where the carcase is, there shall the eagles be gathered together, i. e. the Roman army, whose ensign was the eagle; so that the coming of this army to destroy them, and the coming of the Son of man, must be contemporary. And again, ver. 37, 39. as it was in the days of Noe, so shall be ἡ παρουσία, the coming of the Son of man, for two shall be in the field, ver. 40. two grinding at the mill, 41. the one shall be taken, and the other left; which words are followed in St. Luke with these, where the carcase (or body) is, there shall the eagles be gathered together, Luke 17. 34, 37. (3*dly*,) This will be farther evident by comparing other words of Christ with those contained in these three Chapters of St. Matthew, Mark, and Luke; for Christ saith, Mark 9. 1. There are some standing here who shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom, or, according to some copies, in his glory. And Chap. 26. 62. within a while ye shall see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven; whence therefore it is said, Matth. 24. 30. Mark 13. 26. Luke 21. 27. Ye shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with great power and glory: this advent must be while some were living that stood by Christ, and within a while, and so not at the end of the world. And in like manner that the συντέλεια τοῦ αἰῶνος, or the end of the age, is the same with the end of the Jewish state, appears from these words, You shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, ἀλλ' οὔπω ἐστὶ τὸ τέλος, but the end (you enquire after) is not yet, ver. 6. Mark 13. 7. Luke 21. 9. and ver. 13. he that endureth εἰς τέλος, to the end, shall be saved, and ver. 14. the Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached through the world for a testimony to the Gentiles, and then ἥξει τὸ τέλος, the end shall come; for what is in St. Matthew and St. Mark, the end, is Luke 21. 20. ἡ ἐρήμωσις αὐτῆς, the desolation of Jerusalem by the Roman army compassing her about. Nor is it to be wondered that the Apostles, who had learned that the coming of the Messiah, and the end of the then present world, should be together, should thus enquire of them together; or that this should be stiled the end of the (Jewish) age, Christ being stiled the Father of the age to come, Isa. 9. 6. and the age of Christianity, the age to come, Heb. 6. 5. and the end of the ages, 1 Cor. 10. 11.

Ver. 5. [c] Πολλοὶ γὰρ ἐλεύσονται ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί μου, λέγοντες, Ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ Χριστός, Many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and ver. 11. Many false Prophets shall arise, and deceive many: So Mark 13. 6. Luke 21. 8.] A distinction is to be made betwixt false Christs and false Prophets: They properly are termed false Christs who took upon them to be the Christ, and came under that name, as the words here shew. Such was (e) Dositheus, who said, αὐτὸς ἦν ὁ προφητευόμενος ὑπὸ Μωσέως, Χριστός, He was the Christ foretold by Moses. And (f) Simon M. who said, He appeared among the Jews, ὡς υἱὸς, as the Son of God. And such perhaps were those many, whom, saith (g) Josephus, βασιλειᾶν ὁ καιρὸς ἀνέπεισθε, the time of the advent of their King Meſſias prevailed with to ſet up for Kings. From theſe, ſaith (h) Hegeſippus, came falſe Chriſts and falſe Prophets: There aroſe, ſaith (i) Hippolytus, ſome, ſaying, I am Chriſt, as Simon M. καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ, and the reſt, whoſe names I have not time to reckon up. The falſe Prophets were ſuch as promiſed or foretold falſe things; and ſuch were, ſaith (l) Joſephus, (1ſt) An Egyptian falſe Prophet and magician, who gathered together about thirty thouſand Jews, whom he had deceived. (2dly,) One (m) Theudas, a magician, προφήτης γὰρ ἔλεγεν εἶναι, for he ſaid he was a Prophet, and deceived many. (3dly,) Ψευδοπροφήτης τις, a certain falſe Prophet, who bid them go into the temple, where God would ſhew them manifeſt ſigns of a deliverance. He adds, that there were then (n) πολλοὶ προφῆται, many Prophets, who taught them even to the laſt, to expect help from God. See the Note on ver. 24, and 26.

Ver. 7, 8. [d] There ſhall be, λίμοι, καὶ λοιμοὶ, καὶ σεισμοὶ κατὰ τόπους, famines, and peſtilences, and earthquakes in divers places; λίμοι καὶ ταραχαὶ famines and tumults, Mark 13. 8, 9. φόβητρά τε καὶ σημεῖα ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ μεγάλα ἔσται, there ſhall be fearful ſights, and great ſigns from heaven, Luke 21, 11.] To ſpeak particularly of the wars, rumours of wars, and tumults which then happened, would be to tranſcribe a great part of the hiſtory of Joſephus. But, 1ſt, There was a famine in the fourth of Claudius, according to Euſebius, which, ſaith he, oppreſſed, τὴν οἰκουμένην, the Roman Empire, but more eſpecially Paleſtine, Acts 11. 28. by which, ſaith (o) Joſephus, many periſhed for lack of food. And this we learn even from profane hiſtorians referred to by Euſebius, hiſt. eccl. l. 2. c. 8. from Suetonius in Claud. c. 18. where Scaliger ſaith, there were two famines in the reign of Claudius; from Dio, l. 60.

2dly, I find Joſephus ſaying, That when one Niger was ſlain by the Jews, he imprecated, λιμὸν τὲ καὶ λοιμὸν ἐπὶ πολίταις, famine and peſtilence upon their cities, ἃ δὴ πάντα καὶ τὰ ἀσεβῶν ἐκύρωσεν ὁ Θεὸς, all which God brought upon them. De bell. Jud. l. 4. c. 20. p. 885. D. E.

3dly, Grotius reckons up many earthquakes, which happened in the reigns of Claudius and Nero, at Crete, Smyrna, Miletus, Chios, Samos, Laodicea, Hierapolis, and Coloſſe; in all which places the Jews lived. There happened in Judea, ſaith Joſephus, vehement winds, dreadful thundrings and lightnings, καὶ μυρίμαλα σεισμοὺς τῆς γῆς ἔκαίσια, and vaſt mowings of the ſhaken earth, which, in the judgment of all portended no ſmall evil. De bello Jud. l. 4. c. 17.

4thly, Joſephus, in his preface to his hiſtory of the wars of the Jews, undertakes to record the miſeries, calamities, and deſolations which then befel them, καὶ τοὺς ταῦτης σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα, and the ſigns and prodigies preceeding them. In his (p) ſeventh Book, Chap. 31. he reckons up, ἐναργῆ καὶ προσημαίνοντα τῆς μελλούσης ἐρημίας τέρατα, the prodigies which manifeſtly imported their future deſolation; as, v. g. That ὑπὲρ τὴν πόλιν ἄστρον ἔστη ῥομφαία ἔοικὸς παλήσιον, καὶ κομήτας, ἐπ' ἐνιαυτὸν κομήτης, a ſword ſeemed to hang over the city, or a comet pointing down upon it for a year, which plainly ſeemed to portend their ruin by the ſword: And that, before the ſun went down, ὤφθη μετέωρα ἅρματα καὶ πᾶσαν τὴν χώραν ἐφέρετο στρατιὰ καὶ φάλαγγες ἐνόπλοι διαγούσαι τὰ νέφη, καὶ κυκλούμεναι τὰς πόλεις, there were ſeen in the clouds armies in battle-aray, and chariots encompaſſing the country, and inveſting their cities, which there are, ſaith he, men ſtill living to atteſt: That the great gate of the temple, which twenty men could ſcarcely ſhut, and which was made faſt with bolts and bars, was αὐτομάτως ἀνεῳγμένη, ſeen to open of its own accord, to let in their enemies; for ſo, ſaith he, our wiſe men conſtrued that omen: That, at the ninth hour of the night, at the feaſt of unleavened bread, τοσοῦτον φῶς περιέλαμψε τὸν βωμὸν καὶ τὸν ναὸν, as great a light ſhone upon the temple and the altar, as if it had been noonday: That at the feaſt of Pentecoſt, when the Prieſts went at midnight into the temple, to attend their ſervice, they firſt heard a kind of a noiſe, as of a movement from the place, and then a voice ſaying, Μεταβαίνωμεν ἐντεῦθεν, Let us go hence. And theſe things (q) Tacitus, a Roman hiſtorian of that age, doth thus epitomize: Armies ſeemed to meet in the clouds; weapons were there ſeen glittering; the temple ſeemed to be on a flame with fire iſſuing from the clouds; and a divine voice was heard, That the Deity was quitting the place, and a great motion as of his departing. Joſephus adds, as, τὸ τούτων φοβερώτερον, a thing ſtill more terrible, that four years before the war, one Jeſus began at the Feaſt of Tabernacles, to cry, φωνὴ ἐπὶ Ἱροσόλυμα, καὶ τὸν ναὸν, φωνὴ ἐπὶ

He alſo tells the Church of Rome, Chap. 1. 8. that their faith was ſpoken of throughout the world; and that of Coloſſ. Chap. 1. 6, 23. that the truth of the Goſpel was come, not to them only, but to all the world, and preached to every creature. And (z) Clemens, Biſhop of Rome, his contemporary ſaith, The nations beyond the ocean, τῇ ἐπιτάξει τοῦ δεσπότου διῳκοῦντο, were governed by the precepts of the Lord. Now this he only truly could foretel, who having all power in heaven and earth, was able to effect it. See Additions N° 41.

Ver. 15. [g] Ὅταν οὖν ἴδητε βδέλυγμα τῆς ἐρημώσεως When then ye ſhall ſee the abomination of deſolation ſpoken of by the Prophet Daniel, ſtanding in the holy place; he that readeth, let him underſtand: That is, ſaith St. Luke, Chap. 21. 20. When ye ſee Jeruſalem compaſſed about with the Roman armies, then know and underſtand, that her deſolation draweth nigh.] This army might be called an abomination, as being ſo to the (*) Jews, by reaſon of the images of Cæſar, and an eagle in the enſigns of it, The abomination of deſolation, becauſe it was to lay the country, city, and the temple deſolate; and to ſtand in the holy place, as ſtanding within the circuit of the holy city Jeruſalem, as it is ſtiled Matth. 4. 5. 1 Maccab. 10. 31. and was eſteemed by the Jews. See Ainſw. in Numb. 5. 3. How exactly this army fulfilled our Lord's prediction, by encompaſſing this city, ſee Note on Luke 19. 43. Dan. 9. 27.

Ver. 16. [h] Τότε οἱ ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ φευγέτωσαν ἐπὶ τὰ ὄρη· Then let them who are in Judea, flee to the mountains.] This reſpects the time, when Ceſtius Gallus came with his army even to the upper city: For when he withdrew it thence, (a) πολλοὶ διεδιδράσκον ἀπὸ τῆς πόλεως ἀλωσομένης αὐτίκα, many fled from the city, as if it would be taken preſently, ſaith Joſephus: And then the Chriſtians fled to Pella in Peræa, a mountainous country, and other places under the government of King Agrippa, where they found ſafety.

Ver. 20. [i] Προσεύχεσθε δὲ ἵνα μὴ γένηται ἡ φυγὴ ὑμῶν χειμῶνος, μηδὲ ἐν σαββάτῳ· And pray that your flight may not be in winter, nor on the ſabbath-day.] Not in the winter, the ways being then ſcarce paſſable, not on the ſabbath-day, leſt you be expoſed to the indignation of the Jews, for travelling on that day, or hindered from doing it by your own ſuperſtition: For (b) Joſephus, in his life, informs us, their laws would not ſuffer them either to travel or to fight on that day; having ſent, ſaith he, armed ſoldiers from Tarichee, I would not recal them, though I needed them much, becauſe they could not on the ſabbath ὅπλα λαβεῖν, κωλύοντων ἡμᾶς τῶν νόμων, take up arms, the laws forbidding us. And (c) he informs us, that the Romans choſe that day to fight againſt Jeruſalem, becauſe they found them more ſlow to fight upon that day, διὰ τὴν θρησκείαν, becauſe of their religion. The Nazarene Chriſtians alſo obſerved the law, and moſt of thoſe who remained in Judea till the time of Hadrian, as we learn from Sulpitius Severus, l. 2. § 45. and Euſebius's Chronicon and Hiſt. Eccl. l. 4. c. 6. Chriſt therefore doth not by this precept eſtabliſh the Jewiſh ſabbath, but ſpeaks this to prevent any miſchiefs believers might ſuffer from the hatred of the Jews, or their own ſuperſtition.

Ver. 21. [k] There ſhall be then great tribulation, οἵα οὐ γέγονεν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς κόσμου ἕως τοῦ νῦν, οὐδ' οὐ μὴ γένηται, ſuch as never was from the beginning of the world, no, nor never ſhall be.] Theſe words ſeem to be a familiar form of expreſſing a thing that is exceeding great, or perhaps the greateſt in its kind, rather than a prediction that no future calamity ſhould be like it. So Exod. 10. 14. Before them there were no ſuch locuſts, neither after them ſhall there be ſuch. And Joel 2. 2. A day of darkneſs and gloomineſs, there hath not been ever the like, nor ſhall there be after it. Now (d) Joſephus, ſpeaking of the ſame deſtruction, ſaith, μηδεμίαν ἄλλην τοιαῦτα πεπονθέναι, no other city ever ſuffered ſuch things; and again, τὰ γὰρ πάντων ἀπ' αἰῶνος ἀτυχήματα πρὸς τὰ Ἰουδαίων οὐδὲ μοῖραν ἔχει συμφορῶν, (e) all the calamities which have ever happened to any from the beginning, ſeem not comparable to thoſe which befel the Jews.

Ver. 22. [l] And if thoſe days had not been ſhortned, no fleſh could be ſaved; but διὰ τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς, for the elects ſake, thoſe days ſhall be ſhortned.] That by the elect here, we are to underſtand not the Jews but the Chriſtians: See Note on Mark 13. 20. And ſo perilous were thoſe times, by reaſon of the ſicarii, and the zealots, as well as of the Romans, and ſo hard was it with the Chriſtians flying flying to the mountains, and being there without house, and without necessaries, that they could not have long subsisted; and therefore God in his providence shortned those days by their mutual slaughters, the burning their granaries, and the famine, and by enfeebling the Jews; so that Titus himself confessed, that (f) ὁ Θεὸς ὢν ὁ τ῀ς ἐρυμάτων Ἰουδαίοις καθελών, it was God who deprived the Jews of those fortresses.

Ver. 24. [m] False Christs and false Prophets shall arise, καὶ δώσουσι σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα, ὥστε πλανῆσαι, εἰ δυνατὸν, καὶ τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς, and shall shew signs and wonders, insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.] That the false Christs, and Prophets, mentioned, Note on ver. 5. did great wonders is certain, for the Scripture testifies of Simon M. that he bewitched the Samaritans so with his sorceries, that they all gave heed to him, Acts 8. 9, 10. And Church history is very large in the accounts they give how he prevailed by them to be worshipped in many places. And Dositheus, saith (g) Origen, did τερατεύεσθαι, do prodigious things. This is true also of the false Prophets mentioned by Josephus, they being still represented by him as μάγοι καὶ γόητες, magicians and sorcerers. See the Note on 2 Thess. 2. 9.

As for that phrase, they shall deceive, εἰ δυνατὸν, if it were possible, the very elect, that it doth not argue the perseverance of believers to the end, and that it is impossible they should fall away, will be apparent from these things;

1*st*, Because Christ so solemnly exhorts them to use the greatest caution that they be not seduced by these men, saying, v. 4, 5. Let no man deceive you, for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ, and shall deceive many, v. 11. And again, If they say here, and there is Christ, believe them not, v. 23. For many false Christs and false Prophets shall arise to deceive the elect, look ye therefore to it, behold I have foretold you all things, Mark 13. 22, 23. Now is it suitable to the wisdom of our Lord to exhort Christians to use so great diligence and caution lest they should be deceived by these men, and at the same time to assure them it was utterly impossible they should be deceived? Moreover, I ask to whom doth he direct this exhortation? To the elect? Then must he do it to them who could not possibly be deceived, and so his words must bear this uncouth sense, Be very careful, lest ye be deceived by these men, for I assure you, it is absolutely impossible they should deceive you: Or was he thus concerned only for Reprobates? And why then did he from all eternity decree, that they should finally miscarry, and never should have grace effectual, or sufficient to preserve them from those deceits?

2*dly*, In the same Chapter our Lord exhorts them to see to it, to watch and pray, lest that day of affliction, that hour of temptation coming suddenly, should find them sleeping, and lest their hearts should be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and that day should come upon them unawares; to watch and pray, that they may be accounted worthy to escape all these things, and stand before the Son of man, Mark 13. 33, 35, 36. Luke 21. 34, 36. Now at these suppositions, which can agree to men who cannot possibly be found sleeping in this spiritual sense, on whom the day of Christ cannot come thus unprepared, who never can be unworthy to stand before the Son of man; can there be any need of such vehement exhortations to constant prayer and vigilance, heed and circumspection to prevent what could not possibly befal them? Or was our Saviour thus concerned only to exhort them who he well knew could never possibly avoid these things?

3*dly*, Christ here declares, that by reason of the extreme affliction of those times, many should be offended, i. e. should fall off from the faith; see Note on Matth. 18. 6. And adds, that because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold, but he that endures to the end shall be saved, ver. 12, 13. where that Christ speaks not of an hypocritical, outward profession of affection to him, may be gathered from his stiling of it, not pretence, but love; his supposition that it was fervent love, for what was never hot, cannot wax cold; yea such love, in which, had they endured, they would have certainly been saved; and yet he doth not only intimate that some would not continue in this love to the end, but plainly doth foretel that it in many would wax cold. To answer therefore directly to the argument urged from this text; I say,

1*st*, That the phrase εἰ δυνατὸν, if it be possible, or if it may be, doth not denote an absolute impossibility, but only a great difficulty in the performance of an act possible. So Acts 20. 16. Paul hastened εἰ δυνατὸν αὐτῷ, if it were possible for him to be at Jerusalem before Pentecost, and yet sure he made not all this haste to do what was impossible. The Apostle commands, εἰ δυνατὸν, if it be possible, as much as in you lieth, have peace with all men, Rom. 12. 18. and yet doth not exhort us to use our utmost endeavours to do what was impossible, εἰ δυνατὸν, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me, saith Christ. Matth. 26. 39. and yet he adds, all things are possible to thee,

(f) L. 7. c. 43. p. 967.

(g) Contr. Celsum, p. 289.

O Father, Mark 14. 35, 36. and hence the phraſe is changed by St. Luke into εἰ βέλει, if thou wilt. Now that the deceiving of Chriſtians in thoſe times of miraculous endowments was very difficult, is evident from that ſpeech of Galen, concerning a thing hardly feaſible, ῥᾷττον τὶς τὺς ἀπὸ Χειςῦ μεθαςήσεται, ſooner may a Chriſtian be turned from Chriſt.

2*dly*, This phraſe imports not what the event would be upon the elect, but the vehemence of the endeavours of ſeducers, that they would do the utmoſt they could poſſible to ſhock the Chriſtian, and ſeduce him from his ſtedfaſtneſs, as is evident from the words of St. Mark, Chap. 13. 22. They will ſhew ſigns and wonders, πρὸς τὸ ἀποπλανᾶν, εἰ δυνατὸν, to deceive, if they are able, the elect. Now to ſay, ſuch a one will do you miſchief, if he can, or if he be able, is ſurely no ſecurity that he can do you none. And,

3*dly*, Should this phraſe reſpect the event, it may do it not abſolutely, but only with relation to the means here mentioned, i. e. they ſhall ſhew great ſigns and wonders, which ſhall prevail to ſeduce Jews, heathens, and Samaritans, and even Chriſtians, were it poſſible for impoſtors, by lying ſigns and wonders, to deceive them who are inveſted with the power of working true, and greater ſigns and wonders, by the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt, and will attend to the things wrought among them, or by them.

Ver. 26. [n] If then they ſhall ſay to you, ἰδὲ, ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ ἐςὶ, μὴ ἐξέλθητε, Behold he is in the wilderneſs, go not forth.] Here Chriſt points to the very place where thoſe falſe Prophets ſhould appear, or whither they ſhould lead their followers. Accordingly Joſephus ſaith, many impoſtors and magicians perſuaded the people, ὡς ἐπὶ ἐρήμου ἕπεσθαι, to follow them into the deſart, where they promiſed to ſhew them manifeſt ſigns and wonders done by God. Antiq. l. 20. c. 6. p. 695. De bello Jud. l. 2. c. 23. p. 796. G.

Ver. 27, 28. [o] Ὥσπερ γὰρ ἡ ἀςραπὴ, &c. For as the lightning goeth from the eaſt to the weſt, ſo ſhall the coming of the Son of man be:] i. e. You will then need none to inſtruct you, where Chriſt is, or to ſay to you, he is here, or there; for by the Roman army, which ſhall paſs through the territories of the Jews like lightning, his coming to take vengeance on that nation, ſhall be manifeſt; and wherever the Jews, who, like dead carcaſes, ſhall be devoured by the Roman eagles, are, thither ſhall he flee with them, to tear, and to devour them.

Ver. 29. [p] Εὐθέως, Immediately after the tribulation of thoſe days, ὁ ἥλιος σκοτισθήσεται, καὶ ἡ σελήνη οὐ δώσει τὸ φέγγος αὐτῆς, the ſun ſhall be darkned, and the moon ſhall not give her light, &c.] It being here foretold, that this ſhould happen immediately after the waſting of the Jews by Veſpaſian's army flying quickly through Galilee, Idumea, and Judea; this cannot be taken literally, becauſe no ſuch thing then happened either to the ſun, moon, or ſtars. It muſt be therefore a metaphorical expreſſion, to ſignify, as it doth frequently in the Old Teſtament, and other writers, an utter deſolation, and terrible deſtruction brought upon a nation, and upon their capital cities, compared to the ſun and moon. For in this language the Prophet Iſaiah ſpeaks of the deſtruction of Babylon, ſaying, Chap. 13. 9. The day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land deſolate, and he ſhall deſtroy the ſinners thereof out of it: For the ſtars of heaven, and the conſtellations thereof ſhall not give their light, the ſun ſhall be darkned in his going forth, and the moon ſhall not cauſe her light to ſhine. The indignation of God againſt the Idumeans is repreſented in like dreadful words, Iſa. 34. 3, 4. So is the deſtruction of Sennacherib and his people, Iſa. 51. 6. So is the deſtruction of Egypt, Ezek. 32. 7. And in theſe words this very deſtruction is foretold by Joel, The ſun and the moon ſhall be darkned, and the ſtars ſhall not yield their light, Joel 3. 15.—2. 31. This therefore, ſaith (h) Maimonides, is a proverbial expreſſion, importing the deſtruction, and utter ruin of a nation. (i) Artemidorus alſo ſaith, that the ſun darkned, or turned into blood, and the ſtars falling, or diſappearing, import the deſtruction of many people. And in this ſenſe it is almoſt incredible which Joſephus ſaith, viz. that eleven hundred thouſand periſhed in that ſiege. De bello Jud. l. 7. c. 45. p. 968. D.

Another expoſition of theſe words is this, That then there ſhall be a deſtruction of their eccleſiaſtical and civil ſtate, and of the rulers of them both; according to thoſe words of (k) Maimonides, This metaphor imports, that men, who for their ſtate and dignity might be compared to the ſun, moon and ſtars, ſhall ſuddenly fall down as a leaf from the vine and from the fig-tree. And this happened a conſiderable derable time before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, when the thieves and zealots, ſaith (l) Joſephus, kept all the nobles, and τὰς ἐν χώραις περιόχους δυνάστας, rulers of the country in cloſe cuſtody; (m) when the zealots ſlew and conſumed, τὸ γενναῖον, the nobility, and made it their buſineſs, τὸ μήδενα τῶν δυνατῶν καταλιπεῖν, to leave none of the men of power alive, and when twelve thouſand of the nobility periſhed after this manner, (n) when the High-prieſts, and among them Ananus, were deſtroyed by the Idumeans, which Joſephus reckons (o) as ἀρχὴ τῆς ἁλώσεως, the beginning of their captivity, (p) when they aboliſhed the families of the High-prieſt by ſucceſſion, καὶ καθίσασαν ἀσήμους, καὶ ἀγνῶτας, and placed in their room men ignoble, and unknown, who neither belonged to the Prieſtood, nor knew what the office of High-prieſt meant. This was to happen before the great and terrible day of the Lord, for at that time we learn from the Prophet Joel, ſaying, that then the ſun ſhall be darkned, &c. This therefore cannot be referred to any time after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem.

Ver. 30. ¶ Καὶ τότε φανήσεται τὸ σημεῖον τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ· And then ſhall appear the ſign of the Son of man in heaven, and they ſhall ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds with power and glory.] Some think, that the ſign of the Son of man in heaven, and in the clouds, muſt note ſome viſible ſign of his appearance in the heavens; and they refer this to the fearful ſights, the ſword and comet hanging over Jeruſalem, and the armies and chariots ſeen in the clouds; but theſe things happened, according to (q) Joſephus, πρὸ τῆς ἀποστάσεως, καὶ τοῦ πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον κινήματος, before their revolt from the Romans, and the beginning of the war, and therefore cannot be the thing intended here. Our Saviour's coming here ſeems therefore to import his coming by the Roman army to beſiege and to deſtroy Jeruſalem, and the unbelieving Jews; for ſo Chriſt ſeemeth plainly to interpret this coming of the Son of man, ver. 37. the coming of the Son of man ſhall be as the lightning ſhining from the eaſt to the weſt, ὅπου γάρ, for whereſoever the Jews are, thither ſhall the Roman army be gathered: his coming therefore muſt be with the Roman army. And this interpretation will not ſeem ſtrange, if we conſider, (1.) That God's coming to deſtroy, or execute his vengeance on a wicked generation, is repreſented as his coming in the clouds of heaven. So 2 Sam. 22. 8. The earth trembled, and the foundations of heaven ſhook, becauſe he was wroth; and v. 10. he bowed the heavens, and came down, and thick darkneſs, or a dark cloud was under his feet, Pſal. 97. 23. Clouds and darkneſs are round about him, a fire goes before him, and devours his adverſaries round about: And, Nahum 1. 4, 5. The Lord hath his way in the whirlwind, and the ſtorm, and the clouds are the duſt under his feet. Baſhan languiſheth, and Carmel and the flower of Lebanon languiſheth; the mountains quake, and the hills melt, and the earth is burnt at his preſence, yea the world, and all that dwell therein. And this great day of the Lord is thus deſcribed by Joel, Chap. 2. as a day of darkneſs, and gloominеſs, of clouds and thick darkneſs,——a great people, and a ſtrong, i. e. the Chaldeans, coming againſt Jeruſalem, to deſtroy the city and the temple, and after them the Romans, to do the ſame thing. And of this deſtruction by the Chaldeans, the author of the Lamentations ſaith, Chap. 1. 13. He ſent a fre into my bones, ממרום, from on high, from heaven, ſaith the Targum. And St. John, ſpeaking of things that were to be done, ἐν τάχει, quickly, v. 1. and of, καιρὸς ἐγγύς, a time that was near, v. 3. which is the expreſſion uſed of this deſtruction, v. 7. ſaith in theſe very words, Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye ſhall ſee him, and they who have pierced him, and then ſhall the tribes of that land mourn; which words ſeem plainly to relate to this very time, and might be a viſion ſeen by John before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, though the following prophecies were imparted to him afterwards. See Additions, N°42.

Ver. 31. ¶ Καὶ (τότε, Mark 13. 27.) ἀποστελεῖ τοὺς ἀγγέλους αὐτοῦ μετὰ σάλπιγγος φωνῆς μεγάλης· And (then) will he ſend forth his angels with the trumpet of a great ſound, or voice; and they ſhall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of the heaven to the other.] Here the τότε, then, St. Mark, ſo plainly ſhews that this relates to the ſame time mentioned in the foregoing verſe, that no explication of theſe words, referring them to a long time after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, ought to be admitted as the true ſenſe of them. Dr. Lightfoot gives the ſenſe of theſe words thus: When Jeruſalem ſhall be reduced to aſhes, and that wicked nation cut off, then ſhall the Son of man ſend his miniſters (Chriſtians) of ſeveral nations from the four corners of the heaven; ſo that God ſhall not want a Church, although that ancient nation be rejected, and caſt off, the Churches of the Gentiles ſucceeding to her. To ſtrengthen this interpretation, let it be conſidered, 1ſt, That God's Prophets, meſſengers, and miniſters, both in the Old and the New Teſtament, are ſtiled, οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτοῦ, his angels. So 2 Chron. 36.

Many ſhall come from the eaſt and from the weſt,* Matth. 8. 11. But the children of the kingdom ſhall be caſt out into utter darkneſs, v. 12. You ſhall be caſt out, and they ſhall come from the eaſt, and from the weſt, from the north and the ſouth, and ſhall ſit down in my kingdom, Luke 13. 28, 29. And,

4*thly*, That the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the unbelieving Jews in this extraordinary manner, was ſo exact a completion of our Lord's prediction, ſo great a demonſtration of his indignation againſt unbelievers, of his protection of his faithful ſervants, and ſuch a juſtification of this Prophet againſt their accuſations, and ſuch an evidence of their ſin who crucified, and rejected him, that it might well prepare the Gentiles more freely to embrace the Chriſtian faith. See Additions N° 43.

Ver. 34. [s] Verily I ſay to you, ὅτι οὐ μὴ παρέλθῃ ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη ἕως ἂν πάντα ταῦτα γένηται. This generation ſhall not paſs away till all theſe things be fulfilled.] Theſe words ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη, this age, or generation ſhall not paſs away, afford a full demonſtration, that all which Chriſt had mentioned hitherto, was to be accompliſhed, not at the time of the converſion of the Jews, or at the final day of judgment, but in that very age, or whilſt ſome of that generation of men lived; for γενεὰ αὕτη, this generation, never bears any other ſenſe in the New Teſtament, than the men of this age. So Matth. 11. 16. To whom ſhall I liken γενεὰν ταύτην, the men of this age, Chap. 12. 42. The Queen of the South ſhall riſe up in judgment μετὰ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης, with the men of this age, and v. 45. ſo ſhall it be τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ τῇ πονηρᾷ. with the wicked of this age. Matth. 23. 36. All theſe things ſhall come ἐπὶ τὴν γενεὰν ταύτην, upon the men of this age. Mark 8. 12. τί ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη; Why do the men of this age ſeek a ſign? no ſign ſhall be given τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ, to the men of this age. Luke 7. 31. To whom ſhall I liken the men τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης, of this age. Luke 11. 29. The Son of man ſhall be a ſign τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ, to the men of this age. So again, v. 30, 31, 32, 50, 51. and Chap. 16. 8. And Acts 2. 40. Save yourſelves ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς τῆς σκολιᾶς ταύτης, from this froward generation. (2.) This is farther evident, becauſe the kingdom of God was then, inſtant, and at the door, Luke 21. 29, 31. And having ſhewed, from Joſephus, how punctually theſe predictions were fulfilled, I may conclude with (r) Euſebius, συγκρίνας δέ τις τὰς τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν λέξεις τὰς λοιπὰς συγγράφως ἱστορίας περὶ παλαιᾶς τε πολέμου· He that ſhall compare the words of our Saviour with thoſe of Joſephus concerning the war of the Jews, cannot but admire the wiſdom of Chriſt, and own his predictions to have been divine.

Ver. 40. [v] Τότε δύο ἔσονται ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ. Then two ſhall be in the field, the one ſhall be taken and the other left, &c.] This, by Dr. Hammond, ſeems to be well referred to the eſpecial providence of God diſcernable in thoſe times, in reſcuing ſome, who ſeemed equally expoſed to danger, from the deſtruction which ſhall fall on others; for that it relates not to the final judgment, but to the time of the deſtruction of the Jews by the Roman army, is evident from the ſame words recorded by St. Luke, Chap. 17. 35, 36. For there the diſciples aſk their Lord, where this ſhall be? and Chriſt anſwers, v. 37. that where the carcaſe, (i. e. the Jews) are, there will the eagles, (i. e. the Roman army, whoſe enſign was the eagle,) be gathered together. And hence it is alſo evident, that the following words being connected to theſe by the copulative οὖν, thus, watch therefore, muſt refer to the ſame ſubject.

Ver. 42, 44. [x] Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὑμεῖς γίνεσθε ἕτοιμοι, Watch therefore, v. 42. Therefore be ye alſo ready.] It is probably conjectured by Dr. Lightfoot, that the diſcourſe of Chriſt upon this ſubject, ended at v. 42, or 44, as in St. Mark and St. Luke it ſeems to do; and that the words following, were, as St. Luke places them, Chap. 12. 39. ſpoken at another time, and upon another occaſion; but, becauſe they well accord alſo with this place, and this occaſion, and do there, as well as here, follow the exhortation given, ver. 43. St. Matthew hath added them to this Chapter. Note,

2*dly*, That the metaphor of Chriſt's coming as a thief, i. e. unexpectedly, doth not prove, that theſe words muſt reſpect Chriſt's coming to the final judgment only, they being uſed touching his coming unexpectedly to execute any judgment on on a Church or nation; as when Christ saith to the Church of Sardis, Rev. 3. 3. Watch, or I will come to thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know the hour when I will come upon thee; and some probably conjecture, they are used by St. Paul, 1 Thess. 5. 2. with a particular relation to this judgment inflicted on the Jews, which being the most signal preludium to, and proof of that final judgment which shall be exercised on all the enemies of Christ's kingdom, may well be represented in a similitude used by St. Peter, 2 Pet. 3. 10. and by our Lord, Luke 12. 39, 40. with relation to it.

Ver. 45. ᵛ Τίς ἄρα ἐστὶν ὁ πιστὸς δοῦλος καὶ φρόνιμος· Who therefore is that faithful and wise servant, &c.] i. e. the servant who continues constant in the service of his Lord, under all the persecutions and abounding iniquities of those times, he shall make him ruler over all his goods, i. e. shall greatly reward his faithfulness, as this phrase signifies, Chap. 25. 21, 23. for that this phrase cannot import his advancement to the highest dignities in the Church, is evident from this, That then all that continued faithful to Christ in those times of trial, must have been made bishops. The evil servant, here mentioned, seems to be the apostatizing Jew, who having deserted the faith himself, was instrumental to smite his fellow-servants, and to betray them to the enemies of Christianity, as our Lord foretold it would be, Matth. 10. 21.——24.

10. And that which induced them thus to apostatize, was this very imagination, That our Lord delayed his coming to deliver them, and execute the judgments here foretold, 2 Pet. 3. 4. whence the Apostles encourage them to perseverance, by saying, It is but yet a little while, and he that cometh will come, and will not tarry, Heb. 10. 37. and that the Judge stands at the door, Jam. 5. 9. and the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, ver. 8.

Ver. 51. ᶻ Καὶ διχοτομήσει· And shall cut him asunder.] This was the punishment inflicted by Samuel on Agag, the enemy of God's people, 1 Sam. 15. 33. and by David on the Ammonites, 2 Sam. 12. 31. and by (s) Trajan the Roman Emperor, on the rebellious Jews; it was by Nebuchadonosor threatened to the blasphemers of the true God, Dan. 3. 29. and by young Daniel, to the false accusers of Susanna, ver. 55, 59. It was used of old, to those who were false to their creditors, saith (t) Tertullian, to rebels, and betrayers of their country, and that not only in the east, but among the Romans, as we learn from (u) Suetonius in the life of Caius; from (x) Horace, and from Dio; and by the Greeks, as we learn from (y) Homer, from Sophocles, and from Aristophanes; and in Egypt, as we learn from Herodotus, l. 2. c. 39. And therefore, this punishment, saith Christ, will I inflict on those who are perfidious in their covenant of baptism, and enemies to my government.

CHAP. XXV.

1. ᵃ THen shall the (persons admitted into the) kingdom of heaven be likened to ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom.

2. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish.

3. They that were foolish took their lamps, and (but) took no oil with them, (to replenish them, when the oil in them was spent.)

4. But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

5. (And) While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept.

6. And at midnight there was a cry (or proclamation) made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him.

7. Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed (or to trim) their lamps.

8. And the foolish said to the wise, Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out.

9. But the wise answered, saying, Not so, ᵇ lest there be not enough for us and you, but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves.

10. And whilst they went to buy, the bridegroom came, and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage (feast,) and the door was shut.

11. Afterwards came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us (also.)

12. But he answered, and said, Verily I say to you, I know you not; (i. e. I own not such slothful and improvident persons as fit to be received to my feast.)

13. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day, nor the hour, wherein the Son of man cometh.

(y) Odyss. 5. v. 338.

14. For the kingdom of heaven (or the coming of the Son of man) is as a man travelling into a far country, (as Chriſt might be ſaid to do, going to heaven to receive a kingdom, Luke 19. 12. and to return at the time of the reſtitution of all things, Acts 3. 21.) who (at his departure) called his own ſervants, and delivered to them his goods.

15. [bb] And to one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one, to every man according to his ſeveral ability, and ſtraightway took his journey.

16. Then he that had received the five talents, went and traded with the ſame, and made (the increaſe of them) other five talents.

17. And likewiſe he that had received two, he alſo gained other two.

18. But he that had received one (only,) went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

19. After a long time the lord of thoſe ſervants cometh, and reckoneth with them; (i. e. Chriſt comes from heaven to take an account of mens actions.)

20. And ſo he that had received five talents, came, and brought other five talents, ſaying (to his lord,) Lord, thou deliveredſt to me five talents, behold, I have gained beſides them, five talents more.

21. His lord ſaid to him, Well done, thou good and faithful ſervant, thou haſt been faithful over (in) a few things, I will (therefore) make thee ruler over many things; (i. e. will greatly reward and dignify thee,) enter thou into the joy of thy lord; (i. e. thou ſhalt rejoice with me in heaven.)

22. He alſo that had received two talents, came, and ſaid, Lord, thou deliveredſt to me two talents, behold I have gained two other talents beſides them.

23. His lord ſaid to him (alſo,) Well done (thou) good and faithful ſervant, thou haſt been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou (alſo) into the joy of thy lord.

24. Then he who had received the one talent, came, and ſaid, Lord, I knew that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou haſt not ſown, and gathering where thou haſt not ſtrewed. (i. e. requiring an increaſe far exceeding what thou gaveſt.)

25. And I was afraid (that I ſhould not be able to improve thy talent to ſuch advantage as thou mighteſt expect,) and (therefore) I went and hid thy talent in the earth; (whence now I bring it to thee,) lo there thou haſt what is thine.

26. His lord anſwered and ſaid to him, Thou wicked and ſlothful ſervant; (thou profeſſeſt, that) thou kneweſt that I reap where I ſowed not, and gather where I have not ſtrewed; (i. e. that I expected ſome profit from the talents I committed to thee.)

27. Thou oughteſt therefore, (that thou mighteſt not be condemned by thine own mouth,) to have put my money to the exchangers, and then, at my coming, I ſhould have received my own with uſury, (or improvement: Then ſaith he to his other ſervants,)

28. Take therefore the talent from him, and give it to him that hath ten talents; (they ſay to him, Lord, he hath ten pounds already, Luke 19. 25. the lord anſwers, Therefore I give him more.)

29. For to every one that hath (ſo as to improve it,) ſhall be given (more,) and he ſhall have abundance; but from him that hath not, (ſo as to improve it,) ſhall be taken away even that which he hath.

30. And caſt ye the unprofitable ſervant into outer darkneſs, (where) there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

31. (So likewiſe will it be at my coming, for) [c] When the Son of man ſhall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then ſhall he ſit upon the throne of his glory (as a righteous judge.)

32. And before him ſhall be gathered all nations, and he ſhall ſeparate them, one from another, as a ſhepherd divideth his ſheep from the goats.

33. [d] And he ſhall ſet the ſheep (who are to receive the ſentence of abſolution) on his right hand, but the goats (who are to receive the ſentence of condemnation,) on the left (hand.)

34. Then ſhall the King ſay to them on his right hand, Come, ye bleſſed of my Father, [e] inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world, (or from the creation of man.)

35. For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat; I was thirſty, and ye gave me drink; I was a ſtranger, and ye took me in;

36. (I was) Naked, and ye cloathed me; I was ſick, and ye viſited me; I was in priſon, and ye came to me (ye exerciſed all offices of charity towards my members.)

37. Then ſhall the righteous anſwer him, ſaying, Lord, when ſaw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirſty, and gave thee drink?

38. When ſaw we thee a ſtranger, and took thee in? or naked, and cloathed thee?

39. Or when ſaw we thee ſick, or in priſon, and came unto thee?

40. And the King ſhall anſwer, and ſay to them, Verily I ſay to you, inaſmuch as ye have done it (or this) to one of the leaſt of theſe (whoſe faith faith in me has rendred them as dear, as, Matth. 12. 50. and whom, by taking their nature upon me, and dying in it, to purge them from their sins, I have made and treated as, Heb. 2. 11.) my brethren, ye have done it to me; (these members of my body being one with their head.)

41. Then shall he say also to them on the left hand, [f] Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared (not originally for you, but) for the Devil and his angels.

42. (This being the just reward of your impiety, and unmercifulness, which hath made you like to them:) For I was an hungred, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me no drink;

43. I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye cloathed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.

44. Then shall they (also) answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, or thirsty, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister to thee?

45. Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say to you, [g] inasmuch as you did it not to one of the least of these (my members,) ye did it not to me; (for had you born a kind affection to me, you would have thus ministred to my members, for my sake.)

46. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous (shall go) into life eternal.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XXV.

Ver. 1. [a] Τότε ὁμοιωθήσεται ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν δέκα παρθένοις, Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened to ten virgins.] Here note,

1*st*, That the kingdom of heaven sometimes signifies the kingdom of the Messiah, or the Gospel dispensation; as when this kingdom is said to be come to the Jews, or they are bid to pray, that it may come; and when it is said to be at hand, and they are advised to enter into it, and pronounced fit, or unfit to do so. Sometimes it signifies the doctrine, or the preaching of the doctrine of that kingdom, or as it is, Matth. 13. 19. ὁ λόγος τῆς βασιλείας, the word of the kingdom; Matth. 24. 14. τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῆς βασιλείας, the Gospel of the kingdom; as when Christ or his Apostles are said to speak, τὰ περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ the things which concerned the kingdom of God, Acts 1. 3.—8. 12.—19. 8. to preach and testify the kingdom of God, Acts 20. 25.—28. 23, 31. Rom. 14. 17. 1 Cor. 4. 20. εὐαγγελίζεσθαι, to evangelize the kingdom of God, Luke 4. 43. And when Christ threatneth to the Jews, that the kingdom of God should be taken from them, Matth. 21. 43. But when it is said, the kingdom of heaven is like, or may be likened to this, or that, the meaning seems to be chiefly, So will it be in reference to the preaching, the propagation, or reception of the Gospel, or doctrine of the kingdom; as in the parable, or the similitude and resemblance of the good seed propounded; v. g. when this good seed is sown, it will by some be trod under feet, in others choaked with worldly cares, in others withered by the cold blasts of persecution; but in some it will bring forth fruit to perfection; when it is sown, the enemy will come, and sow tares among it; when men are invited to it, some will make excuses, why they do not accept the invitation; some will persecute the messengers of it; some will come to it without a wedding garment, some without oil in their lamps; some improving the talents given, and some hiding them in a napkin, and the like. Note,

2*dly*, That this parable, or something very like it, is to be found in the Jewish records; so in Reschith Cochma, we read thus, Our wise men of blessed memory say, Repent whilst thou hast strength to do it, whilst thy lamp burns, and the oil is not extinguished; for, if thy lamp be gone out, thy oil will profit thee nothing: Our doctors add in (*) Midrash, That the holy blessed God said to Israel, My sons, repent, whilst שערי תשובה, the gates of repentance stand open; for I receive a gift at present, but when I shall sit in judgment in the age to come, I receive none. Another parable of theirs runs thus, (†) This thing is like to a King, who invited his servants, but appointed no set time; those that were wise adorned themselves, and sat in the porch of the palace; those that were foolish, went about their own business: (‖) The King on a sudden called for his servants; the first went in adorned, the second undressed; the King was pleased with the wise, and angry with the foolish, and said, They who are prepared, shall eat of my banquet; they that are unprepared, shall not eat of it. Note,

3*dly*, That (a) Origen, (b) St. Chrysostom, and St. Jerom, and others of the ancients say, That this parable is designed against late repentance, and and declares, it will be invalid to them, who live under the Gospel; as will be evident, if we consider, that from this parable our Lord concludes for the necessity of constant vigilance, ver. 13. and for the necessity of assiduous prayer and vigilance against all the cares of this life, Luke 21. 34, 36. and of fidelity in doing the work of the Lord, Matth. 24. 45, 46. For what necessity can there be, of so great vigilance, such assiduous prayer, such fidelity in doing the Lord's work, if the neglect of all these duties, till God call us hence, will not prejudice our eternal interests? This also is evident from the design of the like Jewish parables; and note, that the door was shut, ver. 10. seems to be an allusion to the Jewish phrase, of shutting the gates of repentance; as when the priests offered their oblations, and they found no acceptance, because the Governor of the world had shut the gate of repentance; and the same we learn also from the parable of the talents. Good therefore is the advice of the son of Sirach, Humble thyself before thou beest sick, and in the time of sins shew repentance, and defer not till death to be justified, Ecclus 18. 21, 22.

Ver. 9. [b] Μήποτε ἐκ ἀρκέσει, Perhaps it will not suffice for us and you.] Here μήποτε is used for fortasse, perhaps, as I have shewed, Note on 2 Tim. 2. 26. See Additions N° 45.

Ver. 15. [bb] Καὶ ᾧ μὲν ἔδωκε πέντε τάλαντα, ᾧ δὲ δύο, ᾧ δὲ ἕν, And to one he gave ten talents, to another two, and to another one.] Of this parable, as it respects the master travelling into a far country, and the servants to whom the talents were delivered; see Note on Luke 19. 12. where it is also proved, that it relates to the Jewish nation, and therefore is here mentioned after Christ's prediction of the dreadful judgments which should befal that nation, for murdering their Messiah, and not improving the day of their visitation. Here therefore I shall only add these few short notes:

1*st*, That the master here distributes his talents, κατ' ἰδίαν δύναμιν, according to the several abilities of his servants, which in some were greater, and so they were fitted to manage a greater sum; in some less, and so they were entrusted with a lesser, and accordingly he is satisfied with a less increase in them: So v. g. Christ gave to his disciples a clearer and a fuller knowledge of the mysteries of the Gospel, Mark 4. 11. but spake to other Jews in parables, καθὼς ἠδύναντο ἀκούειν, as they were able to hear, v. 33. See Additions N° 46.

2*dly*, That these talents were spiritual, and given for a spiritual end; that they who used them well, might have more, and might enter into the joy of their Lord, or rejoice with him at his banquet, or the marriage-feast prepared for them; and that they who did not improve them, might have their talents taken from them, and they be cast into utter darkness. And, because banqueting and nuptial feasts were still attended with great joy, insomuch that the Hebrew word משתה, which signifies a banquet, and a nuptial-feast, is by the seventy rendred sometimes δοχὴ, a banquet, Gen. 26. 30. Esth. 1. 3.——5. 4, 8, 12, 14. sometimes γάμος, a marriage-feast, Gen. 29. 22. Esth. 2. 18.——9. 22. and once χαρὰ, joy, Esth. 9. 17. therefore the entring into this marriage-feast, or supper, prepared for this Lord, is here stiled, entring into the joy of his Lord. Note,

3*dly*, That none, to whom these talents were imparted, wanted power to improve them for the advantage of their master, and so to receive the reward of their industry; for Christ saith to them all, Negotiate till I come, Luke 19. 13. All therefore could have done so.

Hence, he who did not improve his talent, is stiled not only a slothful, but a wicked servant, and is accordingly punished: Now there can be no iniquity in not doing what he could not do, nor any punishment due upon that account; this being to punish because he did not an impossibility.

4*thly*, That ἔχειν, to have, here is αὐξάνειν, to improve; and not to have, not to improve. See Note on Matth. 13. 12.

5*thly*, When it is said here, ἤδεις, thou knewest, or knewest thou, that I was an austere man, reaping what I did not sow; this is not a concession that the master was truly so, but an argument out of his own mouth to condemn him, for not acting suitably to his own hard conceptions of his Lord, Luke 19. 22. Nor do these words, Thou oughtest to have put my money to the exchangers, shew, that Christ approved of usury; but only, that he who thought so sordidly of his master, should have used his talent agreeably, that so he might have had his own with usury.

See Additions N° 47.

Ver. 31. [c] Ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ὁ υἱὸς τ ἀνθρώπε ἐν τῇ δόξῃ αὐτ, When therefore the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him.] It is to me a wonder, that men should imagine, this refers not to the general day of judgment, but either to the time of exercising judgments on the Jewish nation, or to the setting up a triumphant kingdom here on earth; seeing, (1.) Here is a more clear description of Christ's coming to judgment, in words and circumstances elsewhere acknowledged to relate to the great and final judgment; for here he comes in majesty and glory, attended with all the holy angels, and sits down upon the throne of his glory; and thus will he be attended, when he comes to render to every one according to his works, viz. in the glory of his Father, with his holy angels, Matth. 16. 27. When he shall come in flaming fire to take vengeance on all that obey not his Gospel, and to be glorified in his saints, 2 Thess. 1. 7, 8, 9. Jude 14, 15. (2.) He speaks here of the time when he shall gather before him all nations, ver. 32. all sheep and goats, ver. 33. all that shall receive a sentence of bliss or condemnation, v. 34, 41. and of the time, when they that are the blessed of the Father, shall receive the kingdom prepared for them, and when the wicked shall go into everlasting punishment, ver. 46. which are manifest indications of the final judgment.

Ver. 33. [d] Καὶ στήσει τὰ μὲν πρόβατα ἐκ δεξιῶν αὐτοῦ, τὰ δὲ ἐρίφια ἐξ εὐωνύμων, And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on his left.] Here seems to be an allusion to the received custom of the Jews in capital causes, to place them who were to receive the sentence of absolution on the right hand in the Sanhedrim, but those who were to receive the sentence of condemnation, on the left: As (e) Maimonides saith, They that stand on the right hand, are the just; they on the left, the guilty. Kimchi on 1 Kings 22. 19. On his right hand is life, on his left death. So R. Eliezer. cap. 4. sect. 4.

Ver. 34. [e] Κληρονομήσατε τὴν ἡτοιμασμένην ὑμῖν βασιλείαν ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, Inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the world.] The Jews say, That God prepared paradise from the beginning, even before the earth was made; and this they gather from Gen. 2. 8. and the Lord God planted a garden, מקדם ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, Aq. ἐν πρώτης, Sym. from the beginning. See Pirk Eleezar. c. 3. § 3.

Ver. 41. [f] Πορεύεσθε εἰς τὸ πῦρ αἰώνιον τὸ ἡτοιμασμένον τῷ διαβόλῳ καὶ τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ, Depart from me into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his angels.] The rabbins often say, that hell was created the second day: See Pirk Eleezar, c. 4. § 1. The fathers, on the contrary, viz. Origen, Chrysostom, Euthymius, and Theophylact, observe, 1*st*, That Christ saith not of the punishment, as he doth of the blessing here pronounced, that it was prepared from the beginning of the world, lest it should be thought, that God designed mens punishments before they sinned. 2*dly*, That tho' Christ saith, Come, ye blessed of my Father; he said not, Go, ye cursed of my Father; because God is the author and procurer of mens happiness, but man only is the author of his own misery. And, 3*dly*, That he speaks of this eternal fire, as designed originally, not for man, but for the Devil and his angels; but man, by giving himself up to the thraldom of that evil one, and working himself up to his likeness, sinks himself down to the infernal regions, and becomes like to him in torments, whom in manners he hath so much resembled.

Ver. 40, 45. [g] Ἐφ' ὅσον ἐποιήσατε ἑνὶ τούτων τῶν ἀδελφῶν μου τῶν ἐλαχίστων, ἐμοὶ ἐποιήσατε, In as much as ye have done it to one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it to me.] For so close is the union betwixt Christ and his members, that he looks upon the favours conferred on them, as done to himself, and promises accordingly a reward for them, Matth. 10. 42. and also threatens punishment to them who do neglect, and are injurious to them; as if they had been so to him, ver. 45. And therefore he speaks to a persecuting Saul thus, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? Acts 9. 4. And, O! how highly ought we to esteem of him, who so esteemed us?

CHAP. XXVI.

1. AND it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said to his disciples;

2. Ye know that [a] after two days is the (time of the Jews) passover, and the Son of man is (then to be) betrayed (Gr. delivered up) to be crucified.

3. Then (i. e. two days before the passover) assembled together the chief priests and the scribes, and the elders of the people, to the palace of the High-priest, who was called Caiaphas.

4. And (they) consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him.

5. But they said (let us) not (do this) on the [b] feast-day, lest there be an uproar among the people, (for they feared the people, Luke 22. 2.)

6. Now when Jesus was in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, (whom Christ had healed of his leprosy.)

7. There came to him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and (she taking it) poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.

8. But when (some of, Mark 14. 4.) [c] his disciples saw it, they had indignation, (and murmured against the woman, Mark 14. 5.) saying,

To-

(e) Tract. de Synedr. c. 1.

To what purpoſe is this waſte (of the ointment made?)

9. For this ointment might have been ſold for much, and (the money might have been) given to the poor.

10. When Jeſus underſtood (it, i. e. knew that they thus murmured,) he ſaid to them, Why trouble ye the woman (without cauſe) for ſhe hath wrought a good (and charitable) work upon me.

11. For ye have the poor (for whom you pretend ſuch kindneſs) always with you, (and when you will you may do them good, Mark 14. 7.) but (as for) me, [d] ye have not always (a like opportunity of ſhewing kindneſs to me, I being ſhortly to be taken from you.)

12. (She therefore hath piouſly choſen the preſent opportunity,) for in that ſhe hath poured this ointment on my body, ſhe did it (though unwittingly, as a preparation) for my burial, (nor ſhall her charity be loſt; for,)

13. Verily I ſay to you, whereſoever this Goſpel ſhall be preached (as it will be) in the whole world, there ſhall alſo this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her (to all future ages.)

14. Then [e] one of the twelve, who was called Judas Iſcariot, (Satan being entred into him, Luke 22. 3.) went to the Chief-prieſts.

15. And ſaid to them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver him to you? (and they were glad, and promiſed to give him money, Mark 14. 11.) and they covenanted with him for [f] thirty pieces of ſilver.

16. And from that time he ſought (an) opportunity to betray him.

17. Now the [g] firſt day of the feaſt of unleavened bread (being come, two of) the diſciples came to Jeſus, ſaying to him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the paſſover.

18. And he ſaid, Go into the city to ſuch a man, (who will meet you carrying a pitcher of water, Mark 14. 13. follow him, Luke 22. 10.) and ſay to him, The Maſter ſaith, my time is at hand; I will keep the paſſover at thy houſe with my diſciples, (where therefore is the room where I may eat it with them? Luke 22. 11. and when he hath ſhewed you the room, there make ready, ver. 12.)

19. And the diſciples did as Jeſus had appointed them, and (finding that it was as he had ſaid, Mark 14. 16. they) made ready the paſſover.

20. Now when the evening was come, he ſat down with the twelve.

21. And as they did eat, he ſaid, Verily I ſay to you, that one of you ſhall betray me, (for the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me in the diſh, Mark 14. 18. Luke 22. 21.)

22. And they were exceeding ſorrowful, and began every one of them to ſay to him, Lord, is it I (that ſhall do this thing?)

23. And he anſwered, and ſaid, He that ([h] now) dippeth his hand with me in the diſh, the ſame ſhall betray me.

24. The [i] Son of man goeth (to ſuffer death,) as it is written of him, but (ſeeing God's foreknowledge how wicked any man will be, if left to act according to thoſe evil diſpoſitions which he hath wilfully contracted, leſſens no man's guilt; notwithſtanding) wo to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed, it had been good for that man if he had not been born, (it being better not to be, than to be miſerable.)

25. Then Judas, which betrayed him, anſwered, and ſaid, Maſter, is it I (that ſhall betray thee?) He ſaid unto him, (it is as) thou haſt ſaid.

26. And as they were eating, Jeſus took bread, and [k] bleſſed it, and brake it, and gave it to the diſciples, and ſaid, Take, eat, [l] this (broken bread) is (the memorial of) my body (given, Luke 22. 19. and broken for you, 1 Cor. 11. 24.)

27. And he took the cup, (after ſupper, Luke 22. 20.) and gave thanks, and gave it to them, ſaying, Drink ye [m] all of this (cup.)

28. For this (wine, given ſeparate from the bread) is (the memorial of) my blood of the New Teſtament, which is ſhed for many for the remiſſion of (their) ſins.

29. But I ſay to you, [n] I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day, when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom, (i. e. till the kingdom of God come, Luke 22. 18. and you eat, and drink with me in my kingdom, ver. 30.)

30. And when they had ſung an hymn, they went out to the mount of Olives.

31. Then ſaith Jeſus to them, All ye ſhall be [o] offended becauſe of me this night, for it is written, I will ſmite the ſhepherd, and the ſheep of the flock ſhall be ſcattered abroad, (Zach. 13. 7. and this will be fulfilled in you.)

32. But after I am riſen again, I will go before you into Galilee.

33. Peter anſwered, and ſaid to him, Though all men ſhall be offended becauſe of thee, yet will I never be offended (on that account.)

34. Jeſus ſaid to him, Verily I ſay to thee, that this night, before the [p] cock crow (in the morning,) thou ſhalt deny me thrice.

35. Peter ſaid to him (again) Though I ſhould die with thee, yet will I not deny thee, (and) likewiſe alſo ſaid all the diſciples.

36. Then cometh Jeſus with them to a place called Gethſemane, (ſituate between the river Kedron, dron, mentioned John 18. 1. and the mount of Olives, ver. 30.) and saith to the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

37. And he took with him Peter, and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy, (and afraid, Mark 14. 33.)

38. Then saith he to them, My soul is [q] exceeding sorrowful even to death, tarry ye here, and watch with me (against temptation.)

39. And he went a little farther (about a stone's cast from them) and [r] fell upon his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible (that thy glory, and the salvation of men may equally be promoted otherwise,) let this cup pass from me, nevertheless (be it) not as I will, but as thou wilt, (then an angel appeared to him from heaven to strengthen him, Luke 22. 43, 44.)

40. And (then) he cometh to the (three) disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith to Peter (why sleep you) what could ye not watch with me one hour?

41. Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation (so as to be foiled by it,) the [s] spirit indeed is willing (to make good resolutions, ver. 35.) but the flesh is weak, (and so unable to perform them without divine assistance to be obtained by prayer, and improved by vigilance.)

42. He went away again the second time, and (being heard in what he feared, Heb. 5. 7. he) prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43. And he came (back to the disciples) and found them asleep again, for their eyes were heavy, (and they knew not what to answer him, Mark 14. 40.)

44. And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45. Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith to them, [t] Sleep on now, and take your rest, (for by your watching ye can shew no farther kindness to, or concern for me,) behold the hour (of my apprehension) is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46. Rise, let us be going, behold he is at hand that doth betray me.

47. And while he yet spake, lo Judas, one of the twelve came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the Chief-priests, and elders of the people.

48. Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, the same is he, [v] hold him fast; (and lead him away securely; Mark 14. 44. See John 18. 8, 12.)

49. And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail Master, and kissed him.

50. And Jesus said to him, Friend, wherefore art thou come? (is it to betray the Son of man with a kiss? Luke 22. 48.) then came they, and laid hands on Jesus, and took him.

51. And behold one of them which were with Jesus, (to wit, Simon Peter, seeing what was done, said, Master, shall I smite with the sword? Luke 22. 49. and straightway he) stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the High-priest's, and smote off his (right) ear, (and the name of that servant was Malchus, John 18. 10.)

52. Then said Jesus to him, Put up again thy sword into its place, [x] for all they that take the sword, shall perish with the sword. (See the note here.)

53. Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels (for my defence?)

54. But (should I do this) how then shall the Scripture be fulfilled, that thus it must be, (or how can I refuse the cup which my Father hath given me to drink? John 18. 11.)

55. In that same hour Jesus said to the multitudes (sent to apprehend him,) are ye come (now) out as against a thief with swords and staves for to take me? (whereas) I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me (but this is your hour, and the power of darkness, Luke 22. 53.)

56. But all this was done, that the Scriptures of the Prophets might be fulfilled; then all the disciples forsook him and fled.

57. And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to (Annas first, John 18. 13, 14. and thence to) [y] Caiaphas the High-priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled.

58. But Peter followed him afar off to the High-priest's palace, and (being introduced by another disciple, John 18. 15, 16.) went in, and sat with the servants to see the end (of this matter.)

59. Now the Chief-priests and elders and all the council [z] sought false witness against Jesus to put him to death,

60. But found none, yea though many false witnesses came, yet found they none (that could testify any thing against him, which deserved death,) at the last came two false witnesses,

61. And said, This fellow said, I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days.

62. And (then) the High-priest arose, and said to him, Answerest thou nothing? [aa] What is it which these witness against thee? (Gr. why do these witness (thus) against thee if it were not true?)

63. But

63. But Jeſus held his peace, and the High-prieſt anſwered and ſaid to him, [bb] I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us, whether thou be the Chriſt the Son of God, (or not.)

64. Jeſus ſaith to him (it is as) thou haſt ſaid, Nevertheleſs I ſay to you, [cc] Hereafter ſhall ye ſee the Son of man, ſitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven; (i. e. you aſk me, Whether I am the Chriſt, and will not believe that I am ſo, but ye ſhall ſhortly be convinced of it by the miſſion of the Holy Ghoſt from heaven, and by my coming in the clouds of heaven to take vengeance on you for your unbelief.)

65. Then the High-prieſt [dd] rent his clothes, ſaying, He hath ſpoken blaſphemy, what farther need have we of witneſſes? behold now ye have heard his blaſphemy.

66. What think ye (of it?) They anſwered and ſaid, He is guilty of death.

67. Then did they (who were officers of the court) ſpit in his face, and (they) buffeted him, and others (of them) ſmote him with the palms of their hands, (ſpeaking many blaſphemous words againſt him, Luke 22. 65. And)

68. Saying, Propheſy to us, thou Chriſt, who is he that ſmote thee?

69. Now Peter ſat without in the palace, and [ee] a damſel came to him, ſaying, Thou alſo waſt with Jeſus of Galilee.

70. But he denied (it) before them all, ſaying, I know not (any thing of) what thou ſayeſt.

71. And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid ſaw him, and ſaid to them that were there, This fellow was alſo with Jeſus of Nazareth.

72. And again he denied (it) with an oath, (ſaying,) I do not [ff] know the man.

73. And after a while came to him they that ſtood by, and ſaid to Peter, Surely thou alſo art one of them, for thy ſpeech bewrayeth thee.

64. Then began he to curſe and to ſwear, ſaying, I know not the man; and immediately (after he had ſaid this) the cock crew.

75. And Peter remembered the words of Jeſus, who ſaid to him, Before the cock crow, thou ſhalt deny me thrice, and he went out and wept bitterly.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XXVI.

Ver. 2. [a] After two days is the paſſover, and the Son of man ſhall be delivered up to be crucified.] Here Grotius notes, that it is a tradition of the Jews, which appears yet in the books of their cabaliſts, that in the days of the Meſſiah they ſhould be redeemed on the very day that they came out of Egypt; which is true, if it reſpect the day of their coming out of Egypt, that being the fifteenth day of Niſan, but is not true of the fourteenth day on which the paſchal lamb was offered, Chriſt being not crucified on Thurſday, but on Friday.

Ver. 5. [b] Ἔλεγον δέ, Μὴ ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, ἵνα μὴ θόρυβος γένηται ἐν τῷ λαῷ, And they ſaid, Not on the feaſt-day, leſt there be an uproar among the people.] (a) Maimonides ſaith, it was the cuſtom among the Jews, to puniſh thoſe who rebelled againſt the ſentence of the judge, or the High-prieſt, or were notoriouſly criminal, at one of the three feaſts, becauſe then only, by reaſon of the publick congreſs of people, all might hear and fear, according to the law, Deut. 17. 12, 13. from this received cuſtom the fathers of the ſanhedrim ſeem willing to recede, for fear of the multitude; but having ſo fair an offer made by Judas, they embrace that ſeaſon.

Ver. 8. [c] Ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἠγανάκτησαν, But when his diſciples ſaw it, they had indignation, ſaying, To what purpoſe is this waſte?] This was only ſaid by Judas, and that out of covetouſneſs, John 12. 3, 6. Some of the diſciples ſeemed to like the motion by reaſon of the ſpecious pretext of charity, under which it was covered, Mark 14. 5. and the reſt did not contradict it, but ſeemed rather by their ſilence to approve it, and therefore are here mentioned without exception, as co-partners with him; but Chriſt calls this a good work, ver. 10. as being in itſelf lawful, and done out of a good end and intention, and juſtifies this from an argument a pari, that had ſhe laid out this expence on his dead body, they who did cuſtomarily uſe ſuch ointments, and ſweet odours at their funerals, could not have reaſonably found fault with it, and therefore had no ground to do it now, his body being ſhortly to be buried. To the pretence of Judas he anſwers, That by reaſon of his approaching death, this muſt be ſhortly done to him, or not at all; whereas they having the poor always with them, could never want objects of their charity; and that good work which was to be done now, or never, was then preferable to that for which they had perpetual occaſions.

Ver. 11. [d] Ἐμὲ δὲ οὐ πάντοτε ἔχετε. But me ye have not always.] Theſe words deſtroy the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation; for if Chriſt were, as to to soul, body, and divinity truly in the host, that being always with them of Rome, they would have Christ always with them, and might at any time spend their money in adorning the host, or upon the oblation of it, and so Christ's reason for doing that then, would be invalid. Note also from the words following, ver. 13. that this good deed should be mentioned, wherever the Gospel was preached, for a memorial of her, that we may laudably prosecute that which will procure us a good name, and spread our reputation to future ages.

Ver. 14. [e] Τότε πορευθεὶς εἷς τῶν δώδεκα, Then one of the twelve went to the chief priests.] He is noted to be one of Christ's disciples to aggravate the foulness of the crime, and to denote the completion of the prophecy, He that eateth bread with me, hath lift up his heel against me, Psal. 41. 9. The time when Judas thus betrayed him, is hinted in the particle τότε then, viz. according to the tradition of the Church, the consultation of the sanhedrim with him, and his agreement to betray Christ to them was on Wednesday, this being assigned as one reason why they fasted on Wednesday and Friday, (b) because Christ was betrayed on Wednesday, and he suffered on Friday.

Ver. 15. [f] For thirty pieces of silver ;] i. e. for thirty shekels, that is, 3 l. 15 s. of our money, saith Dr. Hammond. This, as Mr. Ainsworth and Maimonides observe, on Exod. 21. 32. was the price paid for a man, or a maid-servant, when being smitten by an ox, they died, so vilely was he esteemed by them, who shed his precious blood for them. Of Satan's entring into Judas, see Note on Luke 22. 3, 4.

Ver. 17. [g] Τῇ δὲ πρώτῃ τῶν ἀζύμων, &c. Now the first day of unleavened bread, came his disciples to him, saying, Where wilt thou that we prepare the passover? &c.] Of the time when our Saviour kept the passover, see the appendix to the 14th Chapter of St. Mark. Here note, 1st, from the word ἀνέκειτο, he lay down, ver. 20. that Christ observed not the paschal supper in that manner or gesture in which it was instituted at first, viz. that they should eat it standing, &c. Exod. 12. 11. but did eat it lying down or inclining on the left side, as it was the manner of the Jews then to do; and tho' the Jewish doctors required, and imposed this rite as a significative ceremony of their rest in Canaan, to which they were but going, or travelling, when they celebrated the passover in Egypt, and of their redemption; and upon that account would (c) permit none to eat it otherwise than in this posture; yet Christ used it: Whence we may learn, that our blessed Lord was not so scrupulous as some men are, who dare not use a significant ceremony, or receive the eucharist kneeling, because that was not the posture used at the first institution of it, tho' they do receive it sitting, and therefore not in the posture used by Christ and his Apostles, when it was first instituted. 2dly, Upon these words, Where wilt thou that we keep the passover? Dr. Lightfoot observes, that the houses of Jerusalem were not then to be let, but were of common right for any that would eat the passover in them.

Ver. 23. [h] Ὁ ἐμβάψας μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐν τῷ τρυβλίῳ τὴν χεῖρα, He that dips his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.] Hence it appears, that Judas was present with them at the celebration of the paschal supper; and that he continued with them at the celebration of the other sacrament, is evident from the words following the institution and distribution of it. But behold the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table, Luke 22. 21.

Ver. 24. [i] The Son of man goeth as it is written of him, but woe to that man by whom he is betrayed, it were good for that man that he had not been born.] Hence two things clearly follow, (1.) That the prediction of this event, that Jesus should thus suffer, and that by the treachery of Judas, did lay on Judas no antecedent necessity of doing this action, because it did not lessen the woe due to him for it, but only doth suppose in God a knowledge how the will of man, left to his own freedom, will determine, or incline itself. Of this see Note on Luke 22. 22. (2.) That Christ, by saying, It is good for that man that he had not been born, sufficiently shews this cannot be the portion of all men, except some few elect, as some men think, and as it follows from the supposal of an immutable decree, that such persons only should be saved, and all others left under such a preterition as will infallibly render it better for them never to have been born; and would have made this the condition of Judas, tho' he had not done this, provided he was none of God's elect.

Ver. 26. [k] Jesus took bread, καὶ εὐλογήσας ἔκλασε, and blessed it, and brake it.] That εὐλογεῖν, to bless, here and in St. Mark is the same as εὐχαριστεῖν, to give thanks in St. Luke, and St. Paul, and that the bread was only blessed by giving thanks over it, ſee proved on Matth. 14. 19. And that the breaking of the bread to be diſtributed is a neceſſary part of this rite is evident. For, (1.) the continual mention of it by St. Paul and all the Evangeliſts, when they ſpeak of the inſtitution of this ſacrament, ſhews it to be a neceſſary part of it, according to that obſervation of the (d) Council of Toledo, That Chriſt, by breaking the bread, and diſtributing it broken to his diſciples, id ſine dubio egit quod nos in poſterum facturos edocuit, did doubtleſs teach us hereafter to do as he did. (2.) Chriſt ſaid, Take, this is my body broken for you, 1 Cor. 11. 24. whereas, where the elements are not broken, it can be no more ſaid, this is my body broken for you, than where the elements are not given, this is my body given for you. (3.) Our Lord ſaith, Do this in remembrance of me, i. e. eat this bread broken in remembrance of my body broken on the croſs; now where no body broken is diſtributed, there nothing can be eaten in memorial of his broken body. Laſtly, the Apoſtle, by ſaying, The bread which we break, is it not the communication of the body of Chriſt? ſufficiently informs us, that the eating of his broken body is neceſſary to that end, 1 Cor. 10. 16. Hence was it that this rite of diſtributing bread broken continued for a thouſand years, and was, as (e) Humbertus teſtifies, obſerved in the Roman Church in the eleventh century.

Ibid. Τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ σῶμά μου, This is my body.] Here let it be obſerved, (1*ſt*,) That theſe words contain not all that our Lord ſaid, for our Lord ſpake theſe words but once, and therefore they who ſay, as do St. Luke and the Apoſtle Paul, his words were theſe, This is my body given, or my body broken for you, can ſay no more than our Lord ſaid at the firſt inſtitution of this ſacrament; for otherwiſe they muſt aver, that Chriſt then ſaid, what really he never ſaid. When then St. Matthew and St. Mark inform us, that he ſaid, This is my body, they muſt ſay the truth, but not the whole truth, that being as St. Luke and Paul inform us, this is my body given, or broken for you. Moreover it is to be obſerved, that neither the Evangeliſt, nor the Apoſtle uſe the future, but both the preſent tenſe, ſaying, this is my body, τὸ διδόμενον, given τὸ κλώμενον, broken, this is my blood, τὸ ἐκχυνόμενον, ſhed: Now from theſe obſervations it is manifeſt, that theſe words cannot ſignify, this is ſubſtantially, and really my body broken, and my blood ſhed for you; for this being ſpoken before Chriſt's body was broken on the croſs, and before his blood was ſhed, Chriſt could not ſay in the literal and proper ſenſe, this is my body broken, or my blood ſhed for you; but he might ſay, this bread is broken to repreſent to you my body which ſhall be broken, and my blood which ſhall be ſhed for you; for ſo the Scripture uſually ſpeaks in ſacramental matters, ſaying of circumciſion, even before Abraham was circumciſed, This is my covenant betwixt me and thee, Gen. 17. 4, 10, 23, 26. and of the paſchal lamb, This is the Lord's paſſover, before God, paſſing over the Iſraelites, had ſmitten the Egyptians, Exod. 12. 11. and this was therefore thus affirmed of theſe two ſacraments, before the celebration of them, becauſe they were then inſtituted as rites to be obſerved by his people when they did celebrate theſe ſacraments: And in like manner the bread in the firſt inſtitution of this ſacrament is called Chriſt's broken body, as being inſtituted then to repreſent to all future ages, his body which was to be broken for them; and the wine is ſtiled his blood ſhed, as being inſtituted then as the perpetual repreſentation and memorial of his blood ſhed, and ſeparated from his body on the croſs; ſo that there is no need of the criticiſm of Grotius and others here, that the preſent tenſe is put for the future, broken, for that which ſhall be broken, and ſhed, for ſhall be ſhed. Nor could this way of ſpeaking either ſeem harſh to, or otherwiſe be underſtood by Chriſt's diſciples, who had even then been eating of that paſchal lamb which they who laid before them, were ſaid, apponere corpus paſchatis, to place before them the body of the paſſover, or paſchal lamb, called alſo by them, corpus paſchatis, the body of the paſſover; and they who ate of it were ſaid, comedere de corpore paſchatis, to eat of the body of the paſſover, or of the lamb eaten in memorial of it; and when they ate of the unleavened bread, they ſaid, hic eſt panis afflictionis quem comederunt patres noſtri in terra Ægypti, this is the bread of affliction, (i. e. the repreſentation and memorial of that bread) which our fathers did eat in the land of Egypt: What therefore could men accuſtomed to ſuch ſacramental phraſes think of the like words of Chriſt, This (bread) is my body, but that it was to be the repreſentation, or memorial of it? Moreover, how could the Apoſtles think that they had eaten Chriſt's broken body, or drank his blood ſhed for them, when they yet ſaw his body whole before them, and knew his blood was in his veins? how could they have been perſuaded to drink blood againſt the expreſs letter of the law, or to have eaten human fleſh, or ſwallow their Lord and Maſter down their throats? this being ſo abſurd in the opinion of all mankind, not excepting Lanfrank, Algerus, Guitmund, and others, who firſt ſtickled for an abſurdity surdity beyond all example, that they ingenuously confess, That did their senses perceive, what their faith doth oblige them to believe, the horror of it would be so great, that (f) rarus esset qui ab hoc sacramento non abhorreret, almost all persons would abhor the receiving this sacrament: Hence they give these two notable reasons why, though they do substantially eat the flesh, and drink that very blood which our Lord shed upon the cross, yet they do this under the covert of the accidents of bread and wine, viz.

1*st*, That human piety might not abhor the sacrament, (g) as they then would do; for, say they, should they see the colour of human flesh, and the colour of human blood, and taste the savour of them, the horror of it would hinder the receiving of the sacrament, or the profit of so doing.

2*dly*, That this was, digna causa, a just reason why our Lord's body and blood should lie thus concealed under the species of bread and wine, (h) lest it should be known to the infidels, and lie open to their blasphemies; lest the action should be ridiculous to them, scandalous, inhuman and execrable. And indeed this being not only ἀνθρωποφαγία, the eating of man's flesh, and drinking human blood, but also θεοφαγία, the eating of their God, who knows not that on both these accounts the Christian faith was, and is still execrable both to Jew and Gentile, to Pagan and Mahometan? For,

1*st*, The Apologies of the primitive Christians tell us, this was one of the great accusations which the heathens made against the Christians, That they did eat human flesh. This Trypho owns to be a common imputation upon Christians, tho' he judged it incredible. (i) Justin Mart. Irenæus, Tertullian, Minutius, and others take notice of it, and refute it, and constantly reject it, as the vilest calumny, and an abominable thing, saying, (k) We Christians ἀνθρωπίνων σαρκῶν βρῶσιν οὐ γινώσκομεν, do not own eating of human flesh, it is an infamous thing, and falsly is reported of us, This is, saith (l) Theophilus, the most wicked and inhuman of all crimes objected to us, σαρκῶν ἀνθρωπίνων ἡμᾶς ἐγκαλοῦσι, that we partake of human flesh, it is not possible that we should be guilty of so vile a thing. Amongst us there is no eating human flesh, saith (m) Tatian, you are false witnesses who thus accuse us. No man, saith (n) Athenagoras, who is not mad, can charge us with this thing, οὐ γὰρ ἔξεστι πάσαις χρεῶν ἀνθρωπίνων, for we may not eat human flesh. It is the calumny of the Devil, saith Minutius; you may be ashamed to object it to us, saith (o) Tertullian. Whereas, had they received this as an article of faith, that they did daily eat the flesh of the Man Christ, and thought his word obliged them to do this, with what sincerity could they, without all limitation or distinction, not only have denied, but even detested the doing so? But that which makes it certain, and beyond all doubt, that they conceived, that Christ had never taught them properly and substantially to eat his flesh, and drink his blood in the sacrament, is the memorable history of Sanctus and Blandina, two Christian martyrs, written by (p) Irenæus, and preserved to us by Oecumenius, viz. that the heathens having apprehended the servants of Christians catechised, and using force with them, that from them they might learn something secret; the servants having nothing else to say, that might be pleasing to their tormentors, having heard from their masters, that the sacrament was the body and blood of Christ, told this to the inquisitors, who apprehending, that the Christians had done this very thing, gave notice of it to other heathens, who endeavoured to force the martyrs, Sanctus and Blandina, to confess it; to whom Blandina readily and boldly answered, How should they endure those things, who so faſt as not to enjoy lawful fleſh? Now had the ancient Chriſtians believed this doctrine, that they did truly eat Chriſt's fleſh and blood in the ſacrament, how could Irenæus have repreſented it as a plain miſtake, both in thoſe ſervants and the heathens, to think the ſacrament was really Chriſt's fleſh and blood? or have introduced Blandina refuting this imagination, had it been the ſentiment of the Church of Chriſt then, ſince by ſo doing ſhe muſt have rejected one article of Chriſtian faith? or, how could Oecumenius have put theſe words into his commentary, without endeavouring to explain, or reconcile them to the doctrine of oral manducation, had it then obtained? Let us then again conſider, whether that ought to be received as an article of faith, owned by all Chriſtians from the beginning, which from the beginning was ſo expreſly denied to be ὄντως καὶ αὐτόχρημα, in deed, reality, or in the thing itſelf, the fleſh and blood of Chriſt; which made all the apologiſts for, and firſt defenders of the Chriſtians, deniers of the truth; and to repreſent that as a falſe report, an infamous thing, a calumny of the Devil, which was the plain and evident reſult of their own faith, and of the words of their great maſter, as they are now interpreted by the Church of Rome.

But then, when we advance to the conſideration of this doctrine, not only as it makes the Chriſtian to eat human fleſh, and drink of human blood, but as it is the eating of that very God we worſhip, as the (q) Trent council hath defined; this renders it abſurd, ridiculous and blaſphemous. For,

1*ſt*, The very heathens owned this as the abſurdeſt and moſt abominable thing, to be abhorred more than death. When we call wine Bacchus, ſaith (r) Cicero, and our fruits, Ceres, we uſe the common mode of ſpeaking, ſed ecquem tam amentem eſſe putas qui illud quo veſcatur deum credat eſſe? but can you think any perſon ſo mad, as to imagine, that which he eats to be a God? The Egyptians, ſaith (s) Origen, think a brute creature to be God; and therefore they do μέχει παντὸς συλλήβδην τοῦ τῶν ἀλόγων γεύσασθαι, abſtain from eating of his fleſh, more than from death. We read, Gen. 43. 32. that it was an abomination to the Egyptians, to eat bread with the Hebrews, becauſe, ſay Onkelos and Jonathan, the Hebrews did eat thoſe cattle which the Egyptians worſhipped: And Moſes would depart from Egypt before he ſacrificed to the God of Iſrael; leſt he ſhould ſacrifice to him the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, Exod. 8. 26. i. e. the beaſts, which the Egyptians worſhipped, and therefore did abhor to kill, or to ſee killed before their eyes. See Bochart. Hieroz. part 1. l. 2. c. 34, 53. part 2. l. 4. c. 16. (t) Averroes was a learned heathen, who flouriſhed in the 11th century; when this portentous doctrine firſt obtained, and it forced him thus to blaſpheme the Chriſtian faith; I have enquired into all religions, and have found none more fooliſh than the Chriſtians, becauſe that very God they worſhip, they with their teeth devour; and thus he concludes, quandoquidem Chriſtiani id comedunt quod adorant, becauſe the Chriſtians eat what they do worſhip, let my ſoul go to the philoſophers. And (u) Bellarmin himſelf confeſſeth, that this, among the heathens, was always judged ſtultiſſimum paradoxum, the moſt fooliſh paradox, as, ſaith he, from the words of Averroes doth appear. Hence, as the higheſt infamy which the Mahometans can caſt upon us, we are by them reproached as the devourers of our God, as (x) M. la Boulay informs us; and they affirm, that by thus eating of Chriſt's fleſh, the Chriſtians uſe him worſe than did the Jews, becauſe, ſay they, (y) it is more ſavage to eat his fleſh, and drink his blood, than only to procure his death.

2*dly*, That the Jewiſh ſentiments as to this matter, were the ſame, we learn from the epiſtle of the Prophet Jeremy to the captive Jews? for he informs them, that what the Babylonians worſhipped, ſhould afterwards be eaten; and, by this, ſaith he, ye may know they are no Gods, Baruch 6. 72. Nor can we doubt of this, if we believe what is ſo oft declared by the Chriſtian fathers, that this was God's deſign in making the diſtinction betwixt clean and unclean beaſts, to ſecure his people from idolatry; becauſe, in Egypt, all beaſts were deified, ſaith Pſeudo Juſtin, except ſwine; God therefore calls ſome of them unclean, ſome clean, and did permit them to ſacrifice the clean beaſt, and forbid them to eat of the unclean; (z) δεικνύων αὐτὰ ἀπάξια ὄντα τοῦ θείου μεγαλείου, τιμῆς καὶ τιμῆς, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο θύεσθαι καὶ ἐσθίεσθαι, by both theſe things, ſhewing, they were unworthy the name and honour of a Deity, becauſe they were ſacrificed and eaten, and becauſe they were called unclean.

(q) Nullus itaque dubitandi locus relinquitur, quin omnes Chriſti fideles, pro more in Catholica Eccleſia ſemper recepto, Latria cultum qui vero debetur Deo, huic ſanctiſſimo ſacramento in veneratione exhibeant, neque enim ideo minus adorandum eſt, quod fuerit a Chriſto ut ſumatur inſtitutum. Concil. unclean. God, saith (a) Theodoret, pronouncing some beasts clean, and others unclean, persuades us not to think, that any of them could be Gods; for how, saith he, can any man of sense think, that to be a God, which he abominates as unclean, or which is offered to the true God, and eaten by himself; and this he frequently repeats. (b) St. Jerom informs us, That Moses did beat the golden calf to powder, and then made the Jews drink of it; ut discant contemnere quod in secessum projici viderant, that the people might learn to contemn what they saw went down into the draught. Now, could the same God, who had taken such care under the Old Testament to teach the people, that that could not be their God which they did eat and sacrifice, appoint under the New Testament, that the Christian's God should be continually sacrificed and eaten? But,

3*dly,* Nothing is more certain, than that the Christian apologists, or fathers, continually ridiculed the heathen, for worshipping such Deities as might be eaten and sacrificed, and pronounced it the highest absurdity to do so. And,

(1.) They declaim against the thing itself as infinitely absurd and foolish, declaring, that it was (c) ἀξηλείας ἔσχατης τὸ ἐσθιόμενον προσκυνεῖν, the extremity of madness, to worship what we eat; that no man of sense can think, that a God which is παρ' ἑαυτὸ ἐσθιόμενον, eaten by himself; (d) that the great lawgiver of the Jews commanded them to eat what other nations worshipped as Gods, ἵνα ἐυκαταφρόνητα φαίνηται ὡς παρ' αὐτῆ ἐσθιόμενα, that they might appear despicable in their eyes, as being eaten by themselves; (e) that these things must be unworthy the name and honour of a God, διὰ τὸ ἐσθίεσθαι, because they were eaten.

(2.) They upon this account, deride the ignorance and folly of the heathens, and look upon this as a sure indication of it, that they did worship what was eaten. The Greeks, through ignorance, saith (f) Clemens of Alexandria, οἴεσθαι καὶ ἃ δέδωκεν αὐτοῖς εἰς βρῶσιν ὁ Θεὸς, worship even those things which God hath given them to eat, and so become ungrateful to him. Nonne & Apim bovem cum Ægyptiis adoratis & pascitis? Do not you, saith (g) Minutius, with the Egyptians, worship, and also feed upon an ox, which you call Apis? And is not this as great a folly as the worship of an ass's head, which without reason you object to us? This (h) Athanasius looks upon as an instance of the abominable worship of the Egyptians, that the same fish, which some of them did consecrate as a God, was made the food of others. The Egyptians adore a calf, the Lybians worship sheep, both which, in other nations, are sacrificed and fed upon; this, saith he, is a certain indication of the folly of the heathen worship. The heathens, saith (i) Theodoret, should have considered, ὡς τούτων τὰ μὲν ἐσθίονται, that some of these things they eat, ἀλλ' ἐξ ἀξηλείας καὶ ἀβελτερίας ἐσχάτης καὶ ὧν ἔδιον τὰς εἰκόνας ἐθεοποίησαν, but through extremity of folly and stupidity, they consecrate the images of those things themselves did eat. See Tatian, p. 149. Orig. contr. Celsum, l. 5. p. 249. Now can it possibly be conceived, that all these fathers should ridicule and expose the religion of the heathens, for that very thing which made so great a part of their own religion? That they should look on it as an abominable and repugnant thing in heathens, only to worship that which others did eat, if it had been a constant custom of all Christians to worship as God what themselves did eat? Could they brand that as the extremity of madness, stupidity and folly, when done by heathens, which their faith taught them, was the highest act of religious worship, when performed by themselves? Surely, these things give us sufficient reason with (k) Scotus, to admire, why such an interpretation should be put upon this one article, as makes our faith contemptible to all who are guided by reason? Nor can we abstain from thinking with (l) Petrus Cluniacensis's carnal man, That it is against humanity, humanity, againſt piety, to break with our hands, to tear with our teeth, and to devour, as we do common meat, the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, or that God and Man ſhould be devoured by men, the Maſter by his diſciples, the Lord by his ſervants, and Chriſt by Chriſtians.

Ver. 27. [m] Πίετε ἐξ αὐτοῦ πάντες. Drink ye all of this.] From theſe words it is evident, That all who come to the holy communion, are by Chriſt's precepts, obliged as well to drink of the cup, as to eat of the bread: For, whereas moſt Romaniſts pretend, that Chriſt ſaid only, Drink ye all of this, to them, to whom he ſaid, when ſpeaking of the bread, Do this; and that thoſe words were only ſpoken to his Apoſtles, whom he then made Prieſts. To this I anſwer, That we have clear and convincing evidence, that theſe words, Drink ye all of this, are to be applied to others beſides the Apoſtles; as, v. gr. (1.) From Chriſt's inſtitution; whence I argue thus, Chriſt inſtituted no other ſupper, than that which he adminiſtred to his diſciples: If then he did not inſtitute that for all believers capable, they have no right to any part of it, by virtue of Chriſt's inſtitution; it can be to them no ſacrament for whom it was not inſtituted by Chriſt, ſince, by the definition of the (m) Trent council, the ſacraments of the New Teſtament were all inſtituted by him; they can expect no bleſſing from it, ſince that depends upon Chriſt's ordinance; nay, they muſt be eſteemed ſacrilegious uſurpers, as laying claim to that ſacrament which never by Chriſt's inſtitution did belong to them. If Chriſt did inſtitute that ſacrament for all believers capable, that is, to be a ſtanding ordinance, by which, as his diſciples then did, ſo all believers capable, ſhould afterwards eat of what he called his body, and drink of what he called his blood; then did he inſtitute it to be received of all that were fitted for, and capable to receive it, and in it ſaid unto them, Drink ye all of this.

This appears farther, from the reaſon annexed to the receiving of the ſacrament by Chriſt's Apoſtles; for, ſince that reaſon equally concerns all believers capable, and fitted to receive it, the inſtitution muſt concern them all. Now the reaſon why Chriſt ſaid to his Apoſtles, Take and eat what I have broken, is by himſelf declared to be this; becauſe it was his body broken, or, his body given for them: Take it, ſaith Chriſt, this is my body given for you: This therefore being the reaſon, why they were to take, and eat; and this reaſon concerning all believers capable, and fitted to receive it, as much as the Apoſtles and ſucceeding prieſts, the inſtitution or command, to take and eat, muſt equally concern them. This argument transferred upon the cup, runs thus: the reaſon of the participating of the cup, viz. becauſe it is the blood of the New Teſtament, which is ſhed for the remiſſion of ſins, doth concern laicks as well as prieſts, his blood being equally ſhed for both; therefore the command, Drink ye all of this, to which the reaſon is annexed, concerns them alſo. Again, another reaſon why Chriſt ſaid to his Apoſtles, Eat this bread, and drink this cup, was, that by ſo doing, they might remember his death, his body broken, and his blood ſhed for them, ſaith St. Luke, and ſhew it forth till his ſecond coming, ſaith St. Paul. Now this, as St. Paul clearly ſhews in his diſcourſe to the Corinthians, and all the world believes, as well concerneth all believers as it doth prieſts; and therefore the drinking of the cup, by which, as well as eating of the bread, this commemoration is by our Lord's inſtitution to be made, muſt equally concern them.

Ver. 29. [n] I will not henceforth drink of the fruit of the vine, &c.] Of this and the following verſe, ſee Note on Mark 14. 25, 26.

Ver. 31. [o] Πάντες ὑμεῖς σκανδαλισθήσεσθε. All ye ſhall be offended, — for it is written, I will ſmite the ſhepherd, &c.] It is certain, that theſe words, All you ſhall be offended becauſe of me, muſt ſignify a great ſin in his diſciples, viz. that of deſerting their Lord, and ceaſing to own themſelves his diſciples, which was a virtual renouncing their maſter; for σκανδαλίζεσθαι ἐν ἐμοὶ, to be ſcandalized becauſe of me, never bears any other ſenſe in the New Teſtament. See the Note on Matth. 11. 6. — 18. 6. The words of Zachary, Chap. 13. 7. ſeem primarily to be underſtood of an evil ſhepherd, or of ſuch evil teachers to whom God threatneth the ſword. Chriſt therefore ſeemeth here to mention them, not as a prediction concerning him, and his Apoſtles, but only as a proverbial expreſſion, or rather an argument à majori; that if this would happen on the account of ſmiting an evil ſhepherd, much more at the ſmiting the good and great ſhepherd of the ſheep.

Ver. 34. [p] Πρὶν ἀλέκτορα φωνῆσαι, before the cock crow, πρὶν ἢ δὶς φωνῆσαι, before he crow twice, Mark 14. 30.] Here note, that there is a double crowing of the cock mentioned by heathen authors, (n) Ammianus, (o) Ariſtophanes, and (p) Juvenal; the firſt was about midnight, the ſecond at the fourth watch of the night, or the breaking in of the day, and this latter, as being the louder and more obſervable, in the enumeration of the times of the night, is that which is properly called ἀλεκτοροφωνία, or cock-crowing; ſo Mark

Mark 13. 35. Ye know not when the Son of man comes, in the evening, or at midnight, ἢ ἀλεκτοροφωνίας, or at cock-crowing, or in the morning. So (q) Censorinus and (r) Macrobius reckon from midnight to cock-crowing, and from thence to the morning; and (s) Julius Pollux says the same. Of this crowing of the cock, is St. Matthew, and the other Evangelists to be understood, when they relate Christ's words thus, before the cock crow, (i. e before that time of the night which bears that name, and that crowing of the cock which is emphatically so called) thou shalt deny me thrice, as appears from St. Mark, saying, that the cock crew after his first denial of Christ, Chap. 14. 68. and crew the second time after his third denial, v. 72.

Ver. 38. Περίλυπός ἐστιν ἡ ψυχή μου ἕως θανάτου, My soul is exceeding sorrowful even to death.] There be many circumstances in our Saviour's passion which seem to shew his sorrow was exceeding great, and much surpassing the common sorrow of many who have been condemned to die. As v. g.

1*st*, The emphatical expressions by which the Scripture represents these sorrows, for to express the greatness of them, they are here stiled deadly sorrows; it was sorrow which reached to, and surrounded his whole soul, it filled him with grief of heart, for ἤρξατο λυπεῖσθαι, he began to be grieved, saith St. Matthew, v. 37. ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι to be filled with fear and anguish, saith St. Mark, Chap. 14. 33. ἀδημονεῖν, to be faint and restless in his spirit, say they both.

2*dly*, The greatness of the sorrows he endured, may be concluded from his importunate petitions to be delivered from what he feared, for he pathetically cries out, Oh my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; this prayer he thrice repeats upon his knees, and falling flat upon his face, to shew the strength, and vehemence of this desire, and yet St. Luke adds, that being in an agony he prayed ἐκτενέστερον, with greater vehemency than before, Luke 22. 44. He put up prayers and supplications, with strong cries and tears, Heb. 5. 7. and sure that cup must be exceeding bitter which he so highly dreaded, and with such cries and tears, and humble importunities desired to be delivered from.

3*dly*, This will appear, if we consider the agonies he suffered in the garden upon the apprehension of this bitter cup, for such was then his sorrow, that it forced open all his pores, and made even clods of blood to issue from them; now if a sudden watery sweat shews an extremity of fear and consternation of the mind, who can sufficiently conceive the greatness of that horror which produced these clods of blood.

4*thly*, This will be farther evident from the consideration of that angel which, by God's commission, came from heaven to strengthen and support him under the apprehension of his sufferings; for sure that burden must be very weighty, which our Lord seemed thus unable to sustain, and under which his Father seemed so concerned to support him. And,

5*thly*, This may be probably concluded from that pathetical expression with which his soul expired, viz. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me. See the Note on Chap. 27. 46.

I add, That this excess of sorrow could not arise merely from the apprehension that he was to die, that his soul was for a season to be separated from his body, or that he was to suffer a death full of pain and ignominy. For, (1.) the Apostle doth inform us, that he was heard, i. e. delivered from his fear, Heb. 5. 7. See the Note there. And yet we know he was not delivered from the pain and ignominy of the cross, but suffered death upon it. (2) If this excess of sorrow and consternation of his soul proceeded only from the fear of such a death as any mortal man might suffer, for which he knew he should be gloriously rewarded, and from which he knew he should in three days be delivered; we must confess he was more troubled at the apprehension of it, than Socrates, and many other philosophers of old, who had learned μὴ εἶναι ἢ συμφοραῖς σφόδρα ὑπάρχειν, not to be much afflicted with calamities; who suffered death with an undaunted courage, and waxed not pale at the divulsion or breaking of their limbs, though they had no such encouragements to suffer as he had; and that he was far more timorous than were those martyrs, who, with undaunted courage, suffered for his sake the greatest cruelties. And yet it is very difficult to assign any other cause of this excess of sorrow which then seized him, it being certain,

1*st*, That he could not lie under the sense of any anger or indignation God had conceived against him; for sure he could not think God was then angry with him, when he was doing an act of most profound obedience to him, for which he had declared his Father loved him, and for which he knew he would reward him; nor is this well consistent with his commending his soul

ſoul into the hands of his affectionate Father, his aſſurance he ſhould go to paradiſe, or his conſtant faith that he was ſtill the Son of God, in whom his ſoul delighted: And hence it follows,

2*dly*, That he could not lie under any doubtings of his Father's love, or any deſpondings upon that account; for he ſtill addreſſes to him as his God and Father, and commends his ſpirit into his Father's hands; he declares his Father therefore loved him, becauſe he laid down his life for his ſheep, John 10. 17. And he thus ſuffered in proſpect of the joy, or the reward of theſe his ſufferings from God ſet before him. And this demonſtratively follows from this conſideration, that had he then doubted of God's love and favour to him, he could not at the ſame time have believed, that he was the Son of God, in whom he delighted; and ſo, tho' Satan did not prevail upon him at the firſt, he muſt have in this laſt temptation induced him to doubt of this particular. Nor,

3*dly*, Can I believe that God laid any grief or puniſhment upon the ſoul of Chriſt by his immediate hand. I have declared my opinion, that it is not neceſſary to ſay, the future evils, which the ſouls of wicked men ſhall ſuffer, come from God's immediate hand, and endeavoured to ſhew, that they may be accounted for, by conſidering their perpetual excluſion from a ſtate of happineſs, their eternal duration, and from the natural workings of their conſciences in ſuch a ſtate; and what God doth not do to the wicked, doubtleſs he did not to his own beloved Son, when he became obedient to the death at his command. And, 2*dly*, I am not able to conceive what he could ſuffer from the immediate hand of God; could God withdraw from him the ſenſe of his favour, and yet not only highly love him at the ſame time for this very action, but ſet before him the joy, and the reward he would confer upon him for thus ſuffering? If there were any ſeeming diminution of the ſenſe of the divine love, and of that ſenſe of joy and conſolation which deriveth from it, that may be better attributed to his exceſs of ſorrow, which ſo poſſeſſed him, as that his human nature could not as formerly attend to the conſideration of it; and this being innocent in itſelf, and ſometimes incident to the moſt pious men, might then befal our Saviour, when he was in all things, ſin only excepted, to be made like to us, that he might ſuccour us when tempted, Heb. 2. 17, 18.——4. 15, 16. Or did he raiſe within him any ſenſe of what might juſtly be inflicted on him for the ſin of man, when he thus undertook to ſuffer in his ſtead? This ſurely muſt be needleſs, in reſpect to him who had the cleareſt view of the deſert, and heinouſneſs of ſin, and the moſt perfect knowledge of what God's law had threatned to it. This apprehenſion I conceive moſt likely to have been the ground of this our Saviour's bitter agony, but then this was the product not of God's immediate hand, but of his perfect knowledge, purity, and hatred of ſin. 3*dly*, Add to this, that the ſcripture ſeems to be wholly ſilent in this matter; it ſaith indeed, The Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all, or made our ſins to meet upon him, Iſa. 53. 6. But ſurely they then only were thus laid on him when he bare them. Now St. Peter doth aſſure us, that he bare our ſins in his own body on the tree, and that by the ſtripes, with which he was there ſmitten, we are healed, 1 Pet. 2. 24, 25. Again it is ſaid, he gave his ſoul an offering for ſin, Iſa. 53. 10. But then it is evident to a demonſtration, that his ſoul there only ſignifies his life, for ſo it follows, v. 12. he poured forth his ſoul unto death; in which ſenſe Chriſt himſelf declares, that he did δοῦναι τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ, give his life a ranſom for many, Matth. 20. 28. It is farther ſaid, that he was made a curſe for us. Gal. 3. 13. but then it is declared expreſly, that he was only ſo by being hanged on a tree, or by ſuffering that death which all that ſuffered were by the law pronounced accurſed. See the Note there. Laſtly, it is often ſaid, He ſuffered for our ſins, the juſt for the unjuſt: But then it well deſerves to be obſerved, that the ſcripture repreſents him as doing the great work of redemption, rather by what he ſuffered for us in the body, than by what he ſuffered in his ſoul; for it informs us, that he bare our ſins in his own body on the tree, that we are ſanctified through the offering of the body of Chriſt once; that he died, and ſuffered for our ſins, 1 Pet. 2. 24. Heb. 10. 10. and yet it was not his ſoul but his body only which was ſubject to death; that he ſhed, he poured out his blood for the remiſſion of our ſins, that he waſhed us from our ſins in his blood, that he made our peace through the blood of the croſs, that he obtained eternal redemption for us by his own blood, that he ſanctified us by his own blood, and by it cleanſeth us from all ſin, that we have redemption through his blood, even the remiſſion of ſins, and that he is our propitiation through faith in his blood. The ſacrament we are to celebrate in thankful remembrance of what he ſuffered for us, doth only call us to remember, that his body was given, or broken for us, and his blood ſhed for the remiſſion of our ſins; ſo that if we would ſpeak according to the conſtant language of the Holy Ghoſt in ſcripture, we muſt aſcribe the work of our redemption to our Lord's ſufferings sufferings in the body for us; in which it is certain that he could suffer nothing answerable unto the punishment of damned spirits, but only gave his life a ransom for many.

Ver. 39. [r] Ἔπεσεν ἐπὶ πρόσωπον· He fell upon his face, &c.] At first he fell upon his knees, and afterwards upon his face, saying, Father, εἰ δυνατόν, if it be possible, (i. e. if it be so, not in the nature of the thing, for thus he declared, all things were possible to his Father, Mark 14. 35, 36. but according to his decree, and the divine wisdom, if that saw any other way, by which his glory, and the salvation of men might equally be consulted) let this cup pass from me; and when he saith, ver. 42. If this cup cannot pass from me, except I drink it, thy will be done; as this prayer is in effect the same with the former, it being said that he prayed thrice, saying the same words, so the import of it seems to be to this effect; though the condition of human nature prompts me to desire freedom from this bitter cup, yet seeing, for this end came I to this hour, John 12. 27. and had a body prepared for me, that being obedient in it to the death, I might do thy will, O God, Heb. 10. 5, 7. I submit my natural to thy divine will.

See Additions, N° 49.

Ver. 41. [s] Τὸ πνεῦμα πρόθυμον, ἡ δὲ σὰρξ ἀσθενὴς, Watch and pray, &c. the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.] What it is to enter into temptation, see Note on Matth. 6. 13. Christ therefore here bids them to pray, not that they might not be tempted, for that this should befal them, our Lord assured them, when he said, Satan had desired to sift them as wheat, Luke 22. 31. but that they might not give place to it, or fall by it into sin. The following words, the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak, are not intended as an excuse or mitigation of their sin, but as a motive to this prayer and vigilance; as if he should have said, you have all made large promises, that if you should die with me you would not forsake me, and this you said readily, and with a purpose so to do; yet let me tell you, that when the temptation actually assaults, when fear, shame, pain, the danger of punishment, and death, are within view, and present to your sense, the weakness of the flesh will certainly prevail over these resolutions, if you use not the greatest vigilance, and do not pray with fervency for the divine assistance.

Ver. 45. [t] Sleep on now, &c.] For by your watching you can shew no farther kindness and concern for me, who am now to be delivered into the hands of them who are emphatically stiled sinners of the Gentiles, Gal. 2. 15. See Additions, N° 50. or καθεύδετε τὸ λοιπὸν, sleep hereafter, and take your rest; behold, now is no time of sleeping, for the hour of your and my temptation is at hand; arise therefore, let us be going. So Phavorinus saith, τὸ λοιπὸν ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀκολούθως. Stephanus, deinceps, postea, i. e. the word λοιπὸν signifies hereafter. So τὸ λοιπὸν, may be well rendered, Acts 27. 20. 1 Cor. 1. 16. 2 Cor. 13. 11. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Heb. 10. 13. And this interpretation seems to be confirmed by the word ἀπέχει, added by St. Mark, Chap. 14. i. e. it is enough that you have slept already: Or if with the Vulgar, the Glossaries, and our Bois, we here interpret τὸ λοιπὸν, jam, now, as our translation doth; these words being rendered interrogatively, give the sense thus, Do you sleep now, and take your rest, when the hour of temptation and the traitor is at hand? Ἀπέχει, it is enough that you have slept so long, arise now, and let us go hence.

Ver. 48. [v] Hold him fast.] See Note on Mark 14. 44.

Ver. 52. [x] Put up thy sword into its place, πάντες γὰρ οἱ λαβόντες μάχαιραν ἐν μαχαίρᾳ ἀπολοῦνται, for all that take the sword shall perish by the sword.] St. Austin here tells us, Gladium accipit quisquis, magistratu legitimo non concedente, eo utitur ad sanguinem proximi fundendum, He takes the sword, who uses it to shed his neighbour's blood without licence from the magistrate; which certainly is true of private persons in all cases, seeing self-defence against the assault of another private person is permitted by the magistrate: For if it be once granted, that private persons, when they conceive they are injured by him, may take up the sword against the magistrate, and repel force by force, tumults will be endless, and the authority of laws, and the decision of judges will be precarious, it being ordinary for private persons, and for all sects and parties, who are restrained by the laws, to think that they are injured: But yet it is not certain that this is the true import of these words, which Grotius and others thus interpret: Put up thy sword, thou needest not to use it in my cause against the injuries of the Jews; for by God's sentence and decree, they that take the sword to shed the blood of the innocent, shall perish by the sword; and this the Jews will find, by that tremendous vengeance the sword of the Romans shall execute upon them for this fact. And this interpretation is confirmed from the like words used, Rev. 13. 10. viz. He that killeth (you) with the sword, shall be killed with the sword (of Christ;) here is (the ground of) the faith and patience of the saints, viz. that that God, to whom vengeance belongeth, will plead their cause, and recompense vengeance to their enemies, Rom. 12. 19.

Ver. 57. [y] To Caiaphas.] See Note on Mark 14. 53.

Ver. 59, 60. [z] They ſought falſe witneſſes, and found none.] See Note on Mark 14. 55, 56.

Ver. 62. [aa] Τί οὗτοί σου καταμαρτυροῦσιν; What is it that theſe witneſs againſt thee?] Note here, that τί is very frequently put for διὰ τί, why; ſo, Matth. 8. 26. τί δειλοί ἐστε; why are ye fearful? Luke 2. 48. τί ἐποίησας; why haſt thou dealt thus with us? John 1. 25. τί οὖν βαπτίζεις; why then baptizeſt thou? Mark 2. 16. τί ὅτι; why is it that he eats with publicans. See more examples in the Note there. So that theſe words ſeem to be better rendred, either as in the paraphraſe, or to what end do men witneſs againſt thee, if thou wilt anſwer nothing?

Ver. 63. [bb] Ἐξορκίζω σε κατὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ· I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell me, whether thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God?] That this adjuration was equivalent to an oath is proved, Note on Matth. 5. 34. and on 1 Theſſ. 5. 27. This queſtion in St. Luke runs thus, art thou the Chriſt, Chap. 22. 67. Whence it is highly probable, that in the Jewiſh ſenſe to be the Chriſt, or the Meſſiah, and to be the Son of God, was the ſame thing.

Ver. 64. [cc] Ἀπαρτι ὄψεσθε τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου καθήμενον ἐκ δεξιῶν τῆς δυνάμεως, καὶ ἐρχόμενον ἐπὶ τῶν νεφελῶν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ· From henceforth ye ſhall ſee the Son of man ſitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.] Here note, (1.) That the right hand of power or greatneſs, as it is, Heb. 1. 3.——8. 1. is the right hand of God, who by the Jews is called Power. So Buxtorf in the word גבורא ſaith, the word is uſed by the rabbins and the cabaliſts as an epithet of God, it being uſual with them to ſay, this comes מפי הגבורה, i. e. from the mouth of God. So Kimchi on Joſh. 7. what was ſaid to Moſes Lepani Hagebora, before God; and Ainſworth on Numb. 7. informs us, that Solomon Jarchi ſaith, Moſes received not the offerings of the princes at the dedication of the tabernacle, till he was commanded by the mouth of the power, that is, of God, Chap. 22. 69. Note, 2*dly*, That to come in, or with the clouds of heaven, was by the Jews looked on as a certain indication of their Meſſiah: So the Targum on 1 Chron. 3. 24. and the ſons of Elioenai are, Hodajah ועני and Hanani, he is the King Meſſiah; who is to be revealed. So Tanchum, he is the King Meſſiah, for it is ſaid, Dan. 7. 13. I ſaw in a viſion of the night, and behold עם ענני he comes with the clouds, or as the Son of man; and in the Talmud, in the treatiſe of the ſanhedrim the Meſſias is called Bar Nepheli, the ſon of the clouds, which, ſaith R. David Cohan de lara, is the Greek word νεφέλαι, clouds, anſwering to Hananim, and that the Meſſiah is ſo called, becauſe it is written in Daniel, Behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven. Now hence we learn how appoſite Chriſt's anſwer is to the queſtion of the High-prieſt, viz. you aſk me whether I am the Chriſt, and will not believe that I am ſo, but you ſhall ſhortly be convinced of it to your great ſorrow, when you ſee me coming with the clouds of heaven to take vengeance of you for your unbelief. Note alſo, that theſe words cannot relate to the final day of judgment, becauſe it is ſaid, ἀπαρτι, within a little while, and by St. Luke ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν, from this time ſhall ye ſee the Son of man coming, &c. Moreover, as his ſitting at the right hand of power was viſible to them by the effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt, ſo was his coming to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. See Note on Chap. 24. 30.

Ver. 65. [dd] Then the High-prieſt rent his cloaths:] This is expreſly forbidden the High-prieſt, not only as to his ſacerdotal veſtments, but alſo as to his other garments, Levit. 21. 10. becauſe he was not to appear before God in the habit of a mourner; but they by their traditions had ſo qualified that precept, as to allow the High-prieſt to rend his cloaths at the bottom, but allowed him not to do it from the top to the breaſt. So Cunæus de Rep. Heb. l. 2. c. 3. tho' others ſay, he only was forbidden ſo to do in the time of his miniſtry. For Jonathan the High-prieſt rends his cloaths, 1 Mac. 11. 71. and in (t) Joſephus we read twice in one Chapter, that the High-prieſts τὰς ἐσθῆτας διερρήξαντο, rent their cloaths.

Ver. 69. [ee] Peter ſat without in the hall, καὶ προσῆλθεν αὐτῷ μία παιδίσκη, and a damſel came to him. &c.] To reconcile the ſeeming contrarieties in the Evangeliſts, obſerve,

1*ſt*, That whereas St. Matthew ſays, Peter ſat, St. John that he ſtood, he might do both, being ſometimes ſitting and ſometimes ſtanding.

2*dly*, Whereas it is ſaid here, he ſat without, and yet v. 58. that he followed Chriſt into the High-prieſt's palace; both are true, he being without that place where Chriſt was examined by the council, but not without the door of the houſe of Caiaphas; for afterward he went out of it, v. 75.

3*dly*, Whereas the damſel here ſaith to Peter, Thou waſt with Jeſus; but the perſon in St. John 18. 25. Art not thou one of his diſciples? It may be anſwered, that the queſtion in St. John, according to the Hebrew way of ſpeaking, is equivalent to an affirmation; and his diſciples being all with him when he was apprehended; to be then with him, and to be one of his diſciples, muſt be the ſame.

4*thly*, Whereas here in Matthew and St. Mark, the ſecond perſon who ſaid, this man was with Jeſus, was ἄλλη, another woman, v. 71. παιδίσκη, a damſel, Mark 14. 69. in St. Luke, ἕτερος, another perſon ſaid, Thou art one of them, Luke 22. 58.

(p) De bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 26, 27.

58. I think not fit, in anſwer to this, to ſay, ἕτερος may ſignify another, whether man or woman, as ſome do; for Peter's anſwer is, man I am not. The text affords us a better anſwer, viz. that the damſel ſaid the ſecond time, This man was with Jeſus; but then ſhe ſaid this, not to Peter, but τοῖς ἐκεῖ, ver. 71. τοῖς παρεσηκόσιν, to the ſtanders by, Mark 14. 69. and ſaid only ἔτος, this man was one of them; upon this, a man of the company accoſts him perſonally, ſaying, Σὺ, Thou art one of them.

Ver. 72. ff Οὐκ οἶδα τὸν ἄνθρωπον, I know not the man.] Very frivolous is the excuſe of (*) Hilary here, and (u) St. Ambroſe on Luke 22. which they make for Peter, ſaying, He lied not, in ſaying, I know not the man, becauſe he knew him to be God: For this is, ſaith St. (x) Jerom, ſo to defend the ſervant, as to accuſe his maſter of a lie: For if St. Peter did not deny him, Chriſt muſt have falſly ſaid, Thou ſhalt deny me thrice. Cornelius a Lapide ingenuouſly confeſſeth, That he ſinned mortally, by denying Chriſt with his mouth, and by that denial fell from grace; and it is certain, that by confirming this denial with an oath, and adding horrid execrations to it, his ſin was highly aggravated. I therefore would not willingly ſay, as our beſt divines do, that his ſin was a ſin of infirmity; it being hard to conceive, he could do all this without great checks of conſcience; but rather, that his bitter weeping, and his quick repentance, after Chriſt looked upon him, made atonement for it.

CHAP. XXVII.

1. WHen the morning (of the ſecond day of the paſchal feaſt) was come, all the chief prieſts and elders of the people took counſel againſt Jeſus to put him to death.

2. And (accordingly) when they had bound him, they led him away (from the houſe of Caiaphas to the judgment-hall, John 18. 28.) and delivered him to Pontius Pilate, the governor, (as one who by their law was to die as a blaſphemer, John 19. 7. and by the Roman laws, as one who forbad the people to pay tribute to Cæſar, and made himſelf a King in prejudice to Cæſar, Luke 23. 2. John 19. 12.)

3. Then Judas which had betrayed him (to them,) when he ſaw that he was condemned (by them, and reſcued not himſelf out of their hands,) repented himſelf, and (Gr. repenting,) [a] brought again the thirty pieces of ſilver to the chief prieſts and elders, (which he had received from them, that he might betray him to them.)

4. Saying (to them,) I have ſinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood; and they ſaid (to him,) What is that to us? ſee thou to that.

5. And he caſt down the pieces of ſilver in the temple, and departed, and went and [b] hanged himſelf, (executing upon himſelf that judgment which he had deſerved for that fact.)

6. And the chief prieſts took (up) the ſilver pieces, and ſaid, It is not lawful to put them (again) into the treaſury, (among the oblations conſecrated to the ſervice of God,) becauſe it is (the ſum given as) the price of blood.

7. And they took counſel (together,) and bought with them the (field, called the) potter's field, to bury ſtrangers in; (i. e. which they allotted for ſtrangers to bury their dead in.)

8. Wherefore that field (being bought with that money which was the price of blood,) was called the field of blood until this day.

9. Then was fulfilled that which was ſpoken by [c] Jeremy the Prophet, ſaying, (in the words recorded, Zach. 11. 12.) And they took the thirty pieces of ſilver, (which was) the price of him that was (ſo) valued, whom they of the children of Iſrael did value, (as a ſlave, or ſervant, ſee Note on Chap. 26. 15.)

10. And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.

And Jeſus ſtood before the governor, and the governor aſked him, ſaying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jeſus ſaid to him, (It is as) thou ſayeſt.

12. And when he was accuſed of the chief prieſts and elders, he anſwered nothing, (as knowing, it was to no purpoſe to ſpeak to them, Luke 22. 68.)

13. Then ſaid Pilate to him, Heareſt thou not how many things they witneſs againſt thee (yet thou anſwereſt nothing?)

14. And he anſwered him to never a word; inſomuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

15. Now at that [d] feaſt (of the paſſover, John 18. 39. kept in memory of their redemption from Egyptian thraldom,) the governor was wont to releaſe to the people, a priſoner whom they would (deſire.)

16. And they had then a notable priſoner, called Barabbas, (guilty of robbery, John 18. 40. ſedition and murder, Luke 23. 19.)

17. Therefore when they were gathered together, Pilate (hoping they would be aſhamed to releaſe ſuch a villain,) ſaid to them, Whom will you that I (ſhould) releaſe to you? Barabbas, or

Jeſus, who is called Chriſt, (the King of the Jews? Mark 15. 9.)

18. (And this notorious malefactor he propoſed to them, to preſerve Jeſus;) for he knew, that for envy they had delivered him, (i. e. Jeſus into his hands.)

19. When he was ſet down on the judgment-ſeat, his wife ſent to him (a meſſenger,) ſaying, Have thou nothing to do with (the condemnation of) that juſt man; for I have ſuffered many things this day in a dream, becauſe of him; (which convince me it will be dangerous for thee to condemn him.)

20. But the chief prieſts and elders perſuaded the multitude, that they ſhould aſk Barabbas, and (deſire the governor to) deſtroy Jeſus.

21. (Then) the governor (being willing to releaſe Jeſus, Luke 23. 20.) anſwered, and (ἀποκριθεὶς, ſpeaking again,) ſaid to them, Whether of the twain (mentioned,) will ye that I releaſe to you? They ſaid, (let it be) Barabbas.

22. Pilate ſaid to them, What ſhall I do then with Jeſus, who is called Chriſt? They all (in compliance with the chief prieſts and elders, ver. 20.) ſaid to him, Let him be crucified.

23. And the governor ſaid, Why, (I find no cauſe of death in him, Luke 23. 22.) what evil hath he done (to deſerve it?) But they cried out the more, ſaying, Let him be crucified.

24. When Pilate ſaw that he could prevail nothing (in the behalf of Chriſt,) but that rather a tumult was made, [e] he took water, and waſhed his hands before the multitude, ſaying, (I by this ceremony declare that) I am innocent of (from) the blood of this juſt perſon; ſee ye to it, (that it lie not heavy upon you.)

25. Then anſwered all the people, and ſaid, (Whatſoever guilt there is in ſhedding) his blood, (may it) be on us, and on our children.

26. [f] Then (to gratify the multitude, Mark 15. 15.) releaſed he Barabbas to them; and when he had ſcourged (Gr. ſcourging,) Jeſus, he delivered him (up to them) to be crucified.

27. Then the ſoldiers of the governor took Jeſus into the common hall, and gathered to him the whole band of ſoldiers.

28. And they ſtripped him (of his own garments,) and [g] put on him a ſcarlet robe, (ſuch as was worn by Kings.)

29. And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head; and (inſtead of a ſcepter, they put) a reed in his right hand; and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, ſaying, Hail, King of the Jews.

30. And they ſpit upon him, and took the reed (out of his hand,) and ſmote him on the head (with it.)

31. And after that they had (thus vilified and) mocked him, they took the robe off from him, (dethroning him from his pretended kingdom,) and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him.

32. And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name, (coming from the field, Mark 15. 21.) [h] him they compelled to bear his croſs (with him, who through weakneſs, was not ſufficient to bear it to the place of execution.)

33. And when they were come to a place called [i] Golgotha, that is to ſay, a place of a (the) ſkull, (where, ſaith tradition, the firſt Adam was buried.)

34. [k] They gave him vinegar to drink, mingled with gall, (to intoxicate him, and take off the ſenſe of his pain;) and when he had taſted (thereof, or, what it was,) he would not drink of it.

35. And (when) they (had) crucified him, they parted his garments, (except his woven coat, into four parts, John 19. 23, 24.) caſting lots (for his coat,) that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet, (Pſal. 22. 19.) They parted my garments among them, and upon my veſture did they caſt lots.

36. And then ſitting down, they watched him there.

37. And (Pilate) ſet up over his head his accuſation, written (in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, Luke 23. 38.) THIS IS JESUS, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

38. [l] Then were there two thieves crucified with him, one on the right hand, and another on the left; (and ſo that ſcripture was fulfilled which ſaid, He was numbred with the tranſgreſſors, Mark 15. 28.)

39. And they that paſſed by reviled him, wagging their heads,

40. And ſaying, Thou that deſtroyeſt the temple, and buildeſt it in three days, ſave thyſelf, if thou be the Son of God, (and) come down from the croſs.

41. Likewiſe alſo, the chief prieſts mocking him, with the ſcribes and elders, ſaid,

42. He ſaved others, (but) himſelf he cannot ſave; if he be (indeed) the King of Iſrael, let him now come down from the croſs, and we will believe (in) him.

43. He truſted in God, let him deliver him now, if he will have him, (or delighteth in him, Pſal. 22. 9.) for he ſaid, I am the Son of God.

44. (One of) the thieves alſo, which were crucified with him, caſt the ſame in his teeth, (ſaying, If thou be the Chriſt, ſave thyſelf, and us; but the other rebuked him, &c. Luke 23. 39, 40.

45. Now from the ſixth hour, there was darkneſs over all the land (of Judea,) until the ninth ninth hour, (the sun being darkned, Luke 23. 45.)

46. And about the ninth hour, Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, [m] Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani, that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou (so) forsaken me, (as to give me into the hands of my enemies.)

47. Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, This man calleth for Elias.

48. And straightway [n] one of them ran, and took a spunge, and filled it with vinegar (which the soldiers drank,) and put it on a reed, and gave (it) him to drink, (to recreate his spirits.)

49. The rest said, Let be, (Gr. let him alone,) let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

50. Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, (said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and having said this, John 19. 28, 29, 30. he) yielded up the ghost.

51. And behold, [o] the veil of the temple (which parted the holy place from the most holy) was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; (Christ having by his death procured for us an entrance into the holy of holies, Heb. 10. 20.) and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent,

52. And the graves were opened, and [p] many bodies of saints, which slept, arose,

53. And came out of the (ir) graves, after his resurrection, (who was the First-born from the dead, Colos. 1. 18.) and went into the holy city, and appeared to many.

54. Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, (viz. the soldiers, ver. 36.) saw the earthquake, and those things that were done; they feared greatly, saying, (some of them) [q] Truly this was the Son of God; (and others, this was a just man, Luke 23. 47. and all that were present, smiting their breasts, departed, ver. 48.)

55. And many women were there, beholding afar off, which followed Jesus from Galilee (to Jerusalem,) ministring to him (of their substance.)

56. Among which was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James (the less,) and Joses, and the mother of Zebedee's children.

57. When the even was come, there came [r] a rich man of Arimathea, (an honourable counsellor, Mark 15. 43. a good and just man, who expected the kingdom of God, and consented not to the counsel or deeds of them that condemned him, Luke 23. 50, 51.) named Joseph, who also himself was Jesus his disciple.

58. He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus (that it might not be buried with the malefactors;) then Pilate (enquiring of the centurion, and being certified by him, that Jesus was dead indeed, Mark 15. 44, 45.) commanded the body to be delivered (to him.)

59. And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean (fine) linen cloth; (and Nicodemus bringing a mixture of myrrh and aloes, of about 100 lb. weight, they wrap up the body in the linen cloths, with the spices, as the Jews use to bury, John 19. 39, 40.)

60. [s] And laid it in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out of the (a) rock; (and wherein was never yet man laid, John 19. 41.) and he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed.

61. And there was Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulchre; (who beheld where he was laid, Mark 15. 47. and prepared spices and ointments for his body, Luke 23. 56.)

62. Now the next day that followed the day of the preparation, (viz. the sabbath-day in the morning,) the chief priests and Pharisees came together to Pilate,

63. Saying, Sir, we remember, that that deceiver said, whilst he was yet alive, After three days I will rise again.

64. Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night and steal him away, and say to the people, He is risen from the dead; so the last error shall be worse than the first.

65. Pilate said to them, Ye have a watch; go your way, and make it as sure as you can.

66. So they went, and made the sepulchre sure; sealing the stone, (as Dan. 6. 17.) and setting a watch, (i. e. a guard of sixty Roman soldiers.)

See Additions, N° 51.

Ver. 3. [a] Ἀπέστρεψε τὰ τριάκοντα ἀργύρια· Judas, when he saw that he was condemned, repenting, returned the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests.] It seems to me not improbable, that Judas, when he betrayed Christ, might have imagined, as the disciples did, and as the Jews thought of their Messias, that he would not have died, but either would have conveyed himself out of the soldiers hands, as he did from the multitude, when they sought to stone him, or cast him down a precipice; or by some other miraculous way, would have preserved himself; and of this opinion, saith Theophylact, on v. 5. were some of the fathers. And when he saw it was otherwise, he is not only sorry for what he had done, but confesses his sin, throws back the money as unlawfully got, and therefore not to be retained but but renounced together with the ſin; quod enim ſcelere partum eſt non debet retineri, ſed cum ipſo ſcelere abjici; and proclaims the innocency of his Lord: Yet that his ſorrow was not that godly ſorrow that works true repentance, is evident from our Lord's declaration, Chap. 26. 24. That it had been better for him he had not been born; and from his going to his own place, Acts 1. 25. Moreover, it alſo ſeems to me a wonderful ſign of the ſtupidity of the chief prieſts and elders, that they could anſwer, What is that to us? For, could they think it no ſin to hire a man to betray innocent blood? Do they not confeſs, this very money was the price of blood? ver. 6. And, was it not the very money they gave to purchaſe that blood? And, was not the field they bought with it, ſtiled upon this account, the field of blood? And, was not this a laſting teſtimony of their guilt, whoſe money purchaſed this blood? And therefore, Stephen roundly tells them, that they had been οἱ προδόται, the betrayers and murderers of that juſt one, Acts 7. 52. And they themſelves, when the miracles done in Chriſt's name, had awakened them, begin to be troubled, that the Apoſtles ſhould bring this man's blood upon them, Acts 5. 28.

Ver. 5. [b] Καὶ ἀπελθὼν ἀπήγξατο· And going away he hanged himſelf.] That this is the proper import of theſe words, we learn from a parallel place in Arrian, upon (a) Epictetus, viz. That it is no intolerable thing to be hanged; for when any man judges it reaſonable ſo to do, he goes and hangs himſelf. It bears no other ſenſe in Tobit, when Sarah, the daughter of Raguel, is ſaid to be ſorry, ὅτι ἀπάγξασθαι, as to think of hanging herſelf, Chap. 3. 10. or in the words of Job, Chap. 7. 15. My ſoul chuſeth ſtrangling, that violent kind of death, rather than life. This is evident, (1.) From the provocation which cauſed this grief, viz. That her maids reproached her as ἀποπνίσασα, having ſtrangled her ſeven husbands; and, ſeeing they were thus dead, bid her go after them, ver. 8, 9. by theſe words, putting this very thought into her head; whence it follows, that hearing theſe things, ſhe was ſo troubled, ὅτι ἀπάγξασθαι, as to think of ſtrangling herſelf. (2.) This is ſtill farther evident, from the conſideration that reſtrained her, not from her grief, but from doing as they bade her, ver. 9. If I ſhall do this, I ſhall be a reproach to my father; not ſurely by being grieved and melancholy, but by cutting off myſelf by ſuch a kind of death, as is the puniſhment of great malefactors, ver. 10. And, (3.) That her grief and melancholy, and her deſire of death, continued ſtill as long as ever, appeareth from her following prayer to God, ἄπαγε, ἀπολῦσαί μέ, which is not to be rendred as Mr. Cl. doth, I ſaid, take me away; for the words preceeding, καὶ νῦν Κύριε, will not admit of that tranſlation. And, Now, O Lord, I ſaid, &c. but they are to be rendred in the imperative thus, And now, O Lord, command, or ſpeak, that I may be taken away, and may not hear any more theſe reproaches, ver. 13. and, if it pleaſes thee not to kill me, ἐπίταξον ἀπολυθῆναι, command that I may be delivered, ver. 6. So again is the phraſe uſed of Ahithophel, 2 Sam. 17. 23. ἀπῆλθεν καὶ ἀπήγξατο, He went away and hanged himſelf; not dying with exceſs of grief and melancholy, as ſome think; ſince that, in all likelihood, would have hindred him from ſetting his houſe in order, or giving ſuch a ſolemn charge concerning it: As for the Hebrew חנק, that it very properly ſignifies ſuch a violent ſuffocation, is apparent, in that this Chenek or Chinnuck, is one of their four kinds of death, inflicted upon malefactors, and that they uſed proverbially to ſay, (b) If you would be ſtrangled, hang yourſelf upon a great tree. Nor is it neceſſary, that the word ſhould bear any other ſenſe in (c) Ælian, when he ſays, σκώμμαλα ἀ μέγαν ἐλύπησε, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀπέκτεινε, Scoffs have not only made men ſad, but killed them: For tho' Socrates being ſcoffed at, laughed; yet Poliager ἀπήγξατο, hanged himſelf: For theſe ſcoffs might be ſaid to kill him, which cauſed him thus to ſlay himſelf. But then it will be aſked, how this hanging himſelf can be reconciled with St. Peter's account of the death of Judas, that πρηνὴς γενόμενος, falling down headlong, or, as ſome copies have it, ἀπορραγεὶς, thus hanging, he burſt aſunder, and all his bowels guſhed out; ſuſpenſus crepuit medius, ſaith the vulgar; that is, leaping down, or precipitating himſelf from the tree on which he hanged himſelf, he had a rupture, by reaſon of the great jerk of that fall, which broke his peritonæum, and made his bowels fall into his ſcrotum; which frequently happens upon leaping, or other violent motions of the lower parts. And, if this reading of the Latin and ſome Greek copies be allowed, St. Peter's account will be only an improvement of what St. Matthew ſaid, and a declaration of what followed upon hanging himſelf: Or, if we retain πρηνὴς γενόμενος, that is, ſaith Stephanus, in caput ſe dejiciens ex alto, ſeu πρηνιχθείς, and may be rendred præcipitatus, or ſemet præcipitans crepuit medius, and precipitating himſelf, he burſt in the middle; and then the halter which made him πρηνὴς, or in caput propendens, will be ſtill hinted at by St. Peter. Or, if the falling of his bowels into the ſcrotum, be not thought ſufficient to anſwer thoſe words, his bowels guſhed out, out, the rim of his belly being burst, I know not why, in this extraordinary instance, we may not admit of a more than ordinary providence to render the death of this traytor the more remarkable. Thus of Herod Agrippa, (d) St. Chrysostom saith, That because he gave not glory to God, διερράγη καὶ ἐξεχύθη τὰ σπλάγχνα αὐτοῦ, he burst asunder, and his bowels gushed out. See Additions No 52.

Ver. 9. [c] Then was fulfilled that which was spoken, διὰ Ἱερεμίου τοῦ προφήτου, by Jeremiah the Prophet.] Against the truth of this the Jews object, That the words cited here, are not to be found in Jeremy, but only in the Prophet Zachary: To which the learned answer,

1*st*, That it is not certain that the word Jeremy was in the original copies; for the Syriack and Persick versions have it not: So when this objection was made in (e) St. Augustine's time, he answers, Let this objector know, that all copies read not by Jeremy the Prophet, but some only by the Prophet, we may say therefore, those copies are most to be relied on which have not the name of Jeremy: But then he ingenuously confesses, That he durst not depend upon this answer, because most of the Latin, and most Greek copies, had the word Jeremy; and it is not to be thought, they would have put in a word to make the scripture faulty.

2*dly*, Dr. Lightfoot says, the prophecy of Jeremiah was placed first in the volume of the Prophets, and so became the running title of that whole volume; so that what was writ in any of them, might be said to be written by Jeremy the Prophet; but, tho' Jeremy might be placed first, I can hardly think, that Jeremy the Prophet should signify the Prophet Isaiah; and finding no other words of other Prophets cited thus in the whole New Testament, I can hardly believe these words were cited after this manner. And therefore,

3*dly*, Observe, that (f) St. Jerom expressly affirms, that these very words were writ, and read by him in an apocryphal book of the Prophet Jeremy. And seeing we find, 2 Maccab. 2. from v. 1. to 9. many words spoken by the Prophet Jeremy, which are not in the book of his prophecy, why might not these words also have been spoken by him, and kept in memory, or in some writing, till the time of Zachary? Of whom, it is observable, that he loved to use the words of Jeremy, as will appear by comparing Zach. 1. 4. with Jer. 18. 11. and Zach. 3. 8. with Jer. 23. 5. Hence the Jews used to say, the spirit of Jeremy was in Zachary, and so both made but one Prophet; and the Bishop of Bath and Wells, and Mr. Mede, think it highly probable, that Jeremiah wrote the 9th, 10th, and the 11th Chapters of Zachariah, in which last Chapter these words are.

See Additions, No 53.

Ver. 15. [d] Κατὰ δὲ ἑορτὴν εἰώθει ἕνα δέσμιον ἀπολύειν, At the feast he was wont to release.] There being no such release made by the governor, at the other festivals of the Jews, but at this only; and because a release was then κατ' ἑορτὴν, according to the nature of the paschal feast, kept in memory of their release from Egyptian bondage; see Note on Mark 15. 6. It is not here so proper to observe, that it was the custom among other nations, to release their prisoners on festival days, especially if we consider, that at least at other festivals, it was the custom of the Jews to punish criminals. See Note on Chap. 26. 5.

Ver. 24. [e] Λαβὼν ὕδωρ ἀπενίψατο τὰς χεῖρας, He took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am clean from the blood of this just man.] He did this, saith (*) Origen, according to the custom of the Jews, or, ex consuetudine Judaica, volens eos de Christi innocentia non solum verbis, sed facto instruere, being willing to assert Christ's innocency to them, not in words only, but by deed. Thus, in the instance of unknown murder, the elders of the city were to wash their hands, and say, Our hands have not shed this blood, Deut. 21. 6, 7. and the Psalmist having renounced all confederacy with wicked and mischievous men, saith, I will wash my hands (in testimony of my) innocency, Psal. 26. 6. And (g) Wagenseil upon Sota thinks, that Pilate had respect to this rite; but others think, he rather did it according to the custom of the Gentiles, who thought to purge themselves from blood shed by them by washing. So the (h) scholiast upon Sophocles, in Ajace, 3. 1. saith, It was the custom among the ancients, when they had killed a man, or shed blood, to wash their hands in water, to purify them from their defilement. And (i) Æneas in Virgil speaketh

Ver. 26. [f] Τότε ἀπέλυσεν αὐτοῖς Βαραββᾶν, Then he releaſed to them Barabbas.] This Barabbas was impriſoned for ſedition and murder, Luke 23. 25. So that if this were cuſtomary at this feaſt to releaſe ſuch criminals, then the law concerning the ſhedding of the blood of the wilful murderer, Numb. 35. 31, 32. muſt admit of ſome diſpenſation.

Ver. 28. [g] Περιέθηκαν αὐτῷ χλαμύδα κοκκίνην, They put on him a purple robe.] Some think the ſoldiers did this by advice of the Jews, intending by this purple to deride Chriſt's pretence of being their Meſſiah; it being a tradition with them, that, when their Meſſiah comes, he ſhall be cloathed with fine purple. Moſes Haddarſ. in Bereſchith Rabba, cap. 49. 11. But this conſultation of the Jews with them, being mentioned by none of the Evangeliſts, I think the ſoldiers rather did it in deriſion of his title to be King of the Jews. The χλανδα ἁλικόρυφα, and χιτῶνα πορφυροῦν μεσόλευκον, the ſea-purple coat, and purple mixt with white, being proper to the Kings of Perſia. See *Briſſon. de reg. Ver. 32. [h] Τοῦτον ἠγγάρευσαν ἵνα ἄρῃ τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ, They found a man of Cyrene——him they compelled to bear his croſs.] It was the cuſtom that he that was to be crucified ſhould bear his own croſs, as (k) Lipſius proves from Artemidorus, and Plutarch; and ſo our Saviour for ſome time did, for he went forth, βαστάζων τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ, bearing his croſs, John 19. 17. Heb. 12. 2. but then, ἐξερχόμενοι, going out with him, and finding it too burdenous for him, they compel this Simon to bear it either with, or for him.

Ver. 33. [i] And when they were come to a place called Golgotha, ὅς ἐστι λεγόμενος κρανίου τόπος, that is to ſay, the place of a ſkull.] It is, ſaith (l) Theophylact, a tradition, come down to us from the fathers, that Adam was buried here, and therefore, ſaith he, Chriſt, who was to heal the fall and death of Adam, was here crucified, that where the beginning of death was, there might be the diſſolution of it; his witneſſes of this tradition are, Origen, Tertullian, Epiphanius, Athanaſius, and St. Auguſtin; St. Jerom only on this place ſaying, This is a favourable interpretation, and pleaſing to the ears of the people, nec tamen vera, but not true.

Ver. 34. [k] Ἔδωκαν αὐτῷ πιεῖν ὄξος μετὰ χολῆς μεμιγμένον, They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall.] They gave him, Mark 15. 23. οἶνον ἐσμυρνισμένον, wine mixed with wormwood, which differs not from this account, for לענה, which ſignifies wormwood, is by the ſeventy rendered χολή, Prov. 5. 4. Lam. 3. 15. And ſo merura, which hath its name from bitterneſs, is rendred, Job 16. 13.——20. 14. This kind of wine was given to intoxicate the condemned, and ſo to take away the ſenſe of pain, whence it is called οἶνος καταν[ύ]ξεως, the ſtupifying wine, Pſal. 60. 3. on which account our Saviour, who needed none of theſe arts to diminiſh his ſenſe of pain, that he might ſhew his patience and readineſs to ſuffer, refuſed to drink it. See Note on Luke 23. 36.

Ver. 38. [l] Then were crucified with him, δύο λῃσταὶ, two thieves, and ver. 44. οἱ λῃσταὶ, the thieves upbraided him.] And yet one of them only did upbraid him. See Note on Luke 23. 40. So the ſoldiers brought him vinegar, Luke 23. 36. John 19. 29. one of them did it, Matth. 27. 48. Mark 15. 36. the diſciples had indignation, Matth. 26. 8. ſome of them, Mark 14. 4. one of them, John 12. 4. So Mark 16. 5. Matth 28. 2. there is mention of one Angel only, but Luke 24. 4. John 20. 12. there is mention of two.

Ver. 46. [m] Θεέ μου, ἱνατί με ἐγκατέλιπες; My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?] Wonderful are the tragedies ſome make, and the ſcruples they have raiſed upon theſe plain words, when yet,

1*ſt*, It is certain that, in the Hebrew way of ſpeaking, God is ſaid to leave, or forſake any perſon, when he ſuffers him to fall into great calamities, and lie under great miſeries, and doth not help him out of them. And therefore Zion being long afflicted, is brought in by the Prophet Iſaiah thus complaining, ἐγκατέλιπέ με Κύριος, the Lord hath forſaken me, Κύριος ἐπελάθετό μου, the Lord hath forgotten me, Chap. 49. 14. And the Pſalmiſt, as he is frequent in the ſame complaint, viz. Pſal. 10. 11.——42. 10.——43. 2. ſo doth he manifeſtly thus explain himſelf in the following words, Why art thou far from my prayer, ſo that though I cry in the day-time, thou heareſt not? Pſal. 22. 2, 3, 4. Nor could David have any other meaning, when he calls God, ſo fiducially his God, as Chriſt alſo here doth, and even breathes his laſt in theſe words, Father, into thy hands I commit my ſpirit; and ſaith of his ſuffering fering condition, it is finiſhed, and doubted not but his ſoul ſhould that day be in paradiſe; ſo impoſſible is it that in theſe words he ſhould intimate any failure of his truſt in God, or any perturbation of ſpirit ariſing from the ſenſe of divine wrath; this being certain and allowed, let men ſay if they pleaſe, that now Satan was let looſe upon him, becauſe, after his firſt temptation, he receded only from him for a ſeaſon, Luke 4. 13. And this was the hour of the Prince of darkneſs, provided they ſtill own, that the Prince of darkneſs coming, found nothing in him, for his temptations to work upon, John 14. 30. Let them add, if they pleaſe, that the divine glory parted from him, provided that they underſtand this κενωτικῶς in a ſenſe becoming our Lord; either as Dr. Hammond hath it on Pſal. 22. 2. that the Divinity ſuſpended its influence ſo far as to deliver up his body to death; or that the ſenſe of what he ſuffered was ſo great, as that he could not then attend, as formerly, to that ſenſe of divine favour, or receive the joy and conſolation from it, which he did before; the experience of the higheſt ſorrows and the ſublimeſt joys at the ſame time being not well compatible even with the innocent infirmities of human nature; theſe things are, perhaps, gratis dicta, but not diſhonourable to our bleſſed Lord.

Ver. 48. [n] One —— taking a ſponge, filled it with vinegar, καὶ σπόγγον λαβών ἐπότιζεν αὐτόν, and putting it on a reed gave him to drink.] So Mark 15. 36. whereas St. John ſaith, ὑσσώπῳ περιθέντες, putting it upon hyſſop they put it to his mouth, Chap. 19. 29. which words the criticks would, without reaſon, change into ὑσσὸν, a javelin; whereas St. John's hyſſop may not only ſignify the leaves which by the ſmell do recreate, but alſo the ſtalk or ſtem which might ſupport the ſponge, that being, as their muſtard-ſeed, much greater in thoſe countries than it is with us.

Ver. 51. [o] Τὸ καταπέτασμα τοῦ ναοῦ ἐσχίσθη εἰς δύο, The veil of the temple was rent in twain.] They built no partition wall, ſaith Maimonides, in the ſecond temple between the holy place, and the moſt holy, though in the firſt temple there was a wall built betwixt them, of the thickneſs of a cubit, but they were divided by two veils, one from the extremity of the moſt holy place, another from the extremity of the holy, with a void ſpace of a cubit. And ſo likewiſe was it, ſaith (m) Joſephus, in the temple reſtored by Herod, in which there were two veils, one for the holy place, another for the adytum: This veil, ſaith the Apoſtle, ſignifying, that the way into the holy of holies was not yet opened, Chriſt's death procuring a new and living way into it, Heb. 9. 8. and therefore he having ſuffered, this veil is rent.

Ver. 52. [p] Καὶ πολλὰ σώματα τῶν κεκοιμημένων ἁγίων ἠγέρθη, And many bodies of the ſaints which ſlept aroſe, &c.] Here note,

1*ſt*, That according to the opinion of the Jews, when their Meſſiah came, there ſhould be a reſurrection of ſome pious men. Albo in libro Ikarim, par. 4. c. 35. Note,

2*dly*, That it is here expreſly ſaid, theſe ſaints aroſe out of their ſepulchres μετὰ τὴν ἔγερσιν αὐτοῦ, after Chriſt's reſurrection, he being the firſt born from the dead: By this example Chriſt would confirm them in his great promiſe, that he would raiſe all that believed in him to eternal life. And (n) ſome, ſay they, were raiſed to live in paradiſe with Enoch and Elias.

3*dly*, Who were the perſons raiſed after this manner, it is not eaſy to conjecture. (o) Ignatius ſaith, they were the holy Prophets, who were his diſciples, and expected him, and who are ſaid, to enter into the kingdom of God, with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, Luke 13. 28. My conjecture is, they might be ſome of thoſe who believed in Jeſus, as old Simeon did, and died before his reſurrection; for it is obſervable from St. John, that Chriſt not only promiſed a reſurrection, to all that believed on him at the laſt day, but alſo ſaid, the hour is coming, and now is, that the dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of man, John 5. 25. And that this reſurrection was both a proper reſurrection, and was to precede the general reſurrection, is proved in the note on that place, and ſo could be no other than the reſurrection mentioned here. Moreover of theſe perſons it is ſaid, that they went into the holy city, and appeared to many; whence it is probable they were perſons known to them to whom they did appear, and if ſo, they muſt be men who lived in the time of their knowledge.

Ver. 54. [q] Ἀληθῶς θεοῦ υἱὸς ἦν οὗτος, Truly this was the Son of God.] It ſeems apparent from theſe words, that the Son of God did not always ſignify one that was ſo by virtue of an internal and eternal generation, but one that was his beloved and adopted Son; for what is here the Son of God, is in St. Luke, Chap. 23. 47. this was a juſt man, and v. 43. they ſpeak thus, he truſted in God, let him deliver him, if he delighteth in him, for he ſaid, I am the Son of God. The Jews knew very well from Pſal. 2. that their Meſſiah was to be the Son of God; but that they did not know him to be ſo in this higher ſenſe ſeems evident, becauſe they did not know how David could call him Lord, Chap. 22. 46.

Ver. 57. [r] Joſeph of Arimathea.] See the Note on Mark 15. 43.

Ver. 60. [s] Καὶ ἔθηκεν αὐτὸ ἐν τῷ καινῷ αὐτοῦ μνημείῳ, And put it in his new tomb.] What follows here tends highly to the confirmation of the truth of our Lord's reſurrection; for his body being put into a tomb, in which no man had laid before, if any one roſe from it, it muſt be our Lord. 2*dly*, The tomb being hewed out of a rock, there could be no digging through it to convey Chriſt's body thence. 3*dly*, There being a band of ſixty ſoldiers placed there, as a watch to preſerve the body from being ſtolen, it is not to be ſuppoſed that the diſciples ſhould beat this band; and ſo there could be no ground of ſuſpicion that our Lord was not truly riſen.

CHAP. XXVIII.

1. IN the [a] end of the ſabbath, as it began [b] to dawn towards the firſt day of the week, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, (mentioned Chap. 27. 56.) to ſee the ſepulchre, (having with them ſpices to embalm his body, Luke 24. 1. and about the ſun riſing they got thither, Mark 16. 2.)

2. And behold (while they were conſulting by the way, who ſhould roll away the great ſtone from the ſepulchre, that they might get to him) there was (before they came thither) a great earthquake, for the (an) angel of the Lord (had) deſcended from heaven, and came and rolled (Gr. and coming rolled) back the ſtone from the door (of the ſepulchre) and ſat upon it.

3. (And) his countenance (or appearance) was like lightning, and his raiment (was) white as ſnow.

4. And for fear of him, (and by reaſon of the earthquake) the keepers (of the ſepulchre) did ſhake, and became as dead men.

5. And the angel anſwered, (i. e. ſpake) and ſaid to the (affrighted) women, Fear not ye, for I know that ye ſeek Jeſus which was crucified;

6. He is not here (where you expected to find his body,) for he is riſen as he ſaid (he would, and for your ſatisfaction that it is even ſo) come (nearer to the ſepulchre, and) ſee the place where the Lord lay.

7. And go quickly and tell his diſciples, (and Peter in particular) that he is riſen from the dead, and behold, he goeth before you into Galilee, (as he ſaid to you, Matth 26. 32. Mark 14. 28.) there ſhall you ſee him; lo I have told you (the truth.)

8. And they departed (Gr. departing) quickly from the ſepulchre with fear and great joy, and did run (Gr. ran) to bring his diſciples word (of what they had ſeen and heard.)

9. And as they went to tell his diſciples, behold, Jeſus met them, ſaying, All hail, (i. e. be joyful,) and they (when they were ſatisfied that it was Jeſus) came, and held him by the feet, and worſhipped him.

10. Then ſaid Jeſus to them, Be not afraid, (but) go tell my brethren, (i. e. my diſciples,) that they go into Galilee, and there ſhall they ſee me.

11. Now when they were going (gone,) behold ſome of the watch came into the city, and ſhewed to the chief prieſts all the things that were done.

12. And when they were aſſembled with the elders, and had taken counſel, (what was to be done to diſguiſe the matter) they gave large (ſums of) money to the ſoldiers (that watched.)

13. Saying, (having received this) [c] Say ye, his diſciples came by night, and ſtole him away, while we ſlept.

14. And if this come to the governor's ear, we will perſuade (or pacify) him, and ſecure you (from harm.)

15. So they took the money, and did as they were taught: And this ſaying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

16. [d] Then (and) the eleven diſciples went away (from Jeruſalem) into Galilee, to a mountain where Jeſus had appointed them (to meet him.)

17. And when they ſaw him, they worſhipped him; but ſome (of the company) doubted (whether it was he indeed, or not.)

18. And Jeſus came (nigh) and ſpake unto them, ſaying, [e] All power is given to me in heaven and in earth, (and ſo you need not doubt of my protection and aſſiſtance.)

19. [f] Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name (or into the belief) of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt:

20. Teaching them to obſerve all things whatſoever I have commanded you; and [g] lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world. Amen.

ANNOTA-

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XXVIII.

Ver 1. [a] Ὀψὲ δὲ σαββάτων, In the end of the sabbath,] Or rather, after the sabbath; so, ὀψὲ τούτων, after these things, ὀψὲ νυκτὸς, after night; see many examples of this in Stephanus: And so this perfectly agrees with the other Evangelists, who say, this was done, the sabbath being ended, Mark 16. 1. or the first day of the week, Luke 24. 1. John 20. 1. And perhaps St. Matthew mentions sabbaths in the plural, because there were two sabbaths in that week, the Paschal sabbath on Friday, and the ordinary sabbath on Saturday.

Ibid. [b] Ἐπιφωσκούσῃ εἰς μίαν σαββάτων, When it began to dawn into the first day of the week;] i. e. To Sunday, or the Lord's day, for μία τῶν σαββάτων always signifies the first day of the week, or the Lord's day, or the day of his resurrection from the dead; and thus the word μία usually signifies in the Septuagint, when it is joined with days, weeks, or months; as the evening and the morning were, ἡμέρα μία, the first day, Gen. 1. 5. So ἡμέρα μία τοῦ μηνὸς, is the first day of the month, Exod. 40. 2. Ezra 3. 6.——10. 17. And so is μία τοῦ μηνὸς, Lev. 23. 24. Numb, 1. 1, 18.——29. 1.——33. 38. Deut. 1. 3. Ezek 26. 1.——32. 1.——45. 18. Hag. 1. 1.——2. 1. See Note on 1 Cor. 16. 2. Upon this day in the evening Christ appeared to the twelve, John 20. 19. and again, ver. 26. and to the two disciples, Luke 24. 13. It is also reported of the Christians by (a) Pliny, that they used, stato die ante lucem convenire, to meet upon a set day, before it was light, and this day from the beginning was called ἡ κυριακὴ, the Lord's day, and was by Christians from the beginning employed in acts of religious worship. See the former Note. So (b) Ignatius exhorts Christians not to sabbatize with the Jews, but to live, κατὰ κυριακὴν, according to the Lord's day, in which our life arose with him. So the true Gnostick, saith (c) Clemens of Alexandria, κυριακὴν ἑορτὴν τοῦ ἡλίου ἡμέραν ποιεῖ, observes the Lord's day, glorifying in himself the resurrection of our Lord, when he casts away every evil thought, and receives the true knowledge. (d) Irenæus saith, that, τὸ ἐν τῇ κυριακῇ μὴ κλίνειν γόνυ, not to bend the knee on the Lord's day was a symbol of the resurrection. Melito Sardensis writ a book περὶ κυριακῆς, of the Lord's day. See more largely the divine original of the Lord's day vindicated, Preface to the second part of traditions. Of the following words to ver. 13. see the Notes on Mark 16.

Ver. 13. [c] Εἴπατε, ὅτι οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ νυκτὸς ἐλθόντες, ἔκλεψαν αὐτὸν, ἡμῶν κοιμωμένων, Say that his disciples came by night, and stole him away, while we slept.] If this history of the soldiers be true, it is the greatest confirmation of our Lord's resurrection; for then, they must not only have been convinced of it by the earthquake, and the vision of the angel, which struck them with the greatest terror, but must have told all these things that were done in the city, ver. 11. and so have raised all mens curiosity to go, and see whether Christ's body was yet in the grave; besides, here the whole body of the sanhedrim, or elders of the Jews, are charged with a most execrable fact, viz. the hiring the whole band of soldiers to tell a lie against their certain knowledge, and their former declaration made in the city; yea to tell a senseless lie, viz. that the disciples stole away Christ's body while they slept; for if they were indeed asleep, they could not tell that his disciples came at all; if they were not asleep, they lied in saying that they were. Now, is it easy to believe that the sanhedrim, who had these men so oft before them, and under examination for this very testimony, that Christ was risen from the dead, should never say one word to vindicate themselves from this vile imputation, so expressly charged upon them, within eight years after the thing was done, or that money should so corrupt a band of soldiers, that not one of them should ever after this divulge the truth? Besides, how unlikely it was, that the Apostles either would attempt to steal away their master's dead body, or, having done this, to continue testifying, that he was risen from the dead, or that they should succeed in this attempt, hath been already shewed in the general preface to this work.

Ver. 16. [d] Οἱ δὲ ἕνδεκα μαθηταὶ ἐπορεύθησαν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, Then the eleven disciples went into Galilee, unto a mountain where Jesus had appointed them.] That Christ promised after his resurrection to go before them into Galilee, we read, Chap. 26. 32. thither the angel here, ver. 7. and Christ himself directs them to go to see him, ver. 10. but there is not the least mention of any mountain in Galilee, to which he bade them go to see him; and therefore these words, where Christ had appointed them, refer not to the mountain, but to Galilee; but there being a mountain which Christ frequented, and on which he had been before transfigured, this moved the disciples to go to that mountain. Moreover it is observable, that they went not into Galilee, till above eight days after Christ's resurrection, tion, for Chriſt appeared to them at Jeruſalem eight days after, John 20. 19. And when they went, doubtleſs they went not alone, but the curioſity of thoſe that were with them, Luke 24, 9, 33. would likely move them to go to the place where he had appointed to be ſeen; and they, and the other diſciples which were then in Galilee, make up the five hundred brethren, of which he was ſeen at once, 1 Cor. 15. 6.

Ver. 18. [e] Ἐδόθη μοι πᾶσα ἐξουσία ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς, All power is given me in heaven and in earth.] That this power was given to Chriſt, is, ſaith Woltzogenius, a certain argument that he is not God, for the moſt high God judgeth, and commandeth by his own power, which he always had, and received from none, whereas Chriſt received this power from his Father, and that in time, viz. after his reſurrection.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, That it is true that this power was given to Chriſt, becauſe he was the Son of man, John 5. 27. i. e. becauſe he in his human nature had exerciſed the office of a Prophet, and after of a Prieſt, but then it was exerciſed by the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in him. So all the bleſſings of the Jews are ſaid to come out of Zion, or from the ſanctuary, but they came thence becauſe the Divine Majeſty dwelt there; now the human nature of Chriſt is the temple of the Deity, or the tabernacle in which the λόγος dwells, and from it all bleſſings are derived on the Church by virtue of the Deity united to him. And this will be apparent from the conceſſions of (e) Woltzogenius here, that Chriſt hath obtained an illimited empire over all things, a divine power over the bodies and ſouls of men, and wiſdom to diſcern their hearts and reins; for he to whom any office duly is committed, muſt have ſufficient power and wiſdom to diſcharge that office. Now to govern all things in heaven and earth, belongs only to him who is the Lord and maker of them, and therefore is known by this title both in Scripture and among the heathens. See Note on Rom. 9. 5. and Pſal. 33. 18.——97. 5, 9. To have power over death, and to be able to raiſe the dead, is to have that power which is proper to God alone. See Note on Phil. 3. 20. and to have power over the ſouls of men, and have the knowledge of all hearts, belongs to God alone, 1 Kings 8. 39. Jer. 17. 10.

Object. There was no need this power ſhould be given to the human nature, ſeeing he had received it by virtue of the hypoſtatick union.

Anſw. He had before received the power by which he doth ſtill exerciſe this dominion, but he could not exerciſe it whilſt he was in the ſtate of his humiliation, and in the form of a ſervant, as now he doth, being exalted in this nature to the right hand of majeſty, and placed upon the throne of glory.

Object. But Chriſt's human nature is no perſon, whereas to govern and judge are actions proper to a perſon.

Anſw. So to eat, drink and ſleep are in us perſonal actions, and yet they agreed only to Chriſt's human nature. To ſpeak in the language of the ſchools, the principium quod of theſe actions is God and Man, or Chriſtus θεάνθρωπος, but the principium quo is ſometimes the divine, ſometimes the human nature of Chriſt, v. g. Chriſt walked upon the ſea, i. e. he walked by virtue of his human nature, he ſuſtained himſelf from ſinking by the divine, and he who thus walked was God and Man.

Ver. 19. [f] Μαθητεύσατε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, Teach all nations. Μαθητεύειν here is to preach the Goſpel to all nations, and to engage them to believe it in order to their profeſſion of that faith by baptiſm; as ſeems apparent, (1.) From the parallel commiſſion, Mark 16. 15. Go preach the Goſpel to every creature, he that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved. (2.) From the Scripture notion of a diſciple, that being ſtill the ſame as a believer: As in that queſtion of the blind man, will you alſo be his diſciples? i. e. will you believe he is a Prophet ſent from God? And in the anſwer of the Phariſees, we are the diſciples of Moſes, for we know that God ſpake by him, and therefore believe what he ſpake in the name of God, John 9. 27, 28, 29. Hence we find many beſides the twelve who were called Chriſt's diſciples, even as many as aſſented to his doctrine, and judged him a Prophet ſent from God. And we find many of his diſciples murmuring and crying out, this is an hard ſaying, who can bear it? John 6. 60, 61. And many of his diſciples departing from him, ver. 66. and many of his diſciples going with him to the city Naim, Luke 7. 11. though it is probable that theſe diſciples did not yet believe that he was the Chriſt, the Son of the living God, as the twelve did, John 9. 27. And even the diſciples of the Baptiſt are called diſciples, i. e. profeſſors to believe in that Chriſt who came after John, though they had no knowledge of the Holy Ghoſt, nor had received Chriſtian baptiſm, Acts 19. 2, 6. And in this ſenſe the holy Jeſus made many diſciples, and by by his Apostles baptized them into the faith of the Messiah coming after John: See the Note on John 3. 22. and 4. 1, 2. though he would not suffer his disciples to publish that he was the Christ, the Son of the living God, till after his resurrection, Matth. 16. 20. After which time all that believed on him had no other name for a season but that of his disciples, Acts 9. 1, 10, 19, 26, 38. As when it is said, the disciples were multiplied, Acts 6. 1, 2, 7. though afterwards at Antioch, the disciples began to be called Christians, Acts 11. 26.

If here it should be said, that I yield too much to the Antipædobaptists, by saying that to be made disciples here, is to be taught to believe in Christ, that so they might be his disciples, I desire any one to tell me how the Apostles could μαθητεύειν make a disciple of an heathen, or unbelieving Jew, without being μαθηταὶ or teachers of them; whether they were not sent to preach to those that could hear, and to teach them to whom they preached, that Jesus was the Christ, and only to baptize them when they did believe this. This is so absolutely necessary in the nature of the thing, till a Christian Church among the Heathens, or the Jews was founded, and so expressly said by (f) Justin Martyr to have been the practice in the first ages of the Church, that to deny what is confirmed by such evidence of reason and Church-history, would be to prejudice a cause, which, in my poor judgment, needs not this interpretation of the word μαθητεύειν, nor needs it be asserted that infants are made disciples, any more than that they are made believers by baptism, but only that they are and ought to be admitted into the Christian Church and kingdom of God, and into the new covenant by baptism, if they be children of believing parents. Now, against this I presume it is no objection, that the unbelieving Jews and Gentiles were first to be taught, and believe the Christian faith, before they were baptized, and could not be baptized without it, or that infants cannot be taught, or believe, whilst they continue such. See the dissertation on these words, Additions, N° 54.

Ver. 20. g Ἐγὼ μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας ἕως τ σωντελείας τ αἰῶνος, And lo I am with you always to the end of the world.] That these words contain a promise of Christ's presence with, and assistance of the ministers of the Gospel, throughout all ages of the world, is evident from the words πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας, at all times; for had our Lord made this promise with relation to the Apostles only, he would have said, πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας ὑμῶν, all your days; and it is still more evident from the following words, ἕως τ σωντελείας τ αἰῶνος· for that they are duly rendered to the end of the world, is evident from the continual use of them elsewhere, especially in this Evangelist, who in one Chapter uses this phrase three times, concerning the general judgment, which is to be at the end of the world, viz. Chap. 13. 39, 40, 49, and Chap. 24. 3. of that time which the Jews thought contemporary with the general resurrection, and so with the end of the world. For as Dr. Lightfoot notes on the place, the Jews held that at the coming of the Messiah, the old world should be destroyed, and there shall be a renovation of it. And, (3.) This may be farther argued from the apparent falshood of the new exposition of these words, Behold I will be with you till the end of the Jewish age, or till the destruction of Jerusalem, seeing, according to this interpretation, Christ sending his servants to preach his Gospel to all the Heathen nations, doth only promise his presence with them till the Jewish Church was subverted, but not when, after the subversion of it, the churches of the Gentiles were chiefly to be erected; yea then no person, no not the Evangelist St. John, had any commission from Christ to preach the Gospel to the Heathen nations any longer, nor any promise of Christ's assistance with them, which yet is plainly false, seeing the promise of Christ's miraculous assistance made in the parallel place, Mark 16. 16, 18. continued sensibly till the beginning of the fourth century.

To Chapter the Second:

Concerning the Import of that Phraſe, Ἵνα πληρωθῇ, That it might be fulfilled, &c.

HERE being many things ſaid to be done, ἵνα, or ὅπως πληρωθῇ, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet, ſaying, thus, or thus; I think it needful to ſay ſomething of the true import of that phraſe, by way of enquiry, Whether it ſometimes only notes that ſuch an action may by accommodation be ſaid to be the fulfilling of the words of the Prophets cited, becauſe they were more ſignally accompliſhed by that action, than by the actions to which they in the Prophet do relate, though no ſuch thing was, by the Prophet, or by the Spirit of God, intended when the words were ſpoken? Or, whether it be neceſſary, by virtue of thoſe words, to ſay, the Holy Ghoſt intended that thoſe words ſhould be more ſignally accompliſhed by ſome actions or paſſions which were afterwards to happen? In anſwer to which queſtion I ſay, 1ſt, That when the phraſe runs thus, this was done, ἵνα, or ὅπως πληρωθῇ, i. e. to this end, that ſuch or ſuch a prophecy might be fulfilled; I think it neceſſary to ſay, that very completion of it by that action ſhould be intended by the Holy Ghoſt, ſince otherwiſe that action can, in no propriety of ſpeech, be ſaid to be performed for that end.

Object. The only conſiderable inſtance to the contrary, is taken from thoſe words of St. John, Chap. 12. 38, 39. But though he had done ſo many miracles among them, they believed not, ἵνα πληρωθῇ, that the ſaying of Iſaiah might be fulfilled, viz. Who hath believed our report? &c. For ſeeing the prediction of the Prophet could be no cauſe of their infidelity, it ſeems improper to affirm, that they believed not, that this prediction might be verified.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, That in all predictions of evil actions to be performed by free agents, or agents capable of being diverted from them by providential actions, or ſtrong impreſſions made upon their ſpirits, there is not only a fore-knowledge that the action, if providence interpoſe not, will be done, but a decree or declaration that providence will not interpoſe to hinder them, but will permit ſuch perſons to act according to their evil inclinations. So that the import of theſe words may be only this; that God, foreſeeing the infidelity of the Jews, left them to the blindneſs and hardneſs of their own hearts, permitting them to continue in it, that the ſaying of Iſaiah might be fulfilled. So that, though the prediction was not the proper and internal cauſe of their infidelity, yet was the completion of it the final cauſe of the divine permiſſion; and therefore the action, though he be no way productive of it, or obliged to hinder it, yet being a permiſſion by way of puniſhment of mens evil diſpoſitions, in ſuch caſes is aſcribed to God; as when God is ſaid to ſend among men ſtrong deluſions to believe a lie, becauſe they received not the truth in the love of it, but had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs, 2 Theſſ. 2. 10, 11, 12.

2dly, Of the places where this phraſe, ἵνα, or ὅπως πληρωθῇ, that it might be fulfilled, occurs, I thus diſtinguiſh, that in ſome of them the Jews might know, before the doing of the action, that ſuch a thing was by the Prophet intended or deſigned to be fulfilled by the coming of their Meſſiah; as v. g. that a virgin ſhould conceive, and bear a Son, Iſa. 7. 14. Matth. 1. 23. that their Meſſiah was to die for the ſins of the people, Iſa. 53. 7, 8. Matth. 26. 54. that he ſhould come riding on a colt, the foal of an aſs, Zach. 9. 9. Matth. 21. 4, 5. that his ſide ſhould be pierced, Zach. 12. 10. John 19. 37. It being natural for the Jews to enquire touching ſuch words as theſe, of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this? and hence we find their doctors doctors by tradition did expound these words of the Messiah.

Moreover, it being so expressly foretold, and generally received among the Jews, that their Messiah was to be the Son of David, and therefore to resemble him, that nothing is more common in their writings, than to apply to him the words of David, and even to call him David, after the example of the holy Prophets, Ezek. 34. 23, 24.——37. 24, 25. Hos. 3. 5. saying of their King Messiah, David Shemiah, David is his name. See Dr. Pocock on Hos. 3. 5. and Pugio fidei, par. 2. c. 5. § 8. I say, this being so, it could not be difficult for them to believe, or conceive the words spoken by, or relating to David, might, by the intention of God, have an higher, or more eminent completion in this second David their King; thus, that by his speaking in parables, Matth. 13. 35. that of the Psalmist might be more eminently fulfilled, I will open my mouth in parables, Psal. 78. 2. that by the providential preservation of his bones from being broken, that which the same Psalmist saith of the righteous man, should be more eminently fulfilled in him; he keepeth all his bones, so that not one of them is broken, Psal. 34. 20. That, by the treachery of Judas in betraying his Master, John 13. 18. that which was spoken of Ahithophel's counsel against David, might have a more eminent completion in our Lord, viz. he that eateth bread with me, hath lift up his heel against me. In all these things, I say, there could be nothing strange to the Jews, who, as their Targum on the Psalms demonstrates, do expound places more obscurely, if at all, relating to him, of their King Messiah. And this they had greater reason to believe, when, by their own confession, the Psalm from which the words are cited doth relate to Christ, and the words cited were not verified of David, as when, by the soldiers parting of Christ's garments, and casting lots for his coat that was without seam, John 19. 24. that of Psal. 22. 19. is said to be fulfilled, They parted my garments among them, and for my vesture did they cast lots.

But then in other instances it was not necessary that the Jews should understand, nor is it easy to conceive how, without teaching, they could understand they were to be accomplished in their Messiah; or by these actions done by him, to which they are applied by the Evangelist; as, v. g. that the words of Hosea, Chap. 11. 1. Out of Egypt have I called my Son, should be accomplished by God's calling his Son Christ out of Egypt, Matth. 2. 15. or how that which was was said by the Prophets, of Christ's being despised and rejected, should be made good by Christ's dwelling at Nazareth, ver. 23. or that by the coming of the Messiah to them, the land of Zabulon and Naphthali should be enlightned, Matth. 4. 14. that by the doing his miracles in such secrecy, and without contention, that of the Prophet should be fulfilled, He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the streets, Isa. 42. 2. All these, I say, are things the Jews could never know, unless they did receive it by tradition, that they were things relating to the Messiah promised to them.

But then I add, that there was no necessity they should before hand know that any of these things were thus intended by the Prophets, they being not produced by the Evangelists, to prove our Jesus must be the Messiah promised to the Jews, or to convince the infidel, but only as instances, which they, by the same Spirit which spake by the Prophets, were assured did belong unto him; and of this all the believing Jews and Gentiles might be assured by the authority of the Evangelists, whom they saw assisted by the same Spirit which moved the Prophets, and thereby equally enabled to give us the true interpretation, and intendment of them. From what is here laid down it follows,

1st, That it is no sufficient objection against this assertion, that if these mystical senses were intended by the Prophets, or by the Holy Ghost speaking by them, the Jews could never understand these propheeies before the event. For it was sufficient that they might be understood by them in the primary and literal sense of them before, and that after the event they might be understood by them in the mystical sense also, by virtue of that explication, which men, assisted by the same Spirit which did at first indite them, gave of them, or in which they averred they were again fulfilled. And I hope it is no objection against the predictions contained in the Revelations of St. John, that we do not at present understand them, it being sufficient that Christians shall understand them in those times in which they are to be fulfilled. Nor,

2dly, Is it advisedly said that the authority of the Apostles is not in these passages produced as that which added strength to their reasonings? For in these passages they never do pretend to reason, but barely to assert; and surely the authority of men delivering these things by virtue of the Spirit, sent down from heaven to teach them all things, and lead them into all truth, must be sufficient to prove the truth of what they say concerning all these places: Now this authority the Apostles and Evangelists must ascribe to themselves in all these writings, or the whole Church of Christ must be continually mistaken, in receiving the Gospels written by them as the word of God, and

and the unqueſtionable rules of faith; for if you only have recourſe to their honeſty in relating things, you never will perſuade men to believe, that by the ſtrength of memory they could record, not only all they have delivered of Chriſt's actions, but all his ſermon on the mount, and his long diſcourſes in St. John, eſpecially Chapter the ſixth, and Chap. 13. to the 17th, ſo exactly, as that we can be certain they did in nothing vary from the true meaning of the words of Chriſt, eſpecially if the Goſpel of St. John was written, as is ſuppoſed, almoſt ſeventy years after the words recorded in it had been ſpoken by our Lord; it therefore either muſt be ſaid, that the Holy Spirit, promiſed to them for that end, did bring theſe things to their remembrance, and did enable them, by comparing ſpiritual things with ſpiritual, thus to apply theſe places to their particular events; or it muſt be owned that theſe Goſpels, in which theſe paſſages are ſo applied, and all theſe long diſcourſes are recited, are of no certainty, and ſo can be to us no rule of faith.

Moreover, let it be noted, that they neither did, nor could they take it for granted, that any of theſe places ſhould be ſo explained, by reaſon of any received tradition of the Jews, there being no ſuch explication of them to be found in any of their Targums, or cited by thoſe who have converſed moſt in the rabbinical and cabaliſtical expoſitions of the Jews. In a word, either theſe ſuppoſed traditionary expoſitions were intended by the Holy Ghoſt, or they were not; if they were, the Apoſtles delivered a certain truth, when they ſaid theſe things were done, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophets; if they were not, they muſt be guilty of a manifeſt untruth, in declaring they were done that the Scriptures, or the ſayings of the Prophets might be fulfilled; when, by the doing of them, only the falſe and extravagant traditions of the Jews were accompliſhed, but nothing at all was done which the Holy Ghoſt intended in the enditing of thoſe Scriptures.

3*dly*, I add, that when the words run only thus, τοτε επληρωθη, then was fulfilled ſuch a thing ſpoken by the Prophets, though I ſee no neceſſity of ſo doing, we may admit of a completion by way of accommodation. That there is no neceſſity of granting this, I hope I have made appear in my notes on Matth. 2. 17.—27. 9. the only places where this phraſe is uſed; yet ſince the end of doing ſuch an action is not here expreſſed, and therefore the ſame reaſon of any farther intention of the Holy Ghoſt doth not here obtain; I ſay, we may in theſe caſes admit of an accommodation. And having thus ſaid what doth ſufficiently anſwer all that Mr. Cl. and Woltzogenius ſay on this ſubject; I proceed with all due reſpect both to the piety and learning of Mr. Dodwell, to conſider what Mr. Clerc here citeth from him. And,

1*ſt*, Whereas he ſuppoſes God did intend the prophecies which were committed to writing, and inrolled in the publick canon of the Church, ſhould be underſtood by the perſons concerned in them; I grant this when they are concerned in them, i. e. when they are fulfilled by the event; but will any man hence infer, that the Jews muſt rightly underſtand in every age the prophecies of Jacob, Gen. 49. or the ſong of Moſes, Deut. 33. or Ezekiel's deſcription of the temple, from Chap. 40. to the end; or Daniel's prophecies, Chap. 9. and 11. or that the Chriſtians muſt in all ages underſtand the contents of the Revelations of St. John, which were to be ſent to the Churches, and which undoubtedly concern what ſhould befal them? Old Jacob ſaith to his ſons, Come, I will tell you what ſhall befal you in the laſt days, Gen. 49. 1. Then he propheſies of Simeon and Levi thus; I will divide them in Jacob, and ſcatter them in Iſrael; of Judah, that he is a lion's whelp, from the prey, my ſon, thou art gone up; and v. 8. that Iſſachar is a ſtrong aſs, couching down between two burdens; v. 14. that Dan ſhould judge his people, viz. by Samſon, of the tribe of Dan, v. 16. and he ſhould be a ſerpent in the way, and an adder in the path, &c. v. 17. of Gad, that a troop ſhould invade him, i. e. the Ammonites and Moabites, and that he ſhould overcome at the laſt, viz. by Jephtha the Gileadite, v. 19. that Napthali is a hind let looſe, he giveth goodly words, v. 21. Now what neceſſity is there, or what probability, that his ſons, or the Jews ſhould preſently underſtand the import of theſe myſtical expreſſions, which were to be fulfilled by ſuch perſons as Samſon and Jephtha, of whom they could have no knowledge, and by ſuch providences, as the chuſing the tribe of Levi to be God's inheritance, and ſettling the ſceptre in the line of David, of which they then knew nothing? Theſe prophecies muſt therefore, many of them, be expounded only by the event.

2*dly*, When he adds, that prophecies committed to writing, and deſignedly propagated to future ages, muſt needs have been of a general and permanent concernment. I beg leave to ſay it is ſufficient that they be of concernment to thoſe ages in which they are to be fulfilled; for otherwiſe, experience ſhews, the Jews had no juſt notions of Ezekiel's viſions, or of Daniel's prophecies, or the prophecies of Zachariah; nor have the Chriſtians any certain interpretation of many prophecies contained in the Revelations. If indeed they be prophecies

Prophecies deſigned for the ſupport and comfort of his people under their circumſtances, as the Prophecy of the return of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon, after ſeventy years; or prophecies containing any promiſe reſpecting the coming of the Meſſiah, and pointing out the time when they were to expect him, as that of their Meſſiah ſuddenly coming to his temple, Mal. 3. 1. and the deſire of all nations filling that houſe with glory, Hag. 2. 7. Theſe being prophecies by which their faith was to be ſtrengthned, and their hopes erected, it may reaſonably be expected, that in ſuch caſes they ſhould have ſome preſent knowledge of the import of them, though much inferior to that which the event, and actual completion of them would afford; and therefore as many Prophets and righteous men deſired to ſee theſe things, and therefore underſtood the import of them, Matth. 13. 17. So, ſaith St. Peter, was it revealed that not unto themſelves, but unto us, they did miniſter theſe things, 1 Pet. 1. 11, 12. But then when the predictions were of things merely typical, and related not to the literal, and primary import of the words, but only to a myſtical ſenſe of them, to be accompliſhed by an event which afterwards ſhould happen, it is ſufficient that they might know this myſtical import of them by the event. So, v. g. when Jacob ſaith of Simeon and Levi, I will divide them in Jacob, and ſcatter them in Iſrael, Gen. 49. 7. it was ſufficient that they then underſtood the meaning of theſe words, when it ſo fell out, that the poſterity of Simeon had no ſeparate inheritance by themſelves, but only a portion in the midſt of the tribe of Judah, Joſh. 19. 1, 9. And when the tribe of Levi was diſperſed among all the tribes; nor have we any reaſon to believe they underſtood this before.

3*dly*. When he adds, that the Church concerned in thoſe prophecies cannot be only thoſe ages which were to ſurvive the accompliſhment, but alſo thoſe before, becauſe the only momentous reaſon that muſt be conceived concerning theſe as well as other revelations, muſt be ſome duty which could not otherwiſe be known; I deſire him to ſhew upon what duty, which could not otherwiſe be known, depended the true interpretation of Ezekiel's viſions, or Daniel's prophecies, or the words of Jacob now cited, or many paſſages in the Revelations which are yet myſterious; and why this poſtnate knowledge might not ſerve, as to illuſtrate the divine preſcience, ſo to confirm the Chriſtians in what they did believe already, and for the conviction both of Jews and infidels, when the event was, by men ſo miraculouſly aſſiſted by the Holy Ghoſt, declared to be a completion of theſe prophecies, the author of the Revelations having ſaid, that the teſtimony of Jeſus is the ſpirit of prophecy, Rev. 19. 10. I do not underſtand.

And whereas he inſiſts much on the word Revelations, which name he thinks theſe prophecies could not deſerve, unleſs they could be underſtood by ordinary means without new revelations. I anſwer, that as the writings of Ezekiel and Daniel are never called revelations, but only viſions, and thoſe of the Revelations are ſo ſtiled, not as made known, as to their import, to the Churches, but as revealed to St. John; ſo it is evident from the New Teſtament, that there was need of a new ſpirit of prophecy to underſtand the myſteries of the Old Teſtament; and of a revelation or extraordinary aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit, to know that ſuch paſſages of the Prophets belonged to ſuch actions of our Lord, and ſuch tranſactions relating to the propagation of the Goſpel; nor will any man be able to eſtabliſh the application made of them, to ſuch paſſages on any other foot: And in like manner when the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall come in, and the body of the Jews ſhall be gathered to the Chriſtian faith, I know not why a new effuſion of the Spirit may not be expected.

In a word, when I ſhall ſee this learned perſon, by his ſkill in Oneirocriticks, expounding either Ezekiel's viſions, or the Revelations of St. John, from Chap. 6. to the 20. then only ſhall I begin to think it not incredible, that ſkill in the art of the Oneirocriticks was the means by God deſigned for the expounding thoſe viſions, prophecies and revelations. See Grotius on Matth. 1. 22.

AN APPENDIX

To Chapter the Fifth:

Relating to the queſtion, viz.

WHether the duties there enjoyned by Chriſt, did really belong to the ſcope and intention of the moral law, and rather were corrections of the miſapprehenſions of the ſcribes and Phariſees about it, than additions to it; or were indeed precepts not contained in, but by himſelf ſuperadded to the moral law?

In anſwer to this queſtion, I ſay,

1ſt, Whatſoever Chriſt doth here, it muſt be confeſſed, that elſewhere he hath added to the law of nature, or the moral law, viz. when he commands Chriſtians to live one another, as he hath loved them, i. e. ſo as to lay down their lives for the brethren, 1 John 3. 16. For I know no law of nature, or of Moſes, that required this before; nor did the reaſon of it, viz. Chriſt's laying down his life for us, obtain before; and therefore this is ſtiled his commandment, by way of excellency, John 15. 12, 13. yea his new commandment, John 13. 34. 1 John 2. 8. See the Note there.

2dly, I grant, that Chriſt hath added to the permiſſive laws of Moſes, or rather hath reſtrained Chriſtians from acting ſuitably to thoſe permiſſions; v. g. whereas the law of Moſes permitted a man to divorce his wife, if ſhe found not favour in his eyes, by reaſon of ſome matter of uncleanneſs in her, Deut. 24. 1. that is, as the Jews interpret that clauſe, ſomething that rendred her diſguſted by, and offenſive to him: Chriſt plainly hath forbidden all divorces upon any other cauſe, than that of fornication; but then he doth this, not by introducing a new law, but by reviving an old one, and ſhewing, That no man ought to put aſunder thoſe whom God, by his firſt inſtitution of matrimony, had joined together, and made one.

He hath alſo added to the law of retaliation; but then, according to the conſtant doctrine of the Jews, that law, tho' it bound the judge to execute it, when by the ſufferer he was required ſo to do, yet bound it not the ſufferer to require that execution; and therefore in reſpect of him, it only was permiſſive: And this permiſſion Chriſt ſeems to have reſtrained, not by impoſing any new law, but by preferring to it the laws of charity and mercy, and of a peaceable diſpoſition, under leſſer, and therefore tolerable injuries; which thing is ſuitable to the law of nature: And by reſtraining us from gratifying our revenge, or our diſpleaſure againſt any perſon, or deſiring his hurt, when we receive no benefit or advantage by it, and from reſiſting force by force to our greater damage; or going to law for leſſer matters, to the ſcandal of our profeſſion, or the impairing of brotherly charity and friendſhip.

Moreover, there ſeems to be even in the words of Chriſt, this ſignal difference betwixt his manner of ſpeaking of the permiſſive laws of Moſes, and of the precepts of the decalogue; for, treating of the latter, he ſtill ſaith, Ye have heard it hath been ſaid to them of old; but of the former he only ſaith, Ye have heard that it hath been ſaid, ver. 31, 38, 43. which by the way ſhews, that thoſe words, Thou ſhalt hate thine enemy, are not preceptive, but permiſſive only; and that they contain a permiſſion, not given by God, but by the Phariſees to do ſo. See the Note on ver. 43.

Now this conceſſion gives a ſufficient anſwer to that objection, That Chriſt here doth not oppoſe the doctrine of the ſcribes and Phariſees, but the permiſſion of divorce, and of retaliation, allowed by the law of Moſes; it being granted, that Chriſt

Christ hath given precepts transcending these permissive laws of Moses, occasioned by the sourness of the Jewish nation, and by the hardness of their hearts, and denied only, that he hath added any thing to the true scope and intention of the moral law.

So also, when it is added, That Christ gives such precepts, of which we find no footsteps in the law of Moses, as those of not resisting evil, but rather turning the other cheek; and therefore in them, seems not to explain the old, but to have given a new law.

It is granted, that in these words he gives a new law, opposed to the positive permissive law of talio; but then it is denied, that he, discoursing of the preceptive moral laws, hath added any thing to them, which was not virtually contained in them. And therefore,

3*dly*, I add, that according to all the rules given by divines, for the interpretation of the decalogue, what our Lord adds unto the letter of the third, the sixth, and the seventh commandments, must be contained under the genuine import of those precepts. For these are two known rules relating to that subject, viz.

1st, That where any vice is forbidden, that must be consequentially forbidden, which is a natural means, an ordinary occasion of, a provocation, inducement or temptation to that sin; it being, say Civilians, the property of a good law, non solum tollere vitia, sed etiam occasiones vitiorum; and this may be confirmed from the very nature of means; for they received their name and their morality from the end we aim at; and so, if they be such as have a proper tendency to what is good, then are they stiled good; but if they do thus tend to what is evil, they must be evil also.

2dly, That when any evil is forbidden in the decalogue, the least degree of that evil action is forbidden; for gradus non mutat speciem; so that the least degree of sin is sin, and sin is the transgression of a law, and therefore of that law which doth forbid that kind of sin. Now hence it follows,

1*st*, That vain swearing, or swearing in our ordinary discourse, must be forbidden in the command, requiring us not to swear falsly, or take the name of God in vain. For (1.) The reason of the prohibition of false swearing is this, because it is an horrid profanation of the sacred name of God, as is apparent from those words, Lev. 19. 12. Thou shalt not swear by my name falsly, neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God; now by swearing in our common discourse, we make this sacred name common, and therefore do profane it. (2.) Because this custom of swearing in our common discourse, doth naturally lead us to the sin of perjury: It being the observation both of (a) Hierocles an heathen, of (b) Philo a Jew, and St. Austin a Christian, That ἐκ πολυορκίας ἐπιορκία, from the custom of swearing men quickly slide into perjury: And, what can be expected from a common swearer, but that he sometimes should swear falsly, and as well violate as profane the oath of God, since by his frequent swearing, he shews, that he esteemeth not an oath as sacred, nor looks upon it with due reverence? And he that doth not reverence an oath, it is his chance, and not his care is to be thanked, if he be not perjured. Moreover, not only Christians, but even Jews, have always thought, that swearing lightly, or upon frivolous occasions, and without necessity was here forbidden. Hence, Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord in vain, is, saith the septuagint, Thou shalt not use it ἐπὶ τῷ ματαίῳ, saith Aquila, εἰς ἀχῦ, vainly or rashly; thou shalt not swear ῥαδίως, easily, saith Philo, not without cause, saith the Targum: Nor is it reasonable to conceive, God should permit the Jews to swear thus lightly by his name, seeing the (c) heathens, by the light of nature, did condemn this practice; and yet we find no precept in the law of Moses, in which this practice is so likely to be forbidden, as in this.

2*dly*, Hence it doth also follow, That all causeless anger, and rancour of spirit against others, and all the expressions of it, by provoking language, and reviling censures, must be consequentially forbidden by those words, Thou shalt not kill, because they tend, and do dispose us to those contentions which often end in blood; and to that contempt of others, which makes us not to value their lives, and therefore not much fear the taking them away; and lastly, to beget in us that hatred, which in divine construction is accounted murder; for he that hateth his brother is a murderer, 1 John 3. 15. And,

3*dly*, Hence it also follows, That all lustings of the heart, after the forbidden enjoyment of a woman, and all such usage of the eye, the hand, or other senses, which naturally are incentives to any filthiness of the flesh, must be forbidden by thoſe words, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery; the laſt, as being plain incentives to that uncleanneſs, which is forbidden under that name; the firſt, as being a kind of adultery: For ſeeing out of the heart, ſaith Chriſt, come fornications and adulteries, Matth. 15. 19. they muſt be in it firſt; and in it they cannot be, but by the luſting of the heart towards theſe actions.

Here then is a plain demonſtration, That Chriſt in his diſcourſe on theſe three precepts, hath made no addition to them; for what is certainly contained in theſe commandments, and forbidden by them, can be no addition to them.

2*dly*. Againſt theſe ſuppoſed additions to the moral law contained in the Decalogue, I argue thus, Chriſt hath not added to the duties formerly belonging to the firſt, or to the ſecond table, therefore he hath not added to this law: To ſuppoſe that Chriſt hath added to the moral precept of the firſt table, is to ſuppoſe, that he hath added to perfection; for that required the Jew to love his God with all his ſoul, mind, heart, and ſtrength, Deut. 6. 5. And even the voice of nature will inſtruct us, that he is worthy thus to be beloved? And is not this as much as Chriſt requireth of the Chriſtians? Could the Jew comply with this precept in its greateſt latitude, without exerting his utmoſt vigour in his ſervice, and doth Chriſt require more? Will he not accept the engagement of our whole heart, mind and ſpirit, in his ſervice? Doth he require, that our obedience ſhould exceed our ſtrength?

Nor can it reaſonably be ſuppoſed, that Chriſt hath added to the duties of the ſecond table, ſince that requires us to love our neighbour as we do ourſelves, Matth. 19. 18, 19. Now the Apoſtle Paul aſſures us, That all the commandments of the ſecond table, and every other precept relating to our duty to our neighbour, is comprized in that one word or precept, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf, Rom. 13. 9. and that love worketh no evil to our neighbour; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law, ver. 10. See the Note there. But againſt this, it is objected, 1*ſt*, That if Chriſt had intended in this diſcourſe to have corrected the imperfect or falſe interpretations which the ſcribes and Phariſees had made of theſe commandments, he would have named them, as you do in the interpretation of his words.

Anſw. This he ſufficiently hath done by ſaying, ver. 20. Except your righteouſneſs, (i. e. your obedience to the moral law,) exceed the righteouſneſs of the ſcribes and Phariſees, ye ſhall in no caſe enter into the kingdom of God; and then proceeding forthwith to ſhew, how, and in what particulars we muſt exceed their righteouſneſs. And indeed, had our Lord deſigned to teach us, that in order to our entrance into his kingdom, we muſt exceed the righteouſneſs preſcribed in the moral law, why doth he only ſay, Except your righteouſneſs exceed that of the ſcribes and Phariſees, who did in many caſes evacuate the law, and who are branded by him with hypocriſy for omitting the weightier matters of the law?

Object. 2. 2*dly*, It is objected, That had our Lord deſigned not to add any thing to the moral law, but only to expound it better than the ſcribes had done; he would not, after the recital of the law, have added, but I ſay unto you; but rather would have ſaid, The law of Moſes farther ſaith unto you.

Anſw. To this I anſwer, That let our Saviour's preface to theſe expoſitions of the words, cited by him, be conſidered, and then we may diſcern ſufficient reaſon for theſe words; for having ſaid, ver. 17. I came not to deſtroy the law, ἀλλὰ πληρῶσαι, but to eſtabliſh and confirm it; he, in the following inſtances, may rationally be ſuppoſed to ſhew, how he did this, viz. by producing, firſt the law, and then by adding, for the eſtabliſhment and confirmation of the true import of it, But I ſay to you: And when he ſaith, ver. 19. that he that looſeth one of the leaſt of theſe commandments, and teacheth others ſo to do, ſhall be accounted leaſt in the kingdom of heaven; he by the leaſt of theſe commandments, ſeems not to underſtand any command expreſly written in the Decalogue, ſince none of them can be called little, but the leſſer degrees of offence againſt them; and then by adding of theſe words, But I ſay unto you, he ſhews how we ſhould teach men to obſerve them.

AN APPENDIX

To Chapter the Sixth, Ver. 16.

IN this Appendix I shall endeavour briefly, and I hope clearly, to state these two Questions.

1st, Whether fasting be a duty now incumbent on Christians, or a thing left indifferent under the Christian Institution?

2dly, Whether it be any part of divine worship, or not?

In answer to the first enquiry, Whether fasting be a duty, or a thing indifferent under the Christian Institution, I answer, 1st, That as fasting signifies, in the grammatical import of the word, abstaining only for a time from that meat we ordinarily take at other times, it is undoubtedly a thing indifferent, for in this sense, if we eat not, we are not the better, for God accounts no man the better purely because his stomach is more empty; and if we eat somewhat, even on our days of fasting, when the impotency, or indisposition of our bodies doth require it, we are not the worse; but as it in the scripture signifies a day, or time set apart for the affliction of the soul, and calling it to an account for our past sins, in order to our godly sorrow for, and reformation of them; or a day set apart for prayer, and humbling of ourselves, in order to the averting divine judgments, or the obtaining any publick, or private blessings from God's hands; I think it continues a duty still, and a thing highly acceptable to God, when it sincerely is performed in prosecution of these ends.

2dly, It is certain that, under the old covenant, publick fasts were commanded by God, and one of them with that severity, that the punishment of him who did not then afflict his soul, was excision, Lev. 16. 16. And when any adversity befel them, which made this duty proper, not only pious Kings, 2 Chron. 20. 3. but God also by his holy Prophets called upon them to sanctify a fast, Joel 1. 14.——2. 12, 15. This also pious persons voluntarily did upon extraordinary occasions. I wept, saith David, and humbled myself with fasting, Psal. 69. 10. See Psal. 35. 13.——109. 24. Nehemiah fasted when he heard of the affliction of the people at Jerusalem, Nehem. 1. 4. So did Daniel, Chap. 9. 3. These fasts they sanctified,

(1.) To avert the impendent wrath of God, Joel 1. 14, 15.——2. 17. and to render him propitious to them in their distress, that he might be jealous for his land, and pity his people, Joel 2. 18. Thus did the people of Israel fast when they were twice smitten by the Benjamites, Judg. 20. 26. Jehoshaphat and his people, when distressed by the Ammonites, 2 Chron. 20. 3. the Jews when in danger of death from the contrivances of Haman, Esther 4. 16.

(2.) To beg pardon for, and reform their offences; as when they fasted for their idolatry at Mizpeh, and did put away Baalim and Ashtaroth, and serve the Lord only, 1 Sam. 7. 5, 6. and when they separated themselves from their strange wives, Neh. 9. 1.

(3.) To beg especial mercies of God, as when Ezra and his company fasted to seek of God a right way, Ezra 8. 21. And all this they did with good success, and so as to obtain God's blessing. These fasts, when duly celebrated, are stiled such fasts as God hath chosen, Isa. 58. 5, 6. an acceptable day to the Lord, v. 5. a sabbath, a day holy to the Lord, and honourable, v. 13. and fasting thus was indeed fasting to the Lord, Zech. 7. 5.

And as for voluntary and private fasts, I have observed that pious persons still used them as occasion did require. Anna the Propheteſs, fasted and prayed night and day, and served God, as well by fasting as by praying, Luke 2. 37. And in our Saviour's time the disciples of John, and of the Pharisees, fasted often, and this was thought so necessary a piece of devotion, that they admire and look upon it as a great defect in Christ's disciples, that they did not the like, Matth. 9. 14.

3dly, Observe that Christ is so far from disapproving these times of fasting as unsuitable, or unnecessary under the Christian dispensation, that he

he declares the time was coming when his diſciples ſhould faſt, as well as others, Matth. 9. 15. He teacheth all Chriſtians after what manner they ought to faſt, that their faſtings might be acceptable to God, promiſing a reward from God, on them who did ſo, and being no leſs ſolicitous that they might faſt, than that they might pray, and do their alms, ſo as to be rewarded by God for them, Matth. 6. 16. and lets his diſciples know, that their want of faith in caſting out a devil, proceeded from their want of ſeeking it by prayer and faſting, Matth. 17. 21. Now ſurely he who declares, that his diſciples ſhould faſt after he was taken from them, he who is ſolicitous they might perform this duty without hypocriſy, and who excites them to it by the promiſe of a reward from God, and who informs them that their want of faith, proceeded from their want of faſting, ſufficiently demonſtrates he looked upon this as a duty to be performed by his diſciples under the Goſpel diſpenſation. And therefore,

4thly, That Chriſt's Apoſtles and diſciples did ſo eſteem it, we learn ſufficiently from their practice; they being in faſtings often, 2 Cor. 11. 27. and approving themſelves as the miniſters of God, by faſtings, as well as other Chriſtian duties, 2 Cor. 6. 4, 5. This being alſo the uſual preface to the impoſition of hands, they doing this with prayer and faſting, Acts 14. 23. and in commending the miniſters of the Goſpel to the Lord for his aſſiſtance, Acts 13. 3. And married Chriſtians being permitted to ſeparate from one another for a ſeaſon, that they might give themſelves to prayer and faſting, 1 Cor. 7. 5. Note, Laſtly, That faſting is not a ceremonial precept, there being no command under the law for voluntary faſting, or publick faſtings on extraordinary occaſions, but only for one ſtated faſt on the day of expiation, it therefore muſt be ranked among thoſe moral duties or precepts of the law of nature, which Chriſt came not to diſſolve, but to fulfil. And this appears, becauſe it was the practice not only of the Jews and devout proſelytes, Acts 10. 30. but even of the heathens alſo. Theſe days of faſting to avert judgments obtaining not only among the Eaſtern nations, Jon. 3. 5. but among the Egyptians, the Greeks, and Romans, and being part of their ſacred rites, at which times they were σίτων ἄμοιροι, or ἄσιτοι, that is, faſting. In a word, it is owned by them who contend faſting is a thing indifferent, that it is an help to the worſhip of God, and an inſtrument of piety. It is by Phavorinus defined to be the mother of health to the body, and the preſervative of the ſoul; and ſurely that which is an help to devotion, and a means of promoting piety, muſt be as much required to thoſe good ends, as are the helps, and means of ſober living required by the command of temperance.

That I may anſwer to the ſecond queſtion, I muſt premiſe the diſtinction ſo frequent in the ſchools, betwixt an imperate and an elicite act of worſhip; an elicite act of worſhip is an act which hath God for its immediate object, and ſolely is deſigned to do him honour, or to agniſe ſome divine excellency or perfection. Thus an act of faith is an elicite act of religious worſhip, becauſe it doth, and is deſigned purely to acknowledge the divine power and veracity; and prayer is an elicite act of divine worſhip, becauſe by it we do acknowledge the power, wiſdom, and the goodneſs of God; whereas an imperate act of worſhip is that, which hath another object beſides God, and only hath relation to him, becauſe it is performed in obedience to his command; thus charity hath for its object our indigent or our afflicted brother, and only hath relation to God, as it is done to others in obedience to his command; and juſtice is an imperate act of worſhip, only becauſe it immediately relateth to what belongeth to our brother, tho' we deal juſtly with him, from the conſideration of that God who is the avenger of thoſe who do defraud or over-reach their brother. Now to apply this diſtinction to our preſent purpoſe, they who deny, that faſting is an elicite act of worſhip, do freely grant it to be an imperate act of worſhip, as being ſerviceable to prayer, and that repentance towards God, which are immediate acts of worſhip. Here therefore note, 1ſt, That even Mr. Dally grants, that faſting was a part of divine worſhip under the Old Teſtament; whence we may gather, that it muſt be ſo alſo under the New Teſtament, ſince under both it hath the ſame object, end, and reaſons, and ſo muſt be as much an act of religious worſhip under the New Teſtament, as it was under the Old; where to obſerve it was to ſanctify a faſt, to keep a day holy, and acceptable to the Lord, and as much λάθρδιον to ſerve God by faſting, as by prayer, Luke 2. 37.

2dly, It is confeſſed, that faſting, conſidered as an help to prayer, repentance, or pious meditations, is only an imperate act of religion; but as it is an act of revenge upon ourſelves for our offences done againſt the Divine Majeſty, and an acknowledgment that we are by them become unworthy to receive from him our daily bread; and as it is a part of our time conſecrated to the ſervice of God, I ſee not why it ſhould be leſs eſteemed an act of religious worſhip, than the obſervation of a ſabbath, or a day of thankſgiving.

AN

AN APPENDIX

To Chapter the Twelfth:

Concerning the nature of the sin against the Holy Ghost, and the reason why it is said to be such as will never be forgiven.

1*st*, FOR explication of this subject, I do not think it proper with the learned Grotius, to mollify the severity of this sentence, by saying, that what is absolutely spoken by our Lord, must be comparatively understood, and only intimates, that it is very difficult to obtain the pardon of this sin, not that it will admit of no forgiveness: For our Saviour says expressly of this sin, both negatively, that it shall never be forgiven, and affirmatively, that the person guilty of it, shall be obnoxious to eternal judgment, and confirms all this with an asseveration, Verily I say unto you, he that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but ἔνοχός ἐστιν, is liable to eternal judgment, Mark 3. 29. much less are we to admit of Dr. Hammond's descant on the words, that this sin shall not be pardoned, but upon a particular repentance, for that is as true of every known and wilful sin, as of the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost; and therefore this interpretation makes no discrimination of this, from any other wilful sin, which yet our Saviour plainly designed by those words to do; moreover, against both these expositions it is observable, that our Lord saith expressly of all manner of other sins against the Son of man, or the Messiah, that they shall be forgiven; and yet doubtless mens blasphemies against the Saviour of the world, and other heinous crimes, will not be pardoned without particular repentance, and it is very difficult to bring such grievous sinners to repentance. Let it be noted,

2*dly*, That from our Saviour's words, it plainly seems to follow, that this sin consists, or is compleated, not in our thoughts, or in our works, but in our words, for it is he that speaketh, v. 32. He that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, that shall not be forgiven. Simon the magician conceived as vilely of the Holy Ghost as we can well imagine, when he thought he might be purchased by money, Acts 8. 18, 19. for this was to conceive the Holy Ghost was given only by some higher art of magick, than he had attained to; and yet St. Peter exhorts him to pray, that the thoughts of his heart might be forgiven, v. 22. and they who by uncleanness, fornication and adultery, despised the commandments which God had given them by his Apostles, to possess their vessels in sanctification and honour, are said to have despised not only man, but God, who also had given them the Holy Ghost, 1 Thess. 4. 8. and yet St. Paul supposes such persons might repent of the uncleanness, fornication, and lasciviousness, they had committed, 2 Cor. 12. 21. This sin must therefore be committed not only by our evil thoughts and works, but also by our blasphemous words against the Holy Ghost.

3*dly*, Observe, that it is not any blasphemy against the Spirit in his miraculous operations, such as were casting out of devils, and healing of diseases, which is here stiled the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, this being here done by the Pharisees against the Son of man, for he declareth, ver. 28. that he did cast out devils by the Spirit of God; they therefore must blaspheme that Spirit by which our Saviour did this, by saying, he cast out devils by Beelzebub the prince of the devils; and yet our Saviour saith, that even this blasphemy against the Son of man should be forgiven, but it was properly the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost; and therefore,

4*thly*, Let it be noted, that there is a plain difference in scripture, betwixt the operations of the Spirit, and the gifts, or distributions of the Holy Ghost; all the miraculous operations which were done upon others, viz. the casting out of devils, the healing of diseases, the curing of the lame, the blind, the dumb, the maimed, the raising of the dead, were the extraordinary operations of the Spirit; but all the inward gifts by which the understanding was enlightned, and was enabled to perform things which by nature it could not do, without the immediate working of the Holy Spirit, are stiled the gifts or distributions of the Holy Ghost; as, v. g. the gifts of wisdom, knowledge, knowledge, faith, prophecy, diſcerning of ſpirits, the gift of tongues, and the interpretation of them. That there is ground for this diſtinction, will appear from theſe conſiderations;

(1.) Becauſe our Saviour, whilſt he was upon earth, gave to his Apoſtles and the ſeventy diſciples power to heal the ſick, cleanſe the lepers, caſt out devils, and to raiſe the dead, Matth. 10. 8. Luke 10. 9. and yet St. John informs us, that the Holy Ghoſt was not yet come, becauſe that Jeſus was not glorified, Chap. 7. 39. And Chriſt informed his diſciples, that if he did not go away, the Comforter, that is, the Holy Ghoſt would not come to them, but when I go, ſaith he, I will ſend him to you, John 16. 17.—14. 16. And St. Peter tells the Jews, that our Lord being exalted to the right hand of God, received the promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt, and ſent him down upon his Apoſtles, Acts 2. 33. the Holy Ghoſt muſt therefore ſignify ſomething diſtinct from the power of working miracles.

(2.) The Apoſtle John producing his witneſſes to prove that Jeſus is the Son of God, ſaith thus, there are three that bear witneſs upon earth, the ſpirit, the water, and the blood; and there be three that bear witneſs from heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt, 1 John 5. 7, 8. clearly diſtinguiſhing the witneſs of the Holy Ghoſt from the teſtimony of the ſpirit.

(3.) Throughout the hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles, where St. Luke hath occaſion to mention the miracles which the Apoſtles, and other Chriſtians did, he always uſeth the words τέρατα, σημεῖα, δυνάμεις, wonders, ſigns, and powers; but where he ſpeaks of perſons propheſying, or ſpeaking with tongues, he doth as conſtantly aſcribe this to the Holy Ghoſt deſcending on them.

And (laſtly,) Where the ſcripture mentions theſe things together, it puts a manifeſt diſtinction betwixt ſigns and wonders, and the gifts and diſtributions of the Holy Ghoſt. Thus the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the things God had wrought by him, in the power of ſigns and wonders, and in the power of the Spirit of God, or of the Holy Ghoſt, as other copies read, Rom. 15. 19 And God, ſaith St. Paul, bear witneſs to the doctrine which the Apoſtles preached, by ſigns and wonders and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, Heb. 2. 4. Hence obſerve,

5*thly,* That this Blaſphemy of the Holy Ghoſt, neither was, nor could be then committed when our Saviour ſpake theſe words, or whilſt he was on earth, becauſe the Holy Ghoſt was not yet come, ſaith the Evangeliſt, John 7. 39. nor was he to be ſent till Jeſus was glorified, i. e. till he was riſen from the dead, and was exalted to the right hand of the Father. And therefore, after our Lord's reſurrection, he breathes on the Apoſtles, and ſaith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghoſt, John 20. 22. and farther promiſes at his aſcenſion, that within few days they ſhould receive the power of the Holy Ghoſt, deſcending down from heaven, to render them able witneſſes of our Lord's reſurrection; and that after his departure from them, the Comforter, that is, the Holy Ghoſt ſhould come, and ſhould convince the world of ſin, becauſe they believed not in him, and of his righteouſneſs, becauſe he went unto the Father, John 16. 9, 10. Though therefore our Saviour entered upon this diſcourſe upon occaſion of that ſaying of the Phariſees, He caſts out devils through Beelzebub, yet his deſign ſeems chiefly to be this, to terrify them from going on from the blaſpheming the Son of man, and of that Spirit by which he wrought his miracles, to the blaſpheming of the enſuing diſpenſation of the Holy Ghoſt, which was the laſt he ever would vouchſafe, to call them to that repentance which would procure the remiſſion of their ſins. Theſe words may therefore be thus paraphraſed; You have repreſented me as a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and ſinners, and as one who caſts out devils by Beelzebub; and you will ſtill go on, after all the miracles which I have done among you, to repreſent me as a falſe Prophet, and a deceiver of the people; but notwithſtanding, all theſe grievous ſins ſhall be forgiven you, if that laſt diſpenſation of the Holy Ghoſt, which I ſhall after my aſcenſion ſend among you, ſhall prevail with you to believe in me: But if, when I have ſent the Holy Ghoſt to teſtify the truth of my miſſion and of my reſurrection, you ſhall continue in your unbelief, and ſhall blaſpheme the Holy Ghoſt, and repreſent him alſo as an evil ſpirit, your ſin ſhall never be forgiven, nor ſhall there any thing be farther done to call you to repentance. That this is the true import of our Saviour's words is evident,

1*ſt,* Becauſe they ſtill run in the future tenſe, reſpecting not what had been done already by the Phariſees, or others, but only what hereafter ſhould be done; whoſoever ſhall blaſpheme againſt the Holy Ghoſt, Mark 3. 28. Luke 12. 10.

2*dly,* Becauſe the blaſphemy here mentioned in theſe words, He caſteth out devils by Beelzebub, or by confederacy with Satan, was certainly a blaſphemy againſt the Son of man; and therefore ſuch to which the promiſe of forgiveneſs is here made, and could not be the blaſphemy of the Holy Ghoſt, becauſe he was not yet come. And,

3*dly,*

3*dly*, Had the Pharisees been guilty of this blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, by saying of our Lord, he casts out devils by Beelzebub, our Saviour could not afterwards have prayed for their forgiveness, or offered to them any farther terms of mercy or salvation; whereas he on the cross prays thus, after the Pharisees and rulers had moved Pilate to crucify him, Father, forgive them, they know not what they do, Luke 23. 34. and in this very Chapter he promiseth one farther sign for their conviction, even that of his death and resurrection the third day; and farther saith, that he would send the Holy Spirit to convince them of their sin, in that they believed not on him, and of his righteousness. St. Peter also saith, both of the people and the rulers, who so importunately sued to Pilate that he might be crucified, I know you did it ignorantly, as did also your rulers, Acts 3. 17, 19. And then he calls upon them to repent, and be converted, that their sins may be blotted out, thereby clearly insinuating they had not yet committed that offence, which could not be forgiven. And St. Paul, in the 13th Chapter of the Acts tells them, he preached the Gospel, and offered remission of sins to all among them that would believe, ver. 32, 39, 46.

And having thus considered the nature of this sin, I proceed to shew the difference betwixt it, and all the blasphemies which the Jews vented against our blessed Lord, whilst he was here on earth, and why they were all pardonable, or such as might be forgiven unto men; whereas the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost is here pronounced such as should never be forgiven.

It is therefore to be observed, that though the Jews still represented the blessed Jesus as a wine-bibber, and a glutton, because he used not that abstinence, and severe diet, and those frequent fasts, which John, and his disciples did; though they stiled him a friend of publicans and sinners, because he freely did converse with them for their good; though they stiled him a blasphemer, because he called himself the Son of God; though lastly they crucified him, and pronounced him worthy of death, as a false Prophet, and deceiver of the people; our Saviour not only promises pardon of these things to them, who should believe after his resurrection, but even prays for them upon the cross, saying, Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do. Now this he did upon these two considerations:

1*st*, Because the meanness of his birth and education, state and condition upon earth, caused many to be offended at him, and indisposed them to believe such high things of him, as that he was the Son of God, and was to be the King of Israel: Thus, when they were amazed at the divine doctrine which he taught, and the mighty miracles by which he had confirmed it, and thereupon enquire, Whence is this wisdom given to him, and these mighty works done by him? The thought that he was the son of a carpenter, and of a poor woman called Mary, caused them to be offended at him; and when he represents himself as a person coming down from heaven, they do not believe him on the same account, but say, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph? know we not his father and his mother, how therefore saith he, that I am come down from heaven? John 6. 42. This therefore being so specious a pretence for the rejecting of, and not believing on him, our Saviour promiseth the pardon of their infidelity, till by his resurrection, and the mission of the Holy Ghost, he had quite taken off the force of the objection, and shewed, by his return unto the Father, and his sitting down at the right hand of God, and sending of the Holy Ghost from heaven, that he was indeed the Son of God. Hence is he said to be declared the Son of God with power, by the resurrection from the dead, Rom. 1. 4. of which, saith the Apostle Peter, we are witnesses, and so is also the Ghost, which he hath given to them that believe, Acts 5. 32. and Christ himself declares, that when this Holy Ghost was by him sent from heaven, he should convince the world of their sin, who believed not in him, and of his righteousness, because he went unto the Father, John 16. 8, 9.

2*dly*, Christ thought their case more pitiable, till after his resurrection and ascension, and till this mission of the Holy Ghost, by reason of those prejudices which their whole nation had entertained against his person and his doctrine, and which were not entirely removed, till he had thus ascended. Now they were such as these: (1.) That they were very well acquainted with his birth and parentage, but when Christ cometh no man can know, saith their tradition, whence he is, John 7. 27. (2.) That Elias did not come in person to usher in his advent, according as it was foretold by Malachi, Chap. 4. 5. Thus when a voice from heaven had declared him to be the Son of God, in the audience of St. Peter, James, and John, they still object against it, the tradition of the Scribes, that Elias must firſt come, Matth. 17. 10. And (3.) That they had got a general tradition, that their Meſſiah was to abide for ever, John 12. 34. whereas Chriſt ſtill declared, he was to be lifted up, and die an ignominious death; a doctrine ſo diſtaſteful to his own diſciples, that Peter, after his confeſſion that he was the Chriſt, rebukes our Saviour for it, ſaying, Far be it from thee, this ſhall not happen unto thee, Matth. 16. 22. And tho' he very frequently and plainly told them, that he was to ſuffer, yet do St. Mark and Luke inform us, that they underſtood not this ſaying, and it was hid from them, Luke 9. 45. yea, that they underſtood not theſe things, nor knew they what was ſaid, Chap. 18. 34. And yet Chriſt's words were plain enough, only they could not reconcile them with their tradition, that the Meſſiah was to abide for ever, and ſet up a temporal kingdom among them. For, (4.) This was the great prejudice their whole nation laboured under, that their Meſſiah was to come in a triumphant manner, to ſubdue nations under them, and make the Jews to lord it over all their enemies, and to continue this his kingdom over them for ever; their Prophets having ſtill repreſented him as a great King over all nations: His own diſciples were ſo fully poſſeſſed with this opinion, that after our Lord's reſurrection they preſently enquire, Wilt thou at this time reſtore the kingdom to Iſrael? Acts 1. 6. It is not therefore to be wondred, that this ſo ſtrong and pleaſing apprehenſion ſhould prejudice their minds, againſt a perſon ſeemingly ſo mean and deſpicable, who ſpake ſo often of his ſufferings, declared that his kingdom was not of this world, and that he came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter. Now, by our Saviour's reſurrection, aſcenſion, and ſending of the Holy Ghoſt, all theſe objections were fully ſolved, and all theſe prejudices were removed. For when our Lord was thus declared to be the Son of God with power, by his reſurrection from the dead, then muſt they be convinced, that beſides that human nature which he received from his parents, he had another, according to which they knew not whence he was, and neither knew him nor his Father, John 8. 14, 19. When at his aſcenſion all power in heaven and in earth was given to him, and he was there to reign till all his enemies were made his footſtool; then might they eaſily perceive, how this Meſſiah was to abide for ever, and to reign over the houſe of Jacob for ever, Luke 1. 33. Hence from this exaltation to the right hand of power, St. Peter makes this inference, Therefore let all the houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly, that God hath made this Jeſus, whom ye crucified, both Lord and Chriſt, Acts 2. 36. They from his reſurrection were aſſured his former ſufferings were well conſiſtent with this kingdom; and from his aſcenſion into heaven, that his kingdom was not to be a temporal kingdom upon earth, but a ſpiritual and heavenly kingdom, and that he was to rule, not over mens bodies, but their ſouls and conſciences; and when they ſaw this kingdom ſo powerfully erected by the Holy Ghoſt, aſſiſting the Apoſtles in the preaching of the Goſpel, and making numerous converts throughout the heathen world, they could not but diſcern how it was foretold by the holy Prophets, that he ſhould reign over all nations; or how John Baptiſt, who had pointed him out, and ſaid, Behold the Lamb of God, the Saviour of the world, and had foretold he ſhould baptize them with the Holy Ghoſt, was that Elias, which was to come as his fore-runner. And thus you ſee why our Saviour puts this diſtinction betwixt the blaſphemies committed againſt him in his ſtate of humiliation, and the blaſphemies committed againſt the Holy Ghoſt he promiſed to ſend down from heaven, after his exaltation to the right hand of Majeſty in the heavens.

It remains to ſhew, how the blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt becomes unpardonable, and why it was ſo rather than any ſin committed againſt Chriſt whilſt in the ſtate of his humiliation: Now this it was upon theſe ſeveral accounts;

1*ſt*, Becauſe this was the laſt and chiefeſt evidence which God deſigned to make uſe of, to cure the infidelity of that perverſe and ſtubborn generation, or to prevail upon them, and upon other nations to believe in Chriſt: In all the other evidences which came before to win men to that faith in Chriſt, on which the pardon of their ſins depended, God had ſtill a reſerve, and reſolved upon ſome farther means when they had proved ineffectual. If the teſtimony of John the Baptiſt, that he was the Chriſt, if the innocency of our Saviour's life, if the wiſdom of his words, the heavenly nature of his doctrine, and all the miracles by which it was confirmed, proved ineffectual to perſuade that perverſe generation to receive, and own him as their promiſed Meſſiah; God ſtill reſolveth, yea, he had promiſed to ſend this Holy Ghoſt, as a more powerful evidence to convince the world of ſin, becauſe they believed not in him, and of the righteouſneſs of him whom they had hitherto rejected: Hence when the Holy Ghoſt in this miraculous manner had fallen down on the Apoſtles, and enabled them to ſpeak with tongues, and propheſy; this is that, ſaith St. Peter, which was spoken by God, in those words of Joel, In the latter days I will pour my Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, Acts 2. 16, 17. And again, v. 38, 39. Repent and be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the Holy Ghost; for the promise is to you and to your children. When therefore the Apostles, being endued with this power from on high, had been Christ's witnesses, throughout Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth, God had done all that he designed, to bring men to the faith of Christ; so that when many would not be persuaded by it, but instead of being convinced and reclaimed, proceeded to slight and despise, yea to revile and blaspheme it; God was unalterably resolved to strive no more with them, but to let them die in their sins: And therefore it is observable, that when the Jews had thus resisted the Holy Ghost, contradicting and blaspheming that Holy Spirit, by which they preached unto them, Acts 13. 45. they give them over as desperate, and persons in whom that of the Prophet was fulfilled, Behold, ye despisers, and perish, ver. 41. and therefore turn unto the Gentiles, ver. 46. Chap. 28. 28. And St. Paul represents them as persons given up to a spirit of slumber, and judicial blindness, Rom. 11. 8, 9. and so rejected from being any more God's Church and people.

And as this was the last, so was it the most powerful evidence: As for the working of miracles and casting out of devils, the heathen priests and exorcists, and many of the Jews pretended to them; our Saviour also foretold of the false Christs and false Prophets, that they should work signs and miracles sufficient to seduce, if it were possible, the very elect, Matth. 24. 24. and the Apostle, that Satan should come among those, who received not the truth in the love of it, with strong delusions, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness, with all power, signs, and lying wonders, 2 Thess. 2. 8, 9, 10. but yet none ever did, or could pretend unto these inward gifts and operations of the Holy Ghost, such as enabled the illiterate to speak with all kind of unknown tongues, and to interpret the tongues of others, and to discern the secrets of mens hearts, and understand all mysteries by an internal inspiration and illumination, and much less to confer gifts on others by imposition of their hands, as the Apostles did: When therefore Christians saw those gifts exercised continually in their assemblies, and daily conferred on persons at their baptism, they could scarce have a stronger evidence of the truth of the Christian faith, and therefore could not blaspheme those gifts by which it was so wonderfully confirmed, without the utmost degree of infidelity. And therefore,

2*dly*, This sin is represented as unpardonable, because the faith of such perverse and stubborn persons is impossible, they having rejected all the evidence that can be offered for their conviction, and all the motives that can be tendred to provoke them to repent of their infidelity. So St. Paul speaks, in case of those, who living under this dispensation of the Holy Ghost, did yet apostatize from Christianity to Judaism, or heathenism; let us not go about to lay again the foundations of repentance and faith towards God, which were the doctrines they first preached to the Jew and Gentile; of baptism, by which believing they made profession of the Christian faith, and covenanted to perform the duties it required of them; of imposition of hands of the Apostles, by which they after baptism received the Holy Ghost; of the resurrection of the dead, which was the glorious promise by which all Christians were encouraged to be stedfast, immoveable, and always abounding in the work of the Lord; and of a future judgment, by which they were terrified, and affrighted from falling off from that obedience: For it is impossible, saith the Apostle, for them who have been once enlightned, as Christians were in baptism, which therefore, from the beginning of Christianity was called illumination, as appears from the testimonies of Justin Martyr, Irenæus, and Clemens of Alexandria; and who have tasted of the heavenly gift, and have been made partakers of the Holy Ghost, which they received by the imposition of hands, and who have tasted of the good word of God, i. e. have been acquainted with that Gospel, which affords the promise of remission of sins, and of justification here, and of a resurrection to eternal life hereafter, and have felt the powers of the world to come, i. e. the powerful persuasions which the doctrine of a future judgment administers to repentance, a new life, and stedfast perseverance in the Christian faith; and after all these engagements to persevere in the profession of it, fall away from it by apostacy to Judaism, or to heathenism; to renew them to repentance, Heb. 6. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. Because you cannot lay again any other motive or foundation to it, than hath been already laid; you cannot call upon them to repentance, and to faith in God by any other arguments, than by those miracles by which they were at first induced to believe; you cannot incite them to be true to their profeſſion by any other engagements than thoſe which they had made in baptiſm, you cannot give them any higher evidence of the truth of Chriſtianity, than that of their participation of the Holy Ghoſt; no greater motive to continue ſtedfaſt in the Chriſtian faith, than is the promiſe of an happy reſurrection to eternal life; nor propoſe any thing more dreadful to affright them from apoſtacy, than are the terrors of a future judgment; and ſo you can do nothing to renew them to repentance which hath not been already ineffectually performed in order to that end.

AN APPENDIX

To Chapter the Twenty-fourth.

GROTIUS, in his Notes on the third verſe of this Chapter, makes theſe three queſtions to refer to three ſeveral epochas, viz.

1. The queſtion, When ſhall theſe things be? To the time of the deſtruction of the temple: And this, ſaith he, our Saviour anſwers to ver. 23.

2. The queſtion concerning his παρουσία, or advent, to ſet up his kingdom; which he refers to the time of Conſtantine, but others to the time of the general converſion of the Jews, and the Millennium; and of this time, ſay they, Chriſt ſpeaks from the 23d to the 30th verſe.

3. The queſtion concerning the end of the world; and of this, ſaith he, Chriſt ſpeaks from the 30th verſe to the end of the Chapter.

I on the contrary do aſſert, that at leaſt to the 34th verſe, Chriſt ſpeaks only of the deſtruction of the temple, the city and people of Jeruſalem, and of the Jewiſh nation.

Now that the παρουσία, or advent of the Son of man, belongs not to his coming to deſtroy Jeruſalem, but to another coming of this Son of man to ſet up his kingdom, he proves, becauſe the words here, from ver. 22 to the 27th, are like thoſe in which our Lord ſpeaks of his kingdom, Luke 17. 22. to the end; but that Chriſt there, from ver. 22. to the end, is ſpeaking of the time when the Jews ſhould be in great diſtreſs by the Roman army, and ſhould periſh by it, and when Chriſt ſhould come to execute his vengeance on them, is exceeding evident from the words, and is there alſo confeſſed by Grotius: For, ſay St. Matthew, Mark, and Luke, When you ſhall ſee Jeruſalem compaſſed about with armies, let him that is on the houſe-top not come down to take any thing out of the houſe; nor let him that is in the field, &c. for theſe are the days of vengeance: And the words of the ſame St. Luke, Chap. 17. 31. run thus, On that day, he that is on the houſe-top, and his ſtuff in the houſe, let him not come down to take it away, and likewiſe he that is in the field; who ſees not now, that that day, Luke 17. is the ſame with the days of vengeance? Chap. 21. Now this one obſervation confounds all theſe ſeveral epochas, into which ſome have divided this Chapter. For,

1*ſt*, Hence it appears, that the time when they ſhould ſay, See here, and ſee there is the Son of man, Luke 17. 22, 23. viz. he that is to deliver Iſrael, Luke 24. 21. to ſave them from their enemies, Luke 1. 71, 74. is the very time preceeding the deſtruction of the Jewiſh nation. For when thoſe days of tribulation come upon them, ſaith St. Mark, Chap. 13. 19, 21. St. Matthew, Chap. 24. 21, 23, 26. then ſhall they ſay to you, Lo, here is Chriſt, and there is Chriſt; and this is ſtill more evident from Matth. 24. 26. when they ſhall ſay, Behold he is in the deſart, go not forth, for this they often ſaid before their deſtruction. See the Note there.

2*dly*, Hence it muſt follow, that the falſe Chriſts and falſe Prophets mentioned, Matth. 24. 24. muſt alſo be contemporary with the times of tribulation preceeding that deſtruction, and that they muſt riſe up as falſe Chriſts, by pretending to deliver Iſrael; and as falſe Prophets, by declaring to them ſalvation as from God; for the appearance of theſe very perſons to deceive, is given as the reaſon why they ſhould not follow or believe them who ſaid, Lo, Chriſt is here, or, lo, he is there, Matth. 24. 23, 24. Mark 13. 21, 22.

3*dly*, Hence it appears, that the παρουσία, coming of the Son of man like lightning, muſt be at the ſame time; not only becauſe it is given in St. Matthew as a reaſon why Chriſt was not then to be looked for in deſarts, or in ſecret chambers; and, Luke 17. 24. as a reaſon why they ſhould not follow them, who would then ſay, See, he is here, or ſee, he is there; but alſo, becauſe St. Matthew aſſigns this as the reaſon of that conſpicuous appearance, that where ever the body (of the Jews, the carcaſe) is, there would the eagle (i. e. the Roman army) be gathered together, to prey upon, and to deſtroy them.

4*thly*, Hence it appears, that when it is ſaid, Matth. 24. 37, 38, 39. As it was in the days of Noah, ſo alſo ſhall the coming of the Son of man be: This alſo muſt refer to the ſame time, though theſe words may alſo refer to the day of judgment, and be then accompliſhed; for the ſame words, Luke 17. 26, 27. are mentioned by Chriſt, and then it follows, In that day (viz. of his coming) he that is on the houſe-top, and his ſtuff in the houſe, let him not come down to take it away: which, as we have proved, reſpects the time preceeding the deſtruction of Jeruſalem.

5*thly*, Hence it appears, that the words following in St. Matthew, ver. 40, 41. Then ſhall two be in the field, two grinding in the mill, the one ſhall be taken, and the other left, refer to the ſame time alſo, as well as to the day of judgment; for when Chriſt had ſaid theſe words to his diſciples, Luke 17. 35, 36. they enquire, Where, Lord, ſhall this be? And he anſwers, ver. 37. That where ever the body is, thither ſhall the eagles be gathered together; which, as is proved already, refers to the ſame time.

Hence then it is manifeſt, there can be no ſuch interval in this prophecy as ſome imagine, viz. an interval of above 1700 years betwixt what is ſpoken of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, to ver. 23. and what is ſpoken of the Millennium from thence to ver. 30.

Arg. 2. Moreover, that what is aſſigned as a ſecond epocha to follow the firſt, according to Grotius, three or four hundred years after, and, according to others, almoſt 1700 years after, was indeed to happen in or about the firſt period, is evident from moſt of the paſſages recorded from ver. 23. to the 34th. Of the 23d, 26th, 27th, 28th, verſes, this hath been proved already.

That thoſe words, ver. 24. For there ſhall ariſe falſe Chriſts and falſe Prophets, belong to the ſame period, as it hath been proved already from the connective particle for; which ſhews this verſe is introduced as a reaſon of what was ſaid in the foregoing verſe; ſo alſo is it proved from the words following, ver. 25. Behold, I have told you before, viz. ver. 5. by ſaying, Many ſhall come in my name, (i. e. as falſe pretenders to be the Chriſt, and that Prophet which ſhould come into the world,) and ſhall deceive many; which words undoubtedly belong to the firſt interval. So when St. Mark had introduced Chriſt ſpeaking the ſame words, ver. 22. he adds, ver. 23. See to it, behold I have foretold you all things, viz. all that related to theſe perſons, ver. 6. and therefore St. Luke having given us Chriſt's words thus, Chap. 21. 8. Many ſhall come in my name, ſaying, I am Chriſt, and the time draweth near; he adds thoſe words, Go not after them; which are the ſame in ſenſe with thoſe that go before, and follow in St. Matthew, Believe them not; and upon that account he doth not at all repeat thoſe words, as do St. Matthew and St. Mark.

2*dly*, St. Mark ſaith, ver. 24. In thoſe days, after this tribulation, (mentioned ver. 19.) the ſun ſhall be darkned; it ſhall be thus immediately after this tribulation, ſaith St. Matthew, ver. 29. Now, can that, which was not to happen till 1700 years after this tribulation, be ſaid to happen, either immediately after that tribulation, or in thoſe days?

3*dly*, They both go on, and ſay, And then ſhall appear the ſign of the Son of man coming in the clouds, viz. in thoſe days, and immediately after that tribulation, Matth. 24. 30. then ſhall they ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds with power and great glory, ſurely not 1700 years after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; for, why then did our Saviour ſay to them that crucified him, ἀπ' ἄρτι, Within a little while ſhall ye ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds? Matth. 26. 64.

4*thly*, The 31ſt verſe following thus in St. Matthew, And he ſhall ſend; and in St. Mark thus, καὶ τότε, And then he ſhall ſend his angels, and ſhall gather his elect, ſhew evidently, That the gathering of the elect there mentioned, muſt happen then.

5*thly*, The 33d verſe follows thus, When all theſe things ſhall come to paſs, then know ye ὅτι ἐγγύς ἐστι, that it is near: Now theſe words, if they be rightly rendred by our tranſlation, it is near, near, do neceſſarily refer to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, mentioned, Luke 21. If they refer to the coming of the Son of man, as is more probable, from the words of St. Paul, Phil. 4. 5. ὁ κύριος ἐγγύς, The Lord is at hand; and of St. James, Chap. 5. 7, 8, 9. The coming of the Lord ἤγγικε, is at hand, and the judge ſtandeth at the door; they alſo muſt refer to the coming of the Son of man to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, as they do in St. James, Chap. 5. 7. ſee the Note there; and as we have proved the coming of the Son of man doth in the foregoing places of this Chapter, and in St. Luke 17. And this is ſtill more evident from the variation of the phraſe in St. Luke, Lift up your heads, for the kingdom of God draweth nigh; for as this being given as an encouragement to Chriſt's diſciples, then to perſevere under theſe tribulations, and to poſſeſs their ſouls in patience, muſt reſpect thoſe of that generation, and not thoſe Chriſtians which were to live above 1700 years after; ſo the kingdom of God, mentioned by St. Luke, enforceth the ſame ſenſe, ſince Chriſt, in all theſe three Evangeliſts, had told them, There were ſome then alive that ſhould not taſte of death, till they ſaw the Son of man coming in his kingdom, Matth. 16. 28. or, till they ſaw the kingdom of God coming in power, Mark 9. 1. Luke 9. 27.

Laſtly, Our Saviour adds, ver. 34. This generation ſhall not paſs away till all theſe things be fulfilled; which ſhews, that this relates to that which was to be done in that age: For this generation, ſaith Grotius, is, ejus ætatis homines, the men of his age, as hath been fully proved there; and this, ſaith he, Chriſt ſpake, templum oſtendens, ſhewing them the temple; and ſurely then, he ſpake this of the deſtruction of the temple.

Object. 1. But againſt this opinion it is objected, 1ſt, That theſe words of St. Matthew, Then ſhall all the tribes of the earth (or land) mourn, and then ſhall they ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, cannot relate to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, becauſe St. John, who writ his prophecy long after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, ſaith thus, Rev. 1. 7. Behold he comes with clouds, and every eye ſhall ſee him, and they who pierced him, and all the tribes of the earth ſhall weep becauſe of him.

Anſw. But to this objection Grotius himſelf gives a ſufficient anſwer, by ſaying, Novum non eſt eadem verba, præſertim ex prophetis petita, diverſis rebus aptari, It is no unuſual thing to adapt the ſame words taken from the Prophets, as theſe are from Zach. 12. 12. to divers events, eſpecially when they reſpect the ſame ſubject, and relate to the ſame people. Now, after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, in the 18th of Trajan, the Jews became ſeditious again in Lybia, Cyrene, Egypt, Alexandria, Meſopotamia, and that war extinguiſhed, πολλὰς μυριάδας Ἰουδαίων, many myriads of Jews, Euſeb. H. Eccl. l. 4. c. 12. And after that, from the 16th to the 18th of Hadrian, they rebel again; and then an innumerable multitude of men, women, and children, periſhed with Barchochebas their leader; and they are utterly ſuppreſſed, and from thenceforth not permitted to ſee Jeruſalem, Chap. 6. and had not St. John, ſeeing theſe things by the ſpirit of prophecy, ſufficient occaſion, upon theſe accounts, to adapt theſe words of Zachary to the like calamities befalling the ſame perſons?

Object. 2. St. Matthew and St. Mark ſay, Of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, nor the Son, but the Father only, Matth. 24. 36. Mark 13. 32. which ſeems not to be true of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, foretold ſo punctually by Daniel, but only of the day of judgment, of which the ancients did generally interpret theſe words.

Anſw. About the time to which theſe words refer, I ſhall not much contend; for the preceding words being theſe, heaven and earth ſhall paſs away; theſe words may bear this ſenſe, But of the time when heaven and earth ſhall paſs away, knoweth no man; and therefore in the paraphraſe, I have ſo interpreted the following words, as to relate to both theſe times; the deſtruction of the Jewiſh nation, being an argument, and a ſymbol of the general judgment.

AN

AN APPENDIX

To Chapter the twenty-ſixth:

In an anſwer to an objection of Crellius againſt Chriſt's ſatisfaction.

THE great objection which Crellius makes againſt Chriſt's ſatisfaction is to this effect, That the death Chriſt ſuffered for our ſins was only temporal; the puniſhment we deſerved, and therefore ſhould have ſuffered in our perſons for them, was eternal death: Chriſt therefore did not ſuffer the puniſhment of our iniquities, becauſe he did not ſuffer an eternal puniſhment. To this I anſwer, Anſw. 1*ſt*, By confeſſion, that our Lord did not ſuffer the torments which the damned ſhall hereafter ſuffer; for that, in the midſt of all his agonies, he lay not under any deſperation, or under any ſenſe of the anger or indignation of God againſt him, is evident from what hath been diſcourſed on ver. 38. of this Chapter.

2*dly*, It alſo is confeſſed, That he could not ſuffer death eternal, or eternal puniſhments; for his ſufferings and death laſted not three days: To ſay, he ſuffered theſe puniſhments intenſively, is (1.) To ſpeak improperly, ſeeing eternity applied to puniſhments, plainly reſpecteth the duration, not the intenſion of them. (2.) It is certain, our Lord ſuffered only in his human nature; now that was not capable of ſuch intenſive puniſhments as could be equal to the eternal puniſhment of the whole world, for which he died; nor can the dignity of the perſon be conſidered here; for tho' that makes the ſufferings more valuable, it doth not make them either more durable, or more intenſe, ſeeing a peaſant ſuffers as much, and as long, by hanging on a croſs, as doth a Prince. And (3.) Wherein did he ſuffer ſuch intenſive puniſhments as could be any way equivalent to the eternal torments of the damned? Not in his ſoul; for, could that ſoul which knew no ſin, ly under a remorſe of conſcience for any thing that he had done; Could the worm that never dies, lodge in his ſacred breaſt? Could he, who, for the joy that was ſet before him, endured the croſs, lie under any ſenſe of God's unchangeable diſpleaſure? Under an abſolute deſpair of any better ſtate? Could he, who knew his ſoul ſhould not be left in Hades, nor ſhould his body ſee corruption, lie under any apprehenſion of an unavoidable pain, or of no releaſe from what he was to ſuffer? Now in theſe things conſiſt the miſeries and torments of the damned ſpirits; and, ſince it was impoſſible the Holy Jeſus ſhould thus ſuffer in his innocent and ſpotleſs ſoul, it was impoſſible that he ſhould ſuffer in his ſoul thoſe puniſhments which are equivalent to the puniſhments of damned ſpirits; nor could he ſuffer theſe eternal puniſhments in his body, for that could only die, by what he ſuffered on the croſs.

Again, as it was impoſſible, that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer death eternal, ſo was it unneceſſary that he ſhould do it; it was unneceſſary that he ſhould do it for the ſake of the impenitent, and unbelievers; for they, in their own perſons, are by the order and decree of God, to ſuffer an eternal death; and why ſhould our Lord ſuffer that for them, which, notwithſtanding all that he had ſuffered, they muſt in their own perſons actually ſuffer? No ſacrifice for ſin, not even that of our bleſſed Lord, can avail any thing for the impenitent and the ungodly; becauſe it cannot, merely as being offered, render them pure from habitual ſin, it cannot create in them the clean heart, it cannot give them a divine nature, or a likeneſs to God, and ſo it cannot fit them for a ſtate of happineſs, or exempt them from being everlaſtingly excluded from the face of God, and ſo for ever miſerable. Why therefore ſhould our Saviour ſuffer ſuch direful puniſhments for them, who, who could receive no benefit from what he ſuffered? As for true penitent believers, Chriſt came to ſave them from the wrath to come, by ſuffering, to obtain grace and mercy for them in the pardon of their ſins, and to eſtabliſh that new covenant in his blood, in which God promiſeth to be merciful to their iniquities, and to remember their ſins no more, and to juſtify them freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jeſus: Now, had Chriſt ſuffered for them death eternal, or all that juſtice could demand by way of puniſhment, for them in whoſe ſtead he ſuffered, what need had he to ſuffer to procure this rich grace and mercy, in the pardon of thoſe ſins for which he had already paid the utmoſt farthing? Or, how then did he eſtabliſh a new and better covenant of his blood, ſeeing no covenant did, or could require more than the full puniſhment which our ſin deſerved? Or, how was this a covenant, to be merciful to our iniquities? Where, laſtly, is the grace and freeneſs of that juſtification, which, after a full payment, imputeth only to me nothing of that debt which is entirely diſcharged?

Anſw. 2. I ſhall not inſiſt upon it, though it be very true, that the words death eternal are never mentioned in the Old or the New Teſtament, but only ſhall obſerve from Covarruvias, and others, that, to a ſurrogation in the caſe of puniſhment, it is not requiſite the ſubſtitute ſhould ſuffer what is accidental, but only that which is eſſential to the puniſhment. Now to apply this to our purpoſe, let it be noted, 1ſt, That death is accidentally to us eternal, becauſe we have no power, being dead, to raiſe our bodies unto life; nor have we any promiſe, that our dying bodies ſhall not ſee corruption; or becauſe ſin had given Satan a power to detain us in that ſtate till Chriſt had made a ſatisfaction for it, death neither was, nor could be ſo to Chriſt, who knew no ſin, becauſe he had this power to reaſſume his life, and had a promiſe that his body ſhould not ſee corruption; but ſtill his death was both as truly, and as much death, as that which ſinners ſuffer in the body, becauſe it was as much the diſſolution of the ſoul and body, and the ceſſation of the functions of human life in Chriſt, as it is in them; that therefore our Lord Jeſus ſhould redeem us from eternal death, it was not neceſſary that he ſhould ſuffer the ſame death, but only that he ſhould atone for that ſin, which made us ſubject to death, and procure for us a bleſſed reſurrection by his death, which he hath done: For as by man came death, by man alſo came the reſurrection of the dead; and as in Adam all men die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive, 1 Cor. 15. 21, 22.

2dly, Moſt of the evils which the ſoul ſuffers after death, are alſo accidental, and may more properly be ſtiled the neceſſary conſequents than the formal and poſitive puniſhments of ſin. For inſtance, that ſouls departed, are deprived of the love of God, are objects of his wrath, and are excluded from his preſence, is not merely becauſe they are ſouls ſeparated from the body; for pious ſouls, when ſeparated from the body, are entirely exempted from theſe evils; but this ariſeth from the natural purity and holineſs of God, and the defilement and impurity which their unhappy ſouls lie under; it is becauſe God is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity, neither ſhall evil dwell with him; there being no communion betwixt light and darkneſs; and becauſe nothing which is defiled or unclean can enter into the new Jeruſalem, or be capable of enjoying happineſs from God. The worm of conſcience, the deſpairing and direful expectations which follow this ſenſe of loſs, and this excluſion from God's preſence, are alſo natural reſults of the ſoul's ſeparation in an impenitent ſtate, and an unſanctified condition, and of its being conſcious of its own doom, and of thoſe wilful follies which did ſubject it to that doom, Chriſt being then the Lamb of God, not having ſpot or blemiſh; he being ſuch an High-prieſt, who was holy, harmleſs, ſeparate from ſinners, he could not be expoſed to the evils conſequent to the ſeparation of unholy ſouls. And that his members might alſo be exempted from them, he was not only to ſuffer for them; ſince, as I have obſerved, the ſufferings of another for us, can never of themſelves render us holy, renew our natures, and make us like to God; but he was alſo to make them holy by his word and ſpirit, by the waſhing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt; whence we are ſaid to be juſtified by the name of the Lord Jeſus, but to be ſanctified by the Holy Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 6. 11. And upon this ſanctification depends our intereſt in the blood of Chriſt; for, if we walk in the light as God is in the light, we have communion with him, and the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſin, 1 John 1. 7. And though Chriſt doubtleſs ſuffered to redeem us from all iniquity, and purify to himſelf a peculiar people zealous of good works; yet is it ſaid, that he gave himſelf to the death for us, that he might cleanſe us by the waſhing of water and the word, Epheſ. 5. 26. His death is indeed a moſt powerful motive to holineſs of life, but yet it is the immediate fruit of his Holy Spirit, and his Word. It was alſo neceſſary for this end, that he ſhould purchaſe for us an entrance into the holy of holies, that he ſhould should there appear before God with it; for by this, saith the Apostle, we obtain a liberty of entrance into the holy place, Heb. 10. 19.

3*dly*, The resurrection of the bodies, and union of the souls of wicked men to them, is the natural result of that impartial justice, which will render to every man according to what he hath done in the flesh: That being raised, and sentenced to condemnation, and punished with everlasting separation from the presence of the Lord, they are tormented in the flames, which will then seize upon that world, which is reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men, 2 Pet. 3. 7. happeneth, because they are not able to convey themselves out of those flames, and are not worthy to be snatched up to heaven, and live for ever with the Lord; that then Christ might exempt the members of his body from these punishments, it was not necessary that he should descend to hell, or be cast into those flames, but only that he should free them from condemnation at that day, as he most certainly hath done, there being no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, and that they should be caught up by him into the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so to be for ever with him, as the Apostle saith they will, 1 Thess. 4. 17.

Answ. 3. I add, That though Christ did not undergo eternal punishments, yet did he suffer such evils as contained some analogy, and bore some resemblance to those which sinners do, or are to suffer, and which he would not otherwise have suffered, had he not been punished for our sins. For,

1*st*, As the sinner lieth under the sentence of condemnation, and is sure to find a publick exemplary judgment; so was our Saviour solemnly condemned, and sentenced as a malefactor, not without semblance of justice, and of law to warrant their proceedings; for we, say the Jewish doctors, would not deliver up this Jesus, were he not a notorious malefactor. They lay upon him the imputations of an impostor, a seditious person, a perverter of the nation, a rebel unto Cæsar, and a blasphemer against God, pretending to desire his execution out of pure zeal unto their law; for by our law, say they, he ought to die, because he maketh himself the Son of God; thus was he numbered with the transgressors.

2*dly*, As sinners will be exposed to shame and ignominy at the great day of judgment, before men and angels, so did Christ suffer a very ignominious and shameful death; the punishment he endured, was servile supplicium, that punishment which only slaves did suffer by the (a) Roman law, it was attended with all the mockeries and flouts, affronts and obloquies, his enemies could cast upon him; as for the rulers, ἐξεμυκτήριζον, they reviled, and snuffed up their noses at him, and they that went by, ἐβλασφήμουν, wagged their heads, and with their tongues, vented their blasphemies against him, Luke 23. 35, 36. He himself declares to his disciples, that he ought to suffer these indignities, that he ought ἀποδοκιμασθῆναι, to be reprobated by the Chief-priests, and elders of the Jews, Luke 9. 22. ἐξουθενηθῆναι, to be vilified, and set at nought by them, Mark 9. 12. This condemnation, and this shame, was therefore part of what he was designed to suffer for us. And,

3*dly*, Whereas sinners are obnoxious to sufferings in their bodies, he suffered in his body a death so painful, that the most exquisite afflicting torments are stiled cruciatus, from the cross. And surely, he must suffer sharp and pungent grief, when his hands were pierced and nailed to the cross, sustaining thus the weight of his whole body; and by that burden, suffering a continual rack and torture, when all his bones were out of joint, by being stretched upon the cross; when he being stretched out thus, was nailed to it, and left to die no other death, but what the sharpness of his pains, and the excess of torments would produce.

4*thly*, He suffered in his soul most dreadful agonies; for he himself declares, That he was troubled in spirit, John 12. 27.——13. 21. at what he was to suffer; and that his soul was full of deadly sorrow, Matth. 26. 38. See the note there. This we may learn from those strong, earnest, and repeated cries he uttered, to be delivered from this bitter cup, for being heard in what he feared, Heb. 5. 7. and yet not freed from suffering death, we may imagine, that his fears were greater than the impressions of mere death could make upon him.

Lastly, Are sinners then to suffer from the hand of God? So do the scriptures teach us, that our Saviour suffered from his hand, that he delivered him up for us all, Rom. 8. 32. and that he made him sin for us, who knew no sin, 2 Cor. 5. 21. that is, he in his providence ordered, that he should be dealt with as a criminal, or sinful person, for our sakes, who in himself was wholly innocent: It was by men who acted in his name, and claimed his authority, that he was sentenced to death; it was by them who sat in Moses's chair, that he was judged worthy of death, and by his vicegerents, that he was delivered up to be crucified; and therefore he tells Pilate, He could have no power over him, had it not been given him from above, John 19. 11. It pleased the Lord to bruise him, saith the Prophet, and to put him to grief, and to make our sins to meet upon him; and what men did against him, was only that which God's hand and counsel determined before to be done, Acts 4. 28. so that, although I dare not say, that he was smitten by the immediate hand of God, yet do these scriptures seem to teach, that what he suffered from the hand of man, befel him by the over-ruling providence of him, who orders all things according to the counsel of his will. Now, from this fair resemblance betwixt what our Lord actually suffered, and what sinners had deserved to suffer, there seems sufficient ground to say, he bore the punishment of our iniquities, and suffered in our stead, although he did not undergo what accidentally the sinner was to suffer, and what it was impossible for him to suffer, being innocent and perfectly holy: Had not our Lord been holy in perfection, and separate from sinners, he must have suffered for his own sins; and so he could have been no Saviour to us, by his sufferings; and being thus holy, he could not be obnoxious to the punishments I say he did not suffer: Now, is it not unreasonable to say, Christ could not suffer in our stead, or for our sins, unless he suffered that eternal death we had deserved? since, this is plainly to affirm, he could not suffer in our stead, had he not been a sinner as we were, i. e. had he not been incapable of suffering for us, and liable to suffer for his own offences.

THE

THE PREFACE TO THE Gospel of St. Mark.

IN confirmation of the authority of these two ensuing Gospels, let it be considered, 1st, That two things have been already proved in the general preface to the Gospels, viz. (1.) That all the four Gospels were received from the beginning, by the whole Church of Christ, as genuine, and never questioned by any besides hereticks. (2.) That they were owned as their rule of faith, and writings of divine inspiration; and that therefore (a) copies of these Gospels were carried by the disciples of the Apostles, or apostolick men, into all countries, whither they went to build up the Churches planted by their hands.

2dly, (b) Eusebius farther adds, that it was related, That the three other Gospels being come to the knowledge of all men, and so to St. John's knowledge, he approved of them, and gave in his testimony to the truth of them.

3dly, Concerning this Gospel of St. Mark in particular, (c) Eusebius informs us from Clemens of Alexandria, and Papias, That when it was indited by him, St. Peter being informed of the writing it by the revelation of the Holy Ghost, confirmed it as a writing to be read in the Churches; which sure he would not have done, had he not found it an exactly true and authentick record of the things related in it. And as for the Gospel of St. Luke, (d) Origen declares, That it was τὸ ὑπὸ Παύλου ἐπαινούμενον εὐαγγέλιον, the Gospel praised by St. Paul, plainly referring to those words of the Apostle, 2 Cor. 8. 18. The brother, οὗ ὁ ἔπαινος ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ διὰ πασῶν τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν, whose praise is in the gospel throughout all the Churches.

Now, if these things be true, we must allow the truth of what (e) Tertullian saith, That these apostolical men writ these Gospels, sed non soli, sed cum apostolis, but this they did not alone, but with the Apostles; and that the Gospel of St. Mark, Petri adfirmetur, might be stiled the Gospel of St. Peter; and that of St. Luke, quod Paulo adscribere solent, which the ancients ascribed to St. Paul, might truly bear those titles; not as being dictated by, or being any extract, or compendium of the doctrine which they preached to the Churches, but as being approved by them; and then the authority of St. Mark's Gospel depends on the authority of St. Peter, and the authenticknes of St. Luke's on the authority of St. Paul, and both upon the approbation of the Apostle John. As then this axiom obtained among the Jews as an unquestionable rule, that he is to be admitted as a Prophet, whose prophecy is confirmed by the testimony of an undoubted Prophet; so, by parity of reason, he must be admitted as a true Evangelist, whose Gospel is approved by an Apostle, of whose authority to indite a Gospel, there is no doubt; which is, according to these testimonies, the case as to the Gospels of St. Mark and Luke. But, I confess, I cannot fully acquiesce in this last ground, of the canonical authority of these two Evangelists,

(c) Κυρίῳ τῷ γραφὴν ἐς ἐπίδειξιν τῆς ἐκλησίας. Hist. Eccl. l. 2. c. 15.

Evangeliſts, for reaſons which will do no body any good, and therefore ſhall do no body any hurt; and upon this account, I ſhall endeavour, in the preface to St. Luke's Goſpel, to found the authority of theſe two Evangeliſts, on principles which to me ſeem more certain.

As for the time and place, when and where this Goſpel was indited, we are wholly in the dark; for all that Theophylact ſaith of this Goſpel, that it was written ἐν Ῥώμῃ μετὰ δίκαιον τὴν τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἀνάληψιν, in Rome, ten years after our Lord's aſcenſion, is certainly a miſtake, and inconſiſtent with all the accounts the Church hiſtorians give us, That it was written at the deſire of the Roman converts, as an extract of what St. Peter had preached there; it being certain, that St. Peter never came to Rome till ſome years after. See the preface to the epiſtle to the Romans, and note on Chap. 1. 15. If he died in the 8th of Nero, as St. Jerom, Dorotheus, and Theophylact affirm, (f) Irenæus muſt miſtake, in ſaying, that he writ his Goſpel after the death of Peter, who ſuffered only in the 13th or 14th year of that Emperor, or μετὰ τὴν ἔξοδον, after the departure of St. Peter and St. Paul from Rome, ſeeing St. Paul went not thence till the 9th of Nero; I therefore leave this matter uncertain, as I find it, inclining to the opinion of (g) Valeſius, That we have nothing certain touching the Goſpels from the ancients, but that they were four, and were written by thoſe authors whoſe names they bear, quo autem tempore, & quam ob cauſam ſcripta ſunt, parum conſtat, but at what time, and upon what occaſion they were written, it doth not appear.

A PARA-

THE GOSPEL of ST MARK.

CHAP. I.

1. THE [a] beginning of the goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God, (was from the preaching of John the baptiſt, Luke 16. 16.)

2. As it is written in the [b] prophets, (Malachi, ſaying, chap. 3. 1.) Behold I ſend my meſſenger before thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee; (and Iſaiah, ſaying, chap. 40. 2, 3. that when the Meſſiah was about to come to ſave his people from their ſins, there ſhould be)

3. The voice of one crying in the wilderneſs, [c] Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths ſtraight. (And accordingly)

4. John (who was the very perſon ſpoken of by thoſe prophets, being ſent of God for that end,) did baptize in the wilderneſs, and preach the [d] baptiſm of repentance, for the remiſſion of ſins; (and ſo endeavoured to prepare men for the coming of that Meſſiah, who was to ſave his people from their ſins.)

5. And (ſo diſpoſed were the people to receive his baptiſm, that) there went out to him all the land of Judea, and they of Jeruſalem, (and all the region round about Jordan, Matth. 3. 5.) and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confeſſing their ſins.

6. And (this) John (being a preacher of repentance, and coming in the power and ſpirit of Elias, Luke 1. 17. reſembled him in habit, 2 Kings 1. 8. for he) was clothed with (a garment of) camel's hair, and with a girdle of a (leathern) ſkin about his loins, and he did eat locuſts and wild honey:

7. And (he) preached, ſaying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whoſe ſhoes I am not worthy to ſtoop down and unlooſe, (i. e. whoſe ſervant I am not worthy to be.)

8. I indeed have baptized you with water, but he ſhall baptize you with the [e] Holy Ghoſt (ſent down from heaven, the promiſe of him being made to you and to your children, Acts 2. 39.)

9. And it came to paſs in thoſe days (of John's baptiſm at the river Jordan), that Jeſus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10. And ſtraightway coming up out of the water, he ſaw the heavens opened, and the (Holy) Spirit deſcending upon him like a dove, (i. e. in that hovering manner which a dove uſeth when ſhe deſcends or reſts upon any thing.)

11. And (then) there came a voice from heaven, ſaying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed.

12. And immediately the Spirit [f] driveth (leadeth, Luke 4. 1.) him into the wilderneſs.

13. And he was there in the wilderneſs [g] forty days, (which being ended, he was viſibly) tempted of Satan, and was with the wild beaſts; and (when Satan had ended his temptation, Matth. 4. 3, 11.) the angels miniſtred to him.

14. Now after that John was put in priſon (by Herod,) Jeſus came into Galilee, preaching the goſpel of the kingdom of God,

15. And ſaying, The time (foretold for the coming of the Meſſiah) is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye (therefore,) and believe the goſpel.

16. Now as he walked by the ſea of Galilee, he ſaw Simon, and Andrew his brother (gone out of their ſhip, and) caſting a net into the ſea, (to waſh it, Luke 5. 2.) for they were fiſhers.

17. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fiſhers of men; (i. e. I will enable you to draw them into the net of the goſpel.)

18. And ſtraightway (upon his call) they forſook their nets, and followed him.

19. And when he had gone a little farther thence, he ſaw James the ſon of Zebedee, and John his brother, who alſo were (now) in the ſhip mending their nets (which they had waſhed, ſee Luke 5. 2.)

20. And ſtraightway he called them, and they (upon his call) left their father Zebedee in the ſhip with the hired ſervants, and went after him.

21. And they went into Capernaum, and ſtraightway on the ſabbath-day he entered into the ſynagogue, and taught (them.)

22. And they were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine; for he taught them as one that had authority (from God, to do ſo,) and not as the ſcribes, (who only told them what were the traditions of their fathers)

23. And there was in their ſynagogue a man (poſſeſſed) with an unclean ſpirit, and he (the evil ſpirit) cried out,

24. Saying, Let us alone, what have we to do with thee, thou Jeſus of Nazareth? art thou come to deſtroy us (before the time appointed for our puniſhment?) I know thee, who thou art, (to wit) the holy One of God.

25. And Jeſus (being not willing to receive teſtimony from Satan, v. 34.) rebuked him, ſaying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

26. And when the unclean ſpirit had torn (Gr. And the unclean ſpirit ſhaking or moving) him, (ſee note on chap. 9. 18. ſo that he fell down, Luke 4. 35.) and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

27. And they were all amazed, inſomuch that they queſtioned among themſelves, ſaying, What (ſtrange) thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean ſpirits, and they obey him; (which is an indication that his doctrine is attended with a more than ordinary power.)

28. And immediately his fame ſpread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

29. And forthwith when they were come out of the ſynagogue, they entered into the houſe of Simon, and Andrew, with James and John.

30. But (Gr. And) Simons wifes mother lay ſick of a fever, and anon (i. e. preſently) they tell him of her (condition.)

31. And (or, Then) he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up, and immediately the fever left her, and ſhe (being recovered) miniſtred to them.

32. And at even when the ſun did ſet, (and ſo the ſabbath was ended) they brought unto him all that were diſeaſed, and them that were poſſeſſed with devils.

33. And all the city was gathered together at the door (of Simon's houſe.)

34. And he healed many that were ſick of divers diſeaſes, and [h] caſt out many devils, and ſuffered not the devils to ſpeak, becauſe they knew him.

35. And in the morning, riſing up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a ſolitary place, and there prayed.

36. And Simon, and they that were with (i. e. belonged to) him, [i] followed after him.

37. And when they had found him, they ſaid to him, All men ſeek for thee.

38. And he ſaid unto them, Let us go into the next [k] towns, that I may preach there alſo, [l] for therefore came I forth (from this houſe, being ſent by my Father to preach to them alſo, Luke 4. 43.)

39. And he preached in their ſynagogues throughout all Galilee, and caſt out devils.

40. And there came a leper to him, beſeeching him, and kneeling down to him, and ſaying to him, If thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean.

41. And Jeſus, moved with compaſſion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and ſaith unto him, I will, be thou clean.

42. And as ſoon as he had ſpoken (this,) immediately the leproſy departed from him, and he was cleanſed.

43. And he ſtraitly charged him, (Gr. and being earneſt with him to repair inſtantly to the prieſt, he) forthwith ſent him away.

44. And ſaid unto him, See thou ſay nothing to any man; but go thy way, ſhew thyſelf to the prieſt, and offer for thy cleanſing thoſe things which Moſes commanded, for a teſtimony to them (that thou art cleanſed.)

45. But he went out, and began to publiſh it much, and to blaze abroad the matter; inſomuch that Jeſus could no more openly enter into the city, but was (forced to be) without in deſert places; and they came to him from every quarter.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. I.

Ver. 1. [a] Ἀρχὴ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ υἱοῦ Θεοῦ, The beginning of the goſpel, &c.] So ſaith St Mark; beginning his hiſtory from John the Baptiſt, by the fathers ſtiled the beginning of the goſpel, becauſe he began his office by preaching repentance as the preparation to receive it, and faith in the Meſſiah the ſubject of it. So Chriſt himſelf plainly teſtifies, by ſaying, The law and the prophets were until John, from thence the kingdom of God, εὐαγγελίζεται, is preached, Luke 16. 16. This goſpel he ſtiles the goſpel of the Son of God, who was, or is in the boſom of the Father, John 1. 18. and came down from heaven, John 3. 13. to reveal his Father's will unto us; that ſo we might have worthy thoughts both of the goſpel, as being the revelation of it, and of the author, as being ſo intimate with, and ſo nearly related to the Father.

Ver. 2. [b] Ὡς γέγραπται ἐν τοῖς προφήταις, As it is written in the prophets.] Other copies read, ἐν Ἡσαΐᾳ τῷ προφήτῃ, in Iſaiah the prophet. So do Iren. l. 3.

l. 3. c. 11. p. 259. Orig. in Celsum, p. 60. and on John, p. 14. But then it is to be noted, that the former reading is in Irenæus twice before in the same chapter thus; Marcus initium evangelicæ conscriptionis fecit sic, Initium evangelii Jesu Christi Filii Dei, quemadmodum dictum est in prophetis, p. 256. and after, Marcus ait, Initium quemadmodum scriptum est in prophetis, &c. 18. So reads the Arabic, so the Alexandrian copy, so most MSS. so Theophylact. And this reading is to be preferred, 1st, Because it is not so proper to say, As it is written in Isaiah the prophet, when the citation immediately following is not in Isaiah, but in Malachi; nor is there one instance of any thing so cited in the New Testament. 2dly, It is the common phrase among the Jews, when they cite many passages of the prophets, to say, As it is written in the prophets: but it is without all example, when two testimonies are taken from two prophets, to cite only the last. And hence St Jerom saith, Nomen Esaiæ putamus additum scriptorum vitio, Com. in Matth. 3.

Object. But Grotius objects, That if this had been the true reading, there can be imagined no reason for the alteration of it; whereas, if the other were so, the reason of the change is manifest, viz. because St Mark cites testimonies out of the prophets.

Answ. The reason of the change seems very manifest, it being done in compliance with Matth. 3. 3. Luke 3. 4. John 1. 23. for all these Evangelists citing expressly what is written in Isaiah the prophet, they would have had St Mark do so also.

Ver. 3, [c] Prepare ye the way of the Lord.] See note on Matth. 3. 3.

Ver. 4. [d] Βάπτισμα μετανοίας, The baptism of repentance.] This baptism, saith Dr Lightfoot, may belong to children, though it be the baptism of repentance, and they know not what repentance means; for it requireth not their repentance at the receiving of this sacrament, but it engageth them to it for the time to come, viz. when they shall come to the use of reason and the knowledge of the engagement. And so was it with the children that were circumcised, for they by that sacrament became debtors to observe the whole law, Gal. 5. 3. when they knew not what obedience or the law meant; but that bound them to it when they came to years of knowledge and discretion.

Ver. 8. [e] Βαπτίσει ὑμᾶς ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, He shall baptize thee with the Holy Ghost,] καὶ πυρὶ, and with fire, Matth. 3. 11. Luke 3. 16. i. e. whose symbol is fire or flame. So he descended on the apostles, Acts 2. 3. So Justin Martyr saith, that when Christ was baptized, πῦρ ἀνήφθη ἐν τῷ Ἰορδάνῃ, a fire was kindled in Jordan; and the gospel of the Nazarenes, and the liturgy of the Syrians, that περιέλαμψε τὸν τόπον φῶς μέγα, a great light shone round the place.

Ver. 12. [f] Τὸ πνεῦμα αὐτὸν ἐκβάλλει, The Spirit driveth him out;] ὤθησε, he was moved by the Spirit inwardly to go into the wilderness; so Luke 4. 1. ἀνήχθη, he was led up from the plains of Jordan by the Spirit into the mountains of the wilderness; so Matth. 4. 1. the Spirit ἐκβάλλει, sends him away into the wilderness: so the word signifies, ver. 43. Jesus ἐξέβαλλεν αὐτὸν, sent him away. See Matth. 9. 38.—12. 35.—13. 52.

Ver. 13. [g] Ἡμέρας τεσσαράκοντα πειραζόμενος, being forty days tempted of Satan——and the angels ministred to him.] These forty days, saith Dr Lightfoot, the holy angels ministred to Christ visibly, and Satan tempted him invisibly: at the end of them Satan puts on the appearance of an angel of light, and pretends to wait on him, as they did. See Additions, No. 14.

Ver. 34. [h] He healed many that were sick, and cast out many devils.] Hence it is evident that the devils cast out were not diseases; as also appears from chap. 3. 11, 15.—5. 12.—6. 13. See Note on Mat. 8. 28.

Ver. 36. [i] Καὶ κατεδίωξαν αὐτὸν, And Simon and they that were with him followed him.] Here the critics note that τὸ διώκειν, when it respects persons, is usually to pursue in an hostile manner, (except here and Luke 17. 23.) but when it respects things, it is to prosecute with a desire to obtain them: as when we are bid to follow after charity and hospitality, Rom. 12. 13.---14. 19. 1 Cor. 14. 1. Philip. 3. 12, 14. 1 Thess. 5. 15. 1 Tim. 6. 11. Heb. 12. 14. 1 Pet. 3. 11.

Ver. 38. [k] Εἰς ἐχομένας κωμοπόλεις, to the adjoining towns.] Κωμοπόλεις, towns, saith Dr Lightfoot, are villages which had a synagogue in them, κώμαι villages which had none, πόλεις towns girt about with walls.

Ibid. [l] Εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ ἐξελήλυθα, For therefore came I forth. [Εἰς τοῦτο ἐπέσταλμαι, Luke 4. 43. for therefore was I sent. Whence it may be granted that going forth, and being sent to preach the gospel, are the same thing, but not when it is said of Christ, ἐξελήλυθα, I came forth from God, and return to God. See the Paraphrase.

CHAP. II.

1. AND again he entered into Capernaum [a] after ſome days, and it was noiſed (reported) that he was in the houſe (of Simon, chap. 1. 29.)

2. And ſtraightway many were gathered together (about it,) in ſo much that there was no room to receive them, no not ſo much as about the door; and he preached the word unto them.

3. And they came unto him, bringing one ſick of the palſy (in a bed) which was born of four (men.)

4. And when they could not come nigh to him for the preſs, they [b] uncovered the roof (of the upper chamber, ſee the note) where he was; and when they had broken it up, they let down (to him) the bed wherein the ſick of the palſy lay.

5. When Jeſus (by this inſtance) ſaw their faith, he ſaid to the (man) ſick of the palſy, Son, thy ſins (which brought this diſeaſe upon thee) be forgiven thee (as to the temporal puniſhment of them, ſee note on Matth. 9. 2.)

6. But (And) there were certain of the ſcribes ſitting there, and (upon occaſion of theſe words, thus) reaſoning in their hearts.

7. Why doth this man thus ſpeak blaſphemies, (aſcribing that to himſelf which is proper to God alone? for) who can forgive ſins but God only?

8. And immediately when Jeſus perceived in his ſpirit, that they ſo reaſoned within themſelves, he ſaid unto them, Why reaſon ye theſe things in your hearts?

9. (For) whether is it eaſier to ſay to the ſick of the palſy, Thy ſins (as to their temporal puniſhment) be forgiven thee, or to ſay, (effectually, that which is a certain indication of it) Ariſe, and take up thy bed, and walk.

10. But (I chuſe to ſay the firſt) that ye may know that the Son of man hath power, (even whilſt he is) on earth, (thus) to forgive ſins; (and then) he ſaith to the ſick of the palſy,

11. I ſay unto thee, Ariſe, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine houſe.

12. And immediately he aroſe, took up the bed (on which he lay,) and went forth before them all; inſomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, ſaying, We never ſaw it in this faſhion (before.)

13. And he went forth again by the ſea-ſide, and all the multitude reſorted to him, and he taught them.

14. And as he paſſed by (from thence, Mat. 9. 9.) he ſaw Levi the ſon of Alpheus ſitting at the receipt of cuſtom, and (he) ſaid to him, Follow me; and he aroſe and followed him.

15. And it came to paſs that as Jeſus ſat at meat in his houſe, many publicans and ſinners ſat alſo together with Jeſus and his diſciples, for there were many (of them,) and they followed him.

16. And when the ſcribes and Phariſees ſaw him eat with publicans and ſinners, they (judging them unworthy to be converſed with, and a defilement to thoſe who did ſo), ſaid to his diſciples, [c] How is it that he (your maſter, who profeſſeth himſelf a prophet and an holy man) eateth and drinketh with publicans and ſinners?

17. When Jeſus heard (the Phariſees ſpeak thus,) he ſaith unto them, (theſe 'tis moſt neceſſary to converſe with, for) They that are whole have no need of the (ſpiritual) phyſician, but they that are ſick; (and this is more eſpecially the buſineſs of my prophetic office, for) I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance.

18. And (then) the diſciples of John and of the Phariſees uſed to faſt, (Gr. were faſting) and they (the diſciples of John, Matth. 9. 14.) come, and ſay unto him, Why do the diſciples of John and of the Phariſees faſt, but thy diſciples faſt not?

19. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, [d] Can (it be fit for) the children of the bridechamber (to) faſt, while the bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot (decently) faſt.

20. But the days will come, when (I) the bridegroom ſhall be taken away from them, and then ſhall they (have occaſion to) faſt in thoſe days.

21. (And he ſaid alſo by way of parable, Luke 5. 36.) No man alſo ſeweth a piece of new cloth on an old garment, elſe the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, (that being tender, and this ſtrong,) and (ſo) the rent is made worſe, (i. e. greater.)

22. And no (ſkilful) man putteth new wine into old (i. e. weak) bottles, elſe the new wine (fermenting) doth burſt the bottles, and (ſo) the wine is ſpilled, and the bottles will be marred, (broken or rent); but new wine muſt be put into new bottles. (See Matth. 9. 16, 17.)

23. And it came to paſs that he went through the corn-fields on the (firſt) ſabbath-day (after the paſſover, Luke 6. 1.) and his diſciples [e] began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn, (and rubbing them in their hands to eat of the corn, ib.)

24. And the Phariſees (ſeeing this) ſaid unto him, Behold, why do they (by thy permiſſion) on the ſabbath-day, that which (according to our traditions) is not lawful (to be done upon that day?)

25. And

25. And he said unto them, Have ye never read what (is sufficient to justify this action of theirs, viz. that which) David did when he had need, and was an hungred, he, and they that were with him?

26. How he went into the house of God, in the [f] days of Abiathar the high priest, (see the note) and did eat the shew-bread, which is not lawful to eat, but for the priests, (i. e. of which it is not lawful for any but the priests to eat,) and gave (of it) to them that were with him?

27. And he said (moreover) to them, The sabbath was made for (the sake of) man, and not man for the sabbath; (now that which was instituted for the sake of another thing, must yield to the good of that for whose sake it was instituted.)

28. Therefore (ὥστε, so that) the Son of man, (who came to save mens lives, and promote their good,) is (doubtless so far) Lord also of the sabbath, (as to dispense with the strict rest of it, when he sees it necessary for their good. For the exposition of these six last verses, see the note on Matth. 12. 1.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. II.

Ver 1. [a] Δι' ἡμερῶν, After some days.] So Theophylact, Δι ἡμερῶν ἀντὶ τῦ διελθόσων ἡμερῶν τινῶν, after days, that is, when some days were passed. So Gen. 4. 3. in process of time, μετ ἡμέρας, after days it came to pass.

Ver. 4. [b] Ἀπεστέγασαν τὴν στέγην ὅπου ἦν, They uncovered the roof where he was.] Dr Lightfoot upon the place shews, that there was a door in every roof, by which they went from the ὑπερῶον, or upper chamber upon the roof. Now these men, knowing that it was this upper chamber to which the Jews customarily went up, when they discoursed of the law, or religious things, ascend by stairs or ladders to this roof; and, not finding the door wide enough for the man's bed to go down at, they widen it, by loosening some stones about it, and so let down the paralytic.

Ver. 16. [c] Τί ὅτι; How is it that he eateth? &c.] Τί for διά τι; why is it? or, wherefore is it? is very frequent both in the Old and New Testament; examples from the Old are numerous. See Gen. 21. 29.—38. 29. Exod. 14. 15.—17. 2. Josh. 7. 25. Judg. 8. 1. 2 Kings 6. 33.—7. 3. Isa. 1. 11.—3. 15. Lam. 3. 39. In the New, see Matth. 8. 26.—19. 17.—22. 18. Mark 2. 24. —8. 17.—10. 18.—12. 15. Luke 2. 48, 49 — 6. 41, 46.—22. 46. John 1. 25.—7. 19.—9. 27. —10. 20.—14. 22.—18. 21, 23.—20. 13.

Ver. 19. [d] Μὴ δύνανται; Can the children of the bride chamber fast?] Because there is little to be observed in this chapter which hath not been explained already, till we come to the 26th verse, I shall here observe the various acceptations of the phrase μὴ δύναται.

And, 1*st*, It signifies that which is unfit, incongruous, or inconvenient to be done, as not suiting with the rules of decency; as when Moses says, Exod. 8. 26. οὐ δυνάμεθα, it is not meet to do so; so Luke 11. 7. οὐ δύναμαι, I cannot rise, and give thee; and chap. 6. 42. πῶς δύνασαι λέγειν; how canst thou say to thy brother, let me cast the mote out of thine eye?

2*dly*, That which cannot justly, or without violation of some law, or rule of equity and justice, be performed. So Deut. 12. 17. οὐ δύνασαι φαγεῖν, thou mayst not eat within thy gates the tythe of thy corn. So Acts 10. 47. μήτι τὸ ὕδωρ κωλῦσαι δύναταί τις; Can any hinder water, that these should not be baptised? 1 Cor. 10. 21. οὐ δύνασθε, Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils. 2 Cor. 13. 8. οὐ γὰρ δυνάμεθα, For we can do nothing against the truth.

3*dly*, That which is not agreeable to the Divine Oeconomy, Counsel, or Will. So Gen 19. 22. οὐ γὰρ δύνωμαι, For I can do nothing till thou beest come thither. Matth. 26. 42. εἰ οὐ δύναται, If this cup cannot pass from me, unless I drink it; and in this sense Christ often saith, οὐ δύναται ὁ υἱὸς, the Son cannot of himself do any thing, but what he sees the Father do, John 5. 19, 30.

4*thly*, That which we cannot do by reason of the trouble of it, or because of some other employment which interferes with it. So the children of Jacob say to Joseph, οὐ δύνεται τὸ παιδίον, the lad cannot leave his father, Gen. 44. 22. and to Jacob, οὐ δυνησόμεθα καταβαίνειν, we cannot go down without our brother. So we read of Christ, μηκέτι δύνασθαι αὐτὸν, that he could not openly enter into the city, Mark 1. 45. and of his disciples, μὴ δύνασθαι αὐτοὺς, that they could not eat bread, chap. 3. 20. i. e. they had no opportunity to do it: of Herod, that he would have killed John; καὶ οὐκ ἠδύνατο, and he could not do it for fear of the people, Mark 6 19, 20. So, I have married a wife, and therefore οὐ δύναμαι ἐλθεῖν, I cannot come, Luke 14. 20.

5*thly*, That which cannot be done, not for want of power in the agent, but upon account of some defect or fault in the patient. So Christ οὐκ ἠδύνατο, could do no mighty works, because of their unbelief, Mark 6 5, 6. So Luke 16. 2. οὐ δύνασαι, thou canst be no longer steward. So Christ spake to the Jews, καθὼς ἠδύναντο ἀκούειν, as they were able to hear him, Mark 4. 33. And in this sense Christ enquires, πῶς δύνασθε; how can you believe, who receive honour one of another? John 5. 44.

6*thly*, That

6thly, That which cannot be done by reason of some disposition in us which renders us averse to, and unwilling to do any thing, till it be removed. So Joseph's brethren, οὐκ ἠδύναντο, could not speak peaceably to him, Gen. 37. 4. Behold their ears are uncircumcised, and οὐ δύνανται ἀκούειν, they cannot hear, Jer. 6. 16. So πῶς δύνασθε; how can you, being evil, speak good things? Matth. 12. 34. οὐ δύναται, the world cannot hate you, John 7. 7. οὐ δύνασθε, you cannot hear my word, John 8. 43. οὐκ ἠδύναντο, therefore they could not believe, John 12. 39. the world οὐ δύναται, cannot receive the Spirit, John 14. 17. they that are in the flesh, οὐ δύνανται, cannot please God, Rom. 8. 8. And so, concerning a good disposition we read, that a good tree, οὐ δύναται, cannot bring forth evil fruit, Matth. 7. 16. of the disciples, οὐ δυνάμεθα, we cannot but speak the things which we have heard, Acts 4. 20. of him that is born of God, that οὐ δύναται ἁμαρτάνειν, he cannot sin, 1 John 3. 9. and Christ saith of the church of Ephesus, οὐ δύνῃ, thou canst not bear them that are evil, Rev. 2. 2.

Ver. 23. [e] Ἤρξαντο, began.] That in the Hebrew phrase, to begin to do a thing, and to do it, is the same; see the note on Acts 1. 1. though I do not think that ἄρχομαι is wholly an expletive in this and other places, but it signifies to desire, to be willing, to covet, or be pleased with a thing, and answers to the Hebrew יאל So Josh. 17. 12. ἤρξαντο ὁ Χαναναῖος κατοικεῖν ἐν τῇ γῇ, the Canaanite would dwell in the land. So when Micah had promised the Levite a salary, ἤρξατο παροικεῖν, he was willing to dwell with him. Judg. 17. 11. So 2 Sam. 7. 29. and now ἄρξαι καὶ εὐλόγησον, let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant. So also 1 Chron. 17. 27. and Hos. 5. 11. ἤρξατο πορεύεσθαι, he willingly walked after vain things; and Judg. 1. 35. ἤρξατο ὁ Χαναναῖος, the Canaanite would dwell in the mountain, i. e. the mountain of the Amorites, near the tribe of Dan, of which tribe was Samson, Judg. 13. 2. Note also, that the reading of the Septuagint here gives us an answer to the enquiry where Samson had his foxes; even from this mountain, ἐν ᾧ ἀλώπεκες, in which, say they, were foxes; they reading perhaps שעלים not שעלבים as we now read.

Ver. 26. [f] Ἐπὶ Ἀβιάθαρ τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, In the days of Abiathar the high priest.] That Abimelech was then high priest seems evident, (1.) Because Abiathar, who succeeded him, was, and is here stiled high priest; for he being the father, and Abiathar his son, 1 Sam. 21. 20, 22. and chap. 22. 6. if Abimelech had been only an ordinary priest, his son Abiathar could not have been high priest, that office then succeeding orderly from father to son. It is indeed by Mr Wh. said, That that Abiathar that escaped from Doeg never was high priest, but he is so called, 1. By the Septuagint, saying, that Salomon made Zadok ἱερέα πρῶτον ἀντὶ Ἀβιάθαρ, high priest in the room of Abiathar, even of that Abiathar who bare the ark of the Lord before David, and who was afflicted with him in all things, 1 Kings 2. 26, 35. 2. He is so called thrice by (a) Josephus, who says, they had the catalogue of their high priests preserved from 2000 years. (2.) Because Abimelech, his father, is accused by Doeg of enquiring of the Lord for David, 1 Sam. 22. 10. and he himself seems to confess, v. 15. that he had often done the same thing before without blame; whereas the high priest alone having on the ephod of judgment, had not Abimelech been the high priest, he could neither have done this, nor reasonably been accused of doing it. To this it is said, that Abimelech might assist David in enquiring of the Lord, but not by Urim. I answer, that I find no way of enquiring of the Lord but by a prophet, or by an high priest wearing the ephod, in which was the Urim, or by a dream, of which we read nothing here. Moreover, that the ephod was then with him is certain, because when Abimelech was slain, Abiathar went down to David with the ephod in his hand, 1 Sam. 23. 6. And that he speaks of the high priest's ephod is manifest, because he doth not call it a linen ephod; such as the priests wore, but the ephod; and because David enquires by it, ver. 9. and chap. 30. 7. which shews it was the high priest's ephod, in which was the Urim and the Thummim, which, by express precept, was never to be separated from the ephod; since otherwise no enquiry could have been made by it. (3.) Because he is stiled Abimelech the priest; for it is a certain truth, though not observed by many, that, from the end of the book of Deuteronomy to the end of the book of Chronicles, not one person is by name stiled N. N. the priest, who was not an high priest; and though Jehoiada is called the high priest where he is not named, viz. 2 Kings 12. 10. 2 Chron. 24. 11. yet is Hilkiah alone stiled Hilkiah the high priest, during that long interval. Now what reason is there to deny that Abimelech Hacohen signifies here, as in like case it always did before from the days of Eleazar Hacoen, Jos. 14. 1. the high priest? Lastly, Because Josephus, who being a Jew and a priest, must be supposed a competent witness in this case, calls him six times high priest, viz. l. 6. c. 14. p. 196. B. C. F. 197. A. G.

The antient solutions of the fathers are summ'd up by Theophylact thus: we must say, therefore, either that Abiathar had two names, being called also Abimelech, or that Abiathar was then with Abimelech,

(a) Antiq. l. 7. c. 11. p. 247. B. D. p. 248. B. G. l. 1. contr. Apion. p. 1056.

Abimelech, or that τοῦ is to be understood, and the words to be read thus, ἐπὶ Ἀβιάθαρ τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Ἀρχιερέως, in the days of Abiathar the son of the high priest; or that Abiathar is mentioned ὡς ἐπισημοτάτου, as most celebrated in the days of David. The second of these opinions, viz. That Abiathar being there with him, and made high priest by the death of his father but a few days after this action, it might well be said to be done in the days of Abiathar the high priest, though he was not then actually so, is embraced by the learned bishop of Ely, on 1 Sam. 21. 6. this being said to be done in his days, as things may be said to have been done in the days of Henry the Eighth, or any other king of England, which came to pass but a little before he began to reign; to which may be added the criticism of Dr Hammond, that ἐπὶ is to be rendered before, so ἐπὶ μετοικεσίας must be rendered before the captivity, Matth. 1. 11. Jechonias and his brethren being begotten, not under, but before the captivity. Dr Lightfoot falls in with the two last solutions, rendering the words, in the days of Abiathar the son of the high priest, as τοῦ Ἠλὶ is, the son of Eli, Luke the third, and so on to the end of the chapter; and saying, that he therefore is named rather than Abimelech, because he brought the ephod to David, 1 Sam. 22. 6. and by him enquiry was made by Urim and Thummim, 1 Sam. 21. 2, 4, 9, 11, 12. chap. 30. 7, 8. 2 Sam. 2. 1, 5.—19. 21. whence it was usual, saith he, for the Jews by Abiathar to understand the Urim and the Thummim: this, therefore, seems to give some advantage to this instance, to say it was done under that Abiathar who had the ordering of that divine oracle, and so might be supposed to do this by divine direction. But because this also is very rare, I offer, thirdly, that interpretation which saith, that by the high priest here we are to understand, not him who was strictly so called, but one who was an eminent man of that order, this being the import of the word,

1. When mention is made of power given, ἀπὸ or παρὰ τῶν ἀρχιερέων, from, or by the high priests, Acts 9. 14.—26. 10, 12.

2. Of high priests gathered together, Matth. 2. 4.—26. 3.—27. 62. John 11. 47.—12. 10.

3. Of the chief priests coming to Jesus, Matth. 21. 15, 23, 45. and that Christ ought to suffer by the chief priests, Matth. 16. 21.

4. Of Judas coming to the high priests, Matth. 26. 14, 47. Mark 14. 10, 43. Matth. 27. 3, 6, 12, 20, 41. John 18. 3.

5. Of the chief priests and scribes, Mark 8. 31.—10. 33.—11. 18.—14. 1.—15. 1.

6. Of the chief priests and elders, John 7. 32. Acts 4. 23.—25. 15.

7. Of all the high priests, Matth. 27. 1. Mark 14. 53. See the like expressions, Mark 14. 1.—15. 3, 10, 11, 31. Luke 23. 4, 13, 23.—24. 20. John 18. 35.—19. 6, 15, 21. Acts 5. 24.—9. 21.—22. 30.—23. 14.

CHAP. III.

1. AND he entered again into the synagogue (of Capernaum, chap. 1. 21.) and there was a man there which had a withered hand.

2. And they (asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-day? Matth. 12. 19. and) watched him whether he would heal him on the sabbath-day, that (if he did so) they might accuse him, (as one that profaneth the sabbath.)

3. And he said to the man who had the withered hand, Stand forth (in the sight of the synagogue;)

4. And (then) he saith unto them, [a] Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath-days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill, (by refusing to preserve it on that day? And this question he put to them by way of answer to their question;) but they held their peace.

5. And when he had looked round about on them with [b] anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, (which would not yield to all the convictions he had given them, that it was lawful to do good on the sabbath-day;) he saith to the man (who had the withered hand,) Stretch forth thy hand; and he stretched it out; and his hand was restored whole as the other (was.)

6 And (this being done) the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

7. But Jesus (his time of suffering being not yet come,) [c] withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea; and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judea,

8. And from Jerusalem, and from Idumea, and from beyond Jordan, and they about Tyre and Sidon, (I say) a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.

9. And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him, because of the multitude, lest they should throng him:

10. For he had healed many, insomuch that they [d] pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues.

11. And unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God.

12. And

12. And he ſtraitly charged them, that they ſhould not make him known.

13. And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth to him whom he would; and they came unto him.

14. And he ordained twelve, that they ſhould be with him (as his attendants,) and that he might ſend them forth to preach:

15. And (preaching in his Name,) to have power to heal ſickneſſes, and to caſt out devils:

16. And (they were) Simon, (whom) he ſirnamed Peter;

17. And James the Son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James, and he ſirnamed them [e] Boanerges, which is, the Sons of thunder.

18. And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew, and Thomas, and James the Son of Alpheus, and Thaddeus, and Simon the Canaanite,

19. And [f] Judas Iſcariot, which alſo betrayed him; and they went into an houſe, (in Capernaum, chap. 2. 1.)

20. And the multitude cometh together again, ſo that they could not not ſo much as (have leiſure to) eat bread:

21. And when his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him, for they ſaid, He is [g] beſides himſelf; (Gr. he is faint by ſpending his ſpirits.)

22. And the ſcribes which came down from Jeruſalem, ſaid, He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils, caſteth he out devils.

23. And he called them unto him, and ſaid unto them in (two) parables, (Firſt,) How can Satan caſt out Satan?

24. And (For) if a kingdom be divided againſt itſelf, that kingdom cannot ſtand:

25. And if an houſe be divided againſt itſelf, that houſe cannot ſtand:

26. And if (then) Satan riſe up againſt himſelf, and be divided, he cannot ſtand, but (his kingdom) hath an end.

27. (And again, in another parable, he ſaid,) No man can enter into a ſtrong man's houſe, and ſpoil his goods, except he will firſt bind the ſtrong man, and then he will (be able to) ſpoil his houſe.

28. (Then he added theſe words,) Verily I ſay unto you, All ſins ſhall be forgiven unto the ſons of men, and the blaſphemies wherewith ſoever they ſhall blaſpheme (me upon earth:)

29. But he that ſhall blaſpheme againſt (the following diſpenſation of) the Holy Ghoſt, hath never forgiveneſs, but is in danger of (Gr. obnoxious to) eternal damnation.

30. (And thus he ſpake) Becauſe they ſaid, He hath an unclean Spirit.

31. There came then his brethren, and [h] his mother (to the place where he was:) and (they) ſtanding without, ſent unto him, calling him (to them:)

32. And the multitude ſat about him, and they ſaid unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without ſeek for thee:

33. And he anſwered them, ſaying, Who is my mother, or my brethren?

34. And he looked round about on them which ſat about him, and (pointing to his diſciples, he) ſaid, Behold my mother, and my brethren.

35. For whoſoever ſhall do the will of God, the ſame is (by me valued as dearly as) my brother, and my ſiſter, and mother.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. III.

Ver. 4. [a] Ἔξεστι τοῖς Σάββασιν ἀγαθοποιῆσαι, ἢ κακοποιῆσαι; Is it lawful to do good on the ſabbath days, or to do evil? to ſave life or to kill?] Hence it ſeems to follow, That he who doth not do good to his neighbour when he can, doth evil to him, it being a want of charity, and therefore evil, to neglect any opportunity of doing good, or ſhewing kindneſs to any man in miſery; and that not to preſerve his life when it is in danger, is to tranſgreſs that precept which ſaith, Thou ſhalt not kill; becauſe, by this delay, ſo much is taken from the pleaſure of his life; and, ſaith the aphoriſm, Non eſt vivere, ſed valere, vita. Hence the tradition of the Jews informs us, That the hands of Moſes were heavy, becauſe when Amalek came againſt them, he deferred their deliverance till the morrow, Ex. 17. 9. and was not ready, on that very day, to give redemption to Iſrael. B. Uziel. in Exod. 17. 12.

Ver. 5. [b] Καὶ περιβλεψάμενος αὐτοὺς μετ' ὀργῆς, And looking upon them with anger.] Hence we learn, that anger is not always ſinful, this paſſion being found in him in whom was no ſin. But then it muſt be noted, that anger is not properly defined by philoſophers, ὄρεξις ἀνταναπύσεως, a deſire of revenge, or cauſing grief to him who hath provoked or hath grieved us; for this deſire of revenge is always evil; and though our Saviour was angry with the Phariſees for the hardneſs of their hearts, yet had he no deſire to revenge this ſin upon them, but had a great compaſſion for them, and a deſire to remove this evil. Anger is rather an inward motion, motion, and serious displeasure of the mind, arising from the apprehension of some injury done, or intended to ourselves or others, for whom we are concerned, with a desire to remove the injury. See note on Matth. 5. 22.

Ver. 7. [c] Καὶ Ἰησοῦς ἀνεχώρησε, And Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea.] When Christ, by his doctrine and miracles, could do no good upon men, by reason of the hardness of their hearts, ver. 5. but they consult how they may destroy him, ver. 6. he usually departs and conceals himself, that he may give place to their wrath, and secure himself from their malice. See Matth. 12. 15. John 8. 59. Whence we learn, not only that, in such cases, it is lawful thus to consult our safety, but that, when men are so perverse, we, by concealing of the truth, do not betray it, but rather do comply with our Lord's precept, Not to cast pearls before swine, Matth. 7. 6.

Ver 10. [d] Ὥστε ἐπιπίπτειν αὐτῷ, Insomuch that they pressed upon him.] Dr Hammond says, They fell down before his feet, requesting that they might touch him, or in order to the touching of him, as they did, chap. 6. 56. But the pressing on him seems more agreeable to the reason why he desired a ship, viz. that they might not throng him.

Ver. 17 [e] Καὶ ἐπέθηκεν αὐτοῖς ὀνόματα Βοανηργές, And he named them Boanerges, which is, Sons of thunder.] Concerning the derivation of this word, see Dr Lightfoot and Grotius. Christ seems to have given them this name, from a foresight of the heat and zeal of their temper, of which they quickly gave an instance, in their desire to call down fire from heaven, or thunder and lightning, to consume the Samaritans, Luke 9. 54. And John also shewed his zeal, in forbidding him that cast out devils in Christ's name, because he followed not them. Hence we find, in the Acts of the apostles, Peter and John are the chief speakers and actors in the defence and propagation of the gospel: and the zeal of James and Peter seems to be the reason why the one was slain by Herod, and the other imprisoned in order to the like execution.

Ver. 19. [f] Καὶ Ἰούδαν Ἰσκαριώτην, And Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him.] The wisdom of Christ saw fit to admit Judas amongst his disciples, that by him the counsel of God, in giving up his Son to the death, and the scriptures, might be fulfilled, Acts 1. 16. and he is by him sent to preach, to cure diseases, and to cast out devils, who had himself a devil, John 6. 70. to teach us, that the mission of a person may be valid, though he be not sanctified; and that we should hearken to, and, in things belonging to the ministerial office, should obey even such persons. See additions, No 3.

Ver. 21. [g] Ἤκουσαν γὰρ ὅτι ἐξέστη, And when his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him; for they said, he is besides himself.] This is spoken upon occasion of the multitude's coming so fast upon him, as that he had not time to take any food to recreate his weary spirits; and so that interpretation which renders the words thus, They said, he is fainty, or may fall into a deliquium by spending thus his spirits, hath nothing I can see to render it improbable, this being frequently the import of the word in the Old Testament. So when the brethren of Joseph told Jacob that his son was living, ἐξέστη τῇ διανοίᾳ, Jacob's heart fainted, Gen. 45. 26. and afterwards his spirit revived, ver. 27. So Raab saith, when we heard that God had dried up the Red Sea for you, ἐξίστεμεν τῇ καρδίᾳ ἡμῶν, our hearts fainted, nor did there remain any breath in us, Josh. 2. 11. So when the kings of Rezin and Israel conspired against Ahaz king of Judah, ἐξέστη ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτοῦ, his heart fainted, and the heart of his people, Isa. 7. 2. See chap. 33. 3. And of Emath and Arphad, Jeremiah saith, chap. 49. 23. ὅτι ἤκουσαν ἀκοὴν πονηρὰν ἐξέστησαν, when they heard evil tidings, their heart fainted. See also Gen. 42. 28. This interpretation I like best, because it is absurd to say, that Christ did, either in his gesture or his actions, shew any symptoms of transportation, or excess of mind: nor could his kindred have any reason to conceive thus of him, who had never given the least symptoms of any such excess, tho' they of them who believed not in him, John 7. 4. might have such unworthy thoughts of him.

Ver. 31. [h] Ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ, And his mother.] Hence Theophylact taxes her, κενοδοξίας, of vain glory, and of guilt, in endeavouring to draw him, ἀπὸ τῆς διδασκαλίας, from teaching the word. (a) Tertullian pronounceth her guilty of incredulity; Chrysostom, of vain glory, infirmity, and madness, for this very thing, Hom. 27. in Matth. To. 2. p. 191.

(a) De carne Christ. cap. 7.

CHAP. IV.

1. AND he began again to teach by the ſea ſide, and there was gathered to him a great multitude, ſo that he entered into a ſhip, and [a] ſat in (it on) the ſea; and the whole multitude was by the ſea (ſide) on the land.

2. And he taught them many things by parables, and ſaid to them in his doctrine;

3. Hearken, behold, there went out a ſower to ſow:

4. And it came to paſs as he ſowed, ſome (ſeed) fell by the way ſide, and the fowls of the air came, and devoured it up.

5. And ſome fell on ſtony ground, where it had not much earth, and immediately it ſprang up becauſe it had no depth of earth, (and ſo could not be long covered by it)

6. But (And) when the ſun was up it was ſcorched, and becauſe it had no (deep) root, it withered away.

7. And ſome fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up, and choaked it, and it yielded no fruit.

8. And other (ſeed) fell on good ground, and did yield fruit that ſprang up, and increaſed, and brought forth, [b] ſome thirty, and ſome ſixty, and ſome an hundred (fold increaſe.)

9. And he ſaid unto them, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10. And when he was alone, (i. e. retired from the multitude,) they that were about him, with the twelve, asked him (the meaning of) the parable.

11. And he ſaid unto them, To you it is given to know the myſtery of the kingdom of God, (the effect and progreſs it will have among men,) but [c] unto them that are without, (and not prepared to receive the doctrine of this kingdom,) all (theſe) things are done in parables; (they having ſhut their eyes, and hardened their hearts, Matth. 13. 15.)

12. That ſeeing, they may ſee, and not perceive, and hearing, they may hear, and not underſtand, leſt at any time they ſhould be converted, and their ſins ſhould be forgiven them.

13. And he ſaid unto them, Know ye not this parable? [d] and how then will ye know all parables? (as might be reaſonably expected from you, who ſhould have ears to hear, i. e. diſcerning ſpirits in ſuch things.)

14. (Take then the ſenſe of this parable thus:) The ſower (is he who) ſoweth the word:

15. And theſe are they (who are repreſented by the ſeed ſown) by the way ſide, where (among whom) the word is ſown; but when they have heard (it,) [e] Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was ſown in their hearts.

16. And theſe are they likewiſe which are (repreſented by the ſeed) ſown on ſtony ground, who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladneſs;

17. And (yet) have no root in themſelves, and ſo endure but for a time; (and) afterward, when affliction or perſecution ariſeth for the word's ſake, immediately they are offended.

18. And theſe are they which are (repreſented by ſeed) ſown among thorns, (to wit) ſuch as hear the word;

19. And the cares of this world, and the deceitfulneſs of riches, and the luſts (or deſires) of other things entering in (to the heart,) choak the word, and (ſo) it becometh unfruitful.

20. And theſe are they which are (repreſented by ſeed) ſown on [f] good ground; (to wit,) ſuch as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, ſome thirty fold, ſome ſixty, and ſome an hundred.

21. [g] And he ſaid unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a buſhel, or under a bed? and not (rather) to be ſet on a candleſtick? (i. e. Do I give you this light into my doctrine, that you may conceal it? Surely no.)

22. For there is nothing hid, (as being ſpoken by me in obſcure parables,) which ſhall (ſhound) not be manifeſted; neither was any thing kept (Gr. made) ſecret (by me,) but that it ſhould come abroad.

23. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear; (i. e. let theſe things be duly underſtood, and accordingly performed by you.)

24. And he ſaid unto them, [h] Take heed what (i. e. how you attend to what) you hear; (for) with what meaſure ye mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you, and to you that hear ſhall more be given (i. e according to your proficiency in hearing will the word be diſpenſed to you.)

25. For he that (improved what he) hath, to him ſhall be given (more;) and he that hath not (improved his preſent knowledge,) from him ſhall be taken even that (knowledge which) he hath.

26. And he ſaid, [i] So is (it with the doctrine of) the kingdom of God, (received into a good heart,) as if a man ſhould caſt (good) ſeed into the ground;

27. And (having done ſo,) ſhould ſleep, and riſe night and day, and the ſeed ſhould ſpring and grow up he knoweth not how; (as indeed it is with reſpect to the ſeed ſown in the earth;) 28. For

28. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself, first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear:

29. But when the fruit is brought forth (to maturity,) immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come; (so when, by the preaching of the word, men are made ripe for the harvest, i. e. prepared to receive the gospel, the apostles will come and gather them into my kingdom.)

30. And he said (also,) Whereunto shall we liken the (doctrine of the) kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

31. [k] It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth;

32. But when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches, so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it; (even so the kingdom of the Messiah, before his death and burial in the earth, will have only a small and insensible increase, but, after his resurrection, it will spring up, and become the greatest of all kingdoms.)

33. And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it (without offence.)

34. But without a parable spake he not unto them; and when they were alone, he expounded all things (which he thus spake) to his disciples.

35. And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over to the other side (of the lake.)

36. And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him (along with them,) even as he was (sleeping) in the ship; (for he went first into the ship, and his disciples after him, Matth. 8. 22.) and there were also with him other little ships.

37. And there arose a great storm of wind; and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full;

28. And he was in the hinder part of the ship asleep on a pillow; and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish?

39. And (then) he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still; and (instantly) the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

40. And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith? (And this he had cause to say,) [l] for they feared exceedingly, (though he was present with them, and they had such experience of his power.)

41. And (seeing that the wind ceased at his word, they) said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. IV.

Ver. 1. [a] Καθῆσθαι ἐν τῇ θαλάσσῃ, Sat in the sea;] that is, in a boat upon the sea, at a little distance from the shore.

Ver. 8. [b] Ἓν τεσσαρακοντα, καὶ ἓν ἑξήκοντα, καὶ ἓν ἑκατόν, some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred.] The fathers of the 4th and 5th centuries were superstitious admirers of virginity, and so allotted here the hundred fold increase to virgins, the sixth fold to widows that married not again, the thirty fold to those who lived in wedlock. This did St Jerom, saith Erasmus, durior in nuptias; and others, iniquiores nuptiis.

Ver. 11. [c] Τοῖς ἔξω. to them that are without.] It was customary for the Jews to give this title to the Heathens; our Saviour therefore, by applying it to them, seems to hint to them, that in a short time the kingdom of God would be taken from them, and they themselves would be οἱ ἔξω, them that were without, Matth. 8. 12. Luke 13. 28. and 25. fourth part of the ſeed fell upon good ground, and was preſerved. Obſerve here alſo the gradation: the ſeed ſown in the high-way comes not up at all; the ſeed ſown upon ſtony ground comes up, but increaſeth not; the ſeed ſown among thorns increaſeth, but bears no fruit; the ſeed ſown on good ground brings forth fruit to perfection.

Ver. 21, 22. [g] Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς· Μήτι ὁ λυχνὸς ἔρχεται, &c. And he ſaid unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a buſhel, &c.] Theſe words being only ſpoken to Chriſt's diſciples, when he was alone with them, and both here and in Luke 8. 16, 17. ſubjoined to the explication of this parable, I think it beſt to explain them accordingly; as if Chriſt had ſaid, "I give you a clear light "by which you may diſcern the import of this "and other parables; but this I do, not that you "may keep it to yourſelves, and hide it from "others, but that it may be beneficial to you, "and by you be made beneficial to others; and "that having thus learn'd, you may inſtruct them "how they ought to hear, and to receive the word "heard in good and honeſt hearts, ver. 20. And "though I give you the knowledge of theſe my-"ſteries of the kingdom of God, καλαμόνας, pri-"vately, I do it not that you may keep them ſo; "for there is nothing (thus) hid which ſhould "not be made manifeſt, neither was any thing "made ſecret (by me) but that it ſhould (after-"wards) come abroad." See the note on Matth. 10. 26. See additions N° 4.

Ver. 24. [h] Βλέπετε τί, Luke 8. 18. Βλέπετε οὖν πῶς ἀκούετε, Take heed what (Luke how) you hear; for with what meaſure you mete, &c.] I think theſe words are well paraphraſed by Theophylact thus, Let not any thing you have heard ſlip from you, but lay it up in your heart; for according to that meaſure of attention and readineſs of mind you uſe in hearing of the word, and your diligence in pondering it, and care to practiſe ſuitably to what you know already, will be your further proficiency in knowledge: and he that hath προθυμίαν καὶ σπουδὴν, δοθήσεται αὐτῷ καὶ ὠφελεία, this readineſs and care, ſhall profit by it; that τί ſignifies πῶς, we learn from theſe words, τί γὰρ οἶδας, how knoweſt thou, O husband, or, O wife, 1 Cor. 7. 16. See additions N° 5.

Ver. 16. [i] Καὶ ἔλεγεν Οὕτως ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ, And he ſaid, So is the kingdom of God.] This parable is mentioned only by St Mark, and it ſeems to me to relate to the good ground; for that only brought forth ripe fruit, or fruit unto perfection: I therefore paraphraſe it thus, "What I ſaid of the ſeed "ſown upon good ground may be illuſtrated by "this parable, That the doctrine of the kingdom "of God, received into a good and honeſt heart, "is like ſeed ſown by a man in his ground, ma-"nured and tilled, and ſo prepared to receive "it; for, when he hath ſown it, he ſleeps and "wakes day after day; and looking on it, he ſees "it ſpring, and grow up through the virtue of "the earth in which it is ſown, though he knows "not how it doth ſo; and when he finds it ripe, "he reaps it, and ſo receives the benefit of the "ſeed ſown: ſo is it here; the ſeed ſown in the "good and honeſt heart brings forth fruit with "patience; and this fruit daily increaſeth, though "we know not how the word and Spirit worketh "that increaſe; and then Chriſt, the husband-"man, who ſows this ſeed, at the time of the "harveſt, ſends forth the angels his reapers, and "gathers this good ſeed, i. e. the ſons of the "kingdom repreſented by it, into his celeſtial "manſions." See Matth. 13. 38, 43. I ſee no neceſſity of enquiring here how Chriſt may be ſaid to ſleep, and riſe day and night, Chriſt being like to this husbandman only in ſowing and reaping of his ſeed: nor can it be ſaid of him, his ſeed grows up he knows not how: nor yet would I depend much on that remark of the fathers, that here is a proof of man's free-will, and power to do good of himſelf; the ſeed being only ſown, and no further care taken of it; for as ſeed ſown in the earth is only fruitful by being watered from heaven, and ripened by the ſun, ſo a like influence of the word and Spirit upon the heart of man ſeems requiſite to bring the ſeed ſown in it to perfection.

Ver. 31. [k] Ὡς κόκκῳ σινάπεως, The kingdom of God is like a grain of muſtard ſeed;] i. e. the kingdom of the Meſſiah may fitly be compared to a grain of muſtard ſeed, which before it is caſt into the earth is the leaſt of all ſeeds, but being ſown in it, it groweth up, and becomes the greateſt of herbs: ſee note on Matth. 13. 31. ſo this kingdom of the Meſſiah before his death and burial in the earth, which is called the ſowing the body in the earth, 1 Cor. 15. 42, 43. will have only a ſmall and inſenſible increaſe, but will afterwards ſpring up and become the greateſt of all kingdoms, for being lifted up, he will draw all men after him.

Ver. 40. [l] Καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν φόβον μέγαν.] Theſe words would join to the former, thus, He ſaid to them, why are you ſo fearful? &c. for they feared exceedingly; and begin this verſe thus, And they ſaid one to another, What manner of man is this? &c. for this accords beſt with Matth. 8. 27. Luke 8. 25.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

1. AND they came over unto the other ſide of the ſea, to the country of the [a] Gadarens.

2. And when he was come out of the ſhip, immediately there met him (coming) out of the tombs, a [b] man with an unclean ſpirit,

3. Who had his dwelling among the tombs, and no man could (effectually) bind him, no not with chains.

4. Becauſe that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked aſunder by him, and the fetters broke in pieces, neither could any man tame him:

5. And always night and day he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying (out,) and cutting himſelf with ſtones.

6. But when he ſaw Jeſus afar off, he ran (to him,) and worſhipped him.

7. And (the unclean ſpirit in him) cryed with a loud voice, and ſaid, [c] What have I to do with thee, Jeſus, thou Son of the moſt high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not:

8 For he (Jeſus had) ſaid unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean ſpirit: (and this made him fear that Chriſt might torment him.)

9. And (Chriſt) asked him, What is thy name? and he anſwered, ſaying, My name is Legion, (a name of multitude:) for we are many.

10. And he beſought him much, [d] that he would not ſend them away out of the country.

11. Now there was there nigh to the mountains, a great herd of ſwine feeding;

12. And the devils beſought him ſaying, Send us into the ſwine, that (by thy permiſſion) we may enter into them.

13. And forthwith Jeſus gave them leave; and (then) the unclean ſpirits (of the man) went out (of him,) and entered into the ſwine; and the herd ran violently down a ſteep place into the ſea, (they were about two thouſand,) and were choaked in the ſea.

14. And they that fed the ſwine, fled, and told it, (i. e. what was done,) in the city, and in the [e] country; and they went out to ſee what it was that was done.

15. And they came to Jeſus, and ſaw him that was poſſeſſed with the devil, and had the legion, ſitting, and clothed, and in his right mind; and they were afraid (what one of ſo great power might further do.)

16. And they that ſaw it, told them, how it befel to him that was poſſeſſed with the devil.

17. And they (being troubled for the loſs of them,) began to pray him to depart out of their coaſts.

18. And when he was come into the ſhip, he that had been poſſeſſed with the devil, prayed him that he might be with him.

19. Howbeit Jeſus ſuffered him not, but ſaith to him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and (how he) hath had compaſſion on thee.

20. And he departed, and began to publiſh in Decapolis, how great things Jeſus had done for him; and all men did marvel.

21. And when Jeſus was paſſed over again by ſhip to the other ſide, much people gathered to him, and he was nigh to the ſea.

22. And behold, there cometh [f] one of the rulers of the ſynagogue, Jairus by name, and when he ſaw him (Chriſt) he fell at his feet;

23. And beſought him greatly, ſaying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death, (I pray thee) come and lay thy hands on her, that ſhe may be healed, and (I am confident, if thou dooſt this) ſhe ſhall live.

24. And Jeſus went with him, and much people followed him, (Jeſus,) and thronged him.

25. And a certain woman which had an iſſue (a flux) of blood twelve years,

26. And had ſuffered many things of many phyſicians, and [g] had ſpent all that ſhe had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worſe:

27. When ſhe had heard of Jeſus, came in the preſs behind, and touched his garment.

28. For ſhe ſaid (in her heart,) If I may touch but his clothes, I ſhall be whole.

29. And ſtraightway (upon this touch,) the fountain of her blood was dried up, and ſhe felt in her body, that ſhe was healed of that plague, (i. e. diſeaſe.)

30. And Jeſus immediately [h] knowing in himſelf that virtue had gone out of him, turned (himſelf) about in the preſs, and ſaid, Who touched my clothes?

31. And his diſciples ſaid unto him, Thou ſeeſt the multitude thronging thee, and ſayeſt thou, Who touched me?

32. And he looked round about to ſee her that had done this thing.

33. But (then) the woman fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth.

34. And he ſaid unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole, go in peace, and be (ſtill) whole of thy plague.

35. While

35. While he yet ſpake, there came from the ruler of the ſynagogue's houſe (certain perſons) which ſaid, Thy daughter is dead, why troubleſt thou the maſter any further?

36. As ſoon as Jeſus heard the word that was ſpoken, he ſaith to the ruler of the ſynagogue, Be not afraid, only believe.

37. And he ſuffered no man to follow him (into the place where the daughter was,) ſave Peter, and James, and John the brother of James, (and her father and mother, Luke 8. 51.)

38. And he cometh to the houſe of the ruler of the ſynagogue, and ſeeth the tumult, and them that wept, and [i] wailed greatly.

39. And when he was come in, he ſaith to them, Why make ye this ado, and weep? the damſel is not (ſo) dead, but (that ſhe ſhall preſently ariſe from her bed, as one that) ſleepeth.

40. And they laughed him to ſcorn; but when he had put them all out, he [k] taketh the father and the mother of the damſel, and them that were with him, (ſee ver. 37.) and entreth in where the damſel was lying.

41. And he took the damſel by the hand, and ſaid unto her, Talitha Cumi, which is, being interpreted, Damſel, I ſay unto thee, Ariſe.

42. And ſtraightway the damſel aroſe, and walked, for ſhe was of the age of twelve years; and they were aſtoniſhed with a great aſtoniſhment.

43. And he charged them ſtraitly that no man ſhould know it, and commanded that ſomething ſhould be given her to eat, (to ſhew, ſaith Theophylact, that ſhe was really alive.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. V.

Ver. 1. [a] Εἰς τὴν χώραν τῶν Γαδαρηνῶν, into the country of the Gadarens.] Theophylact here ſaith τὰ ἀκριβέστερα τῶν ἀντιγράφων εἰς τὴν χώραν τῶν Γεργεσηνῶν. The exacteſt copies read Gergeſens, as St Matthew doth, chap. 8. 28. but both St Mark here, and St Luke 8. 26. read the Gadarens; and therefore it is better anſwered by Dr Lightfoot, that both ſay true, for the region of the Gergeſens was of broader extent than that of the Gadarens, and the region of the Gadarens was included in it.

Ver. 2. [b] Ἀνθρώπῳ ἐν πνεύματι ἀκαθάρτῳ. Luke 8. 27. ἀνήρ τις, a man with an unclean ſpirit] St Matthew ſaith they were δύο δαιμονιζόμενοι two poſſeſſed with the devil, chap. 8. 28. which difference, ſaith the reverend Dr Hammond, hath nothing of weight in it; for Matthew which names two, ſaying the truth, the other evangeliſts who name but one, not denying there were more, muſt neceſſarily ſay the truth alſo. Yet curioſity will not reſt here, but will enquire, why there being two, and both λίαν καλλεποὶ, very fierce, St Mark and St Luke name only one. Dr Lightfoot ingeniouſly conjectures, that one of theſe two was a Gergeſen, and a Jew; and ſo, in caſting the devil out of him, our Lord did only what he frequently had done in Judea; but the other was a Gadaren, i. e. one of an Heathen city, as Joſephus teſtifies, and as may be collected from the ſwine they kept, it being, by the Jewiſh conſtitutions, an unlawful thing for any Jew to keep ſwine. See Dr Lightfoot, Harm. p. 32. Now of this one St Mark and Luke chiefly take notice, as being a more remarkable and rare inſtance; this and that of the Syrophœnician woman being the only inſtances of cures wrought upon the Heathens. That he was an Heathen he probably conjectures; (1.) From the city he inhabited: (2.) Becauſe the devils requeſt, both that he would not torment them, and that he would not ſend them out of the country (which elſewhere they do not); for being among Heathens, they thought they were among their own, and not in Chriſt's juriſdiction, as being not among his people. But (3) The text yields a more certain anſwer, viz. that of theſe two, one only was ἄνθρωπος ἐν ἀκαθάρτῳ πνεύματι, a man poſſeſſed with an unclean ſpirit; 2. He was the man whom the inhabitants oft attempted to bind, but could not effectually do it, he breaking all the bands and chains that they could lay upon him, ver. 3, 4. Luke 8. 29. Of theſe two remarkable circumſtances, and of his being unclothed, and cutting himſelf with ſtones, St Matthew makes no mention; and therefore Mark and Luke give us the hiſtory of him more largely, omitting the other, in whom there was nothing ſo remarkable.

Ver. 7. [c] Τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί; What have I to do with thee?] This is not an Hebraiſm, as ſome think, from 2 Kings 3. 15. &c. but a form of ſpeaking uſed in the Greek tongue. So (a) Arrian in Epictetus, τί ἡμῖν καὶ αὐτῷ, what have we to do with him? See more inſtances in Schmid. on Matth. 8. 29.

Ver. 10. [d] Ἵνα μὴ αὐτοὺς ἀποστείλῃ ἔξω τῆς χώρας. That he would not ſend them away out of the country.] It is obſerved by Grotius here, that in this country there were many apoſtates from the Jewiſh faith, over whom the devils exerciſed their power, as under the Chriſtian œconomy they became ſubject to to the power and chastisement of Satan, who either denied the fundamentals of, or, by their wicked deeds, became a scandal to the Christian faith, 1 Cor. 5. 5. 1 Tim. 1. 20. Vide Tertul. de spectaculis, cap. 26. Cyprian. de lapsis. Ed. Ox. p. 132, 133

Ver. 14. [e] Καὶ εἰς τὰς ἀγρούς. Told it in the city and in the country;] or rather in the little villages, where the houses were few and apart. See chap. 6. 36. Send them away, that they may go into the country and villages, or into the villages and market towns, and buy bread. So again ver. 66.

Many, here, are the practical observations of Theophylact upon this history, which I will briefly represent: As, 1. From the devil's asking leave to go into the swine, he observes that they could not hurt them, much less can they hurt man without the divine permission. 2. That, as having leave, they instantly hurry these swine to destruction; so much more would they deal with men, did not the hand of Providence restrain them. 3. That he who had been possessed with the devil, desired to be with Christ, as fearing lest, at his departure, the devil might seize on him again; and that Christ permitted him not, partly to avoid the suspicion of vain-glory, of which he might have given some umbrage, had he carried about with him those upon whom his greatest miracles were wrought; and partly to shew that, in his absence, he was able to protect those that believe and trust in him from the malice of all evil spirits. 4. From those words of our Saviour, Go tell what great things the Lord hath done to thee, we learn, saith he, from Christ's example, when we do any good, not to ascribe it to ourselves, but to give God the glory of it. Note, lastly, That Dr Hammond, in his paraphrase, gives three reasons why our Saviour permitted the devils to enter into the swine: 1*st*, That the people might see the virulency of these devils, if not restrained by him, and so the mercy done to those that were possessed. 2*dly*, The mercy now approaching to their country, by the coming of Christ, if they would accept of it. And, 3*dly*, To try whether their love to their swine was greater than that to their own souls.

Ver. 22. [f] Εἷς τῶν ἀρχισυναγώγων, One of the rulers of the synagogue.] The word ἀρχισυνάγωγος, or ruler of the synagogue, is taken either largely, so as to comprehend the presbyters or elders of the synagogue, mentioned both in the scriptures, the Jewish writers, and the imperial constitutions; in which sense it appears, from scripture, that the rulers of the synagogue were more than one; as may be gathered, 1. From these words, one of the rulers of the synagogue, to wit, at Capernaum; for that in Capernaum there was but one synagogue is probably collected from the words of St John, chap. 6. 59. These things spake Jesus in the synagogue, teaching in Capernaum. 2. From the express words of St Luke, who, when Paul and Barnabas were entered into the synagogue at Antioch, οἱ ἀρχισυνάγωγοι, the rulers of the synagogue said to them, If ye have any word of exhortation to the people, speak, Acts 13. 15. and also from the mention of Crispus and Sosthenes, as ἀρχισυνάγωγοι, rulers of the synagogue at Corinth, Acts 18. 8, 17. Or else more strictly to import the person who was the president, the head, or master of the synagogue; and in this sense he was but one, as when St Luke saith, chap. 13. 14. ὁ ἀρχισυνάγωγος, the ruler of the synagogue answered with indignation. See this more fully in Campeg. Vitringa de regim. synag. l. 2. c. 11. But whereas some learned men conceive that the word synagogue, here, signifies not the house of prayer, or of reading and expounding the law, but the consistory of XXIII. appointed in every city, who were able to punish offences not capital, to scourge, &c. because our Saviour says, they shall deliver you up, εἰς συνέδρια, to the councils, and they shall scourge you in the synagogues, Matth. 10. 17. and chap. 23. 34. Behold I send to you prophets and wise men, and some of them ye shall kill, and some ye shall chastise in your synagogues; this, I think, is a mistake; for, 1*st*, In the tenth chapter our Saviour mentions the synagogues, in which the Christians were to be scourged, as distinct places from the synedria, or councils to which they were to be delivered. And, 2*dly*, St Paul declares once and again, that he did beat the Christians in their synagogues, Acts 22. 19. that he punished them throughout all the synagogues, chap. 26. 11. and that this flagellation, and the rebels beating, were used in the synagogues, is fully proved by Campeg. Vitringa de regim. syn. Vet. l. 3. part 1. c. 11. p. 774.

Ver. 23. Λίσσων—ἵνα ἐλθὼν ἐπιθῇς, Saying—come and lay thy hands on her] It is observable, that there is frequently an ellipsis of some verb or sentence before the particle ἵνα, as here δέομαι, I pray thee, is wanting. So chap. 14. ἀλλ' ἵνα πληρωθῶσιν but τοῦτο γέγονεν, this was done that the scriptures might be fulfilled. So 1 John 2. 19. ἀλλ' ἵνα φανερωθῶσιν, but this was done that they might appear not to be of us. Eph. 5. 33. ἡ δὲ γυνὴ ἵνα, Uxor autem videat, sive det operam, Let the wife see that she reverence her husband.

Ver. 26. [g] Καὶ δαπανήσασα τὰ παρ' ἑαυτῆς πάντα, And had spent all that she had.] Here comes to be considered a story introduced by (b) Eusebius with an ἐστορεῖται, it is reported, "that by the gate of this "woman's house was erected a brass statue, bear-

" ing

(b) Hist. Eccl. l. 7. c. 18.

" ing the effigies of this woman upon her knees, in " the poſture of a ſupplicant; and oppoſite to her, " the effigies of a man in braſs, reſembling Jeſus, " ſtretching out his hand to the woman; and " that at the feet of it an unknown plant ſprung " up, which reaching to the borders of his braſs " doublet or coat, became a preſent remedy a- " gainſt all manner of diſeaſes." Now, that there might be two braſs ſtatues in that city, built according to the Heatheniſh cuſtom, I deny not; but that they were either erected by this woman, or contained the reſemblance of Chriſt, or that any ſuch herb, growing thus up, became a preſent remedy to all diſeaſes, I find cauſe, with Charlemain, to ſay, ſi tamen facta eſt, that is, to doubt the truth of the relation. For, not to inſiſt on the ſilence of all the three evangeliſts, who mention this woman, and could not be ignorant of a thing ſo famous, or ſilent in a matter which ſo much tended to the confirmation of the Chriſtian faith: not to inſiſt upon it, that neither Juſtin M. who was born in Paleſtine, where Paneas, or Cæſarea Philippi was; nor Origen, who converſed many years at Tyre near this place; nor Irenæus or Tertullian, who ſpeak of this very woman, make the leaſt mention of this brazen ſtatue, or this miraculous herb; nor, 3*dly*, That this herb having then only its miraculous effects when it touched the border of our Saviour's garment, ſmells rank of the ſuperſtition of the later times: to omit, I ſay, all theſe things, how ſhould a woman, who, as all theſe evangeliſts inform us, had ſpent all that ſhe had, be able to erect two ſuch coſtly ſtatues as were ſufficient to exhauſt the fortunes even of wealthy perſons? or how can we imagine that the Jews, in all their wars, and the Gentiles, both bitter enemies to Chriſtianity, ſhould ſuffer ſuch a confirmation of it to remain even to the days of Euſebius?

Ver. 30. [b] Καὶ Ἰησοῦς ἐπιγνοὺς ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὴν δύναμιν ἐξελθοῦσαν, And Jeſus knowing in himſelf that virtue had gone out of him.] From theſe and the like words, that δύναμις παρ' αὐτοῦ, virtue with him, went out, and healed them all, Luke 6. 19. it is evident that the virtue which did theſe miraculous cures reſided in Jeſus, which is never ſaid of any of the prophets or apoſtles: the divine virtue by which theſe prophets and apoſtles did their miraculous cures is aſcribed to God, as in theſe words, δυνάμεις οὐ τυχούσας ἐποίει ὁ Θεὸς, and God did ſpecial miracles by the hands of Paul, Acts 19. 11, 12. but the miracles done by Chriſt, to the divine virtue dwelling in him; whence he ſo often declares, that the Father abiding in him did the works, John 14. 10.

Ver. 38. [i] Κλαίοντας καὶ ἀλαλάζοντας πολλά, He ſees the multitude weeping and wailing greatly.] Ἀλαλάζειν ordinarily ſignifies to make a joyful ſound, but it is often uſed by the Septuagint to ſignify the voice of lamentation; as when the prophet Jeremy ſays, chap. 25. 24. ἀλαλάξατε οἱ ποιμένες, Howl, ye ſhepherds, and cry, and wallow yourſelves in aſhes, ye principal of the flock; and ver. 36. A voice of the cry of ſhepherds, καὶ ἀλαλαγμὸς, and an howling of the rams of the flock ſhall be heard; and the prophet Ezekiel, chap. 27. 30. ἀλαλάξουσιν ἐπὶ σοὶ, they ſhall cauſe their voice to be heard againſt thee, and ſhall cry bitterly. So alſo Jer. 4. 8. and 47. 2. And theſe two ſenſes hath the Hebrew Holal, from which it ſeems to be derived.

Ver. 40. [k] Παραλαμβάνει τὸν πατέρα καὶ μητέρα, He taketh with him the father and the mother, &c.] i. e. as many witneſſes as were ſufficient to confirm the fact, and no more, leſt he ſhould ſeem to be deſirous of vain-glory.

CHAP. VI.

1. AND he went out from thence, (i. e. from Capernaum,) and came into his own country (Nazareth, Luke 4. 16.) and his diſciples follow him.

2. And when the ſabbath day was come, he began to teach in the ſynagogue; and many hearing were aſtoniſhed (at his words,) ſaying, From whence hath this man theſe things? and what (kind of) wiſdom is this which is given to him? (and how is it) that even (Gr. alſo) ſuch mighty works are wrought with his hands?

3. Is not this [a] the carpenter, the ſon of (Joſeph and) Mary? (Is he not) the brother of James and Joſes, and of Judah and Simon? and are not his ſiſters here with us, (in all whom we find no ſuch marks of power or wiſdom?) and (by reaſon of his mean alliance) they were offended at him.

4. But (then) Jeſus ſaid unto them, A prophet is not without honour, but (Gr. is not deſpiſed, ſave) in (and for) his own country (Galilee,) John 7. 52. and among his own kin, and in his own houſe, (or for them.)

5. And he [b] could do there no mighty work (becauſe of their unbelief,) ſave that he laid his hands on a few ſick folk, and healed them.

6. And he marvelled becauſe of their unbelief; and (leaving them,) he went round about the villages teaching.

7. And

7. And he calleth to him the twelve (apostles,) and began to send them forth by two and two, and gave them power over unclean spirits.

8. And (he) commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save [c] a staff only, (viz.) no scrip, no bread, (for victuals,) no money in their purse (to buy it.)

9. But (that they should) be shod with sandals, and not put on two coats.

10. And he said to them, In what place soever ye enter into an house, there abide till ye depart from that place.

11. And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you when ye depart (Gr. departing) thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them, (that you count them as unclean. And) verily I say to you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city.

12. And they went out and preached, that men should repent.

13. And they cast out many devils, and [d] anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

14. And king Herod heard of him, for his name was spread abroad, and he said that John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him.

15. Others said, that it is Elias; and others said, that it is [e] a prophet (raised from the dead,) or as one of the (old) prophets.

16. But when Herod heard thereof (i. e. of his fame,) he said, It is (that) John whom I beheaded, he is risen from the dead.

17. For Herod himself had sent forth, and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias sake, his brother Philips wife; for he had married her (his brother being yet living.)

18. For John had said to Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brothers wife.

19. Therefore Herodias [f] had a quarrel against him, and would have killed him, but she could not (prevail with Herod so to do.)

20. For Herod feared (to take away) John, knowing that he was a just man, and an holy (person,) and he [g] observed, (συνετήρει, he kept) him (from the malice of Herodias; or he was formerly observant of him;) and when he heard of him, he did many things (which John taught,) and heard him gladly.

21. And (But) when a convenient day was come (for her malicious purpose, viz. the day) that Herod (celebrating) his birth-day, made a supper to (for) his lords, high-captains, and chief estates of Galilee;

22. And when the daughter of the said Herodias came in and danced, and pleased Herod, (Gr. coming in, dancing and pleasing Herod,) and them that sat with him, the king said to the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee.

23. And he sware unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom.

24. And (then) she went forth and said, (Gr. going forth said) to her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, (Ask) the head of John the Baptist.

25. And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by and by, in a charger, the head of John the Baptist.

26. And (then) the king was exceeding sorry; yet for his oaths sake, and for the sake of them that sat with him, he would not reject her.

27. And (so) immediately the king sent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought; and he (the executioner) went, and beheaded him (John) in the prison:

28. And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel, and the damsel gave it to her mother.

29. And when his disciples heard of it, (i. e. of his death,) they came and took up his corps, and laid it in a tomb.

30. And (about that time) the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things both what they had done and what they had taught (in pursuance of the commission he had given them.)

31. And he said to them, (after such a long and laborious journey,) Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while; for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.

32. And they departed into a desert place by ship privately.

33. And the people saw them departing, and many (of them) knew him, (and whither he was going,) and (so they) ran afoot thither out of all cities, and out-went them, (viz. Christ and his disciples,) and came together to him.

34. And Jesus, when he came out (of the ship,) saw much people, and was moved with compassion towards them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd (to lead them into wholesome pastures,) and he began to teach them many things.

35. And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came to him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time (of the day) is far passed;

36. Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themſelves bread, for they have (here) nothing to eat.

37. (But) he anſwered, and ſaid to them, Give ye them to eat, and they ſay to him, (How ſhall we do this?) Shall we go and buy two hundred penny worth of bread, and give them to eat?

38. He ſaith to them, How many loaves have ye? Go and ſee; and when they knew, they ſay, Five, and two fiſhes.

39. And he commanded them to make all (the people) ſit down by companies upon the green graſs.

40. And they ſat down in ranks by hundreds and by fifties.

41. And when he had taken the five loaves, and the two fiſhes, he looked up to heaven, and bleſſed (God; ſee note on Matth. 14. 19.) and (then) brake the loaves, and gave them to his diſciples to ſet before them; and the two fiſhes divided he among them all.

42. And they did all eat, and were filled.

43. And they took up twelve baskets full of the fragments (of the bread,) and of the fiſhes.

44. And they that did eat of the loaves, were about five thouſand men.

45. And ſtraightway he conſtrained his diſciples to get into the ſhip, and to go (from the deſert on the eaſt ſide of the ſea of Galilee,) to the other ſide (of that ſea,) before (him) to Bethſaida, while he ſent away the people; (though the contrary winds made them land at Capernaum, ver. 53.)

46. And when he had ſent them away, he departed to a mountain to pray.

47. And when even was come, the ſhip was in the midſt of the ſea, and he (was) alone on the land;

48. And he ſaw them toyling in rowing, for the wind was contrary to them; and about the fourth watch of the night, he cometh to them walking on the ſea, and (continued walking ſo, as if he) would have paſſed by them.

49. But when they ſaw him walking on the ſea, they ſuppoſed it had been a ſpirit, and cried out (for fear.)

50. For they all ſaw him, and were troubled; and immediately he talked with them, and ſaith to them, Be of good cheer; it is I, be not afraid.

51. And he went up to them into the ſhip, and the wind ceaſed; and they were ſore amazed in themſelves beyond meaſure, and wondred:

52. For they conſidered not the miracle of the loaves, (which was done now before their eyes, and was ſufficient to convince them the ſame power might enable him to walk on the ſea, and to calm the wind;) for their heart was hardened, (i. e. through incogitance, was not convinced by ſufficient evidence. See chap. 8. 17.)

53. And when they had paſſed over, they came into the land of Genneſareth, and drew (the ſhip) to the ſhore (of Capernaum, John 6. 13.)

54. And when they were come out of the ſhip, ſtraightway they (of that country) knew him,

55. And ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds thoſe that were ſick, where they heard he was.

56. And whitherſoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country (towns,) they laid the ſick in the ſtreets, and beſought him, that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment; and as many as touched (it) were made whole.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. VI.

Ver. 3. [a] Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τέκτων; Is not this the carpenter?] So (a) Juſtin M. not only ſpeaks of him as the ſon of a carpenter, but ſaith, ταῦτα γὰρ τὰ τεκτονικὰ ἔργα εἰργάζετο ἐν ἀνθρώποις ὢν ἄροτρα καὶ ζυγά, that being among men, he made rakes and yokes, which were the works of carpenters. (b) Origen, therefore, ſeems to have forgot himſelf, when he ſo poſitively ſays, Ὅτι οὐδαμοῦ ἔν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις παραδεδώκασιν εὐαγγελίων τέκτονα αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀναγεγράφθαι, that it was not written in any of the goſpels which the church received, that Jeſus was a carpenter. It ſeems not only true, but even requiſite, that he ſhould be of ſome trade, ſince by the Jewiſh canons all fathers were bound to teach their children ſome trade; and their moſt celebrated Rabbins thought it a great reproach not to be of ſome trade; and alſo, that he might give no example of idleneſs, and take off all ſuſpicion of being bred up in curious arts.

Ver 5. [b] Καὶ οὐκ ἠδύνατο, And he could do there no mighty work, becauſe of their unbelief:] For Chriſt, ſtill requiring faith in the patient, in order to his cures, where this was wanting he could do no mighty works; not that he wanted power to do them, but that they wanted that condition which only made it fit that he ſhould do them. So God ſaith, Jer. 15. 1. My mind cannot be towards this people; not for want of kindneſs or good-will in him, but for want of thoſe diſpoſitions in them, which might render them fit objects of his favour.

See additions, N°. 6.

Ver. 8. [c] And he commanded them, that they ſhould take nothing for their journey, εἰ μὴ ῥάβδον μόνον, ſave a ſtaff a staff only.] St Matthew, chap. 10. 10. saith, μήτε ῥάβδον, nor a staff: but Theophylact there reads, μήτε ῥάβδους, nor staves; and this reading is confirmed, not only from many MS. copies, but from St Luke, who, chap. 9. 3. hath it, μήτε ῥάβδους, nor staves; it being common for those who were to travel a considerable journey, to take with them two staves, as well as two coats. The prohibition of ὑποδήματα, shoes there, ver. 10. contradicts not the permission of sandals here; the sandals being made of harder leather, the shoes of softer; the sandals so open, that you might put your foot into them before or behind, whereas you could put it into the shoe only one way. See Lightfoot on Matth 10. 10. And this command Christ laid upon them, to give them a manifest document, in this their first mission, (which was only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, to prepare them to receive the Messias, when he should manifest himself unto them) of the divine providence, providing for them all things necessary; and this they thankfully acknowledge, Luke 22. 35. by saying, that when he thus sent them forth, they wanted nothing. But then, that this was a temporary precept, respecting only this very mission, and not reaching to their whole apostolical function afterwards, is evident, 1. From the nature of their mission, which was only to the cities of Judea, and was performed in a short time: for, ver. 30. we find them returned, and telling their Master what they had done: and this also sufficiently appears from our Lord's words, When I sent you forth without scrip or shoes, lacked ye any thing? Luke 22. 35. Hence Christ himself had one that bore his bag, John 13. 29. and St Paul sends for his cloak that he had left at Troas, 2 Tim. 4. 13.

(a) Dial. cum Tryph. p. 316. C.

Ver. 13. [d] Καὶ ἤλειφον ἐλαίῳ, And anointed with oil many that were sick.] That it was usual with the Jews to prescribe oil as a fit thing to anoint the sick, in order to their recovery, Dr Lightfoot here, and elsewhere, fully proves: nor do I think the apostles, having no command of Christ to do so, would have used this ceremony, had it not been customary for them so to do. But whether they did this symbolically, in hope of obtaining to the patient the oil of gladness, or only medicinally, 'tis certain, that the virtue which attended it, when used by the apostles, could not be natural, or inherent in the oil, but must be supernatural, and derived from him who sent them; since by this unction was produced a certain and constant cure of all whom they anointed.

Ver. 15. [e] Προφήτης ἢ ὡς εἷς τῶν προφητῶν, Others said, that he is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.] I see no necessity of questioning or changing the reading here, not into ὁ προφήτης, the prophet, by way of excellency: for, when we find the disciples declaring what the Jews said of him, Matth. 16. 14. and St Luke, chap. 9. 19. there is no intimation of any of them who owned him as the Christ: nor is there any need of leaving out the ἢ ὡς, the Jews being of both these opinions; some saying that he was a prophet, John 4. 19.—9. 17. a great prophet risen up in Israel, Luke 7. 16. others, that he was one of the old prophets risen from the dead, Luke 9. 8. and, in particular, that he was the prophet Jeremy, Matth. 16. 14.

Ver. 19. [f] Herodias, ἐνεῖχεν, had a quarrel against him.] The word primarily imports, adverso erat animo, she was in mind averse to him; viz. after his reprehension of Herod; and, because the natural consequence of that averseness is anger, and hatred, arising from the conceived injuries which make us thus averse to any man, therefore it is well rendered by Hesychius and Phavorinus, ὀργίζεται μνησικακεῖ, she is angry, and bears a grudge against him.

Ver. 20. [g] Συνετήρει αὐτὸν, He observed him;] i. e. saith Dr Hammond, he kept him guarded from the malice of Herodias, who would have killed him: but this seems not to agree with his desire to kill him, Matth. 14. 5. I therefore think it may relate to his regard to him and his sayings, before he was incensed against him, by reason of his reprehension, as the words following do insinuate.

See additions, N°. 7.

CHAP. VII.

1. THEN came together to him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes which came from Jerusalem;

2. And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled, that is to say, with unwashen hands, they found fault (with them for so doing.)

3. For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands [a] oft, (Gr. up to the wrist,) eat not, holding the tradition of the elders.

4. And when they come from the market, except they wash, they eat not; and many other things (of this kind) there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups and pots, brazen vessels, and of tables, (Gr.

κλινῶν, of beds, upon which they did eat, as now upon tables.)

5. [b] Then (therefore) the Phariſees and ſcribes asked him, Why walk not thy diſciples according to the tradition of the elders, but (tranſgreſs them, for they) eat bread with unwaſhen hands?

6. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, [c] Well did Iſaiah propheſy of you hypocrites; as it is written, (for what he teſtified of the people of that age from the mouth of God, muſt equally reſpect all people of all ages, that do as they did.) This people (of the Jewiſh nation) honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me:

7. Howbeit, in vain do they (think to) worſhip me, (by) teaching for doctrines (neceſſary to be obſerved) the commandments of men.

8. For laying aſide the commandment of God, (by obedience to which he is truly honoured,) ye hold (to) the traditions of men, as waſhing of pots and cups, and many other ſuch like things ye do, (which, who hath required at your hands?)

9. And he ſaid to them, Full well ye (or do ye well to) reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition:

10. (As it is plain ye do;) For Moſes ſaid, Honour thy father and thy mother; and whoſo curſeth (or revileth) father or mother, let him die the death:

11. But ye ſay, If a man ſhall ſay to his father or mother, It is (be it as a) Corban, that is to ſay, (as) a gift (conſecrated to God,) by whatſoever thou mayeſt be profited by me; (he is free, i. e. he is bound by that vow not to ſuccour his parent.)

12. And (therefore) ye ſuffer him no more to do ought for his father or mother;

13. Making (thus) the word (i. e. the fifth commandment) of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered (in this matter to the people;) [d] and many ſuch like things do ye.

14. And when he had called all the people (preſent) to him, he ſaid to them, Hearken to me every one of you, and underſtand:

15. There is nothing from without a man, that (by) entring into him, can defile him; but the things which come out of him, thoſe are they which defile the man.

16. If any man hath ears to hear, let him hear; (i. e. he that hath underſtanding to perceive this, let him take notice of it.)

17. And when he was entred into the houſe from the people, his diſciples asked him concerning the (meaning of the) parable:

18. And he ſaith unto them, Are ye ſo without underſtanding alſo, (as to need farther inſtruction in this thing?) Do ye not perceive, that whatſoever thing (it is) from without (that) entreth into a man, it cannot defile him (as to his heart and ſoul?)

19. Becauſe it entreth not into his heart, (to raiſe up evil thoughts there,) but (only) into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats, (by carrying off the dregs of them.)

20. And he ſaid, That which cometh out of a man, that defileth a man (in the ſight of God;)

21. For [e] from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders,

22. Thefts, covetouſneſs, wickedneſs, deceit, laſciviouſneſs, an evil eye, blaſphemy, (or evil ſpeaking,) pride, fooliſhneſs:

23. All theſe evil things come from within, and (ſo) defile the man.

24. And from thence he aroſe, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and (he) entred into an houſe, [f] and would have no man know it, but he could not be hid.

25. For a certain woman, whoſe young daughter had an unclean ſpirit, heard of him, and came, and fell at his feet:

26. The woman was a Greek, (as to religion,) a Syrophœnician by nation; and ſhe beſought him, that he would caſt forth the devil out of her daughter.

27. But Jeſus ſaid to her, Let the children (of the kingdom, Matth. 8. 12.) firſt be filled; for it is not meet to take the childrens bread, and to caſt it to the dogs, (i. e. to them who are without the kingdom, Rev. 22. 15.)

28. And ſhe anſwered, and ſaid unto him, Yes, Lord; (Gr. ναὶ Κύριε, καὶ γὰρ, I pray thee, Lord, for even) the dogs under the table eat of the childrens crumbs; (and, in like manner, thou muſt ſhew a little favour to the Gentiles.)

29. And he ſaid to her, For this ſaying, (ſhewing a more than ordinary faith,) go thy way (ſatisfied, for) the devil is gone out of thy daughter.

30. And when ſhe was come to her houſe, ſhe found the devil gone out (of her,) and her daughter laid upon the bed.

31. And again departing from the coaſts of Tyre and Sidon, he came to the ſea of Galilee, through the midſt of the coaſt of Decapolis:

32. And they bring to him one that was deaf [g], and had an impediment in his ſpeech, (or was tongue-tied,) and they beſeech him to put his hand upon him;

33. And he took him aſide from the multitude, and [h] put his fingers into his ears, and he ſpat, and touched his tongue;

34. And looking up to heaven, he ſighed, (at the conſideration of the miſeries of human life,) and ſaith to him, Ephatha, that is, (Let thine ears) be opened.

35. And

35. And straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.

36. And he charged them that they should tell no man; but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it,

37. And were beyond measure astonished, saying, He hath done all things well; he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. VII.

Ver. 3. [a] Ἐὰν μὴ πυγμῇ νίψωνται, Unless they wash their hands oft;] i. e. if they wash not the hand up to the wrist; for Mr Le Clerc is certainly out, when he interprets a word plainly relating to the Jewish customs, and therefore only to be interpreted by those customs, out of Hesychius and Phavorinus, who knew nothing of them. See Dr Lightfoot in locum.

Ver. 5. [b] Ἔπειτα, Then;] or rather idcirco, therefore: so Zenophon, ἔπειτ' οὐκ οἴει; Do you not therefore think that the gods take care of men?

Ver. 6. [c] Καλῶς προεφήτευσε περὶ ὑμῶν, &c. Well hath Esaias prophesied of you, as it it is written.] He doth not say, Isaias prophesied of the Jews of that age in which Christ lived, or that he then said what by accommodation might be applied to them, but only that he well said of the hypocrites of his age, that which was true of the like hypocrites in any age; and therefore Dr Hammond well paraphraseth the words thus, You are that very sort of Jewish hypocrites of which Isaias prophesied, i. e. you fully do resemble them. See additions N°. 8.

Ver. 13. [d] Καὶ παρόμοια τοιαῦτα πολλὰ ποιεῖτε, And many such things do ye;] i. e. such things as make the word of God of none effect by your traditions: accordingly (a) Dr Pocock cites from them this ancient canon, That vows take place even in things commanded by the law, as well as in things indifferent; and that any one is so bound by them, that he cannot, without great sin, do that which it commanded; so that if he makes a vow, which cannot be ratified without breaking a command, his vow must be ratified, and the commandment violated.

Ver. 21. [e] Ἔσωθεν γὰρ ἐκ τῆς καρδίας, &c. For from within, out of the heart of man, proceed evil thoughts.] The things here mentioned, as coming from the heart, and defiling the man, are either the sins committed against the second table of the law, as they are reckoned up by St Paul, Rom. 13. 9. or the incentives and dispositions which incline us to them:

Against the sixth commandment, as murders, and the evil eye;

Against the seventh, as fornication, adultery, lasciviousness;

Against the eight, as theft, deceit;

Against the ninth, as false testimony, blasphemies, or evil-speaking;

Against the tenth, as covetousness.

The evil frames and dispositions of spirit which incline us to these vices, are, (1.) Ἀφροσύνη, as that imports in the Old Testament, not only an incogitancy and carelessness as to good things, but also a want of reverence to, or awe of the Divine Majesty: and, (2.) Πονηρία, a wicked disposition, inclining us to hurt or to do evil to another. (3.) Ὑπερηφανία, that pride which makes us to contemn and overlook our brother as unworthy our regard, and highly to resent the least affront or seeming injury: and, (4.) Διαλογισμοὶ κακοὶ, evil thoughts, or reasonings.

Ver. 24. [f] Οὐδένα ἤθελε γνῶναι, And would have no man know it,] lest he should seem industriously to resort to, and converse with Heathens, neglecting the Jews. So Grotius.

Ver. 32. [g] Κωφὸν μογιλαλον, one deaf and tongue-tied:] That he was dumb as well as deaf, is argued, not only from the words of the Jews, who saw this miracle, he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak, ver. 37. but also from Matth. 9. 33. Luke 11. 14. if they speak of the same person; for, say they, when the devil was gone out, ἐλάλησεν ὁ κωφὸς, the deaf man spake; which shews, that before he could not move his tongue to make an articulate sound; and in this sense is the word μογιλάλος used, Exod. 4. 10. Isaiah 35. 6.

Ver. 33. [h] Ἔβαλε τοὺς δακτύλους αὐτοῦ εἰς τὰ ὦτα αὐτοῦ, He put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue.] Christ often uses visible signs, to represent that divine invisible virtue which he had in him, and would exert; thus, because deaf persons seem to have their ears closed, he puts his fingers into this man's ears, to intimate, that by his power he would open them; and, because the tongue of the deaf seems to be tied, or through drought to cleave to the palate, Christ touches his tongue, and moistens it with spittle, to intimate, that he would loose, and give free free motion to his tongue. The Jews here also desire Christ to lay his hands upon him, because the ancient prophets laid their hands on those they healed, 2 Kings 5. 11.

CHAP. VIII.

1. IN those days (of his abode by the sea of Galilee, chap. 7. 31.) the multitude (that heard him) being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples to him, and saith to them,

2. I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have (had) nothing to eat:

3. [a] And if I (should) send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint by the way; for divers of them came from far.

4. And his disciples answered him, From whence can a man satisfie these men with bread, (whilst we are) here in the wilderness?

5. And he asked them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven:

6. And he commanded the people to sit down on the ground; and he took the seven loaves, and gave thanks (to God,) and brake (them,) and gave to his disciples to set before them, (i. e. the people,) and they did set them before the people:

7. And they had a few small fishes; and he blessed (God over them,) and commanded (his disciples) to set them also before them:

8. So they did eat, and were filled; and they (of Christ's retinue) took up of the broken meat that was left, seven baskets.

9. And they that had eaten, were about four thousand; and (having thus filled them,) he sent them away.

10. And straightway he entred into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha, (which were within the coasts of Magdala, Matth. 15. 39.)

11. And the Pharisees came forth, and began to question (or dispute) with him (about his office,) seeking of him, (for confirmation of his pretensions to be the Messiah,) a sign from heaven, tempting him, (as doubting whether he could give them that sign of the Messiah promised, Dan. 7. 14.)

12. And he sighed deeply in his spirit, (by reason of their infidelity,) and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a sign? Verily I say to you, [b] (εἰ δοθήσεται, may I not be true, if a sign be given, or) there shall no sign be given to this generation, (save that of the prophet Jonas? Matth. 16. 4.)

13. [c] And he left them; and entring into the ship again, departed to the other side (of the sea of Galilee.)

14. Now the disciples had forgotten to take bread (with them,) neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf.

15. And he charged them, saying, Take heed (to yourselves, and) [d] beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod; (i. e. of the doctrines of the Pharisees, making the commandments of God of none effect by their traditions, and of the doctrine of Herod, concurring in sentiments with the Sadducees, Matth. 16. 6.

16. And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is (i. e. this caution is a reprehension of our negligence,) because we have (taken) no bread (with us.)

17. And when Jesus knew it, (Gr. And Jesus knowing that they reasoned thus,) he saith to them, Why reason ye (thus, as if ye were like to famish) because ye have no bread, (and are bid to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees?) perceive ye not yet, neither (do ye) understand (by the two late instances before your eyes, that I am able to provide bread for you?) [e] Have you your heart yet hardened, (or unconvinced by these miracles?)

18. Having eyes, see ye not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember (what I have done? I ask you then;)

19. When I brake the five loaves among five thousand (persons,) how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say to him, Twelve:

20. And when the seven (loaves were broken) among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven.

21. And he said to them, How is it (then) that ye do not understand (that I could not, upon that account, speak of bread?)

22. And he cometh to Bethsaida, and they bring a blind man to him, and besought him to touch him;

23. And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on (Gr. into) his eyes, and put his hands upon him, (i. e. his eyes;) he asked him if he saw ought.

24. And he looked up and said, I see men as trees walking; (i. e. I see men walking, but I see them so imperfectly, that they seem to me rather like trees than men.)

25. After that, he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up, and (then) he was restored (to his perfect sight,) and saw every man clearly.

26. And he sent him away to his house, saying, [f] Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any (who dwell) in the town.

27. And

27. And Jesus went out, and his disciples, (from Bethsaida, ver. 22.) into the towns of Cæsarea Philippi; and by the way he asked his disciples, saying to them, Whom do men say that I am?

28. And they answered, (Some say thou art) John the Baptist; but some say, (Thou art) Elias; and others, (Thou art) one of the prophets:

29. And he saith to them, But whom say ye that I am? And Peter answereth, and said to him, Thou art the Christ.

30. And he charged them that they should tell no man (this) of him.

31. And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.

32. And he spake that saying openly, (i. e. in the hearing of the people;) and Peter took him, and began to rebuke him (for it, saying, Far be it from thee, this shall not be to thee, Matth. 16. 22.)

33. But when he had turned about, and looked upon his disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, [b] Get thee behind me, Satan, (as in this being to me a tempter, and to men an adversary,) for (in this) thou savourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men; (respecting not the will of God, that I should die for the salvation of men, but the vain traditions of men, that the Messiah the son of David shall not die.)

34. And when he had called the people to him, with his disciples also, he said to them, Whosoever will come after me, let him (not expect to receive temporal advantages from me, as king of the Jews, but let him be ready to) deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

35. [i] For whosoever will, (to) save his life, (refuse thus to follow me, he) shall lose it; but whosoever, (by thus taking up his cross,) shall lose his life, for my sake and the gospels, the same shall save it, (most likely here, most certainly hereafter: and this surely will be his wisdom.)

36. For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul, (or life?)

37. Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? (i. e. What shall it profit a man to have saved his temporal life by being thus ashamed to own me, since this will cause me to be ashamed of him when all men shall be doomed to eternal life, or death?)

38. [k] Whosoever therefore (for whosoever) shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. VIII.

Ver. 3: [a] Καὶ ἐὰν ἀπολύσω αὐτοὺς νήστεις, &c. And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint by the way.] Had there not been such danger, saith Theophylact, Christ had not wrought this miracle, that they might not follow him for loaves; and having done this, he straightway leaves them, ver. 10. that he might avoid their attempts to make him a king, John 6. 15.

Ver. 12. [b] Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, εἰ δοθήσεται τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ σημεῖον. Verily I say unto you, If there shall be a sign given to this generation,] i. e. Let me not live, or let me not be deemed a true prophet. That this is a form of swearing frequent in the Old Testament hath been shewed, note on Heb. 3. 11. and we find it more fully, Ezek. 14. 16. in these words, ζῶ ἐγὼ λέγει Κύριος, ἐὰν υἱοὶ ἢ θυγατέρες ῥυσθήσονται, As I live, they shall neither deliver sons nor daughters; whence it must follow that our Lord cannot be reasonably supposed to forbid all swearing, Matth. 5. 34. see the note there.

Ver. 13. [c] Καὶ ἀφεὶς αὐτοὺς, And he left them and went into the ship again. He left them as incorrigible, saith Theophylact; for where there is hope of doing good, there we are to remain; but when ἀδιόρθωτον τὸ κακὸν, the evil is incorrigible, to depart.

Ver. 15. [d] Βλέπετε ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ τῆς ζύμης Ἡρῴδου, Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod.] It is certain that Josephus never represents the Herodians as a sect of the Jews: whence it is probable that the leaven of the Herodians here is only the leaven of the Sadducees, as may be gathered from St Matthew, who gives us this caution in these words, chap. 16. 16. Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. It may be also noted, that as the Pharisees were inclined to the sect of the Galileans, and thought they ought not to be tributary to the Romans, Matth. 22. 16. so the chief of the Sadduces concurred with Herod in consenting to, and approving that tribute as just and equal, and assisting him in the collecting of it, whence they might be stiled also Herodians, or men of that sect.

Ver. 17. [e] Ἔτι πεπωρωμένην ἔχετε τὴν καρδίαν; Perceive ye not yet, neither understand ye? have ye your hearts yet hardened?] so Mark 6. 52. They considered not the miracle of the loaves, ἦν γὰρ καρδία αὐτῶν πεπωρωμένη, for their heart was hardened; and chap. 16. 14. he upbraids them their unbelief, καὶ σκληροκαρδίαν, and hardness of heart. Now hence it follows, (1.) That the heart may be be hardened without any divine influx concurring to that effect, unleſs it can be thought that God himſelf by a peculiar influx hardened the hearts of Chriſt's apoſtles.

(2.) That the heart is then ſaid to be hardened, when, after full or ſufficient evidence of what we ought to do, or to believe, we neglect to do, or to believe it. Now, this may happen either through incogitance, or want of due conſideration of that evidence, as in the caſe of the apoſtles here, and chap. 6. 52. in both which places the hardneſs of their heart is aſcribed to this, that they conſidered not the miracle of the loaves; or through the weakneſs of their faith, as when they are upbraided with it, chap. 16. 14. Becauſe they believed not them who had ſeen him riſen: in both which caſes it only ſeems to have been a ſin of infirmity. Or this proceeds from that perverſeneſs of the will, or from thoſe evil diſpoſitions and affections of the ſoul, which render us averſe from the performance of what is required, or the belief of what is revealed; as when 'tis ſaid of the Jews, that their hearts were hardened, John 12. 39, 40. and then it is a wilful ſin.

Ver. 23. [f] Ἐξήγαγεν αὐτὸν ἔξω τῆς κώμης, He led him out of the town.] Declaring thoſe of Bethſaida, who had ſeen ſo many miracles in vain, unworthy to behold this miracle. See Matth. 11. 21. whence he permits him not to tell it in the town, ver. 26.

Ver. 26. [g] Μηδὲ εἰς κώμην εἰσέλθῃς, He ſent him away to his houſe, ſaying, Neither go into the town, neither tell it to any one in the town.] The reading of the vulgar, ſi in vicum introieris, and of ſome Greek MSS. ſeems only to have had its riſe from a conceit, that this man's houſe was in the city, which the words of Chriſt ſeem to contradict, viz. And many that wanted cures came to him from other places, whilſt he abode there. The Syriac, Arabic, the Alexandrian copy, and Theophylact read as we do.

See additions, No. 9.

Ver. 33. [h] Ὕπαγε ὀπίσω μου, Σατανᾶ, Get thee behind me, Satan.] He calls Peter Satan, ſaith Theophylact, as favouring of the things of Satan; it being only Satan who would not that our Lord ſhould ſuffer for the ſalvation of mankind.

Ver. 35. [i] Ὃς γὰρ ἂν θέλῃ, Whoſoever will come after me.] Here the note of (a) Athanaſius, and (b) Theophylact is this, θεοσεβείας μὲν ἴδιον μὴ ἀναγκάζειν, ἀλλὰ πείθειν, It is the property of religion not to compel, but to perſuade: for our Lord himſelf not offering violence to any, but giving place to human choice, ſaid to all, If any man will come after me, ἐδένα γὰρ βιάζομαι, for I compel none.

Ver. 38. [k] Ὃς γὰρ ἐπαισχυνθῇ, For whoſoever ſhall be aſhamed of me;] i. e. to own and to confeſs me, and my doctrine, Matth. 10. 32, 33. for, ſaith Theophylact, we being compounded of an outward and an inward man, both muſt be ſanctified, the inward man by faith, the outward by confeſſion of it, Rom. 10. 18.

CHAP. IX.

1. AND he ſaid to them, Verily I ſay to you, That there be ſome of them that ſtand here, which ſhall not taſte of death, till they have ſeen the kingdom of God come with power, (to take away their lives who would deſtroy mine to preſerve their own, John 11. 50.)

2. And after [a] ſix days, Jeſus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high [b] mountain apart by themſelves; and he was transfigured before them:

3. And his raiment became ſhining, exceeding white as ſnow, ſo as no fuller on earth can white them; (i. e. like the inhabitants of heaven, clothed with white raiment, Rev. 4. 4.)

4. And there appeared to them Elias with Moſes, and they were talking with Jeſus; (and by their talk they knew them to be Moſes and Elias.)

5. And Peter anſwered, (i. e ſpake with relation to what he had ſeen. See note on Luke 14. 3.) and ſaid to Jeſus, Maſter, it is good for us to be here, and (καὶ, therefore) let us make three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moſes, and one for Elias.

6. For he wiſt not what to ſay, for they were ſore afraid; (i. e. and this he ſaid, being the moſt forward of them to ſpeak, though, being ſtruck with the ſame dread that ſeized on the other two, he knew not whether he ſaid well or ill, or what was indeed adviſeable or not.)

7. And there was a cloud that overſhadowed them, and a voice came out of the cloud, ſaying, This is my beloved Son, hear him.

8. And ſuddenly when they had looked round about, they ſaw no man any more, ſave Jeſus only with themſelves.

9. And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them that they ſhould tell no man what things they had ſeen, till the Son of man was riſen from the dead.

10. And they kept that ſaying with themſelves, queſtioning questioning one with another, [c] what the rising (of their Messiah) from the dead should mean? (i. e. how it could be reconciled with their tradition, that the Messiah, the son of David, should not die, John 12. 34.)

11. And they asked him, saying, (If thou hast done already what was required of the Messiah, and so art about to die,) [d] Why say the scribes that Elias must first come (to anoint the Messiah, and make him known to the people?)

12. And he answered, and told them, [e] Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all things, (i. e. doth all things requisite to prepare the Jews for the reception of the Messiah, calling them to repentance, that they might be fitted to believe in him, pointing him out to the people, and baptising him with that baptism in which he was anointed with the Holy Ghost:) and (in answer to their first doubt, he told them) [f] how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be set at nought.

13. But (as to your enquiry about the coming of Elias,) I say to you, [g] That (the) Elias (who was to do these things) is indeed come, and they have done to him whatsoever they listed, (rejecting his baptism, Luke 7. 30. and his testimony, Mark 11. 31.) as it is written of him (that he should come.)

14. And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them, (whether the power of their Master did extend to the casting out of devils.)

15. And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, (seeing some remainders of the splendour at his transfiguration in his visage,) and running to him (they) saluted him.

16. And he asked the scribes (about) what question ye with them?

17. And one of the multitude answered, and said, Master, I have (now) brought to thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit, (i. e. a spirit which takes away his speech.)

18. And whersoever he taketh him, [h] he teareth him, (or throws him down,) and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth (or fainteth) away, and I spake to thy disciples, that they should cast him out, and they could not; (this raised the dispute betwixt them and the scribes.)

19. (And) He answered him and saith, (to the scribes,) O faithless generation! how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you (r incredulity?) bring him (that is possessed) to me.

20. And they brought him to him; and when he saw him, straightway the spirit tare him, (or shook him,) and he fell on the ground, and wallowed, foaming:

21. And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? and he said, Of a child;

22. And oft times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him; but if thou canst do any thing (to deliver him from this evil spirit,) have compassion on us, and help us, (me and him:)

23. (And) Jesus said to him, [i] If thou canst believe (that I am able to do this) all things are possible to him that (thus) believeth:

24. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief (or what is wanting to my faith.)

25. When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying to him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee come out of him, and enter no more into him.

26. And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, (or shook him much,) and (then) came out of him; and he was as one dead, insomuch that many said, He is dead.

27. But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up, and he arose.

28. And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out?

29. And he said to them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by (that faith which is to be procured by) prayer and fasting.

30. And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee, and he would not that any should know it; (that the concourse of the multitude might not retard his journey to Jerusalem, where he was to suffer.)

31. For he taught his disciples, and said to them, The Son of man is (to be) delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him, and after that he is killed, he shall rise (again) the third day.

32. But they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him (what the import of it was.)

33. And he came to Capernaum; and being in the house, he asked them (about) What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

34. But they held their peace; for by the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest.

35. And he sat down and called the twelve, and saith to them, If any man desire to be first (in my kingdom,) the same shall be last of all, and servant of all; (the highest offices in my kingdom tending not so much to dignify and advantage any man in this world, as to render him the more a ſervant, and miniſter to all.)

36. And (having ſaid this) he took a child, and ſet him in the midſt of them, (as a fit emblem of that humility and freedom from worldly-mindedneſs he required in them;) and when he had taken him in his arms, he ſaid to them,

37. Whoſoever ſhall receive one of ſuch children, (i. e. any of my ſervants, ſo free from pride and love of the world as they are,) in my name, receiveth me; and whoſoever ſhall receive me, receiveth not me (only,) but (alſo) him that ſent me.

38. And John anſwered him (to thoſe words ſpoken of receiving him,) ſaying, Maſter, [k] we ſaw one caſting out devils in thy name, and (but) he followeth not us, and we forbad him becauſe he followeth not us.

39. But Jeſus ſaid, Forbid him not; for there is no man who ſhall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly, (i. e. eaſily be induced to) ſpeak evil of me:

40. For he that is not againſt us (in beating down the kingdom of Satan) is on our part, (and ſo is to be owned as one that doth me ſervice, and ſo as one whom God will reward.)

41. [l] For whoſoever ſhall give you a cup of water to drink, (or do you the leaſt ſervice,) in my name, becauſe you belong to Chriſt, verily I ſay unto you, he ſhall not loſe his reward:

42. And (on the other ſide,) whoſoever ſhall offend one of theſe little ones that believe in me, (and ſo diſcourage them from continuing in my doctrine,) it is better for him that a milſtone were hanged about his neck, and he were caſt into the ſea.

43. And (therefore) if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into [m] hell, into the fire that never ſhall be quenched;

44. Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched, (i. e. where the body is conſumed, and the ſoul tormented for ever.)

45. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be caſt into hell, (i. e.) into the fire that never ſhall be quenched;

46. Where their worm dieth not, and (where) the fire is not quenched.

47. And if thine eye, (i. e. of any thing that ſeems moſt dear and uſeful to thee,) offend thee, (i. e. hinder thy entrance into life,) pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be caſt into hell fire;

48. Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

49. [n] For every one (that thus offends) ſhall be ſalted with fire, (ſo as to endure for ever in a ſtate of torment,) and every ſacrifice, (ſaith the ſcripture, even the whole burnt offering) ſhall be ſalted with ſalt, (the ſymbol of incorruption.)

50. Salt is good, (to make things ſavoury, and to preſerve them from corruption;) but if the ſalt have loſt its ſaltneſs, wherewith will ye ſeaſon it? (If by keeping theſe offending members, or corrupt affections, you corrupt yourſelves, and became unſavoury, and like a ſacrifice without ſalt, you can never be acceptable to God;) have (therefore) ſalt in yourſelves, and have peace, (the bond of unity,) one with another.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. IX.

Ver. 2. [a] Μεθ' ἡμέρας ἓξ, After ſix days.] So alſo Matth. 17. 1. ὡσεὶ ἡμέραι ὀκτώ, about eight days after, Luke 9. 29. For Matthew and Mark computing only the days betwixt this diſcourſe of Chriſt, and the day he went up into the mount, ſtile them ſix days only; but St Luke, including both the days of his diſcourſe and his aſcent, ſaith they were eight: and this is evident from the word ὡσεὶ, which, when a ſum is mentioned, is always added to ſignify it is not exact, but wanteth ſomething to make it complete; thus Chriſt was ὡσεὶ ἐτῶν τριάκοντα, i. e. beginning to be thirty, Luke 3. 23. It was ὡσεὶ ὥρα ἕκτη, inclining to the ſixth hour, Luke 23. 44. So Matth. 14. 21. Luke 1. 56.—22. 59. John 4. 6.—19. 14. Acts 2. 41.—4. 4.—5. 36.—10. 3.

Ibid. [b] Into an high mountain.] That this was mount Tabor, antiquity hath conſtantly taught and believed; yet Dr Lightfoot queſtions the truth of this tradition upon two accounts: 1. That Chriſt, in the ſtory going before, was on the coaſts of Cæſarea Philippi, Matth. 16. 12. Mark 8. 27. Luke 19. 18. and can we think, ſays he, that he travelled thence to Tabor, through almoſt the whole length of Galilee? Anſ. This he might do with eaſe in the ſpace of ſix days; and that he did ſo, is made very probable from the very words of the ſame chapter, which repreſent him and his diſciples as ἀναστρεφόμενοι; returning thence, Matth. 17. 22. and going through Galilee, Mark 9. 29. As for what he adds, that the evangeliſts mention no change of place, will be anſwered by his note on chap. 10. 1. For, ſaith he, however it ſeems to be intimated by our evangeliſt, and by St Matthew, that when he had finiſhed theſe words, forthwith he entered upon his journey, yet, in truth, he went before to Jerusalem, through the midst of Samaria, to the feast of tabernacles, Luke 9. 51. and again from Galilee, after he had returned thither through the cities and towns to Jerusalem, Luke 13. 22. to the feast of dedication, John 10. 22. and again beyond Jordan indeed, John 10 40. but first taking his way into Galilee, and thence beyond Jordan: so that hence, we see, the silence of the text is no sure evidence that Christ made no such journey. The other things he offers seem too little to deserve consideration.

Ver. 10. [c] Συζητοῦντες τί ἐστι τὸ ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆναι. And they kept that saying to themselves, questioning among themselves what the rising from the dead should mean.] They questioned not the general resurrection, for that all the Pharisees believed, Acts 24. 15. that Martha owned, John 11. 24. nor could they be ignorant of the meaning of the raising of a particular person from the dead, for they had instances of it in the Old Testament, and had seen an example of it at the gates of the city Naim, with their eyes; but being taught out of the law, that Christ was to abide for ever, John 12. 34. and that the Son of David should reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there should be no end, Luke 1. 33. they knew not how to reconcile this with the death of Christ, supposed in that saying, the Son of man shall rise from the dead. Thus again, when Christ had told them the Son of man shall be killed, and after that shall rise from the dead, ver. 31. they understood not that saying, ver. 32. and yet, doubtless, they knew what it was to be killed, and that our Saviour spake of his own death; whence these words made them very sorry, Matth. 17. 23. and yet St Luke saith, chap. 9. 44. that they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them that they perceived it not; and chap. 18. 34. they understood none of those things, and knew not what was said; and here they understood not the saying, i. e. they knew not how to reconcile this death of the Son of David and their King Messiah with the predictions of their prophets, and their own conceptions touching his temporal kingdom. Hence, when Christ was dead, their hopes died with him, i. e. their trust that he had been the Redeemer of Israel, Luke 24. 21. and revived again at his resurrection, they presently enquiring, Wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?

Ver. 11. [d] And they asked him, saying, ὅτι λέγουσιν οἱ γραμματεῖς ὅτι Ἠλίαν δεῖ ἐλθεῖν πρῶτον; Why say the scribes that Elias must first come?] That ὅτι must signify why, is evident, because the same question in St Matthew, chap. 17. 10. runs thus, τί οὖν; why therefore say the scribes: ὅτι here, therefore, must be put for διὰ τοῦτο; so ver. 28. ὅτι ἡμεῖς οὐκ ἠδυνήθημεν; why could not we cast him out? So Homer odyss. 19. they asked him ὀλοὸν ὅτι πάθοι; why he had that fear? And Aristophanes Plut. 1. 19. ὅτι τῷ δ' ἀκολουθοῦμεν πόται; why do we follow him? This may suffice for the grammatical import of the words; but 'tis more difficult to assign the reason of this question. My conjecture is, that it relates to that title of the Messiah, Dan. 7. 13. the Son of man, here used, and to the voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son; as if they should have said, If thou art indeed the King Messiah, and the Son of God, and hast so far accomplished thy office, as to talk of a death which thou must suffer at Jerusalem, why is not Elias come to anoint thee, and to preach of thee? For the tradition of the scribes was, 1. That before the coming of the Son of David, Elias was to come to preach of him. Lightfoot in Matth. 17. 10. 2. That (a) Elias was to anoint the Messiah to his office, and that before that unction the Messiah could do nothing, he being to manifest him to the world, saith Trypho. To this enquiry our Saviour here first answers in the following verse; and then to their scruple about his passion.

Ver. [e] 12. And he answered and told them, Ἠλίας μὲν ἐλθὼν πρῶτον ἀποκαθιστᾷ πάντα, Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all things.] How Elias did this, see note on Matth. 11. 14. And note, that the Jews themselves did not conceive that Elias should do this work so effectually as to turn all the Jews to God, but only so as to deliver them from the terrible day of the Lord who would turn to him.

So (b) David Kimchi, When God shall bring Elias to life in the body, he shall send him to Israel before the day of judgment, which is the great and terrible day of the Lord, and he shall admonish both the fathers and the children together to turn to God, and they that turn shall be delivered from the day of judgment.

Ibid. [f] Καὶ πῶς γέγραπται, And how it is written;] i. e. and in answer to their other scruple, how the Son of man could die, he told them also, from the scriptures, how it was foretold that he should suffer many things.

Ver. 13. [g] But I say unto you, καὶ Ἠλίας ἐλήλυθε, καὶ ἐποίησαν αὐτῷ ὅσα ἠθέλησαν καθὼς γέγραπται ἐπ' αὐτόν, Elias is both come (and they have done to him whatsoever they listed) as it is written of him.] Since we find nothing in the Old Testament which foretells of any thing the Jews should do, either to Elias in perſon revived, or to John the Baptiſt, it ſeems requiſite to place theſe words (and they have done to him as they would) in a parentheſis, and to admit here the figure συγχυσις, or ſuch a tranſpoſition of the words as is uſual in other places both of the Old and the New Teſtament. So Gen. 13. 10. And Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, (before the Lord deſtroyed Sodom and Gomorrah) even as the garden of the Lord. Exod. 12. 15. Whoſoever eateth leavened bread (that ſoul ſhall be cut off from Iſrael,) from the firſt day until the ſeventh day. Mark 12. 12. And they ſought to lay hold on him, (for they knew that he had ſpoken the parable againſt them) but they feared the people, and they left him. Rom. 1. 13. I purpoſed to come to you, (but was let hitherto) that I might have ſome fruit among you. See Cant. 1. 5. Mark 16. 3, 4. Acts 8. 7. So that the ſenſe of theſe words ſeems to be this; Elias is come, as it is written of him in Malachi, and they, the ſcribes and Phariſees, have done to him whatſoever they liſted, rejecting his baptiſm, Luke 7. 30. and refuſing to believe his doctrine, Matth. 21. 25. See additions, No. 10.

Ver. 18. [h] It teareth him, and he foameth and gnaſheth with his teeth, καὶ ξηραίνεται, and pineth away; Luke 9. 39. καὶ σπαράσσει αὐτὸν, μετ' ἀφροῦ, it teareth him that he foameth again.] Here note, 1. That the word ῥήσσει αὐτὸν, and ἔῤῥηξεν αὐτὸν, Luke 9. 52. being ſpoken of an epileptic perſon, are not well rendered he teareth him, but rather ſignifies, as Heſychius and Phavorinus ſay, τυπτει αὐτὸν, he beateth him, or makes him fall to the ground, beating himſelf againſt the earth; or, as Euſtachius and Phavorinus ſay, the word in Homer ſignifies σφοδρότερον τὴν γην πίπτει παίων, i. e. the evil ſpirit working with, or taking advantage of his diſeaſe, makes him beat himſelf againſt the earth, ἐλαφίζει καὶ περιρέιπει τῇ γῇ, He throws him to the ground, ſaith Theophylact. So Wiſd. 4. 19. the author, ſpeaking of the wicked, ſaith, ὅτι ῥίψει αὐτοὺς κατω νεῖς, God will caſt them down headlong, and ſhake them out of their foundations. 2. The word ξηραίνεται ſignifies, not only to be dried up, and ſo pine away, but alſo, to be under a conſternation, and to faint. Iſa. 37. 27. they were of ſmall power, they were diſmayed, καὶ ἐξηράνθησαν. Zach. 10. 2. ἐξηράνθησαν ὡς πρόβατα, as the flock they were troubled; whence it is rendered by Theophylact, λειποθυμεῖ, he is in a deliquium. The word σπαράσσειν alſo ſignifies not only to tear and diſcerp, but alſo to move and ſhake. So Phavorinus, σπαραττόμεθα, ταράττομεθα. So Pſal. 18. 8. the foundations of the mountains, ἐσαλεύθησαν καὶ ἐσαλεύθησαν, were troubled, and ſhook, that is, 2 Sam. 22. 8. καὶ ἐσπαράχθησαν. Jer. 4. 19. My heart maketh a noiſe, or moveth in me, Seventy σπαράσσεται ἡ καρδία μου. So here, ver. 20. ἐσπάραξεν, the ſpirit ſhook him.

Ver. 23. [i] Τὸ εἰ δύνασαι πιστεῦσαι. If thou canſt believe this,] viz. That I can help thee; or if thou canſt believe this thing. So Rom. 12. 9. τὸ γὰρ, for this, thou ſhalt not commit adultery. Eph. 4. 9. τὸ δὲ ἀνέβη, but the thing that he aſcended. Luke 22. 24. there was a contention τὸ, viz. this, who ſhould be greateſt? So Juſtin M. τὸ πῶς περὶ Θεοῦ λέγειν, 'Tis an argument of incredulity to ſay of God, how? and τὸ μηδὲν ἄρα, this ſaying, ne quid nimis, much delights me. See additions, No. 11.

Ver. 38. [k] Εἴδομεν τινα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου ἐκβάλλοντα δαιμόνια, We ſaw a man caſting out devils in thy name, and we forbad him, becauſe he follows not us.] That this man did truly caſt out devils, Chriſt's anſwer ſuppoſes, and his diſciples ſaw with their eyes; 'tis alſo certain that he did this in the name of Chriſt: but that he did it by invocation of the name of Jeſus of Nazareth, is not ſo certain; for he might be a diſciple of John, and ſo do this in the name of Chriſt ſhortly to come. For if he ſtedfaſtly believed that Jeſus of Nazareth was the Chriſt, 'tis hard to give a reaſon why he did not follow him, or join himſelf to Chriſt's diſciples. However, it was no ſmall confirmation of the truth of Chriſtianity, that his name was thus powerful even among thoſe that did not follow him, and therefore could do nothing by compact with him. This man, ſaith Chriſt, do not forbid; for he that purſues the ſame end with us, the beating down of Satan's kingdom, cannot be againſt us, but rather for us; and he who finds ſo ſenſibly the power of my name, cannot ſpeak evil of me. See examen Millii.

Ver. 41. [l] Ὃς γὰρ ἂν ποτίσῃ ὑμᾶς ποτήριον ὕδατος, For whoſoever ſhall give you a cup of cold water in my name, becauſe ye belong to Chriſt, verily I ſay to you, he ſhall not loſe his reward.] The particle γὰρ ſhews the connection of theſe words with the preceding, which ſeemeth to be thus; Even the leaſt ſervice done to me, by owning any one for my name's ſake, ſhall be rewarded, and much more the labour which this man ſhews in divulging the honour of my name, and aſſiſting me in beating down the kingdom of Satan.

Ver. 43, 44. [m] Ἀπελθεῖν εἰς γέενναν εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ ἄσβεστον ὅπου ὁ σκώληξ αὐτῶν οὐ τελευτᾷ καὶ τὸ πῦρ οὐ σβέννυται, Than having two hands to be caſt into hell, where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.] Theſe words ſeem plainly taken from Iſa. 66. 24. where they exactly may be found; and it ſeems seems reasonable to interpret them according to the received opinion of the Jews, since otherwise our Lord, by using this expression frequently in speaking to them who would be sure to understand it in the usual sense, without saying any thing to shew he did not understand it as they did, must have strengthened them in their error. Now it is certain,

1*st*, That Gehenna was by them still looked on and represented as the place in which the wicked were to be tormented by fire: so the (c) Jerusalem Targum represents Gehenna which is prepared for the wicked in the world to come, as a furnace sparkling and flaming with fire, into which the wicked fall. And the Targum upon Ecclesiastes speaks of the fire of hell, Eccles. 9. 15. of the sparks of the fire of hell, chap. 10. 11. and of the wicked who shall go to be burned in hell, chap. 8. 10. Accordingly our Lord speaks here, ver. 47. and Matth. 5. 22. of the wicked being cast into the fire of hell, and of their being cast into a furnace of fire, Matth. 13. 42.

2*dly*, The ancient Jews held that the punishments of the wicked in hell should be perpetual, or without end. So Judith saith, that κλαύσονται ἐν ἀδίσιν ἐπ' αἰῶνος, they shall weep under the sense of their pains for ever, chap. 16. 17. (d) Josephus informs us that the Pharisees held the souls of the wicked were to be punished, ἀιδίῳ τιμωρίᾳ, with perpetual punishment, and that there was appointed for them, εἱρκτὸς ἀϊδίου, a perpetual prison. (e) Philo saith, the punishment of the wicked person is ζῆν ἀποθανόντα ἀεὶ, to live for ever dying; and δακνίζεσθαι ἐν ἀλγηδόσι καὶ ὀδύναις, καὶ ζυμφοραῖς ἀδιαλείπτοις, take for ever in pains and griefs, and calamities that never cease: accordingly our Lord continually saith of them, that they shall go away into eternal punishment, and that their worm dieth not, and their fire is not quenched, and that God will destroy their soul and body in hell fire, Matth. 18. 8.—25. 41. Luke 3. 17. Whence I collect,

1*st*, That though it is not to be doubted that the worm not dying is to be taken tropically for the worm of conscience, yet shall the bodies of the wicked suffer in fire properly so called; this being suitable, not only to the tradition of the Jewish and the Christian church, but to the constant phraseology of the scriptures, declaring that the tree that brings not forth good fruit, the fruitless branch, the chaff, shall be cast into the fire, and be burnt with unquenchable fire, Matth. 3. 10, 12.—13. 50. John 15. 6. that the wicked shall go into everlasting fire; their souls and bodies shall be cast into hell fire, Matth. 10. 28.—25. 45. that they shall be punished with flaming fire, 2 Thess. 1. 8. suffer the vengeance of eternal fire, Jude 7. the heavens and earth being reserved to fire for the punishment of ungodly men, 2 Peter 3. 10.

2*dly*, That the punishment of wicked men shall be eternal. That this was the constant opinion of the Christian church, see note on Heb. 6 2. and that this punishment is consistent with divine justice and goodness, see appendix to 2 Thess. 1.

Ver. 49. [Πᾶς γὰρ πυρὶ ἁλισθήσεται, καὶ πᾶσα θυσία ἁλὶ ἁλισθήσεται. For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt.] These words may be referred to the preceding, respecting the punishment of those wicked men, who will not cut off those offending eyes, feet, or hands, which render them obnoxious to future punishments; and then the import of them will be to this effect, Every wicked man shall be seasoned with fire itself, so as to become inconsumeable, and shall endure for ever to be tormented, and therefore may be said to be salted with fire, in allusion to that property of salt which is to preserve things from corruption. To strengthen this interpretation, consider,

1*st*, The connexion of the words, where their worm dieth not, and where the fire is not quenched, πᾶς γὰρ αὐτῶν, for every one (of them) shall be salted with fire; where the illative particle γὰρ, for, shews, that these words are designed as a proof of the words preceding. Consider,

2*dly*, From whence those words, Their worm dieth not, and their fire is not quenched, are taken, viz. from Isaiah 66. ult. where they run thus; They shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of those men that have transgressed against me; for their worm shall not die, nor shall their fire be quenched: which words plainly belong to the wicked, and to them alone; and so the proof of them, in this verse, must belong to them only. Note,

3*dly*, That the word πᾶς must refer therefore to the same persons, as if it had been said expressly, πᾶς γὰρ αὐτῶν, for every one (of them) whose fire is not quenched shall be salted with, or in the fire, i. e. preserved from corruption, or by it; so chap. 12. 44. πάντες γὰρ, for all, i. e. πάντες οἱ πλέσιον ὄντες, all those rich men cast in, out of their superfluities: so Luke 16. 16. the kingdom of heaven is preached, καὶ πᾶς, and every one (viz. who believes) presseth into it: and Luke 21. 32. this generation shall not pass away ἂν πάντα γένηται, till all things be done, i. e. πάντα ταῦτα, all those things now mentioned, Matth. 24. 35. Mark 13. 30. See many other instances in Grotius. Note,

4*thly*, That these words, καὶ πᾶσα θυσία ὑμῶν, may be rendered thus; For every sacrifice shall be seasoned

(c) In Gen. 15. 17. p. 713. D. E. (d) De bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 12. p. 788. Antiq. l. 18. c. 2. (e) De præm. & pœn.

ſeaſoned with ſalt, even the whole burnt offerings, (which anſwer here to the whole body) as well as others; and then they will be a proof of the former, from the precept concerning ſacrifices, Lev 2. 13. That the particle καὶ, frequently ſignifies for, appears from many examples; ſo Exod. 5. 23. καὶ ἀφ' οὗ, for from the time that I ſpake to Pharaoh; Joſh. 1. 5. καὶ ὅσπερ ἦμην, for as I was with Moſes. See alſo chap. 22. 25. 1 Sam. 2. 15. καὶ ἐ μὴ λάβω, for I will not take ſodden fleſh; Pſal. 108. 12. ſend us help from trouble, καὶ μάταια, for vain is the help of man; Iſaiah 64. 5. Thou waſt angry, καὶ ἡμεῖς, for we have ſinned; Mic. 7. 8. καὶ ἀναστήσομαι for I ſhall riſe up again. Note,

5*thly*, That it is the property of ſalt to preſerve things from corruption: hence a covenant of ſalt is put for an everlaſting or inviolable covenant. So Numb. 18. 19. διαθήκη ἁλὸς αἰωνίου ἔστιν ἐναντίον Κυρίου, it is a covenant of ſalt for ever before the Lord. And 2 Chron. 13. 5. God gave David and his ſons kings over Iſrael for ever, by a covenant of ſalt. Whence the Jews ſay, ſalt was to ſeaſon all their ſacrifices; to ſignify, that they preſerved their ſouls from corruption, as the ſalt did the ſacrifice. Philo, that ſalt is a ſymbol, διαμονῆς καὶ τῆς συμπάντων, of the perpetuity of all things, preſerving that on which it is ſprinkled; de victimis, p. 647. F. And on thoſe words, With every oblation you ſhall offer ſalt, δι' ἧς τὴν εἰσάπαν διαμονὴν αἰνίττεται, φυλακτήριον γὰρ αἱ ἅλες σωμάτων τετιμημένοι ψυχῆς δευτερείοις· By this, ſaith (f) Philo, he ſignifies the perpetual duration of them; ſalt being the preſervation of bodies next to the ſoul itſelf; for as the ſoul is the cauſe that our bodies are not corrupted, ſo is ſalt preſerving them for a long time, καὶ τρόπον τινὰ ἀθανατίζουσες, and rendering them in a manner incorruptible. If, then, by keeping theſe offenſive members, or corrupt affections, you render your Chriſtianity ſuch as hath loſt its ſavour, and like a ſacrifice without ſalt, you can never be acceptable to God: retain, therefore, your Chriſtian wiſdom or piety, and preſerve peace, the bond of unity, among yourſelves.

Others interpret the words thus: Let it not ſeem a hard ſaying, that I require your abſciſſion of theſe offenſive members; for every ſacrifice, that it may be grateful and acceptable to God, muſt be ſalted with fire: for the fire muſt prove every man's action, and it will not receive its reward till it hath paſſed through the fire of tribulation, 1 Cor. 3. 13, 14. and he be purged from his droſs by it, as gold is, διὰ πυρὸς δοκιμαζόμενον, 1 Pet. 1. 7. See chap. 4. 12. 'Tis then more deſirable, here, to endure this trial by fire, and communion with Chriſt in his ſufferings, that ye may rejoice at his appearance, than to fall into that fire which will never be extinguiſhed. 'Tis therefore good to have this ſalt in yourſelves, this Chriſtian wiſdom, which will preſerve you from corruption, and that peace which will preſerve the Chriſtian body from it. Like this is that expreſſion of Joſephus, concerning one of the ſeven children roaſted in the fire, ὥσπερ ἐν πυρὶ μεταχυμαζόμενον εἰς ἀφθαρσίαν, he is transformed into incorruption, as it were by fire; Lib. de Maccab. p. 1093. D. And in this ſenſe Irenæus ſaith, Tribulation is neceſſary for the children of God, ut igniti apti ſint ad convivium regis, that, being ſalted with fire, they may be fit for the banquet of the king, l. 5. c. 28.

CHAP. X.

1. AND he aroſe from thence (from Capernaum, chap. 9. 33.) and cometh into the coaſts of Judea by the farther ſide of Jordan; and the people reſort to him again; and as he was wont, he taught them again.

2. And the Phariſees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him; (i. e. by that queſtion thinking he might be induced to ſpeak ſomething againſt the law of Moſes.)

3. And he anſwered and ſaid to them, [a] What did Moſes command you?

4. And they ſaid, Moſes ſuffered (us) to write a bill of divorcement, and (ſo) to put her away.

5. And Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid to them, For the hardneſs of your heart, (which would not ſuffer you to perceive, and yield to the firſt inſtitution of matrimony,) he wrote you this precept, (that if you would put away your wife, you ſhould do it by giving her a bill of divorce;)

6. But from the beginning [b] of the creation, God (ſhewed he would have it otherwiſe; for he) made them male and female, (ſaying, Gen. 22. 24.)

7. For this cauſe ſhall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife;

8. And they twain ſhall be one fleſh; (ſo as they are not one fleſh with father or mother:) ſo then they, (after the matrimonial duty,) are no more twain, but one fleſh:

9. What therefore God hath (thus) joined together, let no man, (under the goſpel diſpenſation, preſume to) put aſunder.

10. And (when he was) in the houſe, his diſciples asked him again of the ſame matter:

11. And

(f) Περὶ θυσιῶν, p. 659.

11. And he saith to them, (according to the primitive institution of matrimony,) [c] Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her, (she being by that institution still his wife, and so having the sole right over his body, 1 Cor. 7. 4.)

12. And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, (as hath of late been done among you,) she committeth adultery (against him, as being still his wife, and not having power over her own body, but the husband, ibid.)

13. And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them; and his disciples rebuked those that brought them:

14. But when Jesus saw (i. e. perceived) it, he was much displeased, and said to them, Suffer little children to come to me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God: (and if of such as resemble them in disposition, why should they whom they are to resemble be unfit for that kingdom?)

15. Verily I say to you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, (i. e. with the same freedom from vain glory, and the love of the world, which is in them,) he shall not enter therein.

16. And he took them up in his arms, and put his hands upon them, and blessed them:

17. And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good master, what shall I do, that I may inherit eternal life?

18. And Jesus said to him, Why callest thou me good, (seeing) there is none good but one, that is, God? (Dost thou own me as one commissionated by him to teach the way of life? I shall then do it according to his will, by saying,)

19. Thou knowest the commandments, (viz.) Do not commit adultery; Do not kill; Do not steal; Do not bear false witness; [d] Defraud not; Honour thy father and (thy) mother; (do this, and thou shalt live.)

20. And he answered, and said to him, Master, all these things have I observed from my youth.

21. Then Jesus beholding him, [e] loved him, and said to him, One thing thou (yet) lackest (to render thee my disciple;) go thy way, (and at my command) sell whatsoever thou hast, and give (it) to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and (then) come, and take up the cross, and follow me:

22. And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved; for he had great possessions.

23. And Jesus looked round about, and saith to his disciples, [f] How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God?

24. And the disciples were astonished at his words; but Jesus answereth again, and saith to them, Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches, to enter into the kingdom of God?

25. It is easier for a camel (or cable) to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man (thus trusting in his riches, as in things which make him happy,) to enter into the kingdom of God.

26. And they (who heard this) were astonished above measure (at it,) saying, among themselves, Who then can be saved?

27. And Jesus looking upon them, saith, With men it is impossible, (i. e. human persuasion cannot work men off from this love of the world,) but (this is) not (impossible) with (to) God; for with God all things are possible.

28. Then Peter began to say to him, Lo, we have left all and followed thee.

27. And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say to you, there is no man who hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospels;

30. But he shall receive an hundred fold, now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, (i. e. shall find men more affectionate to him than these relations, and receive greater blessings than he parts with here,) with persecutions, and in the world to come eternal life.

31. [g] But many that are first shall be last, and the last (shall be) first. (See the note here.)

32. And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem, [h] and Jesus went before them; and they were amazed (that Christ would thus go into the mouth of the Sanhedrim, who had resolved to kill him:) and as they followed, they were afraid (of what might befal them, being his disciples:) and he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen to him,

33. Saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and the Son of man shall be delivered up to the chief priests, and to the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles;

34. And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him, and the third day he shall rise again.

35. [i] And James, and John, the sons of Zebedee, come to him (by their mother,) saying, Master, we would that thou shouldst do for us whatsoever we shall desire.

36. And he said to them, What would ye that I should do for you?

37. They said to him, Grant to us that we may sit, ſit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left, in thy glory.

38. But Jeſus ſaid to them, Ye know not what (it is) you ask; (the higheſt place in my glory being the reward of the higheſt ſufferings:) can ye (then) drink of the cup that I (am to) drink of? and be baptized with the baptiſm that I am (to be) baptized with? (i. e. can ye ſuffer as I am to do?)

39. And they ſaid to him, We can. And Jeſus ſaid to them, Ye ſhall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptiſm that I am baptized withal, ſhall ye be baptized, (i. e. ſhall ſuffer for my ſake:)

40. But to ſit on my right hand, and on my left hand, [k] is not mine to give (to any others,) but it ſhall be given to them for whom it is prepared.

41. And when the ten heard it, they began to be much diſpleaſed with James and John, (for deſiring precedency above them in Chriſt's kingdom.)

42. But Jeſus calleth them to him, and ſaith to them, Ye know that they which are [l] accounted to rule over the Gentiles, exerciſe lordſhip over them, (commanding them as their ſervants;) and their great ones exerciſe authority upon them (at their pleaſure.)

43. But ſo ſhall it not be among you; but whoſoever will be great among you, ſhall be your miniſter:

44. And whoſoever of you will be the chiefeſt, ſhall (by that office) be (come the) ſervant of all:

45. For even the Son of man came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter, and to give his life a ranſom for many, (and ſo muſt it be with his diſciples.)

46. And they came to Jericho; and as [m] he went out of Jericho with his diſciples and a great number of people, blind Bartimeus, the ſon of Timeus, ſat by the way-ſide begging, (and another with him:)

47. And when he heard that it was Jeſus of Nazareth (that came that way,) he began to cry out, and ſay, Jeſus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me; (and ſo ſaid the other alſo, Matth. 20. 30.)

48. And many charged him, that he ſhould hold his peace; but he cried the more a great deal, Thou Son of David have mercy on me.

49. And Jeſus ſtood ſtill, and commanded him to be called; and they called the blind man, ſaying to him, Be of good comfort, riſe, he calleth thee:

50. And he caſting away his garment, roſe, and came to Jeſus;

51. And Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid to him, What wilt thou that I ſhould do to thee? The blind man ſaid to him, Lord, (I ask) that I might receive my ſight:

52. And Jeſus ſaid to him, Go thy way, thy faith hath made thee whole; and immediately he received his ſight, and followed Jeſus in the way.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. X.

Ver. 3. [a] Τί ὑμῖν ἐνετείλατο Μωσῆς; What did Moſes command you?] There ſeems to be a difference here betwixt St Matthew and St Mark, not much taken notice of by interpreters; St Mark introducing Chriſt asking them what Moſes commanded in this caſe; St Matthew introducing them asking Chriſt, Why then did Moſes command us to write a bill of divorce? &c. But this ſeeming difference may be removed by ſaying, They firſt asked him, Why did Moſes command? and then our Saviour asked them what were the words of Moſes in this caſe; and, when they had repeated them, he tells them the reaſon why Moſes gave them this permiſſion.

Ver. 6. [b] Ἀπὸ δὲ ἀρχῆς κτίσεως, From the beginning of the creation.] The word κτίσεως is found in the Alexandrian copy, and in Theophylact, and is interpreted by the vulgar and the Arabic, and extant in moſt copies, and therefore is not to be ſuſpected becauſe not found in Beza's copy, or in the Syriac, or in the parallel place, Matth. 19. 4. for ἀπ' ἀρχῆς being in ſenſe the ſame, St Matthew might ſay no more, but St Mark could not well add more, if Chriſt had ſaid no more.

Ver. 11. [c] Ὃς ἐὰν ἀπολύσῃ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, καὶ γαμήσῃ ἄλλην, μοιχᾶται ἐπ' αὐτήν, Whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery againſt her.] Though this diſcourſe of Chriſt's be originally about divorce, yet it ſeems plainly to evince that polygamy muſt be unlawful, eſpecially under the Chriſtian œconomy; for, 1. From Chriſt's ſaying, He that putteth away his wife, and marries another, committeth adultery againſt her, it clearly follows, that he, who having not put her away, marries another, muſt be guilty of the ſame crime, ſeeing he muſt have, at leaſt, the ſame power to marry another, when the firſt is put away, as when ſhe is not. 2. He who commits adultery againſt his wife by marrying another, could have no power to do ſo whilſt ſhe lived, ſince no man can be ſuppoſed to have power to commit adultery: and, 3. He who, by marrying another, commits adultery with her, muſt marry her whom he had no power to marry. 4. Since to commit commit adultery is to violate the bed of another person, he that commits adultery against his wife must violate her bed, which no husband can do, only by doing that which a husband lawfully might do. Since, then, a right to polygamy is a right to marry more wives than one, he that hath this right cannot violate the bed of his first wife, by assuming another to it: it therefore must be acknowledged, either that the husband under Christ's institution, and by the original law of matrimony, had no such right, or that he that marrieth another cannot, by that, commit adultery against his first wife.

See additions, No. 12.

Ver. 19. [d] Μὴ ἀποστερήσῃς, Thou shalt not defraud.] Dr Hammond, here, saith, that the tenth commandment is rendered by the Seventy, and by St Paul, Rom. 7. 7. οὐκ ἐπιθυμήσεις, thou shalt not covet; by Christ, here, thou shalt not defraud; and Matth. 19. 19. thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: whence he concludes, that the commandment contains the importance of all these phrases; obliging us so to rest satisfied with that lot God hath afforded us, and so to desire the good of others, as well as of ourselves, as not to desire or endeavour to gain any thing to ourselves by the loss or diminution of another, but to think others as worthy to enjoy what belongs to them, as we are to enjoy what belongs to us: all which is very true. Mr Cl. also here well notes, that there be two ways of injuring our neighbour. 1. By theft, whether privately, or by force against the will of the owner, and by taking away what belongs to another, without any pretence of right or justice, which is forbidden in the eighth commandment: or, 2. By secret and cunning devices, where the law, and a pretence of right is made use of to cover the injury, which is forbidden in the tenth commandment, and here expressed by μὴ ἀποστερήσῃς, thou shalt not defraud. And surely all such endeavours to defraud must shew a very covetous mind, inclining us, against the dictates of our consciences, and to the damage of our precious souls, to defraud another of his right. Only let it be noted, that the word ἀποστερεῖν in scripture is of a greater latitude, and signifies also to detain and keep back a thing when it is due. So Exod. 21. 10. her food and raiment, and the duty of marriage, οὐκ ἀποστερήσεις, thou shalt not keep back. So the word signifies, Numb. 9. 7. Deut. 24. 14. οὐκ ἀποστερήσεις, μισθὸν πένητος, thou shalt not keep back the hire of the poor, at his day thou shalt give him his hire, ver. 15. And so we expound the word ἀπεστερημένος, used James 5. 4. by kept back. Ecclus. 4. 1. τὴν ζωὴν τοῦ πλησίον μὴ ἀποστερήσῃς, detain not the life of the poor, and make not his eyes to wait long; and chap. 34. 21, 22. the bread of the poor is his life, ὁ ἀποστερῶν αὐτὸν, he that detains it is a man of blood; ὁ ἀποστερῶν μισθὸν μισθίου, he that detains the wages of the hireling sheddeth blood. And surely they who desire thus to detain that which belongs to others, and they know they much want, must covet to have for that time what is another's. And here, especially, the rule of the Civilians obtains, Minus solvit qui tempore minus solvit, He pays less than he ought, who pays not in due time, or when he ought to do it.

Ver. 21. [e] Ἠγάπησεν αὐτὸν, And Jesus looking upon him, loved him.] He loved not only virtues, but even the seeds of them; the one so as to reward them, the other so as to encourage and minister to their growth.

Ver. 23. [f] Πῶς δυσκόλως οἱ τὰ χρήματα ἔχοντες; How hardly can they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!] The example of this young man shews that ἔχειν here imports, not only to possess riches, but also to retain such an affection to them, as that we cannot well bear the thoughts of losing them, or parting with them. The interpretation of Christ, that they who trust in riches, ver. 24. cannot do it, is the consequence of that affection; for this affection must be built upon the apprehension of the goodness of them, the conveniencies and advantages we trust we shall receive by having and retaining them.

Ver. 31. [g] Πολλοὶ δὲ ἔσονται πρῶτοι ἔσχατοι, &c. But many that are first shall be last, and that are last shall be first;] i. e. But as it is with this Jew, so will it be with the generality of that nation, tho' they shall have the first offer of this kingdom, they shall generally refuse to enter into it; whereas many of the Gentiles shall gladly embrace it upon these terms, and shall be admitted into it, and so preferred before the Jews, to whom these blessings primarily belonged. That this is the true import of these words, see the note on Matth. 20. 1.

Ver. 32. [h] Καὶ ἐθαμβοῦντο, καὶ ἀκολουθοῦντες ἐφοβοῦντο, They were amazed, and following they were afraid.] They were amazed that the Sanhedrim, resolving to kill him, John 11. 53. and sending out their pursuivants and injunctions to apprehend him, v. 57. he would run himself into the mouth of that danger he seemed formerly to decline; and they were afraid what might befal them, who bore the character of his disciples, for his sake.

Ver. 35. [i] Καὶ προσπορεύονται αὐτῷ Ἰάκωβος καὶ Ἰωάννης, And James and John came unto him;] viz. by their mother, as their mouth, Matth. 20. 20. And so Christ insinuates by answering, not to the mother, but to them coming with her on this errand, Ye know not what ye ask, ver. 22.

Ver. 40. [k] Οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸν δοῦναι ἀλλ' οἷς ἡτοίμασται'] It is not for me, who never vary from my Father's will, to give to others than to them for whom it is prepared by my Father. Οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμοῦ ἡ δικαία κρίσις, it is not for me, a righteous judge, and diſtributer of recompences, to give to any by favour or affection to their relations, or themſelves, but to thoſe who are prepared for it according to the will of my Father. So Theophylact.

Ver. 42. [l] Οἱ δοκοῦντες ἄρχειν τῶν ἐθνῶν, They who are accounted to rule over the Gentiles.] This is in Matth. 20. 25. οἱ ἄρχοντες τῶν ἐθνῶν, the rulers of the Gentiles, Luke 22. 25. οἱ βασιλεῖς τῶν ἐθνῶν, the kings of the Gentiles. So that this ſhews that δοκέω is ſometimes an expletive, as has been noted on 1 Cor. 7. 40.

Ver. 46. [m] Καὶ ἐκπορευομένου αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ Ἰερειχὼ Βαρτίμαιος ὁ τυφλός, And as he was going from Jericho, a blind man named Bartimæus ſat by the way ſide.] Luke 18. 35. ἐν τῷ ἐγγίζειν αὐτὸν εἰς Ἰερειχώ, when he was near to Jericho, a certain blind man ſat. Matth. 20. 30. δύο τυφλοί, two blind men. There is no reaſon, from theſe ſeeming differences, to think the ſtory different of which the evangeliſts ſpeak. For, as to the firſt, St Luke ſaith indeed, that Chriſt was yet near to Jericho; but then, ſo is he who is gone a little from it, as well as he who is come near to it, which St Luke doth not ſay. To the ſecond it may be anſwered, That he who ſaith, There was a certain blind man celebrated by the name of Bartimæus, ſaith not there was no more, but only that there was no other ſo noted and diſtinguiſhed by that name; and he that mentions his deſire, and Chriſt's anſwer, doth not exclude the other from making the like requeſt, nor from an intereſt in Chriſt's anſwer, but only ſhews he thought it ſufficient to take notice of him as the moſt celebrated of the two.

CHAP. XI.

1. AND when they came nigh to Jeruſalem, (even) to [a] Bethphage, and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he ſendeth forth two of his diſciples;

2. And he ſaith to them, Go your way into the village over againſt you; and as ſoon as ye be entred into it, ye ſhall find a colt tied, [b] whereon never man ſat, looſe him, and bring him (to me.)

3. And if any man ſay to you, Why do ye this? ſay ye, that the Lord hath need of him; and ſtraightway he will ſend (i. e. will quietly permit you to bring) him hither.

4. And they went their way (to the village,) and found (there) the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met, and they looſe him.

5. And certain of them that ſtood there, ſaid to them, What do ye looſing the colt?

6. And they ſaid to them, (we do) Even as Jeſus had commanded; and (upon this) they let them go.

4. And they brought the colt to Jeſus, and caſt their garments on him, and he ſat upon him.

8. And many ſpread their garments in the way, and others cut down branches of the trees, and ſtrawed them in the way.

9. And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, ſaying, Hoſanna, Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, (Let proſperity attend on the Meſſiah;)

10. [c] Bleſſed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord; (may the kingdom flouriſh which God is to erect, according to his promiſe made to David:) Hoſanna in the higheſt, (Let proſperity be from heaven on this King and kingdom.)

11. And Jeſus entred into Jeruſalem, and into the temple; and when he had looked round about upon all things, (and cured the blind and lame, Matth. 21. 14.) and now the eventide was come, he went out to Bethany with the twelve.

12. And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry;

13. [d] And ſeeing a fig-tree afar off having leaves, (which the common fig-trees then had not, Matth. 24. 32.) he came (to it,) if haply he might find any thing thereon; and when he was come to it, he found nothing but leaves, for the time of (other) figs was not yet:

14. And Jeſus anſwered, (i. e. upon this diſappointment ſpake,) and ſaid unto it, (Let) no man eat fruit of (i. e. from) thee hereafter for ever; and his diſciples heard it.

15. And they come to Jeruſalem, and Jeſus went into the temple, and began to caſt out them that ſold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the ſeats of them that ſold doves;

16. And would not [e] ſuffer that any man ſhould carry any veſſel through the temple.

17. And he taught (them who did theſe things, how contrary they were to ſcripture,) ſaying to them,

Is

Is it not written, [f] My houſe ſhall be called of all nations the houſe of prayer? (Gr. an houſe of prayer to all nations; and ſo that very court of the Gentiles you thus profane is dedicated to his ſervice;) but ye (by employing it to theſe uſes) have made it a den of thieves.

18. And the ſcribes and chief prieſts heard it; and (inſtead of being moved, by what he ſaid from the ſcripture, to reform this abuſe, they) ſought how they might deſtroy him (privily;) for they feared (to do this openly to) him, becauſe all the people were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine.

19. And when even was come, he went out of the city.

20. And in the morning, as they paſſed by, they ſaw the fig-tree dried up from the roots.

21. And Peter calling to remembrance (the words of Chriſt,) ſaith to him, Maſter, behold the fig-tree which thou curſedſt is withered away.

22. And Jeſus anſwering ſaith unto them, Have (a ſtrong) faith in God:

23. For verily I ſay unto you, That whoſoever ſhall ſay to this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou caſt into the ſea, (i. e. whoſoever of you ſhall attempt the greateſt difficulties, reſpecting your office in confirming the truth of my doctrine to Jew and Gentile, and bringing them to the faith,) and ſhall not doubt in his heart, (of God's power or readineſs to aſſiſt him,) but ſhall believe that thoſe things which he ſaith ſhall come to paſs, (Gr. ſhall be done,) he ſhall have whatſoever he ſaith, (it ſhall be to him according to what he ſaith.)

24. Wherefore I ſay to you, (for the confirmation of your faith,) What things ſoever ye deſire when ye pray, (or ask in prayer,) believe that ye receive them; and ye ſhall have them.

25. And when ye [g] ſtand praying, forgive, if ye have ought (any juſt matter of complaint) againſt any (for what they have done to you,) that your Father alſo which is in heaven may forgive you your treſpaſſes.

26. But (For) if you do not forgive (them,) neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your treſpaſſes.

27. And they come again to Jeruſalem; and as he was walking in the temple, there come to him the chief prieſts, and the ſcribes, and the elders,

28. And ſay to him, By what authority doeſt thou theſe things? and who gave thee this authority to do theſe things?

29. And Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid to them, I will alſo ask of you one queſtion, and anſwer (you) me, and (then) I will tell you by what authority I do theſe things;

30. The baptiſm of John, was it from (the God of) heaven, or of men (only?) anſwer me.

31. And they reaſoned with themſelves, ſaying, If we ſhall ſay, (It was) from heaven, he will ſay, Why then did ye not believe him, (and from his teſtimony, John 3. 31, 34. learn that I alſo came from God?)

32. But if we ſhall ſay, Of men, (this may be hazardous, for) they feared (this might incenſe) the people; for all men counted John, that he was (to be) a prophet indeed.

33. And they (therefore) anſwered and ſaid to Jeſus, We cannot tell: Jeſus anſwering ſaith to them, Neither do I (think fit to) tell you by what authority I do theſe things.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XI.

Ver. 1. [a] Εἰς Βηθφαγὴ καὶ Βηθανίαν, To Bethphage and Bethany.] So moſt copies read; though as St Matthew leaves out Bethany, ſo the Vulgar, and, as (a) Origen informs us, St Mark, here left out Bethphage. Theſe two places were conterminous, the bound of Bethany, through which they went to go from Jericho to Jeruſalem, reaching to Bethphage, whither our Lord was come. Now this Bethphage, ſaith St Jerom, was ſacerdotum viculus ſitus in monte Oliveti, a little village of the prieſts ſituated in mount Olivet. It was, according to the Jews, a place out of Jeruſalem near the mountain of the temple, in quo coquebant oblationes, in which, ſaith the Talmud, they boiled their offerings. Tract. Berachoth, c. 11. f. 95.

Ver. 2. Ἐφ' ὃν οὐδεὶς ἀνθρώπων κεκάθικε, upon which no man ever ſat.] Here Grotius truly notes, that ſuch animals as had not been employed in the uſe of man were wont to be choſen for ſacred uſes; for even the Heathens thought thoſe things and ſacrifices moſt proper for the ſervice of the gods, which had not been put to profane uſes. Thus the Philiſtines return the ark in a new cart drawn by heifers never before put into the yoke, 1 Sam. 6. 7. To Minerva the Heathens ſacrificed injuges boves, oxen not put into the yoke; and in Virgil we read thus, Æn. 6. v. 36.

Nunc grege de intacto ſeptem mactare juvencos

To be ſure, there was a completion of the prophecy of Zachary, chap. 9. 9. the Jews themſelves applying thoſe words to the Meſſiah: for *R. Ver. 10. [c] Εὐλογημένη ἡ βασιλεία ἐρχομένη ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου Παιδὸς ἡμῶν Δαβίδ, Bleſſed be the kingdom of our father David that cometh in the name of the Lord;] i. e. Let the kingdom be happily begun and flouriſh which God is to erect according to his promiſe made to our father David; let proſperity be from heaven to the King Meſſiah, and to his kingdom. Ver. 13. And ſeeing a fig-tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon; and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves, ὁ γὰρ οὐκ ἦν καιρὸς Σύκων, for the time of figs was not yet.] Here it is enquired why Chriſt ſhould curſe this fig-tree becauſe it had not figs upon it before the time of figs. The criticiſm ὁ γὰρ ἦν, for where he was, it was the time of fruit, and that of Dr Hammond, that it was not καιρὸς Σύκων, a good or ſeaſonable year for figs, are both confuted by this one obſervation, that Chriſt did this on the 11th of Niſan, that is, five months before figs were ripe; for about ſummer, ſaith our Lord, the branch of the fig-tree is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves; Matth. 24. 32. Mark 13. 28. from the time of production of leaves to the green figs, ſay the Jews, is fifty days; from thence to the falling off of the buds, fifty; and from thence to ripe figs, fifty. And in Canticles, the entrance of the ſummer is deſcribed by the fig-trees bringing forth green figs, פגיה i. e. groſſos, ὀλυνθους αὐτῆς, her unripe figs: not as Mr Clerc here renders the words, ſhe hath brought her figs to perfection; nor do either Theophraſtus or Pliny make mention of any figs in Syria which were gathered till after the dog-days, that is, about the latter end of Auguſt; and had there been a ſort of figs which, as Mr Cl. fancies, might have been ripe at the paſſover, before which Chriſt ſpake theſe words, St Mark could not truly have ſaid, the time of figs was not yet. There is another ingenious expoſition of a reverend and learned biſhop, that ὁ καιρὸς Σύκων is the time of gathering in of figs, of which ſignification of the word καιρὸς he gives two or three inſtances; and then it ſeems reaſonable for our Saviour to expect ſome figs upon this tree, they being not yet gathered in, and to curſe it for having none upon it, when none had been taken from it. And could I find it proved that any, even the Biccaroth, or firſt ripe figs mentioned Jer. 34. 2. and Hoſea 9. 10. were fit to be gathered in at the paſſover, I ſhould acquieſce in this interpretation; but the words cited from Cant. 2. 13. and Matth. 24. 32. ſeem to prove, that the fig-tree only began to put forth her leaves and her green figs at the entrance of the ſummer. Wherefore let it be noted, that St Mark doth not by theſe words, for the time of figs was not yet, deſign to give a reaſon why our Lord found no figs upon this tree, but why he only went to this one tree, which had leaves on it, and ſo was of that kind of figs which, ſaith (d) Theophraſtus, was ἀεὶ φύλλον, (e) ſemper comantibus foliis, a fig-tree that had always leaves, and why he expected to find fruit on that, which upon the other ordinary fig-trees abounding there he could not expect, the time of ordinary figs being not yet: for this kind of fig-tree being ever green with leaves, had, ſaith Theophraſtus, ἅμα καὶ τὸν ἔνον καὶ τὸν νέον καρπὸν, old and new fruit hanging on it together, the fruit of the year paſt and preſent, ſay the Jewiſh doctors. Accordingly (f) Julian the apoſtate, ſpeaking of the fruits of Damaſcus, ſaith, ſome of them were but of a ſhort duration; μόνη γὰρ τῇ Σύκῳ καὶ ὑπερβιαζόμενον ἔξεστι, καὶ τῇ τὸν μέλλοντα καρπὸν γίνεσθαι Συνεχθῆναι; only the fig-tree carries its fruit above a year, and it hangs on with the fruit of the following year. And thus was this fig-tree a fit reſemblance of the Jewiſh nation, to whom alone Chriſt come in perſon, and from whom alone he could then expect fruit: whence are they in another parable repreſented by a fig-tree, from which the husbandman three years expected fruit, but found none, Luke 13. 7. and therefore is there ordered to be cut down; and here they are emblematically curſed for their barrenneſs, the kingdom of God being ſhortly to be taken from them, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof, Matth. 21. 43. See additions No 13.

Ver. 16. [e] Καὶ οὐκ ἤφιεν ἵνα τις διενέγκῃ σκεῦος διὰ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, And he ſuffered not any one to carry a veſſel through the temple.] In this our Lord approved of the received doctrine of the Jews, who, ſaith (g) Joſephus, held, quod ne vas quidem aliquod portari in templum licet, that it was not lawful to carry any veſſel into the temple; and this was part of that reverence they thought due to it by virtue of that precept, thou ſhalt reverence my ſanctuary, Levit. 19. 30. But whereas the Rabbins extended this to their ſynagogues, yea even to a ſynagogue gogue laid waste, that none should make them a thorough-fare, in this they seem to have exceeded; there seeming not to be the same reason for things instituted by them, for their convenience of meeting for religious worship, as for that house which the Lord hath chosen to put his name there, Deut. 12. 5. and in which the Divine Majesty dwelt; though they being houses of prayer, a reverence was to be observed in them whilst they engaged in that worship.

Ver. 17. [f] Καὶ ἐδίδασκε λέγων αὐτοῖς· οὐγέγραπται ὅτι ὁ οἶκός μου οἶκος προσευχῆς κληθήσεται πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσιν; And he taught them, saying, Is it not written, My house shall be called an house of prayer to all nations?] In the temple there were three courts; the court of the priests, where the altar of incence stood; the second was that into which the clean Jews, and the proselytes of justice who had embraced circumcision, and the whole law of Moses, entred; and this was parted from the third court (which was called the court of the Gentiles, because the unclean Jew, and the Gentile who owned the true God, were permitted to come and worship there,) by a sept or low wall, having this inscription on it, μὴ δεῖν ἀλλόφυλον εἴσω τοῦ περὶ τὸ ἱερὸν τρυφάκτου, that no alien was to enter into the holy place; where (h) Josephus by adding τὸ δὲ δεύτερον, ἱερὸν ἅγιον ἐκαλεῖτο, for the second court was called holy, seems to intimate that the court of the Gentiles was by them not deemed holy, but profane; and therefore thither they brought sheep and doves to sell; and hence it appears how oppositely our Saviour argues, that the house for all nations was God's house, and therefore must be sacred, and not to be polluted. Mr Whiston must therefore be mistaken, when he conjectures that our Lord did this twice in the week before his passion; once driving those hucksters, and their merchandice, out of the inner temple, and the next day out of the outer temple; for Christ drave out the oxen and the sheep, as well as the men, John 2. 15. Now can we think that they who had so great a reverence for the inner temple, as to make it death for any Gentile, though a proselyte of the gate, to come into it, would themselves bring sheep and oxen to dung in it? It is true that St Mark speaks of this as done the day after he came into the city, and discoursed with the Pharisees; but that he did this only by recapitulation, St (i) Austin proves; but let this be done twice, provided he bring not his merchants and merchandice into the inner temple. See Maldon. in Matth. 21. 12.

Ver. 25. [g] Καὶ ὅταν στήκετε προσευχόμενοι ἀφίετε, And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any.] That it was ordinary with the Jews to pray standing, see note on Matth. 6. 5. yet in their solemn days of fasting they did kneel, and even prostrate themselves before the Lord. But the first Christians usually kneeled down and prayed, Acts 9. 40.—20. 36.---21. 5. The command here to forgive those that offend us before we pray, not only shews that no resentments of what our brother doth should stick long upon our spirits, because they indispose us for that duty we are continually to be prepared for, but also, that there is some kind of forgiveness to be exercised towards him, though he do not ask it, or shew any tokens of repentance; of which, see note on Matth. 6. 14, 15. And seeing I am to pray not only for myself, but for him also, Matth. 5. 44. and that out of love to him, I must be free from all displeasure against him, that I may lift up pure hands without wrath: I must be inclined and ready to do him any good; for how else can I heartily desire it of God, and wish well to him? which in effect I do by praying for him.

CHAP. XII.

1. AND he began to speak to them by parables, (saying,) A certain man planted a vineyard, and set an hedge about it, and digged a place for the wine-fat, and built a tower (in it,) and let it out to husbandmen, (the Jews, Isaiah 5.) and (then) went into a far country; (i. e. left them to manage it for him so, as that he might in their season receive the fruits of it.)

2. And (accordingly) at the season he sent to the husbandmen a servant, that he might receive from the husbandmen, (the guides and rulers of the Jewish church,) of the fruit of the vineyard.

3. And (But) they caught him, and beat him, and sent him away empty.

4. And again he sent to them another servant; and at him they [a] cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and sent him away shamefully handled.

5. And again he sent another, and him they killed; and (so they dealt with many others, 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16.) beating some, and killing some (of them.)

6. Having yet therefore one son, his wellbeloved, he sent him also last to them, saying, (It may be) they will reverence my son.

7. But

(h) Joseph. de bell. Jud. l. 6. c. 13. p. 916.

(i) De consens. evangelist. lib. 2. cap. 68.

7. But thoſe husbandmen ſaid among themſelves, This is the heir, come, let us kill him, and (then) the inheritance ſhall be ours.

8. And (accordingly) they took him, and killed him, and caſt him out of the vineyard.

9. What ſhall therefore the Lord of the vineyard do (to thoſe men? Surely) he will come and deſtroy the (ſe) husbandmen, and will give the vineyard to (be cultivated by) others.

10. And (if ye doubt of this, ye underſtand not what theſe husbandmen deſerve:) have ye not read (or, nor have ye read with attention) this ſcripture? which ſaith, Pſal. 118. 22, 23.) The ſtone which the builders rejected, is become the head (ſtone) of the corner.

11. This was the Lords doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes.

12. And (when he had ſaid this,) they ſought (occaſion) to lay hold on him; but (they) feared the people, for they knew that he had ſpoken the parable [b] againſt them, and (through this fear) they left him, and went their way.

13. And they ſend to him certain (perſons) of the (ſect of the) Phariſees, and of the Herodians, to catch him in (and get advantage againſt him from) his words.

14. And when they were come, they ſay to him, Maſter, we know that thou art true, and careſt for no man ('s perſon;) for thou regardeſt not the perſon (s) of men, but teacheſt the way of God in truth; (tell us therefore,) Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæſar, or not?

15. Shall we give, or ſhall we not give? (that if he ſaid No, the Herodians might repreſent him as an enemy to Cæſar; if Yea, the Phariſees might repreſent him to the people as no friend to the nation:) but he knowing their hypocriſie, ſaid to them, Why tempt ye me (ye hypocrites?) bring me a (Roman) penny, that I may ſee it.

16. And they brought it; and (then) he ſaith to them, Whoſe is this image and ſuperſcription, (that is upon this money?) and they ſaid to him, (It is) Cæſars.

17. And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid to them, Render (then) to Cæſar the things that are Cæſars, and to God the things that are Gods; and they marvelled at him, (that he had anſwered from their own received principles, and yet ſo wiſely, that they could take no advantage from his words.)

18. Then come to him the Sadducees, who ſay there is no reſurrection (of the body,) and they asked him, ſaying,

19. Maſter, Moſes wrote to us, If a mans brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his brother ſhould take his wife, and raiſe up ſeed to his brother.

20. Now there were (with us) ſeven brethren, and the firſt (of them) took a wife, and dying left no ſeed;

21. And the ſecond took her, and died, neither left he any ſeed; and the third likewiſe;

22. And (ſo) the ſeven had her, and left no ſeed; laſt of all the woman died alſo.

23. In the reſurrection therefore, when they ſhall riſe (from the dead,) whoſe wife ſhall ſhe be of them? for the ſeven had her to wife.

24. And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid to them, Do ye not therefore err, becauſe ye know not the ſcriptures, neither the power of God? (nor yet the ſtate in which they that are raiſed from the dead ſhall be.)

25. For when they ſhall riſe from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels which are in heaven.

26. And as touching the dead, (to prove from the ſcriptures, which you own,) that they riſe, have ye not read (what is written) in the book of Moſes, how in the buſh God ſpake to him, ſaying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob? (and yet)

27. He is not the God of the dead, (i. e. of them who are ſo dead as not to be the ſons of the reſurrection,) but the God of the living, (i. e. of thoſe whom he will raiſe to life again;) ye therefore do greatly err.

28. And one of the [c] ſcribes came, and having heard them reaſoning together, and perceiving that he had anſwered them well, asked him, Which is the firſt commandment of all?

29. And Jeſus anſwered him, The [d] firſt of all the commandments is, Hear, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one Lord:

30. And thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy ſtrength; this is the firſt commandment:

31. And the ſecond is like (to it,) namely this, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf; there is none other commandment greater than theſe.

32. And the ſcribe ſaid to him, Well, maſter, thou haſt ſaid the truth; for there is one God, and there is none other but he;

33. And to love him with all the heart, and with all the underſtanding, and with all the ſoul, and with all the ſtrength, and (for a man) to love his neighbour as himſelf, is more than all whole burnt-offerings and ſacrifices.

34. And when Jeſus ſaw that he anſwered diſcreetly, he ſaid unto him, Thou art not far from (being prepared to enter into) the kingdom of God; and no man after that durſt ask him any queſtion.

35. And

35. And Jesus answered (their questions,) and said (to them by way of question,) while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes, that Christ is the Son of David?

36. For [e] David himself said (of him,) by (the afflatus of) the Holy Ghost, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

37. David therefore himself calleth him Lord; and whence (how) is he then his son? and the common people heard him gladly.

38. And he said to them in his doctrine, Beware of the scribes, which love to go in long clothing, and love (to have) salutations in the marketplaces,

39. And the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts;

40. Which devour widows houses, and for a pretence make long prayers; these shall receive greater damnation.

41. And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury; and (saw that) many that were rich cast in much:

42. And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites, which make a farthing.

43. And he called to his disciples, and saith to them, Verily I say to you, that this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury:

44. For all they did (only) cast in of their abundance, but she [f] of her want did cast in all she had, even all her living; (i. e. her livelihood for that day.)

Ver. 4. [a] Ἀπεσταλκησαν ἐκεφαλαίωσαν κ) ἀπέστειλαν ἠτιμωμενον. Again, he sent to them another servant, and at him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and sent him away shamefully treated.] That ἐκεφαλαίωσαν here cannot signify, capite, i. e. vita eum mulctarunt, they beheaded him, or took away his life; but as St Luke interprets it, τραυματίζοντες, they wounding him, chap. 20. 12. to wit, in the head, cast him out of the vineyard, τὴν κεφαλην ἔτυψαν, they beat him on the head. So Theophylact. And this is evident from the words following, they sent him away dishonoured, or shamefully treated. So in (a) Aristophanes, δύναι τὴν κρωτοζον κεφαλαίῳ ῥάψαι, is to smite the skull with a blow upon the head, or to strike one upon the head with a radish root. See examen Millii.

Ver. 12. [b] They knew that he spake this parable, πρὸς αὐτὰς· so Luke 20. 19. against them.] So λέγειν πρὸς αὐτὸν, is to say what they could against him; Acts 23. 30. to kick πρὸς κέντρα, against the pricks; Acts 26. 14. to fight πρὸς τὰς μεθοδίας, against the machinations of Satan; Eph. 6. 11. to strive πρὸς τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, against sin; Heb. 12. 4. to fight πρὸς υἱὲς, against the children of Ammon; Judg. 12. 3. to speak error πρὸς Κύριον, against the Lord, Isa. 32. 6. Ezek. 13. 9.

Ver. 28. [c] Καὶ εἷς τ γραμματέων, And one of the scribes came; so Luke 20. 39. but Matth. 22. 35. εἷς ἐξ αὐτῶν νομικὸς, one of them being a lawyer.] Now, in this diversity of words there is no difference in sense: for the scribes were of two sorts, or had, at the least, two offices; the one was to sit in the chair of Moses, i. e. to read, and to interpret the law of Moses to the people, Matth. 23. 2. the other was, to expound and deliver to the people the traditions which they pretended to have received from their forefathers. The first name of scribe they seem to have had from Ezra, who is so often stiled Γραμματεὺς, a scribe of the law of the Lord, Ezra 7. 12. Neh. 12. 36. who read in the book of the law and expounded, Neh. 8. 2, 3, 4. they being also teachers of the traditions, which were called νόμικα, or laws; and binding these heavy burdens upon the people, were thence called νομικοὶ· See the note on Matth. 22. 23. And this scribe is said to speak to Christ πειράζων, tempting him, or making an experiment of his wisdom, whether it was such as fame reported, as the queen of Sheba came, 1 Kings 10. 1. πειράσαι to tempt king Solomon, i. e. to try whether his wisdom was equal to the fame she had heard of it.

Ver. 29. [d] And Jesus answered, ὅτι πρώτη πασῶν τ ἐντολῶν, the first of all the commandments is this, The Lord thy God is one God.] For this is necessary to be known, that we may worship him alone in opposition to all Heathen gods, and own, that he alone is God, who is the Maker of heaven and earth. Here Woltzogenius objects, that this lawyer having said, That there is one God, and that there is no other God besides him, our Lord acknowledges that he had answered wisely; whereas he could not have given him this commendation, if he had been obliged to own him also as God, or to have owned a Trinity of persons: as if he had not heard that Thomas, who held the unity of the Godhead as much as any other Jew, yet stiles our Saviour, My Lord, and my God, and is commended for his faith, John 20. 28, 29. And since all that assert a Trinity of persons do as unanimously assert an unity of essence, and of the Godhead, I know not why this answer anſwer might not be commended by them; tho', perhaps, our Saviour's commendation might eſpecially reſpect his prelation of the love of God and our neighbour to all burnt-offerings and oblations. Of which ſee the note on Matth. 22. 35. and of which one of the Jews ſaith thus, The doing acts of beneficence is more acceptable to God than all the victims and oblations which the Iſraelites offer on his altar; he having ſaid, I will have mercy, and not ſacrifice. Pirk. Eliezer, c. 16. p. 33. See here and v. 27. examen Millii.

Ver. 36. [e] Αὐτὸς γὰρ Δαβὶδ εἶπεν ἐν τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ, For David himſelf ſaid by the Holy Ghoſt, &c.] i. e. by a divine afflatus, orthe ſpirit of prophecy; for elſewhere we read, that God ſpake by the mouth of David, Acts 1. 16.—4. 25. Nor is any one cited in the New Teſtament as ſpeaking by the Spirit, or by the Holy Ghoſt, who was not thus aſſiſted by a divine afflatus: and this deſerves to be noted by them who deny that the pſalms of David were wrote by the ſpirit of prophecy.

Ver. 44. [f] Αὕτη γὰρ ἐκ τῆς ὑστερήσεως αὐτῆς πάντα ὅσα εἶχεν ἔβαλλεν, ὅλον τὸν βίον αὐτῆς, But ſhe of her want did caſt in all ſhe had, even all her living,] or all that ſhe had to live upon that day. Hence it appears, that a perſon may be ſometimes liberal, even in giving what he wanteth for himſelf, or being ready to expend in works of charity ὑπὲρ δύναμιν, above what he can well ſpare, 2 Cor. 8. 2, 3. See here Grotius.

CHAP. XIII.

1. AND as he went out of the temple, (his diſciples came to him, to ſhew him the buildings of the temple, Matth. 24. 1. and) one of his diſciples ſaith unto him, (in the name of the reſt,) Maſter, ſee what manner of ſtones, and what buildings are here.

2. And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid to him, Seeſt thou theſe great buildings? There ſhall not be left of them one ſtone upon another, that ſhall not be thrown down, (or diſſolved.)

3. And as he ſat upon the mount of Olives, over againſt the temple, Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, asked him privately, (i. e. apart, not from the reſt of his diſciples, but from the multitude,)

4. (Saying,) Tell us, (Maſter, Luke 21. 7.) When ſhall theſe things be? and what ſhall be the ſign when all theſe things ſhall be fulfilled?

5. And Jeſus anſwering them, began to ſay, Take heed leſt any man deceive you;

6. For many ſhall come in my name, ſaying, I am Chriſt, and (by that pretence) ſhall deceive many:

7. And when ye ſhall hear of wars, and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled; for ſuch things muſt needs be, but the end (of the polity and temple of the Jews) ſhall not be yet.

8. For nation ſhall riſe againſt nation, and kingdom againſt kingdom; and there ſhall be earthquakes in divers places, and there ſhall be famines and troubles; (all) theſe (things) are (only) the beginnings of ſorrows (to them:)

9. But take heed to your ſelves; for (then) they ſhall deliver you up to councils, and in the [a] ſynagogues ye ſhall be beaten, and ye ſhall be brought before rulers and kings for my ſake, for a teſtimony againſt (Gr. to) them, (that the kingdom of God is come.)

10. And the goſpel muſt firſt be publiſhed among all nations, (before the end of theſe things.)

11. But when they ſhall (thus) lead you, and deliver you up (to theſe rulers,) [b] take no thought before-hand what ye ſhall ſpeak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatſoever ſhall be given you in that hour, that ſpeak ye: for it is not ye that ſpeak, (from your own wiſdom,) but the Holy Ghoſt, (who teacheth you what to ſpeak.)

12. Now (at this time) the brother ſhall betray the (his) brother to death, and the father the ſon, and the children ſhall riſe up againſt their (believing) parents, and ſhall cauſe them to be put to death.

13. And ye ſhall be hated of all (ſorts of) men for my names ſake; but (yet poſſeſs your ſouls in patience, Luke 21. 19. for) he that ſhall endure to the end, the ſame ſhall be ſaved (out of this calamity.)

14. But when ye ſhall ſee the abomination of deſolation, ſpoken of by Daniel the prophet, (chap. 9. 27.) ſtanding where it ought not, (i. e. the Roman army compaſſing Jeruſalem, Luke 21. 20.) [let him that readeth underſtand] (that her deſolation draweth near, ibid. and) then let them that be in Judea flee to the mountains (of Peræa:)

15. And (then) let him that is on the houſe-top, not go down into the houſe, neither enter therein to take any thing out of his houſe:

16. And let him that is in the field, (and hath laid aſide his garment,) not turn back again to take up his garment; (i. e. let not your regard for your clothes or goods cauſe you to delay your flight, but do it with your utmoſt expedition.)

17. But

17. But wo to them that are with child, and to them that give ſuck in thoſe days (of vengeance, Luke 21. 22. and ſo are not in a condition to fly from it.)

18. And [c] pray ye, that your flight be not in the winter, (when the ways be ſcarce paſſable:)

19. For in thoſe days ſhall be affliction, (even) ſuch as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created, unto this time, neither ſhall be (afterwards; ſo that ye cannot hope to eſcape without hazard.)

20. And except that the Lord had ſhortened thoſe days, no fleſh ſhould be ſaved; but [d] for the elects (i. e. the Chriſtians) ſake, whom he hath choſen (out of the world,) he hath ſhortened the (ſe) days (of vengeance.)

21. And then if any man ſhall ſay to you, Lo, here is Chriſt, or lo, he is there, believe him not;

22. For falſe Chriſts and falſe prophets ſhall riſe, and ſhall ſhew ſigns and wonders to ſeduce, if (it were) poſſible, (or if they can,) the very elect.

23. But (therefore) take ye heed; behold, I have foretold you all (theſe) things.

24. But in thoſe days, after that tribulation (of which I have ſpoken,) the ſun ſhall be darkned, and the moon ſhall not give her light:

25. And the ſtars of heaven ſhall fall, and the powers that are in (or the hoſts of) heaven ſhall be ſhaken; (i. e. the diſſolution of their government in church and ſtate, by the zealots, ſhall be a ſign of their approaching ruin, Luke 21. 25.)

26. And then ſhall they ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory, (μετὰ δυνάμεως πολλῆς καὶ δόξης, with a great and glorious hoſt, viz. the Roman army:)

27. And then ſhall he ſend his angels, (the meſſengers of the goſpel,) and (they) ſhall gather together his elect, (among the Gentiles,) from the four winds, from the uttermoſt part of the earth to the uttermoſt part of heaven; (i. e. from one end of the earth to the other.)

28. Now learn a parable of (from) the fig-tree; (for) when her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that ſummer is near:

29. So ye in like manner, when ye ſhall ſee theſe things come to paſs, know that it (viz. the deſolation I ſpeak of) is nigh, even at the doors.

30. Verily I ſay to you, that this generation ſhall not paſs (away) till all theſe things be done.

31. Heaven and earth ſhall paſs away; but my words ſhall not paſs away (unperformed.)

32. [e] But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no not the angels which are in heaven; neither the Son, (who hath the Spirit without meaſure,) but the Father (only.)

33. Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is (to be:)

34. For the Son of man is (theſe words are not in the original, and ſo this verſe may begin thus: And in this exhortation to watch, I act) as a man, taking a far journey, who left his houſe, (Gr. as a travelling man leaving his houſe,) and gave (Gr. giving) authority to his ſervants, and to every man his work, and (who) commanded the porter (as I do you) to watch:

35. Watch ye therefore, for ye know not when the maſter of the houſe cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock crowing, or in the morning,

36. Leſt coming ſuddenly, he find you ſleeping, (and therefore unprepared for his advent.)

37. And what I ſay to you, I ſay to all (my diſciples, i. e.) Watch.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XIII.

Ver. 9. [a] Καὶ εἰς συναγωγὰς δαρήσεσθε, And ye ſhall be beaten in the ſynagogues.] It is certain both from the ſcripture and the Jewiſh writers, that whipping and the rebels-beating were puniſhments uſed in the ſynagogues of the Jews. Thus Paul ſaith, he puniſhed the Chriſtians κατὰ πάσας τὰς συναγωγὰς, throughout all the ſynagogues, Acts 26. 11. and that he did beat in the ſynagogues thoſe that believed, chap. 22. 19. and that it was uſual to whip both their wiſe men and their diſciples, when they had done perverſely in their ſynagogues, is fully proved by Campegius Vitringa de ſynag. vet. lib. 3. c. 11.

Ver. 11. [b] Μὴ προμελετᾶτε τί λαλήσητε, μηδὲ μελετᾶτε, ἀ γὰρ ὑμεῖς ἔσται οἱ λαλοῦντες ἀλλὰ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον· But when they ſhall lead you (before,) and deliver you up (to theſe rulers, ver. 9.) take no thought before-hand what you ſhall ſpeak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatſoever ſhall be given you in that hour, that ſpeak ye; (for I will give you a mouth and wiſdom which all your adverſaries ſhall not be able to gain-ſay, Luke 21. 14, 15.] From theſe two places collated together, it is evident, (1.) That this promiſe is peculiar to the apoſtles, to whom alone Chriſt here diſcourſeth: and, (2.) That it belongs to them alone, when they were brought before kings and rulers, to plead the cauſe of Chriſt, and leave before them a teſtimony of the truth of it, Matth. 10. 18. and therefore there can be nothing more ridiculous than the Quakers applying this to their extemporary effuſions, their ſenſeleſs prayers and harangues; of which it cannot, without blaſphemy, be ſaid, It is not you that ſpeak, but the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh in you; ſeeing, if ſo, all their fooliſh and ignorant harangues muſt be as ſacred, and as worthy to be preſerved, as the inſpired ſcriptures. See examen Millii.

Ver. 18. [c] Προσεύχεσθε δὲ ἵνα μὴ γένηται ἡ φυγὴ ὑμῶν χειμῶνος· Pray therefore, that your flight may not be in the winter.] Hence it ſeems plain, that even when tribulations come by the decree of God, the circumſtances of them may be mitigated by our prayers. See the note on Matth. 24. 20. ſee examen Millii.

Ver. 20. [d] Ἀλλὰ διὰ τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς οὓς ἐξελέξατο ἐκολόβωσε τὰς ἡμέρας· But for his elect's ſake, whom he he hath choſen out (of the world,) he hath ſhortned thoſe days.] That in the New Teſtament all Chriſtians called to the knowledge and belief of the faith are ſtiled the elect, as being γενεὰ ἐκλεκτὴ, a choſen generation, ſee the note on 1 Peter 2. 9. Theſe are the elect our Saviour ſpeaks of, when he ſaith, Many are called, but few are choſen, Matth. 20. 16. And ſhall he not hear his elect, which cry unto him day and night? Luke 18. 7. And this was alſo the phraſeology of the primitive Chriſtians. Thus (a) Clemens tells the Corinthians, that their ſedition was ἀλλοτρία καὶ ξένη τοῖς ἐκλεκτοῖς τοῦ Θεοῦ, alien from and ſtrange to the elect of God; and exhorts them to come to God with holy ſouls, lifting up pure hands to him, and loving our kind and merciful Father, ὃς ἡμᾶς ἐκλογῆς μέρος ἐποίησεν ἑαυτῷ, who hath made us a part of his election. (b) Ignatius writes to the church of Epheſus, ἐκλελεγμένη, elected; and the author of the martyrdom of Polycarp ſaith, the common people admired the difference there was (c) μεταξὺ τῶν ἀπίστων καὶ τῶν ἐκλεκτῶν, betwixt the Heathens and the Chriſtians; and among the aphoriſms of the apoſtle this is one, ἐὰν ἐκλίπῃ ὁ γείτων ἁμαρτήσῃ ἥμαρτεν ὁ ἐκλεκτὸς, If the neighbour of the Chriſtian hath ſinned, he hath ſinned alſo.

Ver. 32. [e] Περὶ δὲ τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης, καὶ τῆς ὥρας, οὐδεὶς οἶδεν, οὐδὲ οἱ ἄγγελοι, οὐδὲ ὁ υἱὸς, εἰ μὴ ὁ πατήρ· But of that day and hour knoweth no man, neither the angels which are in heaven, nor the Son, but the Father, Matth. 24. 36. but my Father only.] I dare not ſay here with St Ambroſe, l. 5. de fide, c. 8. that theſe words were added by the Arians, ſeeing I find them owned by Irenæus, l. 2. c. 48. and by Origen in Matth. hom. 30. f. 64. A. but for explication of them, note,

1*ſt*, That theſe words περὶ δὲ τῆς ὥρας ἐκείνης, of that day and hour, may refer, not to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, but, as the fathers generally thought, to the immediate precedent words, heaven and earth ſhall paſs away, but of that day and hour when they ſhall paſs away none knoweth but the Father. Note,

2*dly*, That ὁ υἱὸς, here, is Chriſt conſidered as the prophet ſent into the world to reveal his Father's will; and therefore, as delivering to the world not what the λόγος knew or taught, but what the Spirit of God revealed to him, according to his frequent declarations concerning himſelf, That he ſpake nothing of himſelf, but the Father which ſent him gave him commandment what he ſhould ſay, and what he ſhould ſpeak, John 12. 49. My doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me, chap. 7. 16. The word which I ſpeak I ſpeak not of myſelf, but the Father which abideth in me, chap. 14. 10. The Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all that he doth, John 5. 20. which by the Baptiſt ſeems to be expounded thus, He that is of God ſpeaketh the words of God; for the Father giveth not him the Spirit by meaſure; for the Father loveth the Son, and hath put all things (relating to the revelation of his will) into his hands, John 3. 34, 35. Tho' therefore he revealed this doctrine as the Son of man, as the nature of the prophetic office abſolutely required, yet is he placed here, as to his knowledge of the mind of God, deſervedly above the angels, as being, by this Spirit reſiding in him without meaſure, more fully acquainted with the mind of God than they; and yet, ſaith he, the knowledge of this day and hour being no part of my prophetic office, even I, the Son of man, know it not, it being one of thoſe times and ſeaſons which the Father hath put in his own power, Acts 1. 7. Excellent to this purpoſe are the words of Dr Lightfoot on this place: "(1.) It is one thing to under" ſtand the Son of God barely and abſtractly for
" the ſecond perſon in the Holy Trinity; another
" to underſtand him for the Meſſias, or the ſecond
" perſon incarnate. To ſay that the ſecond per-
" ſon in the Trinity knows not ſomething, is blaſ-
" phemous; to ſay ſo of the Meſſias is not ſo,
" who nevertheleſs was the ſame with the ſecond
" perſon in the Trinity. For although the ſecond
" perſon, abſtractly conſidered according to his
" mere Deity, was co-equal with the Father, co-
" omnipotent, co-omniſcient, co-eternal with him,
" &c. yet Meſſias who was God-Man, conſidered
" as Meſſias, was a ſervant and a meſſenger of " the Father, and received commands and authori" ty from the Father: and thoſe expreſſions, The " Son can do nothing of himſelf, &c. will not in the " leaſt ſerve the Arians turn, if you take them
" in this ſenſe, which you muſt neceſſarily do;
" Meſſias can do nothing of himſelf, becauſe he " is a ſervant and a deputy. (2.) We muſt
" diſtinguiſh between the excellencies and per-
" fections

(a) § 1. (b) § 29. (c) § 16.

" ſections of Chriſt which flowed from the hypo-
" ſtatical union of the two natures, and thoſe
" which flowed from the donation and anointing
" of the Holy Spirit. From the hypoſtatical union " of the natures flowed the infinite dignity of his
" perſon, his impeccability, his infinite ſelf-ſuf-
" ficiency to perform the law, and ſatisfy the " divine juſtice: from the anointing of the " Spirit flowed his power of miracles, his fore-
" knowledge of things to come, and all kind of " knowledge of evangelic myſteries: thoſe render" ed him a fit and perfect redeemer, theſe a fit
" and perfect miniſter of the goſpel."

Now, therefore, the fore-knowledge of things to come, of which the diſcourſe here is, is to be numbred among thoſe things which flowed from the anointing of the Holy Ghoſt, and from the immediate revelation, not from the hypoſtatic union of the natures; ſo that thoſe things which were revealed by Chriſt to his church, he had them from the revelation of the Spirit, not from that union. Nor is it any derogation or detraction from the dignity of his perſon, that he ſaith, He knew not that day and hour of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem: yea, it excellently agrees with his office and deputation, who being the Father's ſervant, meſſenger, and miniſter, followed the orders of the Father, and obeyed him in all things.

CHAP. XIV.

1. AFTER two days was the feaſt of the paſſover, and of unleavened bread; and (then) the chief prieſts, and the ſcribes ſought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death.

2. But they ſaid, (Let) not (this be done) on the feaſt-day, leſt there be an uproar of the people.

3. And (he) being in Bethany, in the houſe of Simon (formerly) the leper, as he ſat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaſter-box of ointment of ſpikenard, very precious; and ſhe brake (or ſhook) the box (of ointment,) and (then) poured it on his head.

4. And there were ſome that had indignation within themſelves (at this which the woman had done,) and ſaid, Why was this waſte of the ointment made?

5. For it might have been ſold for more than three hundred pence, and (the money might) have been given to the poor; and they murmured againſt her.

6. And (But) Jeſus ſaid, Let her alone, why trouble ye her (without cauſe?) ſhe hath (in doing this) wrought a good work on me.

7. For ye have the poor (for whom ye pretend ſo much kindneſs) with you always, and whenſoever you will, you may do them good; but me ye have not always, (my departure from you being at hand, which will cut off all further opportunity of ſhewing kindneſs to my body.)

8. She hath done what ſhe could, (to teſtify her affection to me; for) ſhe is come aforehand to anoint my body (in order) to the burying (of it: nor ſhall her charity be loſt: for)

9. Verily I ſay to you, Whereſoever this goſpel ſhall be preached, (as I aſſure you it will be,) throughout the whole world, this alſo that ſhe hath done ſhall be ſpoken of, for a memorial of her.

10. And (then) Judas Iſcariot, one of the twelve, went to the chief prieſts, to betray him to them.

11. And when they heard it, they were glad, and promiſed to give him money (for ſo doing, covenanting with him for thirty ſhekels;) and (upon this promiſe) he ſought how he might conveniently betray him.

12. And (on) the firſt day of unleavened bread, when they killed the paſſover, his diſciples ſaid to him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare (for thee,) that thou mayeſt eat the paſſover?

13. And he ſendeth forth two of his diſciples, and ſaith to them, Go ye into the city, and (when you are come into it) there ſhall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water; follow him:

14. And whereſoever he ſhall go in, (go ye in after him, and) ſay ye to the good man, (the maſter) of the houſe, The maſter ſaith, Where is the gueſt-chamber, where I ſhall (may) eat the paſſover with my diſciples?

15. And he will ſhew you a large upper room furniſhed and prepared; (Gr. a great upper room ſtrowed, ready to receive gueſts;) there (ſhall ye) make ready for us.

16. And his diſciples went forth (from Bethany, v. 3.) and came into the city, and found as he had ſaid unto them, and they made ready the paſſover.

17. And in the evening he cometh with the twelve (to eat of it.)

18. And as they ſat, and did eat, Jeſus ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, one of you who eateth with me (at the table) ſhall betray me.

19. And they began to be ſorrowful, and to ſay to him one by one, (ſeverally,) Is it I? and another, Is it I?

20. And he anſwered and ſaid to them, It is one of the twelve, (he) that (now) dippeth with me in the diſh; (Matth. 26. 23.)

21. (Now) The Son of man indeed goeth (to ſuffer,) as it is written of him; but (yet) wo to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed: good were it for that man, if he had never been born, (it being better not to be, than to be miſerable for ever.)

22. And as they did eat, Jeſus took bread, and bleſſed (it,) and brake (it,) and gave (it) to them, and ſaid, Take, eat, this is my body (given for you.)

23. And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks (over it,) he gave it to them; and they all drank of it.

24. And he ſaid to them, This is (the memorial of) my blood, (that blood) of the New Teſtament (or covenant) which is ſhed for many.

25. Verily I ſay to you, [b] I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God, (i. e. till after my reſurrection.)

26. And when they had ſung an [c] hymn, they went to the mount of Olives.

27. And Jeſus ſaith unto them, All ye ſhall be offended becauſe of (or ſcandalized in) me this night; for (it will be as) it is written, (Zach. 13. 7.) I will ſmite the ſhepherd, and the ſheep ſhall be ſcattered.

28. But after that I am riſen, I will go before you into Galilee.

29. But Peter ſaid to him, Although all ſhall be offended (at thy paſſion,) yet will not I (be offended.)

30. And Jeſus ſaith to him, Verily I ſay to thee, This day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou ſhalt deny me thrice:

31. But he ſpake the more vehemently, If I ſhould die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wiſe; likewiſe alſo ſaid they all.

32. And they came to a place which was named Gethſemane; and he ſaith to his diſciples, Sit ye here, while I ſhall pray.

33. And he taketh with him Peter, and James and John, and began to be ſore amazed, and to be very heavy.

34. And (he) ſaith to them, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful unto death; tarry ye here, and watch.

35. And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed, that if it were poſſible, the hour (of his preſent temptation) might paſs from him.

36. And he ſaid, Abba, (that is) Father, all things are poſſible to thee, take away this cup from me; nevertheleſs not what I will, but what thou wilt (be done.)

37. And he cometh, and findeth them ſleeping, and ſaith to Peter, Simon, ſleepeſt thou (after all thy confidence?) couldſt not thou watch one hour?

38. Watch ye and pray, leſt ye enter into temptation; (for) the ſpirit truly is (may be) ready (to make good reſolutions,) but the fleſh is weak, (and ſo unable to perform them without that divine aſſiſtance which is to be obtained by prayer, and improved by vigilance.)

39. And again he went away, and prayed, and ſpake the ſame words.

40. And when he returned, he found them aſleep again; for their eyes were heavy, neither wiſt they what to anſwer him.

41. And he cometh the third time, and ſaith to them, Sleep on now, and take your reſt, it is enough, (ἀπέχει, the time of watching is now paſt) the hour is come (in which I ſhall be apprehended;) behold the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of ſinners.

42. Riſe up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

43. And immediately, while he yet ſpake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude, with ſwords and ſtaves, from the chief prieſts, and the ſcribes, and the elders.

44. And he that betrayed him had given them a token, ſaying, Whomſoever I ſhall kiſs, that ſame is he, [d] take him, and lead him away ſafely.

45. And as ſoon as he was come, he goeth ſtraightway to him, and ſaith, Maſter, maſter, and kiſſed him:

46. And (then) they laid their hands on him, and took him.

47. And [e] one of them that ſtood by, (namely Peter,) drew a ſword, and ſmote a ſervant of the high-prieſt, and cut off his ear.

48. And Jeſus anſwered, (i. e. ſpake with relation to their manner of coming thus to apprehend him,) and ſaid to them, Are ye come out as againſt a thief, with ſwords, and with ſtaves, to take me?

49. I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and (then) ye took me not; but (now ye are permitted to do it, becauſe) the ſcriptures (which foretold my ſufferings) muſt be fulfilled.

50. And (having ſaid this,) they (who were with him) all forſook him, and fled.

51. And there followed him a certain [f] young man having a linen cloth caſt about his naked body, and the young men laid hold on him;

52. And he left the linen cloth (in their hands,) and fled from them naked.

53. And

53. And they led Jesus away to the [s] high-priest, and with him were assembled all the chief-priests, and the elders, and the scribes.

54. And Peter followed him afar off, even to the palace of the high-priest, and he sat with the servants, and warmed himself at the fire.

55. And the chief-priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus, to put him to death, and (but) found none (that could testify any thing capital against him.)

56. For many bare false witness against him, but their witness agreed not together, (Gr. their testimony was not sufficient to render him guilty of death.)

57. And there arose certain (men,) and bare false witness against him, saying,

58. We have heard him say, I will destroy this temple made with hands, and within three days I will build another, made without hands.

59. But neither so did their witness agree together; (i. e. their testimony did not amount to a capital crime.)

60. And the high-priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it (of no concern) that these (men) witness against thee?

61. But he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high-priest asked him, and said to him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the blessed (God?)

62. And Jesus said, [t] I am, and (within a while, Matth. 26. 64.) ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

63. Then the high-priest rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses?

64. Ye have heard the blasphemy (he now speaks,) what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death (for it.)

65. And (then) some began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to say unto him, Prophesy (who it is that smites thee;) and (the very) servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

66. And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of the maids of the high-priest.

67. And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth.

68. But he denied (it,) saying, I know not (the man,) neither understand I what thou sayest; and he went out into the porch, and the cock crew.

69. And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, (what one of them said to him,) This is one of them (that were with Jesus.)

70. And he denied it again: and a little after they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them, for thou art a Galilean, and thy speech agreeth thereunto, (or is like those of Galilee.)

71. But he (upon this) began to (imprecate a) curse (upon himself,) and to swear, (saying with an oath,) I know not this man of whom ye speak:

72. And (then) the second time the cock crew; and Peter (upon that) called to mind the word that Jesus said to him, (viz.) Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice; and when he [x] thought thereon, (or rushing forth from the company,) he wept (bitterly.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XIV.

Ver. 3. [a] Ἦλθε γυνὴ ἔχουσα ἀλάβαστρον μύρου, νάρδου πιστικῆς πολυτελοῦς, καὶ συντρίψασα τὸ ἀλάβαστρον κατέχεεν αὐτοῦ κατὰ τῆς κεφαλῆς. There came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard, very precious, and she brake the box, and poured it upon his head.] Either the word πιστικὴ answers to the Syriac pistacha, and then it may be rendered nardus spicata, or ointment made of the spikes of nard: or, if it be of a Greek original, I think Theophylact well renders it, πιστικὴ ἡ ἄδολος καὶ μετὰ πίστεως κατασκευασθεῖσα, that is (a) nard unadulterated, and faithfully prepared, the great price it carried tempting many to adulterate it, as Dioscordes and Pliny tell us, according to these words of (b) Vadianus, Dignum autem cognitu quod, lib. 13. Plinius tradit, viz. Novum herbarum species esse quæ nardum imitentur, et adulterent. Unde intelligimus in tanta fraudis materia usum loquendi obtinuisse, ut pistica nardus diceretur, quæ sincera et absque vitio esset, ἀπὸ τῆς πίστεως, a fide, et plane ἄδολος, hoc est germana et nulla arte vitiata. Moreover, it is the conjecture of Dr Hammond, that συντρίψασα here signifies, not to break the alabaster, that being not easily done, but to shake it, to liquify the ointment, and make it fitter to run out; the old glossary rendering συντείνω, conquatio. Now, Mr Cl. owns that the word doth not always signify to break; but when the discourse is about a vessel that may be broken, he saith it must so signify: as if a vessel might not be be ſhaken as well as broken, or the veſſel might not be put for the ointment in it, it being that which was poured out on Chriſt's head; or elſe the veſſel might be only broke, as we break a flaſk, by ſtriking off the head of it, and then we may eaſily perceive how, after it was thus broke, the ointment might be poured on his head.

Ver. 25. [b] Οὐκέτι οὐ μὴ πίω ἐκ τοῦ γενήματος τῆς ἀμπέλου, ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης ὅταν αὐτὸ πίνω καινὸν ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ Θεοῦ Henceforth I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, till the day that I drink it new with you in the kingdom of God.] Hence we may argue thus againſt the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation; that which, after conſecration, remains the fruit of the vine, is not ſubſtantially changed into the blood of Chriſt; therefore that which Chriſt gave the apoſtles to drink was not ſubſtantially changed into his blood. The conſequence is evident; becauſe Chriſt calls that which he gave them to drink the fruit of the vine: for that Chriſt ſpake this after the conſecration of the elements, St Matthew and Mark unanimouſly teſtify; nor doth St Luke contradict them, but only ſaith, our Lord ſpake this alſo, after the giving of the paſchal cup. Nor can St Matthew or St Mark be underſtood of any cup, but of that which they only mention; now they make mention only of the cup given at the euchariſt, and therefore can be only underſtood of that. Hence doth the R. catechiſm inform us, that from theſe words, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, the catholic church hath always taught that our Lord uſed wine in the inſtitution of this ſacrament; which yet ſhe could not teach from theſe words, unleſs they were ſpoken of the ſacramental cup, ſeeing the accidents of wine, without the ſubject, cannot be called the fruit of the vine. And ſeeing wine is ſtiled αἷμα σταφυλῆς, the blood of the grape, Deut. 32. 14. and by the Heathens αἷμα βότρυων, Achill. Tatius l. 2. why may it not, by a like metaphor, be ſtiled Chriſt's blood? Moreover, the antient fathers, from theſe words, confuted the hereſy of the Encratitæ or Aquarians, who conſecrated only water at the celebration of the ſacrament; declaring that, by theſe words, our Saviour ſhewed the thing which had been bleſſed was wine, and therefore was carnis potus, the drink of the fleſh, ſaith Irenæus. Now, had not the ſacramental cup, after the conſecration, remained wine, this argument could have had no force, ſince then the orthodox could no more have drunk it in the euchariſt than the Aquarii. See Iren. l. 5. c. 33. Clemen. Alex. Pedag. l. 2. c. 2. p. 158. Chryſoſt. hom. in Matth. 26. p. 511. Theodoret. dial. 1. p. 17, 18. and many others cited by Albert. l. 1. de euch. c. 17. p. 112.

The following words, till I drink it new with you in the kingdom of God, are, by St Luke, thus varied, till the kingdom of God come, chap. 22. 18. or until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God; and therefore only ſeem to ſignify, till I riſe again from the dead: for the kingdom of God here, and the kingdom of the Father in St Matthew, being certainly the ſame, viz. the kingdom and the power given to Chriſt, the exerciſe of his kingly office being given to him of the Father, when one of theſe is come, the other muſt be come alſo. Now, 1. Chriſt calling the Jews to repentance, becauſe the kingdom of God was near, Mark 1. 15. upbraiding the ſcribes and Phariſees, becauſe they ſuffered publicans and harlots to enter into the kingdom of God before them, Matth. 21. 31. and threatning that the kingdom of God ſhould be taken from them, and given to other nations, Matth. 21. 43. 2. The Jews expecting then the kingdom of God, Mark 15. 43. and thinking it ſhould ſuddenly appear, Luke 19. 11. and enquiring of him when it ſhould come, Luke 17. 20 and ſpeaking of eating bread with him in it, Luke 14. 15. and wiſhing proſperity to it, as then coming, Mark 11. 10. 3. Chriſt having told them that the kingdom of God was near, Luke 11. 2, 20. that it was to come to them, Matth. 12. 28. that it was among them, Luke 17. 21. that ſome of them ſhould not die till they ſaw the Son of man coming in his kingdom, Matth. 16. 28. that is, till they ſaw the kingdom of God, Luke 9. 27. till they ſaw the kingdom of God come with power, Mark 9. 1. and having ſpoken ſo many parables relating to this kingdom of God, or ſtate of the goſpel, Mark 4 30. Luke 13. 18, 20. And, laſtly, the doctrine which he preached being the goſpel of the kingdom of God, Mark 1. 14. the word of the kingdom, Matth. 13. 19. the myſtery of the kingdom of God, Mark 4. 11. the preaching of it being the preaching the kingdom of God, Luke 4. 43.—8. 1.—9. 2, 11, 60.—16. 16. Chriſt alſo, after his reſurrection, ſpeaking to his apoſtles of the things relating to the kingdom of God, Acts 1. 3. and they preaching to others the things belonging to the kingdom of God, Acts 8. 12. —19. 8.—20. 25.—28. 23, 31. exhorting their hearers to enter into the kingdom of God, Acts 14. 22. and telling believers they were tranſlated into the kingdom of God, Coloſſ. 1. 13. On theſe accounts, I ſay, I cannot think this kingdom of God ſhould ſignify heaven, or the happineſs then and there to be enjoyed; but rather the goſpel ſtate, and the kingdom of Chriſt erected at his reſurrection, and more completely begun when he ſat down at the right hand of power, and was made heir of all things. To drink this wine new, is, by the interpretation of St Luke, to do it when it was fulfilled in the kingdom of God, v. g. when Chriſt our paſſover was ſacrificed for us, 1 Cor. 5. 7. and when that blood of the new covenant, which was repreſented by the wine, was actually ſhed, and a new feaſt was inſtituted in commemoration of it. And if you yet enquire, when did Chriſt thus drink this wine with them? I anſwer, He did it, not ſo much by eating and drinking with his diſciples after he aroſe from the dead, Acts 10. 41. for that drinking could have no relation either to the paſchal or the ſacramental cup; as by fulfilling the promiſe made to them, Luke 22. 29, 30. I diſpoſe to you a kingdom, as my Father hath done to me, and ye ſhall eat and drink with me at my table in my kingdom: for in what ſenſe ſoever they are here ſaid to drink with him at his table, he alſo muſt be ſaid to drink with them.

Ver. 26. [c] Ὑμνήσαντες, And when they had ſung an hymn they went forth.] The evangeliſt may well be ſuppoſed to intend ſuch an hymn as was cuſtomarily ſung at the paſſover; for if Chriſt had begun a new and unuſual hymn, his diſciples could not have told how to ſing with him. Now the uſual hymn ſung on the night of the paſſover began at Pſal. 113. and ended at Pſal. 118. in which hymns, as the Jews obſerve, are mentioned the ſorrows of the Meſſiah, and the reſurrection of the dead. So Dr Lightfoot.

See additions, No. 14.

Ver. 44. [d] Κρατήσατε αὐτὸν, Hold him faſt, and lead him away ſecurely.] It is probable that Judas thought they could not do this; but that as Jeſus had at other times conveyed himſelf from the multitude, when they attempted to caſt him down a precipice, Luke 4. 30. or to ſtone him, John 8. 59. —10. 39. ſo he would have done now. And when he found that he did not thus reſcue himſelf, he repented, and went and hanged himſelf, Mat. 27. 5.

Ver. 47. [e] Εἷς δέ τις τῶν παρεστηκότων σπασάμενος τὴν μάχαιραν, And one that ſtood by drew a ſword;] viz. Simon Peter, John 18. 10. Hence, ſaith Beza, the antients may be confuted, who, with ſo great conſent, ſay that Mark writ this goſpel from the mouth of Peter; for why ſhould Peter deny his name, who ſpeaks ſo fully of his denial of his Lord? I anſwer, So doth St Matthew and St Luke ſpeak as plainly of his denial, and yet both conceal his name who drew the ſword. 2. The antients only ſay, that Mark wrote his goſpel at the deſire of others, Peter neither forbidding nor commanding it to be done; and that it being done, he did κυρῶσαι τὴν γραφὴν εἰς ἐνίσχυσιν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις, confirm the reading it in the churches. Euſeb. hiſt. eccl. l. 2. c. 15. l. 6. c. 14.

Ver. 51. [f] Καὶ εἷς τις νεανίσκος ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ, And there followed him a certain young man, &c.] Epiphanius and St Jerom think this young man was James, the brother of our Lord; but he had forſook him and fled, ver. 50. and we read nothing of his return. St Chryſoſtom, Ambroſe and Gregory, ſay he was John; but John was with Chriſt in the garden clothed, ver. 33. and afterwards fled from him, ver. 50. how then can it be likely he ſhould fly naked away? Note alſo, that thoſe words, he fled away naked, need not be ſo underſtood as if he had no garment, but only ſo as that he had a linen garment left. And ſo Dionyſius Alexandrinus ſaith of himſelf, ἡμὴν γυμνὸς ἐν τῷ λινῷ ἐσθήματι, I was naked, having only a linen garment. Apud Euſeb. hiſt. eccl. l. 6. c. 40. See the note on John 21. 7.

Ver. 53. [g] Καὶ ἀπήγαγον αὐτὸν πρὸς τὸν ἀρχιερέα, And they brought him to the high-prieſt;] that is, to Caiphas, Matth. 26. 57. for though it be evident from John 18. 13, 14. that he was firſt brought to Annas, yet becauſe there was nothing done to him there, and he ſeems only to be detained there till the council met at the houſe of Caiphas was ready for him, the other evangeliſts paſs that over in ſilence.

Ver. 55, 56. [h] Ἐζήτουν κατὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ μαρτυρίαν εἰς τὸ θανατῶσαι αὐτὸν, καὶ οὐκ ἔυρισκον, πολλοὶ γὰρ ἐψευδομαρτύρουν κατ' αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἴσαι αἱ μαρτυρίαι οὐκ ἦσαν. They ſought for witneſs againſt him to put him to death, and found none; for many bare falſe witneſs againſt him, but their witneſs agreed not together.] If they had many falſe witneſſes, it cannot be true that they found no witneſs againſt him. This latter clauſe, therefore, and the like, ver. 59. ſhould be rendered, their teſtimonies were not equal, viz. to the charge laid againſt him, that he was worthy to die, or they were not ſufficient εἰς τὸ θανατῶσαι αὐτὸν, to cauſe him to be put to death, either not teſtifying two of the ſame thing, or elſe not charging him with a crime that deſerved death by the law. For a vain-glorious boaſt of deſtroying the temple could not be capital, eſpecially being attended with a promiſe of rebuilding it in three days.

Ver. 62. [i] Ἐγώ εἰμι, I am he.] The anſwer, Matth 26. 62. Σὺ εἶπας, i. e. I am what thou haſt ſaid, is the ſame; for theſe two phraſes are of equal import in the Hebrew idiom; ſo that we need not here St Auſtin's ſubtilty, viz. Non ego dico, ſed tu ais.

Ver. 72. [k] Ἐπιβαλὼν ἔκλαιε, And when he thought thereon he wept.] I think this reading may be maintained; for though Caſaubon gave no inſtance of this ſignification of the word, Conſtantine proves out of Philoponus, Dionyſius, and St Baſil, that it ſignifies καλαυσεῖν, mente agitare, to conſider of, and ponder, or fix the mind upon a thing. So Euſtathius ſays, ἐπιβάλλει γὰρ τις νοήματι, ἢ ἔργῳ, ἅτις ἐπεισαμένως ἴσχεῖται, καὶ ἐπίσυκῶς νοεῖ· the word ἐπιβάλλω reſpects either the action, and then it ſignifies exactly exactly to take it in hand; or the mind, and then it ſignifies to conſider of it as we are able; or, as Phavorinus interprets it, ἐπιβάλως νοεῖν, aptly and wiſely to conſider of it. So again, ἐπιβάλλει τίς, ſaith Phavorinus, ἐπιθεὶς, ἢ νόων, ἐπιβάλλει ἢ τὸ τίς νοῆ-μαϛι, &c. ἐπιβάλλεσθαι, ἐπιθυμεῖν, ἐπιβαλλόμενος, ἐπιθυμῶν, i. e. the word ſignifies to think upon, or conſider of a thing; and Theophylact here renders it ἐνέπησας· and this is ſufficient to juſtify our own tranſlation, that Peter, remembring what our Saviour had foretold concerning his denial, and conſidering how exactly, but ſhamefully, after all his confident engagements to the contrary, he had fulfilled the ſame, was filled with compunction, and wept bitterly. 2. Whereas the other evangeliſts ſay ἐξελθων ἔξω, he went forth, and wept there, there is another expoſition of the word ἐπιβαλλων, which makes it agree with them, and that is, projiciens ſe foras, ruſhing out from the company, or caſting himſelf out, he wept: and plain it is, that in the book of Maccabees it often ſignifies irruens, or ſe projiciens, as when Gorgius attempted ἐπιβαλλεῖν εἰϛ τὴν παρεμβολὴν, projicere ſe, to ruſh in upon the camp of the Jews, 1 Maccab. 4. 2. and Judas, νυκτὸϛ ἐπιβαλλων, ruſhing upon the Jamnites by night, ſet fire on the haven, 2 Maccab. 12. 9. See alſo chap. 13. 15.—15. 1. But the moſt pertinent inſtance to this purpoſe is in Pſal. 108. 10, where אשליך נעלי, projiciam vel emittam calceamentum meum, I will caſt forth my ſhoe, is, in the Greek, ἐπιβαλλῶ τὸ ὑποδημά μου. Here therefore underſtand only ἑαυτὸν, and the ſenſe will run agreeably to St Matthew and St Luke, and caſting himſelf forth, he wept.

Sept 2. 1732.

CHAP. XV.

1. AND ſtraightway in the morning, the chief prieſts held a conſultation with the elders and ſcribes, and the whole council, and (upon that conſultation they) bound Jeſus, and carried him away, [a] and delivered him to Pilate.

2. And Pilate asked him, Art thou the king of the Jews? and he anſwering ſaid to him, Thou ſayeſt it, (i. e. it is as thou ſayeſt.)

3. And the chief prieſts accuſed him of many things, but he anſwered nothing:

4. And Pilate asked him again, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou nothing? behold, how many things they witneſs againſt thee.

5. But Jeſus yet anſwered nothing, ſo that Pilate marvelled.

6. Now [b] at (or after the manner of) the feaſt, he releaſed to them one priſoner, whomſoever they deſired.

7. And there was one named Barrabas, who lay bound with them that had made inſurrection with him, who had committed murder in the inſurrection.

8. And the multitude [c] crying aloud, began to deſire him to do as he had ever done to them (at that feaſt.)

9. But Pilate anſwered them, ſaying, Will ye that I releaſe to you the king of the Jews?

10. For he knew that the chief prieſts had delivered him for envy.

11. But the chief prieſts moved the people that (they would deſire) [d] he ſhould rather releaſe Barrabas to them, (and they accordingly did ſo.)

12. And (then) Pilate anſwered, and ſaid again to them, What will ye then that I ſhall do to him whom ye call the king of the Jews?

13. And they cried out again, Crucify him.

14. Then Pilate ſaid to them, Why (deſire you this?) what evil hath he done (to deſerve this puniſhment?) And (But) they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.

15. And ſo Pilate (being) willing to content the people, releaſed Barrabas to them, and delivered Jeſus, when he had ſcourged him, to be crucified.

16. And the ſoldiers led him (immediately) away into the hall called Prætorium, and they call together the whole band.

17. And they clothed him with purple, (the robe of kings,) and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head;

18. And began to ſalute him, (ſaying in raillery,) Hail king of the Jews.

19. And they ſmote him on the head with a reed, and did ſpit upon him, and bowing their knees, worſhipped him:

20. And when they had (thus) mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him, and led him out to crucify him.

21. And they compel one Simon, a Cyrenean, who paſſed by, coming out of the country, (and who was) the father of Alexander and Rufus, (two celebrated Chriſtians afterwards, Acts 19. 33. Rom. 16. 13.) to bear his croſs.

22. And they bring him to the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, the place of a ſkull.

23. And (there) they gave him to drink, wine mingled with myrrh; but he received it not, (being not willing, by any ſtupifying draughts, to allay his pains.)

24. And

24. And when they had crucified him, they parted his garments, caſting lots upon them, what every one ſhould take.

25. [e] And it was the third hour, and (when) they crucified him.

26. [f] And the ſuperſcription of his accuſation was written over (his head thus,) THE KING OF THE JEWS.

27. And with him they crucified two thieves, the one on his right hand, and the other on his left.

28. [g] And (thus) the ſcripture was fulfilled, which ſaith, And he was numbered with the tranſgreſſors.

29. And they that paſſed by railed on him, wagging their heads, and ſaying, Ah, thou that deſtroyeſt the temple, and buildeſt it in three days,

30. Save thy ſelf, and come down from the croſs.

31. Likewiſe alſo the chief prieſts mocking, ſaid among themſelves, with the ſcribes, He ſaved others, (but) himſelf he cannot ſave.

32. Let Chriſt, (who ſtiles himſelf) the king of Iſrael deſcend now from the croſs, that we may ſee, and believe; and they (one of them) that were crucified with him, reviled him.

33. And when the ſixth hour was come, there [h] was darkneſs over the whole land (of Judea) till the ninth hour;

34. And at the ninth hour Jeſus cried with a loud voice, ſaying, Eloi, eloi, lama ſabachthani? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

35. And ſome of them that ſtood by, when they heard it, ſaid, Behold, he calleth Elias.

36. And one ran, and filled a ſpunge full of vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink, ſaying, Let alone, let us ſee whether Elias will come to take him down.

37. And Jeſus cried (again) with a loud voice, (ſaying, Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit,) and (ſo) gave up the ghoſt.

38. And (then) the veil of the temple (which parted the holy place from the moſt holy) was rent in twain from the top to the bottom. (See paraphraſe on Matth. 27. 51.)

39. And when the centurion, which ſtood over againſt him, ſaw that he ſo cried out, and (Gr. that he ſo crying) gave up the ghoſt, he ſaid, Truly this man was the Son of God.

40. There were alſo women looking on afar off, among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the leſs, and of Joſes, and Salome;

41. Who alſo when he was in Galilee followed him (as he was teaching,) and miniſtred to him, and many other women which came up with him to Jeruſalem.

42. And now, when the even was come, becauſe it was (the even of) the preparation, that is, (of) the day before the ſabbath,

43. Joſeph of Arimathea, an [i] honourable counſellor, who alſo waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly to Pilate, and craved the body of Jeſus (might be given him.)

44. And Pilate marvelled, if he were (that he was) already dead, and calling to the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead.

45. And when he knew it of (i. e. the certainty from) the centurion, he gave the body to Joſeph.

46. And he brought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid him in a ſepulchre, which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a ſtone to the door of the ſepulchre.

47. And Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Joſes, beheld where he was laid.

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XV.

Ver. 1. [a] Παρέδωκαν τῷ Πιλάτῳ, They delivered him to Pilate.] Here the obſervation of Theophylact is this, The Jews delivered up our Lord to the Romans, and they for that ſin were themſelves given up into the hands of the Romans.

Ver. 6. [b] Κατὰ ἑορτὴν ἀπέλυεν, And at the feaſt he delivered up to them a priſoner whomſoever they deſired.] I conceive that ἀπέλυεν here is not put for εἰώθει ἀπολύειν, Matth. 27. 15. he was wont to deliver up, as Mr Le Cl. thinks, but rather κατὰ ἑορτὴν ſhould be rendred, ad morem feſti, or, ſecundum morem feſti, after the manner of the feaſt: as κατὰ ἄνθρωπον λέγω, I ſpeak after the manner of a man, Rom. 3. 5. Gal. 3. 15. κατ' ἄνθρωπον περιπατεῖν, is to walk after the manner of men, 1 Cor. 3. 3. to fight with beaſts at Epheſus, κατὰ ἄνθρωπον, after the manner of men, 1 Cor. 15. 32. So κατὰ Θεὸν, Dei in morem, after the example of God: and among the Atticks, κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ, that is, κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον, after the ſame manner. Now the feaſt of the paſſover being celebrated in memory of their releaſe from Egypt, it was agreeable to the nature of that feaſt to make this releaſe at that time, and therefore cuſtomary.

Ver. 8. [c] Ἀναβοήσας, Crying out.] The Vulgar and ſome MS. copies read here ἀναβὰς, or ἀναβήσας but the Alexandrian copy, Theophylact, and all the eaſtern verſions, reading as we do, and the 13th verſe ſaying that πάλιν ἐκραξαν, they cried out again, this muſt paſs only for a miſtake of the copyer, or of the abbreviation uſed by him.

Ver. 11. [d] But the chief prieſts moved the people, ἵνα μᾶλλον Βαραββᾶν ἀπολύσῃ αὐτοῖς, that he ſhould rather releaſe Barabbas to them;] i. e. That he ſhould releaſe Barabbas, and not Jeſus; for their cry was this, Not this man, but Barabbas, John 18. 40. And that the comparative μᾶλλον is often in ſenſe negative, ſee the note on 1 Tim. 1. 4. ſo Matth. 10. 5. Go not into the way of the Gentiles, πορευεσθε μᾶλλον, but go to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, ver. 6. Mark 9. 43. It is good to go into life lame, μᾶλλον, and not having two hands to go to hell. Eph. 4. 28. Let him that ſtole ſteal no more, μᾶλλον δὲ κοπιάτω, but contrariwiſe let him labour. chap. 5. 4. Let there not be among you filthineſs, or ſcurrilous ſpeaking, μᾶλλον δὲ, but giving of thanks. See John 12. 43. Rom. 14. 13. Eph. 5. 11.

Ver. 25. [e] Ἦν δὲ ὥρα τρίτη καὶ ἐσταύρωσαν αὐτὸν, And it was the third hour, and they crucified him.] But St John ſaith it was ὡς ὥρα ἕκτη, about the ſixth hour, chap. 19. 14. when even he was condemned to crucifixion. But then it muſt be obſerved, that the Greek MSS. produced by Camerarius, Beza, and R. Stephanus, read in St John ὡσει τρίτη, about the third hour; that Nonnus ſeems to have read ſo, his paraphraſe running after this manner, ἦν δὲ τρίτατον τρίτατη ἀναλοιφὸς ὥρης, the third hour was not yet paſt; that Theophylact contends it ought to be ſo read; and that becauſe the three other evangeliſts unanimouſly ſay, that the darkneſs began at the ſixth hour, which yet began not, till after our Lord had hung upon the croſs ſome conſiderable time, till the ſoldiers had divided his garments, the Jews had mocked him, and bid him come down from the croſs, and the diſcourſe had paſſed between the two thieves among themſelves, and betwixt the repenting thief and our Lord. And laſtly, the author of the Conſtantinopolitan chronicle ſaith expreſly, that τὰ ἀκριβῆ βίβλια, αὐτό τε τὸ ἱστόχειρον τοῦ ἁγιωτάτου Ἰωάννου, that the exacter copies, and the manuſcript of St John kept till his time at Epheſus, read, ὡς ὥρα τρίτη, about the third hour. See Jerom in Pſal. 77. And the change from γ the third to ϛ the ſixth, is ſo eaſy, that this may very reaſonably be owned in the later copies of St John's goſpel: eſpecially if we conſider how punctual St Mark is in the enumeration of the hours, ſaying, it was the third hour, and they crucified him, or began to lead him away to be crucified; and ver. 33. when the ſixth hour was come, from that time there was darkneſs over the whole earth till the ninth hour, and ver. 34. at the ninth hour Jeſus expired.

This I prefer before the expoſition of ſome others, that St John ſpeaks of the hours according to the Roman, and St Mark according to the computation of the Jews; 1*ſt*, Becauſe this alters not the difficulty, there being the ſame diſtance of time betwixt the Romans ſixth, and the Jews third hour, as between the Jews third and their ſixth, i. e. three hours difference. And, 2*dly*, Becauſe the vulgar hours by which the Romans reckoned and the hours of the Jews were the ſame, viz. twelve, as our Lord ſhews in theſe words, are there not twelve hours in the day? John 11. 9. and Dempſter in theſe words, dies civilis duodecim horarum, Auctuar. p. 175. the civil day of the Romans contained twelve hours. And, 3*dly*, If St Mark writing his goſpel at Rome, for the Romans there, retains the Jewiſh hours, we have more reaſon to conceive that St John ſhould do ſo.

Ver. 26. [f] Καὶ ἦν ἡ ἐπιγραφὴ τῆς αἰτίας αὐτοῦ ἐπιγεγραμμένη, And the ſuperſcription of his accuſation was written.] This is ſpoken according to the manner of the Romans, by whom the title of the crimes for which the criminals were condemned, were either carried before them, or affixed to the inſtrument of their puniſhment: thus (a) Dio ſpeaks of a Roman ſervant crucified by his maſter, μετὰ γεγραμμένων τὴν αἰτίαν τοῦ θανατώσεως δηλόντων, with a writing declaring the cauſe of his death. See of this matter other inſtances in Lipſius de cruce, l. 2. c. 11. p. 52, 53.

Ver. 28. [g] Καὶ ἐπληρώθη ἡ γραφὴ, And the ſcripture was fulfilled which ſaith, Iſaiah 53. 12. and he was numbred with the tranſgreſſors.] Seeing Abarbanel and (b) R. Moſes Alſhe teſtify that their Rabbins did with one mouth confeſs that the words of this chapter were ſpoken of Meſſiah the King, and they bring in God enquiring of the Meſſiah thus, (c) Wilt thou heal and redeem my ſons after ſix thouſand years? wilt thou bear chaſtiſement to expiate their iniquities according to what is written? Iſaiah 53. 4. Surely he bore our griefs: they cannot reaſonably deny that theſe words were fulfilled by Chriſt's crucifixion between two thieves.

Ver. 33. [h] Σκότος ἐγένετο ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν γῆν, There was darkneſs over the whole earth.] Of this darkneſs (d) Africanus ſpeaks thus, τοῦτο τὸ σκότος ἔκλειψιν ἡλίου θαλλὸς ἐπικαλεῖ ἐν τρίτῃ τῶν ἱστοριῶν, ὡς ἐμοὶ δοκεῖ ἀλόγως, this darkneſs Thallus calls an eclipſe of the ſun in the third book of his hiſtory, but without reaſon, as I conceive. (e) Origen ſaith, Phlegon in the 14th book of his chronicles wrote of the defection of the ſun sun under Tiberius Cæsar, in whose reign it is manifest that our Lord suffered. (f) Tertullian saith, that this prodigious darkning of the sun was recorded in the Roman archives; for, saith he, at the same moment about noontide the day was withdrawn; they who knew not that this was foretold concerning Christ, thought it was an eclipse. And Eusebius in his chronicle, at the 18*th year of Tiberius*, saith, Christ suffered this year, in which time we find in other commentaries of the Heathens these words, There was a defection of the sun, Bithynia was shaken with an earthquake, and many houses fell down in the city of Nice; and then he proceeds to the testimony of Phlegon.

Ver. 43. [Ευσχήμων βουλευτὴς, An honourable counsellor;] That is, saith Dr Hammond, a decurio, one of those who were appointed for a standing council to a Roman colony: but against this Mr Le Cl. objects that he was Joseph of Arimathea; now, saith he, that was never reputed a Roman colony: and therefore he conjectures he is here named a counsellor, as being one of the greater Sanhedrim, or of the counsel of the high priest, who had a chamber in the temple in which he consulted with the priests, called the chamber of the counsellors, saith Dr Lightfoot here; they who were of the council of the high priest being called, saith he, βουλευταὶ, counsellers. And this is the most likely, because Arimathea was a city of Judea; this Joseph had a sepulchre in Jerusalem, and waited for the consolation of Israel, which are indications rather of a Jew, than of a Roman; and especially because it is peculiarly noted of him by St Luke, That he consented not to the counsel or actions of them who destroyed our Lord, chap. 23. 51. He therefore might have consented to them, being one of the Sanhedrim: hence is he introduced, John 19. 38, 39. with Nicodemus, who certainly was one of the great Sanhedrim, John 3. 1.—7. 50. doing kind offices to Christ; the first begging his body, that it might not be buried in the common burial place of malefactors; the other bringing spices to embalm him, as being both disciples of the Holy Jesus, Matth. 27. 57.

CHAP. XVI.

1. AND when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Salome, (who) [a] had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint (i. e. embalm) him, (set out.)

2. And [aa] very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came to the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

3. And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?

4. And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away; for (that which made them sollicitous about it was, that) it was very great.

5. And entring into the sepulchre, they saw (one in the shape of) a young man, sitting on the right side (of the sepulchre,) clothed with a long white garment; and they were affrighted (at the sight of him.)

6. And he saith to them, Be not (ye) affrighted. (for) ye seek Jesus of Nazareth who was crucified; he is risen, he is not here; (come near, and) behold the place where they laid him.

7. But go your way, tell his disciples, and (especially) [b] Peter, that he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him (according) as he said to you.

8. And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre, for they trembled, and were amazed (at the sight;) neither said they any thing to any man (whom they met by the way,) for they were afraid.

9. Now when Jesus was risen early, the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils:

10. And she went and told them that had been with him, (his disciples,) as they mourned and wept.

11. And (But) they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

12. After that, he appeared in another form to two of them as they walked, (to Emmaus, Luke 24. 13.) and (so) went into the country.

13. And they went and told it to the residue, neither [c] believed they them: (See the note.)

14. Afterward he appeared to the eleven as they sat at meat, and [d] upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them who had seen him after he was risen.

15. And he said to them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every [e] creature, (to all nations, Matth. 28. 19.)

16. He that believeth, and is baptized, [f] shall be saved, (by his continuance in that faith, 1 Cor. 15. 2. Colos. 1. 23.) but he that believeth not (the gospel preached, and by miracles confirmed to him,) shall be damned.

(f) Apol. c. 21.

17. And theſe [g] ſigns ſhall follow them that believe; (by virtue of that faith,) in my name ſhall they caſt out devils, (and) they ſhall ſpeak with new tongues, (which they had not learned.)

18. They ſhall take up ſerpents, (without being hurt by them;) and if they drink any deadly thing, (the poiſon of) it ſhall not hurt them; they ſhall lay their hands on the ſick, and they ſhall recover.

19. So then, after the Lord had ſpoken (thus) to them, he was received up into heaven, and ſat at the right hand of God.

20. And they went forth (after the Holy Ghoſt was come upon them,) and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with ſigns following. Amen. (i. e. So it was.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. XVI.

Ver. 1. [a] Ἠγόρασαν ἀρώματα, Had bought ſpices.] This tranſlation is juſtified from Luke 23. 56. where it is ſaid they prepared theſe ſpices (before,) and reſted on the ſabbath day; ſo that the Aoriſt is here put for the Perfect tenſe. See examples of like nature, note on 1 Cor. 5. 9.

Ver. 2. Καὶ λίαν πρωὶ τῆ μιᾶς τῶν Σαββάτων ἔρχονται ἐπὶ τὸ μνημεῖον, Very early in the morning;] ὀψὲ τῶν Σαββάτων, τῇ ἐπιφωσκούσῃ εἰς μίαν Σ· in the end of the week, as it began to dawn towards the firſt day of the week, Matth. 28. 1. on the firſt of the week, ὄρθρου βαθέως, very early in the morning, Luke 24. 2. They paſſed through the city, and came to the ſepulchre, ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου, as the ſun began to ariſe. This may be illuſtrated from a paſſage of (a) Agellius, That when two times immediately ſucceed one another, it matters not whether we reckon from the end of the one, or the beginning of the other.

Ver. 7. [b] Καὶ τῷ Πέτρῳ, Say to his diſciples, and to Peter.] Peter is here named, not as prince of the apoſtles, but, as the fathers ſay, for his conſolation, to take off the ſcruple which might ly upon his ſpirit, whether, after his threefold denial of his Maſter, he had not forfeited his right to be one of Chriſt's diſciples. So (b) St Gregory, Jerom, St Chryſoſtom, and others.

Ver. 13. Hence one of the antients ſays well, Nos de illorum dubitatione ſolidari, Their doubting is the confirmation of our faith: and the more difficulty they ſhewed in believing Chriſt's reſurrection, the greater reaſon have we to believe it; for the teſtimony of them who believed not themſelves, till after unqueſtionable conviction, is the more credible on that account.

Ver. 14. And, if this be attributed to them as culpable unbelief, and hardneſs of heart, ſurely they muſt much more be guilty of theſe ſins who, after the teſtimony of theſe apoſtles, and five hundred more eye-witneſſes of his reſurrection; after the ocular teſtimony of a whole world of Chriſtians, touching the mighty miracles performed in his name by the apoſtles, the choſen witneſſes of his reſurrection, and by many others who believed it, and were baptized into this faith; after ſo many internal and external experiments all Chriſtian churches had of the miraculous gifts of the Spirit, exerciſed before their eyes in their aſſemblies, and by themſelves for a whole age together, do yet continue to disbelieve that reſurrection, and the faith confirmed by it.

Ver. 15. be damned.] He ſhall be ſaved, i. e. he ſhall, by virtue of that faith and baptiſm, be put into a ſtate of ſalvation; ſo that, if he continue in that faith, and do not wilfully recede from his baptiſmal covenant, he ſhall actually be ſaved. Of which import of the phraſe, ſalvation and being ſaved, ſee note on Eph. 2. 8. Note alſo, that they who hence conclude that infants are not capable of baptiſm, becauſe they cannot believe, muſt alſo hence conclude they cannot be ſaved; faith being here more expreſly required to ſalvation than to baptiſm. Note, 3*dly*, That in the ſecond clauſe baptiſm is omitted, becauſe it is not ſimply the want of baptiſm, but the contemptuous neglect of it, which makes men guilty of damnation; otherwiſe infants might be damned for the miſtakes or the profaneneſs of their parents.

Ver. 17. Σημεῖα δὲ τοῖς πιστεύσασι ταῦτα παρακολουθήσει, And theſe ſigns ſhall follow them that believe, &c.] Of the caſting out of devils, the healing diſeaſes, the ſpeaking with new tongues, ſee the general preface to the epiſtles, § 17, 18, 19. Of the drinking of deadly poiſons I find but four inſtances recorded in hiſtory; that of (c) Barſabas, who, ſaith Papias, drank of it without hurt; that of the Cæcilian ſoldier, mentioned by Ado in his martyrology; that of Sabinus, biſhop of Canoſa, mentioned by Gregory of Tours; and that of Joſua Ben Levi, who having drunk a deadly poiſon, was, ſaith the Jewiſh Talmud, cured by pronouncing the name of Jeſus. Of taking up ſerpents without hurt, tho' venomous, we find in ſcripture only the inſtance of St Paul, Acts 28. 3. and, in church-hiſtory, we find but few of any credit, though the words of (d) Tertullian ſeem to intimate, that the faith of Chriſtians not only preſerved themſelves, but helped even Heathens. And miracles of this nature being more liable to exceptions than thoſe which were performed upon unbelievers, it being eaſy to imagine they might have ſome antidotes againſt the venom of thoſe beaſts, or the pernicious operations of thoſe draughts, it ſeemed good to Providence to be more ſparing in affording them.

By way of appendix to this chapter, it may be noted, That St Jerom hath long ſince told us, that this chapter was rarely to be found in this goſpel, and that ſcarce any of the Greek copies had it. But, notwithſtanding theſe words of Jerom, it is evident that this chapter was owned in the times of (e) Irenæus, who cites the 19th verſe of it, and ſays, That St Mark, in the end of his goſpel, tells us, that Chriſt aſcended into heaven, &c. The (f) apoſtolical conſtitutions cite theſe words, ver. 16. He that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved; he that believeth not ſhall be damned. (g) They alſo fully cite the 17th and 18th verſes. This chapter is alſo to be found in all the verſions, and, as Beza teſtifies, in all the old MSS. Nor doth Theophylact, in his notes upon it, take notice of any Greek copies where it had been wanting.

And as for the ſeeming oppoſition betwixt what is recorded in this chapter, and in the other evangeliſts, which (h) St Jerom tells us was the occaſion why this chapter was by ſome rejected; I ſhall firſt enumerate them, and then endeavour to return a ſufficient anſwer to them.

Object. 1. St Matthew and St Mark make mention only of one angel appearing to and ſpeaking with the women which came to the ſepulchre; whereas St Luke and St John mention two angels.

Anſ. I cannot here approve the ſolution of Voſſius, that one angel only is mentioned by St Matthew and St Mark, becauſe one only ſpake to the women; ſeeing St Luke ſaith in the plural, εἶπον πρὸς αὐτάς, The angels ſaid unto them, chap. 24. 15. St John, λέγουσιν αὐτῇ ἐκεῖνοι, they ſaid to Mary Magdalene, chap. 20. ver. 13.; beſides, the place of their appearance, and the words they ſpeak, differ from the place and words of the firſt angel.

I anſwer, therefore, That one only is mentioned by St Matthew and St Mark; becauſe the women ſtanding without the inward ſepulchre, or being only on the floor or pavement of it, ſaw but one angel, who ſaid unto them, He is not here, he is riſen; come ſee the place where the Lord lay; and then, go tell his diſciples, and Peter of it, Matth. 28. 6. Mark 16. 6. But when, in obedience to the words of this angel, they proceed to look into the cave, or inward ſepulchre, where the Lord lay, they ſee two other angels, one ſitting at Chriſt's head, another at his feet, where his body was laid, John 20. 12. Luke 24. 5. and ſaying words the other did not; but giving them no intimation timation that they ſhould tell theſe things to Chriſt's diſciples. And this ſeems to be a plain account of this matter from the very words of the evangeliſts.

Object. 2. St John and St Matthew ſay, the women ſtood without the ſepulchre when they ſaw the angel, or angels; St Mark and St Luke, that they had this viſion when they were come within the ſepulchre.

Anſ. 1. That the truth of the matter of this objection may be juſtly queſtioned: for, 1ſt, As St John ſaith of Mary Magdalene, ſhe ſtood πρὸς τὸ μνημεῖον, at the ſepulchre; which may ſignify either within or without it, ver. 11. So ver. 1. he ſaith ſhe came εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, into the ſepulchre; and that ſhe was upon the pavement, or in the outward ſepulchre, when ſhe is ſaid to ſtand at the ſepulchre, is evident from this, that only by ſtooping down ſhe looked down into the cave, or inward ſepulchre where the angels ſtood, at the place where his body had been laid, ver. 11, 12. St Matthew ſaith nothing directly of the place where the women were when they ſaw the angel; but becauſe he ſaith, that the angel ſat upon the ſtone which he had rolled from the ſepulchre, hence they conclude that the angel ſat without the ſepulchre: but the ſtone being rolled to the mouth of the cave, or inward ſepulchre, where Chriſt's body lay, Matth. 27. 60. the angel might ſit upon it thus rolled away, and yet ſit in a part of the outward ſepulchre, or pavement, as St Mark ſaith he did, ver. 5. when he bid the women come and ſee where the Lord lay. In a word, they were without the cave, or inward ſepulchre, according to St Matthew; but within the pavement, outward fence, ſept or wall of the outward ſepulchre, when they ſaw the ſingle angel, as St Mark ſaith. Being invited, Mary Magdalene ſtoops down into the cave, or inward ſepulchre, of which St Luke and St John ſpeak, and ſees two angels preſent there, in a quieſcent poſture, repreſented in ſcripture, ſometimes by ſitting, ſometimes by ſtanding.

Object. 3. St Mark ſaith, ver. 8. the women ſaid nothing to any man; the other three evangeliſts, that they told theſe things to the apoſtles, or diſciples.

Anſ. And ſo ſaith St Mark expreſly, that they went and told theſe things τοῖς μετ' αὐτοῦ, to thoſe who belonged to Chriſt, and were uſually with him, ver. 10, 11. And he ſaith only, ver. 8. that, during their flight from the ſepulchre, and amazement, before Chriſt's appearance to Mary, ver. 9. they ſaid nothing to any whom they met about the ſepulchre.

Object. 4. St Matthew, Mark and Luke ſay, that the women came firſt to the ſepulchre, ſaw the angel, or angels, yea, and Chriſt too, ſay Matthew and Mark, before they came to the apoſtles; St John ſaith, Chriſt was ſeen of Mary, after St John and Peter had been at the ſepulchre.

Anſ. I anſwer here again, The matter of fact ſeems not exactly related in this objection: for John ſaith expreſly, as the other evangeliſts did, that Mary Magdalene came firſt to the ſepulchre, and ſeeth the ſtone rolled away, ver. 1. and that ſhe ran and told Peter and John of it, ver. 2. He therefore doth not, or could not ſay, that Peter and John came before Mary to the ſepulchre. Moreover, it is plain, from all the other evangeliſts, and eſpecially from St Luke, that Peter and John went to the ſepulchre after ſhe had told theſe things to the apoſtles; for having ſaid this, ver. 10. he adds, ver. 12. that Peter riſing up, ran to the ſepulchre; and, ver. 22, 23. he introduces two diſciples ſpeaking thus to Chriſt, Some women of our own being early at the ſepulchre, made us aſtoniſhed; for they came, ſaying, they had ſeen a viſion of angels, who told them that he was alive. Vain, here, ſeems the imagination of ſome, who ſay St John ſpeaks here of Peter and John firſt, becauſe their teſtimony was to be preferred before the teſtimony of women; for they neither ſaw Chriſt, nor had a viſion telling them that he was riſen, as the women had, and did, but only ſaw his body was not there, which the Jews denied not. The words, therefore, of St John, ver. 11. Μαρία ἡ εἱστήκει may be rendered thus, Mary had ſtood at the ſepulchre, and, ſtooping down, had ſeen; and then there is no word of any difference in the order of this narration among the evangeliſts, tho' nothing is more ſlight than that: or elſe it may be ſaid, that St John thus poſtpones the ſtory of Mary Magdalene, becauſe he having a particular thing to ſay of her, ver. 15. which all the other evangeliſts had omitted, he would put her whole ſtory together.

Object. 5. St Matthew ſaith, the women held Chriſt's feet, ver. 9. but St John, that Chriſt ſaid to Mary Magdalene, Touch me not, ver. 17.

Anſ. True it is that St John ſaith, Chriſt ſpake thus to her; but he ſaith not that Chriſt ſaid this before ſhe had touched him: and therefore he ſaith nothing in oppoſition to St Matthew. Beſides, the meaning of theſe words, Touch me not, is only this, Be not ſo ſollicitous to hold me, as if I was immediately to go hence, and thou ſhouldſt ſee me no more; thou mayeſt have time ſufficient for that; for I do not yet aſcend. See the note on John 20. 17.

APPEN-

APPENDIX to Chap. XIV.

Concerning the day on which our Lord did eat the paſſover with his diſciples.

FOR reſolution of this queſtion, let it be noted;

1. That the paſchal lamb was to be killed in the evening of the 14th day of the month Niſan; for ſo we read, Exod. 12. 6. And the whole congregation ſhall kill it in the evening, or between the two evenings, ſaith the Hebrew. So alſo Lev. 23. 5. In the 14th day of the firſt month at even, Hebr. between the two evenings, ſhall be the Lord's paſſover. Now hence we learn, that though the day of the Jews began and ended at the evening, yet was it the latter even, on the 14th day, in which the paſſover was to be killed; becauſe the Jews had not two evenings in the morning, but only in the cloſe of the day, the latter evening beginning at the ſetting of the ſun. And, (2.) Becauſe the 15th day, or firſt day of unleavened bread began immediately after the eating of the paſchal lamb; and therefore, v. 7. is called the day when they did ſacrifice the paſſover; and the ſeven days of it were accounted from that day to the 21ſt day of the ſame month, Exod. 12. 17, 18. whereas, had they been reckoned from the beginning of the 14th day, there would have been not ſeven only, but eight days of unleavened bread. Accordingly (a) Joſephus doth inform us, that they did kill the paſchal lambs, ἀπὸ ἐνάτης ἕως μίσου ἑνδεκάτης, from the ninth hour to the eleventh. Note,

2*dly*, That the paſchal lamb was to be killed and offered at a ſet time, and the whole congregation was never to tranſfer it to another ſeaſon: for it is expreſly ſaid, Exod. 12. 14. This day (of the paſſover) ſhall be to you for a memorial, and ye ſhall keep it, (i. e. this ſame day,) as a feaſt by an ordinance for ever; and chap. 13. 10. Thou ſhalt keep this ordinance (of the paſſover, and of the feaſt of unleavened bread) לְמוֹעֲדָהּ in its ſet time, from year to year; and Lev. 23. 5. On the fourteenth day at even ſhall be the Lord's paſſover. Whence it is evident, there could be no tranſlation of either of theſe feaſts to another day, time, or ſeaſon, without plain violation of the law of Moſes.

Moreover, the reaſon of the tranſlation, aſſigned by thoſe who hold the Jews did thus tranſlate it when our Saviour ſuffered, is this, viz. That this was done that the firſt day of unleavened bread, being as a ſabbath, might fall upon a ſabbath-day, leſt two ſabbaths ſhould ſucceed each other: whereas it is evident, that upon this tranſlation two ſabbaths muſt ſucceed each other; for the ſeventh day of unleavened bread being a ſabbath as much as the firſt, Exod. 12. 16. muſt then fall upon the Friday following; and ſo two ſabbaths muſt ſucceed each the other.

3*dly*, That Chriſt did eat the laſt paſſover with his diſciples at the day and time accuſtomed, and did not anticipate the day, ſeems evident from the concurrent teſtimony of three evangeliſts, and from the reaſon of the thing. For,

(1.) St Matthew ſaith, chap. 26. 17. that the firſt day of unleavened bread Chriſt's diſciples did prepare, and, at the even of that day, Chriſt with them did eat the paſſover; St Mark, chap. 14. 12. that the firſt day of unleavened bread the Jews killed the paſſover; St Luke, that then came, or was coming, the day of unleavened bread, in which the paſſover ought to be killed, Luke 22. 7. He therefore did eat the paſſover, ὅτε ἔθυον, when the Jews killed it; and in the day, ἐν ᾗ ἔδει θύεσθαι, in which it ought to be eaten; and on the firſt day of unleavened bread, which was contemporary with the paſſover, according to theſe words of St Mark, After two days was the paſſover, and the feaſt of unleavened bread, Mark 14. 1. whereas both could not have been on the ſame day, had not the feaſt feaſt of unleavened bread begun on the 14th of Niſan: and therefore Maimonides, and others, on Exod. 12. 15. Deut. 16. 4. ſay, that the 14th of Niſan is called the firſt day of unleavened bread, it being ſaid, Exod. 12. 15. at even, the firſt day, ye ſhall put leaven out of your houſes, and yet they did this on the 14th after mid-day: and, Deut. 16. 3, 4. there ſhall no leavened bread be ſeen with thee ſeven days, ver. 4. neither ſhall any of the fleſh (of the paſchal lamb,) which thou ſacrificeſt the firſt day at even, remain till the morning. Whence it appears, that though the 15th of Niſan was the firſt day of unleavened bread, as to the holy convocation, yet was the 14th the firſt day, as to the ſeparation of leaven from their houſes: and therefore in relation to this computation, (b) Joſephus ſaith, Ἑορτὴ ἄζυμα ἐφ' ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ τὰς τῶ ἀζύμων λεγομένας, We celebrate the feaſt of unleavened bread eight days. And again, that (c) Ἐνιαύσιος ἡ τῶ ἀζύμων ἑορτὴς θύσαντες τὸν λεγόμενον πάσχα, that when the feaſt of unleavened bread was come, they ſacrificing the paſſover in the days of king Joſias, offered other ſacrifices ἐφ' ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ, for ſeven days following. He therefore who did eat it on the firſt day of unleavened bread, did eat it on the 14th day of Niſan, and on the day when the Jews did ſo. Vain therefore is the obſervation, That Chriſt is ſaid not θύειν, to kill or ſacrifice, but only ποιεῖν and φαγεῖν, to celebrate and eat the paſſover, ſeeing he did it at the time, ὅτε ἔθνον, when the Jews killed the paſſover, and ſent his diſciples to prepare, i. e. to kill and dreſs it for him as uſually (ſaith Dr Lightfoot) ſervants did for their maſters, that he might eat of it. And vainer ſtill is the argument from the word ποιῶ with thee do I eat, not ποιήσω, I will eat the paſſover, Matth. 26. 18. for ſeeing the diſciples went to prepare it, that he might eat of it, Mark 14. 12, 14. ſeeing they prepared it at the time when the Jews did and ought to kill the paſſover, and ſeeing he comes in the evening of that day to eat it, according to the commandment, with the twelve, Mark 14. 17. it is evident, theſe words are well rendered, I will keep the paſſover at thy houſe when my diſciples have prepared it.

Arg. 2. 2*dly*, Chriſt ſaith to his diſciples, Ye know that after two days is the paſſover, Matth. 26. 2. and Mark 14. 1. The paſſover and the feaſt of unleavened bread was after two days; or, as St Luke hath it, The feaſt of unleavened bread, called the paſſover, chap. 22. 1. and that Chriſt did not eat it till the firſt day of unleavened bread, hath been proved already, therefore he did not eat it till after thoſe two days, when the diſciples and the Jews knew the paſſover was by them to be eaten.

Arg. 3. 3*dly*, The day following, i. e. the day on which Chriſt ſuffered was a feaſt day; for Barabbas was releaſed at the feaſt, Matth. 27. 15. Mark 15. 6. Luke 23. 17. Now the feaſt of unleavened bread, in which an holy convocation was held, was the day after the paſſover, as we read, Lev. 23. 4, 5, 6. in the 14th day of the firſt month is the Lords paſſover; and on the 15th day of the ſame month is the feaſt of unleavened bread; in the firſt day ye ſhall have an holy convocation.

4*thly*, If Chriſt had celebrated the paſſover by anticipation on the 13th of Niſan, he had violated the law, which expreſly requires the celebration of it on the 14th day, and upon that account might have been juſtly liable to the cenſure of the Jews; nor would his diſciples have come to him, before the time appointed by the law, and by the rulers of the Jews, with that queſtion, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the paſſover? Matth. 26. 17. Mark 14. 12. nor would they, without ſcruple, have eaten with him againſt the letter of the law, or the cuſtom of their nation; and that they did not ſo, is plain, becauſe they put this queſtion to him only on the firſt day of unleavened bread, in which the paſſover ought to be eaten, ſaith St Luke.

5*thly*, It is confeſſed on all hands, That our Lord ſuffered on Friday; and alſo, that at the ſame time that he did eat the paſſover, he inſtituted the holy ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper; and yet that he did this the ſame night that he was betrayed, St Paul informs us, 1 Cor. 11. 23. now all the evangeliſts inform us, that in the morning following he was led bound to Pilate, at the ſixth hour was crucified, at the ninth hour expired; therefore he muſt be crucified the day after he inſtituted the ſacrament, and ſo the day after he celebrated the paſſover; the day of his crucifixion being therefore Friday, he muſt have celebrated the paſſover on Thurſday, or on the 14th of Niſan, according to the law.

Laſtly, The paſchal lamb could not be ſlain but in the place which God hath choſen to put his name there, Deut. 16. 6. that is, the temple: now this the prieſts would never have done for any, contrary to the law, which appointed the ſlaying of it on the 14th day, betwixt the two evenings, ibid. Now this, if it were not done by the prieſts, as Joſephus intimates, but, as (d) Philo ſaith, on a ſet day of every year, every one was then a prieſt for himſelf, yet would not the apoſtles have either done it or have asked to do it on any other day than than that which, by the law and by the practice of the nation, was appointed for that work. And whereas, to take off the force of this argument, some learned persons have invented a distinction betwixt a πάσχα θυτικὸν, i. e. a passover in which a lamb was sacrificed according to the law, and μνημονευτικὸν, or a commemoration of it without a sacrifice, and say our Saviour only did the latter, this is a novel and absurd imagination. It is new; for though some of the Greek church from the fifth century have held that Christ anticipated the day, I find not one of them who says he did not eat the paschal lamb. It is also without precedent among the ancient Jews, who in the times of their captivity and dispersion never celebrated any such commemorative passover, nor could do it without a sin like that of Jeroboam, by devising a celebration of it on their own heads, against the tenor of the law; but, as Mr Ainsworth notes, were then contented to keep the feast of unleavened bread, which being not confined to one place, might be observed in their captivity, and their dispersions. Moreover, admit that such an uncommanded memorial of the passover had been kept by them, when their temple being burnt, they could not offer sacrifice, and in their dispersions at such distance from it they could not repair to it; yet is there no one instance, nor any semblance of a reason, that this was ever done by any present at Jerusalem, where Christ was at that very time, in which, saith St Luke, they ought to sacrifice the passover.

Object. 1. But on the contrary it is objected, 1*st*, That it is plainly said that our Lord ate that supper in which he said, One of you shall betray me, and in which he gave the sop to Judas, πρὸ δὲ ἑορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα, John 13. 1. before the paschal feast, and yet that supper seems to be the same with that mentioned in the other evangelists. To this I answer, Answ. 1*st*, That it neither was the same, nor indeed could be the same, and that for the very reason assigned in the objection, because it was held before the feast of the passover; whereas it is already proved, our Saviour kept the paschal feast at the first day of unleavened bread, when the Jews did and ought to kill the passover, and when the feast of unleavened bread, called the passover, was come, Luke 22. 1,—7. (2.) Because when Christ said at this supper to Judas going out from it, What thou doest, do quickly, some of the disciples thought our Lord had bid him prepare those things which they had need of against the feast, viz. the paschal feast; whereas Christ keeping the feast but one night, they could not have so conceived of his words, had they then celebrated the paschal supper, nor was Judas ever employed by Christ in making preparation for the paschal supper, but Peter and John, Luke 22. 8. (3.) The devil entered into Judas after our Lord had given the sop to him at this supper, John 13. 2, 27. and yet it is evident from St Luke, chap. 22. 1, 3. that Satan entered into Judas when the passover was only near, but not yet come, ver. 8. And, (4.) Had the supper mentioned here by St John been the paschal supper, Judas must have made his agreement to betray Christ after that supper; whereas it is plain from all the other evangelists, that he did that before the paschal supper. See Matth. 26. 14. Mark 14. 10. Luke 22. 4.

Answ. 2. And, 2*dly*, There is a great difference betwixt the circumstances relating to him that should betray him here, and at the paschal supper; for here Christ privately tells John who it was that should betray him, ver. 25, 26. but at the paschal supper he makes him known to them all, Matth. 26. 25. Luke 22. 21. here he makes him known to St John, by giving him a sop which he himself had dipped in the dish, ver. 26. but in the paschal supper he makes him known by this, that he had his hand with him in the dish, Matth. 26. 23. Mark 14. 20.

Object. 2. 2*dly*, It is objected, That the Jews the day that our Saviour suffered would not enter into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled, and so unfit to eat the passover, John 18. 28. whereas Christ ate of it the night before he suffered.

Answ. To this I answer, That by the passover mentioned, John 18. 28. we are to understand, not the paschal lamb, but the chagigah or peace-offerings, the sheep and oxen offered all the seven days of the feast, and which are expressly called the passover, as the whole feast of unleavened bread was, Luke 21. 1. so Deut. 16. 2. Thou shalt sacrifice the passover to the Lord, of the flock and of the herd: where the note of the Jewish doctors is, the flocks signify the lambs and kids for the passover; the herd, the offerings for the chagigah. Now the lamb, say they, was eaten on the 14th day, but the chagigah on the 15th. So 2 Chron. 37. 7, 8, 9. where it is twice said, that the king, and the princes, gave to the people, and the priests, oxen as well as sheep, lepesachim, εἰς τὸ φασεκ. for the passover. And the Apocryphal Esdras saith, chap. 1. 8. Helkias, Zacharias and Suelus, governors of the temple, gave to the priests εἰς πάσχα. for the passover, two thousand and four hundred sheep, and three hundred calves. So here the rulers of the Jews would not go into the judgment hall, that they might not be defiled, but be fit to eat the passover; i. e. those paschal offerings of the herd, which were holy things, of which none might eat in their defilement. Mr Whiſton takes the paſſover here in the ſtrict ſenſe; but then he thinks that it was on the ſame night that the rulers would not go into the judgment hall leſt they ſhould be defiled, and that they afterwards did eat the paſchal lamb betwixt two and four in the morning, which they might do; for though the paſchal lamb was to be killed betwixt the two evenings, Exod. 12. 8. and to be ate at night, ſo that none of it was to be left till the morning, yet I find not any preciſe time of night limited beyond which they might not delay the eating of it: but yet it is certain that in this inſtance it could not be ſo; for Pilate, in compliance with their ſcrupuloſity, goes out of the judgment hall to them three times ſucceſſively, John 18. 29, 31. chap. 19. 4. then he brings out Chriſt to them, and ſaith, Behold your king, and then it was Friday at the ſixth hour, or at noon; ſo that they who ſtaid without the hall that they might eat the paſſover, ſtaid there till Friday at noon, Pilate ſtill going out to them, becauſe they durſt not go in to him.

Object. 3. 3*dly*, It is objected, That the day on which Chriſt was crucified is ſtiled παρασκευὴ τῶν ἄζυμα, the preparation of the paſſover, therefore the paſſover could not yet be eaten, John 19. 14. for as the παρασκευὴ of the ſabbath is ſaid to be προσάββατον, the day before the ſabbath, Mark 15. 42. Luke 23. 54. ſo the paraſceve of the paſſover muſt be the day before the paſſover.

Anſw. 1. But, 1*ſt*, According to this expoſition of the words, the Jews muſt have eaten their paſſover on the ſabbath day, our Lord being crucified on Friday; ſo that if that day was the day before the paſſover, Saturday muſt be the paſchal day, and ſo they muſt have eaten it at leaſt two days after our Saviour did.

2*dly*, To anſwer therefore poſitively to this objection, as παρασκευὴ, abſolutely put, or with relation to the ſabbath, is always Friday, ſo here παρασκευὴ τῶν ἄζυμα is only the paſchal Friday, or the Friday in the paſchal feſtival, as dominica paſchæ, or pentecoſtes, is the day of thoſe feſtivals.

THE PREFACE TO THE GOSPEL of ST LUKE.

§ 1. ALL that I have to offer touching this goſpel, from church-hiſtory, hath been delivered in the preface to the goſpel of St Mark. Where it hath been obſerved,

1. That this goſpel was received by the whole church of Chriſt as (a) genuine, and as an authentic record, fit to be owned as a rule of faith, and that the Spirit of God aſſiſted and ſtirred up St Luke to endite it.

2. That this goſpel was praiſed by St Paul, and was approved by the apoſtle St John. The firſt conſideration is a ground ſufficient to believe this goſpel to be a true and authentic record of all things contained in it; but, I confeſs, I am not ſo well ſatisfied of the truth and certainty of this ſecond propoſition, as to lay the foundation of the divine authority of this evangeliſt upon it. I therefore ſhall endeavour to eſtabliſh the authority of St Mark, and of this evangeliſt, upon a better, and, in my apprehenſion, a more ſure foundation.

§ 2. 1ſt, Therefore it is certain, that our Lord had not only twelve apoſtles, but ſeventy, or ſeventy two of his diſciples to attend upon him: for, after he had ſent forth the twelve to preach the kingdom of God, Luke 1. 9, 2. he ſends out ſeventy others to go in pairs before him, and to preach in every city to which he was about to come, ſaying, The kingdom of God is come near to you, Luke 10. 1, 9.

2dly, Note, That they were both ſent forth to preach the kingdom of God, and therefore ſent on the ſame errand; both ſent to preach immediately from the ſame Lord, to preach in his name, with the ſame power, to heal diſeaſes, and to caſt out devils, Luke 9. 1.—10,—10. 1,—17. that, as he ſaid to the apoſtles, I ſend you forth as ſheep among wolves, Matth. 10. 16. ſo alſo ſaid he to the ſeventy, Luke 10. 3. as he ſaid to the apoſtles, He that receiveth you receiveth me, Mat. 10. 40. ſo ſaith he to the ſeventy, He that heareth you heareth me, Luke 10 16. As, therefore, I have proved, that theſe things were ſaid to the apoſtles, not ſo much with relation to their firſt miſſion, while Chriſt was with them upon earth, as with relation to their ſecond miſſion, which was to begin after our Lord's aſcenſion, and the falling of the Holy Ghoſt upon them; (ſee note on Matth. 10. 8.) ſo may we rationally conceive, that the like words ſpoken to the ſeventy, relate to the farther commiſſion to be given to them: and therefore, when they were returned to Chriſt after their firſt miſſion, as he ſpeaks to them thus, I beheld Satan falling as lightning from heaven before you, as he was to do after our Saviour's death, John 12. 31. ſo doth he add, Luke 10. 18, 19. Behold, I give you power to tread upon ſcorpions and ſerpents, and over all the power of the enemy, and nothing ſhall by any means hurt you. Which words ſeem plainly to give a new commiſſion to the ſeventy, relating not, as their former, to their preaching before him to the cities of Iſrael only, but to their preaching among other nations; as we may gather, by comparing theſe words with the commiſſion given by Chriſt to his apoſtles, ſent into the world to preach the goſpel to all nations, Mark 16. 15, 16, 17, 18. As, then, the apoſtles were to execute this ſecond miſſion by the Holy Ghoſt ſent down from heaven, and, upon that account, are bid to ſtay at Jeruſalem till they received this power from on high, by the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon them, Luke 24. 49, 50. Acts 1. 4,—8. ſo may we reaſonably believe the ſeventy were to be endued with the ſame power for the execution of their miſſion. Note,

3dly, That both St Mark and St Luke were of the

the number of the seventy disciples, as we learn from the testimonies of (b) Origen and (c) Epiphanius: for when Origen had said, that the disciples of Christ, John and Matthew, Mark and Luke, γεγραφήκασιν τὰ εὐαγγέλια writ the gospels, he proves this, because Christ first sent his apostles, and after them the seventy two, εὐαγγελίζεσθαι, to evangelize; and that, therefore, Mark and Luke preached the gospel with Paul the apostle, St Luke being mentioned as an attendant on St Paul, see note on Acts 16. 10. and St Mark as one of the circumcision, who was συνεργὸς αὐτῶν εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, his fellow-worker unto the kingdom of God, Colossi. 4 10, 11. (d) Epiphanius having told us that Mark, εἷς ἐτύγχανεν ἐκ τῶν ἑβδομήκοντα δύο, was one of the seventy two, adds, that the work of writing was committed to Luke, (e) ὅτι καὶ αὐτὸς ἐκ τῶν ἑβδομήκοντα δύο, he also being one of the seventy two. But against this it is objected, Object. 1. That St Luke confesses that he was not from the beginning an eye-witness and minister of the word, Luke 1. 1, 2. and therefore is thought to have his gospel from the information of St Paul and other of the apostles. So Jerom and others, antient and modern, have conjectured from these words.

Ans. The words of the evangelist are so far from giving any ground to this assertion, that they plead fairly for St Luke's personal knowledge of all the things written in the gospel, even from first to last. For, saith he,

Ver. 1. Forasmuch as others have undertaken to set forth in order a narrative of those things which are most surely believed among us (Christians;)

Ver. 2. Even as they who, from the beginning, were eye-witnesses and ministers of the word, have delivered them to us (Christians;)

Ver. 3. It seemed good to me, who have had a perfect knowledge of all things (performed among us in Judæa,) from the very first (rise of them, in the vision made to Zacharias, concerning the birth of his son, John the baptist,) to write to thee in order (of them.) Now here, I say,

1. That these words do not affirm that any of those men who set forth those narratives did it from the instruction they received from these eye-witnesses, or ministers of the word, but only that they pretended to do it agreeably to what these eye-witnesses said: much less do they give us the least hint that St Luke received his instructions from them.

2. They, saith he, declare their narrative agreeably to what is delivered by those who were eye-witnesses from the beginning, and ministers of the word. It therefore seemeth good to me, who have had a certain knowledge of the same things, ἄνωθεν, from the first rise of them, (as these eye-witnesses had,) to write to thee in order of them; and then he begins his narrative from an higher rise than either St Matthew or St Mark hath done, not giving the least hint that he received his knowledge of these things from any other. It is true that (f) Irenæus saith, that Luke ἐν βιβλίῳ καθέξῆς, writ in a book the gospel which St Paul preached; but he saith not, he did this in his gospel, and not in the Acts of the apostles. His gospel, also, contains, for substance, the same great things which St Paul preached for the conversion of the Jews and Gentiles; as also doth the gospel of St Matthew: but hence it doth not follow, that the one rather than the other is to be ascribed to St Paul. Yea, it is certain, that St Luke could not receive his gospel from St Paul, as an eye-witness of it, because we know St Paul was no eye-witness of it, but a convert to Christianity after all that Luke had written was accomplished.

Object. 2. We are told, that Luke was converted by St Paul at Thebes.

Ans. But this we have only from Nicephorus: and 'tis the less credible, not only because it comes to us so late, but because it appears not from any credible author, that St Paul was ever there. It is more probable, from the silence of St Luke and St Paul, who never calleth him his son, that he was a Christian, or a believer, long before; and having, as Theophylact observes, ἐξ ἔθους παιδείας, his instruction in the Jewish religion at Jerusalem, he might be so from the beginning of Christ's preaching. Note,

4*thly*, That the Holy Ghost, on the day of Pentecost, came down upon all that were then assembled with the apostles; for being ἅπαντες, all together with one accord, ver. 1. they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, ver. 4. even all the one hundred and twenty mentioned, Acts 1. 15. as it is proved in the note on Acts 2. 1. And again, the apostles being dismissed by the high priest and his council, they go to their own company, that is, to the one hundred and twenty, Acts 4. 24. see the note there; and when they had prayed for ability to preach the word with boldness, and that God would confirm it by signs and wonders done in the name of Jesus, they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and spake the word with boldness, ver. 29. 30, 31. Note,

5*thly*, That

(b) Μάρκος ἦν ὁ Λουκᾶς ἐκ τῶν οὓς ὄψεις, Παῦλῳ τῷ ἀποστόλῳ εὐαγγελίζοντο. Dial. de recta fide, p. 8.
(c) Ibid. p. 7. (d) Hær. 51. § 6. p. 428. (e) P. 433. (f) Apud Euseb. hist. eccl. l. 5. c. 8.

gthly, That it is highly reasonable to conceive the seventy were part of the one hundred and twenty that were then present, and assembled with the apostles: not only from the (g) tradition of the church, that Matthias, and Joseph, called Barsabas, were chosen out of the seventy, but also from the nature of the thing itself: for St Peter saith, an apostle must be chosen out of those that had been with them all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among them, to succeed in the place of Judas, and be a witness of our Lord's resurrection, Acts 1. 21, 22. Now, whence should they chuse such men but from the seventy? And St Paul speaks of men coming up with Jesus, after his resurrection, from Galilee, who were his witnesses to the people, Acts 13. 31. and sure the seventy must be of this number. Moreover, what was become of the seventy, if they came not up with their raised Saviour to Jerusalem? Can we think that men so full of hopes that he would now restore the kingdom to Israel, Acts 1. 6. would stay behind in Galilee? and, if they came up to Jerusalem, would they not consort, as formerly, with the apostles? can we think that one hundred and twenty other persons should adhere thus closely to them, and yet the seventy should absent themselves, especially at the feast of Pentecost, when they had so much reason to expect the promise of the Father?

Moreover, it is certain from St Luke, that Christ had made them labourers in his harvest, Luke 10. 2. and so far ministers of his gospel, as to declare, that he who heard them, heard him, and he that despised them, despised him, ver. 16. and also given them commission to work miracles, and cast out devils in his name, ver. 9, 17. And I have shewed, that, after their return to Christ, they received a new commission, like to that given to the apostles, when they were sent to preach to all nations, and which, as far as we can learn from the evangelists, they never executed till after our Lord's resurrection, when we are sure that all who by Eusebius, hist. eccl. l. 1. c. 12. and by (h) Epiphanius, in the heresy of the Herodians, are mentioned as belonging to the seventy, did it. Now, if the seventy disciples had a commission from our Lord to preach to other nations; if, after he was seated at the right hand of his Father, he sent not only the twelve, but, as Epiphanius there expressly saith, the seventy two to be κηρύκας εἰς ὅλην τὴν οἰκουμένην, preachers throughout all the world, and among them, as he there saith, St Mark and Luke; they also must be enabled, by the Holy Ghost, to speak with tongues and prophesy, that so they might be able to preach to those nations whose languages they understood not. And hence (i) Eusebius reckons among those who were enabled, as St Paul was, to write μυρία καὶ ἀπόῤῥητα, a thousand mysteries, the twelve apostles and the seventy disciples. And therefore (k) Origen says well, that Christ having such disciples, it is more reasonable to think he should commit the writing of his gospel to them, rather than to those who were not his disciples.

If then St Mark and Luke were of the number of those men who had a commission from Christ to preach the gospel after his ascension, not only to the Jews, but to other nations also; if the Holy Ghost, which fell on the apostles, fell on them in like manner also, for that end; if the universal church of Christ hath held, that they, as well as the apostles, did endite their gospels by the assistance of the Holy Ghost, and, upon that account, received them as a rule of faith, as much as the gospels written by St Matthew and St John, who were undoubtedly apostles of our Lord, and were by his Spirit assisted to endite their gospels: then have we equal reason to receive the gospels of St Mark and Luke as the oracles of God, and so as a most certain rule of faith, as we have to receive the gospels of St Matthew and St John under that character.

As to the time of writing this gospel, I find it most uncertain. (l) Irenæus is positive, that it was written after the death of the apostle Paul; for speaking of St Peter and St Paul, he saith, that, after their decease, St Mark and St Luke writ their gospels: whereas (m) Theophylact saith expressly, μετὰ πενθκαιδέκα ἔτη τῆς τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἀναλήψεως συνεγράφατο, it was written within fifteen years after our Lord's ascension, that is, about ten years before the death of the apostle Paul; and so also saith the Synopsis attributed to Athanasius. And, could we depend on the opinion of (n) Origen, and others others of the ancients, that those words of St Paul, whose praise is in the gospel throughout all the churches, did belong to the gospel of St Luke, we might conclude from the writing the second epistle to the Corinthians, that St Luke's gospel, writ before it, must be written at or before the time assigned by Athanasius and Theophylact. But (o) Theodoret being positive, that St Paul, in these words, meant not St Luke, but Barnabas, who travelled with St Paul, and preached the gospel throughout all the churches, Acts 13. 2. —16. 36. and who was chosen by the churches about Antioch to travel with St Paul, to bring their charity to the brethren in Judæa, Acts 11. 30. we must be content to leave the time when St Luke writ this gospel still uncertain: only, because it is certain, from the beginning of the Acts, that it was writ before that treatise, and highly probable, from the conclusion of the Acts of the Apostles, that these Acts were written and finished in the ninth of Nero; we may hence probably conclude, this gospel must be endited before that time; and, consequently, that Irenæus must mistake, in saying it was written after the death of the apostle Paul.

GOSPEL of ST LUKE.

CHAP. I.

1. [a] FORASMUCH as many have taken in hand to ſet forth in order a declaration of thoſe things which are moſt ſurely believed (or have aſſuredly been performed) among us (by the Lord Jeſus;)

2. Even as they delivered them to us who from the beginning were eye witneſſes, and (who are now) miniſters of the word; (or have the miniſtration and diſpenſation of the word committed to them; See Acts 13. 5. 1 Cor. 4. 1.)

3. [b] It ſeemed good to me alſo, having had perfect underſtanding of all things from the very firſt, to write to thee in order (of them,) moſt excellent Theophilus,

4. That thou mighteſt know the certainty of thoſe things wherein thou haſt been [c] inſtructed.

5. There was in the days of Herod, the king of Judea, a [d] certain prieſt named Zacharias, [d e] of the courſe of Abia, (i. e. the eight of the 24 courſes of the prieſts which miniſtred in the temple by their weeks,) and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elizabeth.

6. And they were both righteous before God, (as) walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, blameleſs.

7. And they had no child, becauſe that Elizabeth was barren, and they were both now well ſtricken in years, (Gr. were aged in their days.)

8. And it came to paſs, that while he executed the prieſts office before God in the order of his courſe;

9. According to the cuſtom of the prieſts office, [e] his lot was, (i. e. he was choſen by lot,) to burn incenſe when he went into the temple of the Lord.

10. And the whole multitude of the people were praying without, at the time [f] of (his burning) incenſe;

11. And (whilſt he was doing this) there [g] appeared to him an angel of the Lord, ſtanding on the right ſide of the altar of incenſe:

12. And when Zacharias ſaw him, he was troubled, and fear fell upon him.

13. But the angel ſaid to him, Fear not, Zacharias, for thy [h] prayer (for the people) is heard, (God meaning now ſuddenly to ſend the Meſſiah,) and thy wife Elizabeth ſhall bear thee a ſon, (who ſhall be his fore-runner,) and thou ſhalt call his name John.

14. And thou ſhalt have joy and gladneſs (for the fruit of her womb,) and (not only thou, but others alſo, for) many ſhall rejoice at his birth:

15. For he ſhall be [i] great in the ſight of the Lord, (as being highly favoured by him,) and ſhall drink neither wine nor ſtrong drink, and he ſhall be filled with the holy Ghoſt, even from his mothers womb, (i. e. very early.)

16. And many of the children of Iſrael ſhall he turn to the Lord their God.

17. And he ſhall go before him in [k] the ſpirit and power of Elias, (who turned the people from Baal to God, 1 Kings 18. 37.) to turn the hearts of the fathers to (or with) the children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of (him who is emphatically ſtiled) the juſt (One, Acts 3. 14. and ſo) to make ready a people prepared for (the reception of) the Lord.

18. And Zacharias ſaid to the angel, Whereby ſhall I know (the truth of) this, (of which I have cauſe to doubt?) for I am an old man, and my wife (alſo is) well ſtricken in years.

19. And the angel anſwering, ſaid to him, I am Gabriel that ſtand in the preſence of God, and am ſent (by him) to ſpeak (this) to thee, and to ſhew thee theſe glad tidings:

20. And behold, thou ſhalt be dumb, and not able to ſpeak until the day that theſe things ſhall be performed, becauſe thou believedſt not my words, which ſhall be fulfilled in their ſeaſon.

21. And the people waited for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried ſo long in the (inner) temple.

22. And when he came out, he could not ſpeak to them, and they perceived that he had ſeen a viſion in the temple, for he (only), ly) beckoned to them, and remained [l] ſpeechleſs.

23. And it came to paſs, that aſſoon as the days of his miniſtration were accompliſhed, he departed to his own houſe.

24. And after thoſe days his wife Elizabeth conceived, and (through devotion, or to avoid diſcourſes,) [m] hid herſelf five months, ſaying,

25. Thus (graciouſly) hath the Lord dealt with me, in the days wherein he looked on me, to take away (that barrenneſs, which was) my reproach among men.

26. And in the ſixth month, (the ſame) angel Gabriel was ſent from God, to a city of Galilee, named Nazareth,

27. To a [n] virgin eſpouſed to a man whoſe name was Joſeph, of the houſe of David, and the virgins name was Mary.

28. And the angel (of the Lord) came in to her, and ſaid, Hail thou that art [o] highly favoured (of God,) the Lord is with thee; bleſſed art thou among women.

29. And when ſhe ſaw him, ſhe was troubled at his ſaying, and caſt in her mind what manner of ſalutation this ſhould be, (or what might be the import of it.)

30. And the angel ſaid to her, Fear not, Mary, (for) thou haſt found favour with God.

31. And behold thou (being a virgin) ſhalt (yet) conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a ſon, and ſhalt call his name Jeſus.

32. And he ſhall be great, and ſhall be called the Son of the Higheſt, and the Lord God ſhall give to him the throne of his father David, (or that ſpiritual kingdom promiſed to the Meſſiah the ſon of David.)

33. And he ſhall [p] reign over the houſe of Jacob for ever, (whilſt he hath any ſeed in being,) and of his kingdom there ſhall be no end; (as there hath, and ſhall be of the four great monarchies.)

34. Then ſaith Mary to the angel, [q] How ſhall this be, ſeeing I know not a man?

35. And the angel anſwered, and ſaid to her, The holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee: therefore alſo that holy thing that ſhall be born of thee ſhall be called the Son of God.

36. And behold thy [r] couſin Elizabeth, ſhe hath alſo conceived a ſon in her old age, and this is the ſixth month (from her conception) with her that was called barren; (nor is this to be doubted of,)

37. For with God nothing ſhall be impoſſible, (Gen. 18. 14.)

38. And Mary ſaid, Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word: and (then) the angel departed from her.

39. And Mary aroſe in thoſe days, and went into the [s] hill country with haſte, into a city of Juda, (named Hebron, to viſit her couſin of whom the angel ſpoke.)

40. And (ſhe) entered into the houſe of Zacharias, and ſaluted Elizabeth.

41. And it came to paſs, then when Elizabeth heard the ſalutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb, and Elizabeth was filled with the holy Ghoſt, (i. e. the ſpirit of prophecy;)

42. And ſhe ſpake out with a loud voice, and ſaid, Bleſſed art thou among women, and [t] bleſſed is the fruit of thy womb.

43. And whence is this (honour done) to me, that (ſhe who is) the mother of [u] my Lord ſhould come to me?

44. For lo (this ſo affected me, that) aſſoon as the voice of thy ſalutation ſounded in mine ears, the babe [w] leaped in my womb for (the) joy (that tranſported me.)

45. And bleſſed is ſhe that believed (the words of the angel,) [x] for there ſhall be a performance of thoſe things which were told her from the Lord.

46. And Mary ſaid, My ſoul doth magnify the Lord,

47. And my ſpirit hath rejoiced in God my ſaviour.

48. For he hath (highly) regarded the [y] low eſtate of his handmaiden; for behold, from henceforth all generations ſhall call me bleſſed.

49. For he that is mighty hath done [z] to me great things, and holy (and reverend) is his name; (Pſal. 111. 9.)

50. And (as) his mercy is (to me, ſo will it be) on them that fear him, from generation to generation.

51. (To ſhew that he is mighty,) He (in all ages) hath ſhewed ſtrength with his [aa] arm, he hath ſcattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

52. He hath put down the mighty from their ſeats, and hath exalted them of low degree.

53. (And through his mercy to them that fear him,) He hath filled the hungry with good things, and (but) the rich he hath ſent empty away.

54. He hath [bb] holpen his ſervant Iſrael, in remembrance of his mercy.

55. As he ſpake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his ſeed, (promiſing them one who ſhould be a bleſſing to them) for ever.

56. And Mary abode with her (couſin) about three months, and (then) returned to her own houſe.

57. Now

57. Now Elizabeths full time came, that she should be delivered, and she brought forth a son.

58. And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed great mercy upon her, and they rejoiced with her.

59. And it came to pass that on the [cc] eight day they came to circumcise the child, and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father;

60. And his mother answered, and said (to them so naming him, It shall) not (be) so, but he shall be [dd] called John.

61. And they said to her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62. And they made signs to his father, (to know) how he would have him called.

63. And he (by signs) asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, His name is John; and they marvelled all.

64. And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.

65. And fear came on all that dwelt round about them, and all those sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judea.

66. And all them that heard them, laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be? [ee] And the hand of the Lord (i. e. his favour) was with him, (in a special manner to assist and prosper him.)

67. And his father Zacharias was filled with the holy Ghost, and [ff] prophesied, saying,

68. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for [gg] he hath visited and redeemed his people;

69. And hath raised up [hh] an horn of salvation, (a mighty, royal Saviour,) for us in the house of his servant David;

70. As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been (successively) [ii] since the world began; (promising by them,)

71. That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hands of all that hate us:

72. (And this he hath done) to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; (ver. 54, 55.)

73. (And) the [kk] oath which he sware to our father Abraham, (that in his seed should all the families of the earth be blessed, Gen. 22. 18. and)

74. That he would grant (Gr. to grant) to us, that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, (sin, death, and Satan,) might [ll] serve him without fear (of them,)

75. In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.

76. And thou, (my) child, shalt be called [mm] the prophet of the Highest (God;) for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord (Christ,) to prepare his way;

77. To give knowledge of salvation, (i. e. of the Messiah, stiled by the prophets The salvation of God, see note on chap. 2. 30.) to his people, for the remission of their sins;

78. Through the tender mercy of our God, whereby the [nn] day spring from on high, (or rising sun, as Christ is stiled, Zach. 3. 8.) hath visited us;

79. To give light (not to us only, but also) to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

80. And the child grew, and waxed strong in (the) Spirit, (or had the Spirit of God daily shewing himself more conspicuously in him,) and was in the desert till the day of his shewing (himself) to Israel, (by the execution of his office among them.)

ANNOTATIONS on Chap. I.

Ver. 1. [a] Forasmuch as πολλοὶ ἐπεχείρησαν, many have taken in hand to set forth a narration, περὶ τῶν πεπληροφορημένων ἐν ἡμῖν πραγμάτων, concerning the things which have most surely been believed and done among us; ver. 2. Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eye-witnesses (of what Christ did,) and ministers of the word (of the gospel.)] Here note,

1. That πράγματα πεπληροφορημένα refers not only to things believed, but also to things performed by Christ and his apostles; this first treatise being designed to mention the things which Jesus himself said or did, Acts 1. 1. as they were delivered by the apostles, who had been with Christ from the beginning, John 15. 27. Acts 1. 21. which the seventy disciples were not; his second to declare the acts of the apostles, who being sent to preach the gospel to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem, were in that ὑπηρέται τοῦ λόγου, ministers of the word. Let a man so account of us apostles, saith St Paul, ὡς ὑπηρέτας Χριστοῦ, as the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God, 1 Cor. 4. 1. He also was himself ordained to be ὑπηρέτης, a minister and witness of what he had seen, and of what Christ should reveal to him, Acts 26. 16. i. e. a witness of what he had seen, and a minister of Christ's revelations made to him. So when Barnabas and Paul were preaching the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews, they had with them John, ὑπηρέτην, a minister of this word, Acts 13. 5. And when St Luke saith they were πεπληροφορημένα ἐν ἡμῖν, he doth not only mean that they were done, but that they were performed with ſuch circumſtances as gave them πληροφορίαν τῆς πίστεως, a full aſſurance of faith, Heb. 10. 22. as to the truth of the doctrines taught, and the works done by Chriſt and his apoſtles, as the word ſignifies continually in the epiſtles; as when it is ſaid that Abraham was πληροφορηθεὶς, fully aſſured that what God had promiſed, he was able to perform, Rom. 4. 21. and chap. 14. 5. Let every one be fully aſſured, πληροφορείσθω, in his own mind; when St Paul wiſhes to his Coloſſians, the riches of πληροφορίας τῆς συνέσεως, of the full aſſurance of knowledge, Coloſſ. 2. 2. when he ſaith his Theſſalonians received the word ἐν πληροφορίᾳ πολλῇ, in much aſſurance, 1 Theſſ. 1. 5. and deſires the believing Jews to be careful to attain εἰς πληροφορίαν, to a full aſſurance of hope to the end, Heb. 6. 11.

2*dly*, Hence note, that there is no neceſſity that the many who had taken in hand to make a narrative of what was believed or done by Chriſtians, ſhould have done this at all by writing, rather than by word of mouth; much leſs that they ſhould all be writers of goſpels, rather than of the acts of the apoſtles. It is certain alſo, that St Luke is ſo far from blaming them for theſe performances, that he places himſelf in the rank of them, and ſaith they made their narratives of theſe matters even as the apoſtles had delivered them.

3*dly*, Hence I conclude, that though St Luke was no apoſtle, he might be one of the ſeventy mentioned Luke 10. for neither were they with Chriſt ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, from the beginning, nor choſen to be the witneſſes of what he did, nor in the primary ſenſe ὑπηρέται τοῦ λόγου, the miniſters of the goſpel. And yet beſides theſe words which prove nothing to the contrary, I ſee not why St Luke, who was a before a proſelyte to the Jewiſh religion, and who had, ſaith Theophylact, ἐδεήμην παιδίαν his inſtruction in the Jewiſh religion at Jeruſalem, ſhould not ſee and converſe with Chriſt, and be one of the ſeventy, as Origen and Epiphanius ſay he was. See the preface to this goſpel, ſect. 2. n. 3.

Ver. 3. [b] It ſeemed good to me alſo, having had perfect underſtanding of things ἄνωθεν from the very firſt, to write unto thee καθεξῆς, in order, moſt excellent Theophilus.] Here note,

1*ſt*, That it is certain that ἄνωθεν here ſignifies from above, i. e. ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, from heaven, as it doth, John 3. 3, 7, 31. chap. 19. 11. James 1. 17. chap. 3. 15, 17. ſeeing it as often ſignifies from the top, riſe, or beginning of a thing; as when the vail of the temple is ſaid to be rent ἀπὸ ἄνωθεν, from the top to the bottom, Matth. 27. 51. Mark 15. 38. Chriſt's coat to be woven ἐκ τοῦ ἄνωθεν, from the top, John 19. 23. St Paul to be known of the Jews ἄνωθεν, from the beginning, Acts 26. 5. and the evangeliſt here beginning his narrative higher than St Matthew or Mark had done, even from the promiſe made to Zacharias of the baptiſt, or forerunner of the Lord, I think it more reaſonable to adhere to our tranſlation, and not to lay the authority of St Luke's goſpel upon uncertainties.

2*dly*, It being certain that St Luke, in his goſpel, doth not give us Chriſt's miracles, ſermons, and journeys, in that order of time in which they were done and ſpoken, it remains, that when he promiſed to write καθεξῆς, in order, we underſtand this of Chriſt's conception, birth, circumciſion, baptiſm, preaching, death, reſurrection and aſcenſion, of which he truly writes in order; or that he would write to him firſt of what theſe eye-witneſſes had delivered to him of Chriſt, and then of what theſe miniſters had done in propagation of the goſpel, as in the Acts he doth. Note,

3*dly*, That the Theophilus to whom he writes ſeems not to be a feigned name, importing only any Chriſtian who was a lover of God, as Salvian conceived; for we have no ſuch inſtance in the ſacred hiſtory, of feigned names thus uſed. 2*dly*, The word κράτιστε is uſed in the New Teſtament as a title of excellency, and never otherwiſe, See Acts 23. 26.—24. 3.---26. 25. And, 3*dly*, Had he intended this only as a dedication of his work to the true lovers of God, why writes he ſtill in the ſingular number, and never in the plural?

Ver. 4. [c] That thou mayſt know the certainty of thoſe things in which thou haſt been inſtructed.] Κατήχησις is an inſtruction, not only by queſtions and anſwers, but alſo by a continual diſcourſe, Acts 18. 25. Rom. 2. 18. 1 Cor. 14. 19. but that which is hence chiefly to be obſerved againſt the Romaniſts, is, (1.) Againſt oral tradition, that St Luke thought not what was delivered by word of mouth only, even by the eye witneſſes, and miniſters of the word, ſufficient to give Theophilus a knowledge of the certainty of theſe things, without writing the goſpels; and this the Wiſdom of God ſhewed, in cauſing them to be written, ſaith (a) Irenæus, to be the pillar and foundation of the Chriſtian faith. 2. That St Luke held it not unlawful or unfit for a layman, or any Chriſtian, to read the ſcriptures, nor ſuch a one inſufficient, by thus reading, to underſtand the things in which he had been inſtructed: and ſeeing it is certain that he and other Chriſtians were inſtructed in all things neceſſary to be believed and done by them to ſalvation; it follows, that theſe writings tings muſt contain fully, and with ſufficient clearneſs, all that was neceſſary to be believed or done by him in order to his ſalvation, they being written for this very end, that Theophilus might know the certainty of all thoſe things in which he had been inſtructed; and then, ſurely, the writings of the whole New Teſtament muſt be much more ſufficient for that end.

Ver. 5. [d] Ἱερεύς τις, A prieſt named Zacharias.] That he was not, as ſome have imagined, an high prieſt, appears, 1*ſt*, Becauſe St Luke calls him ſimply ἱερεύς, a prieſt, not ἀρχιερεύς, an high prieſt, as he who bore that office was ſtill called, chap. 3. 2.—9. 22.—22. 2, 4, 52, 54, 66. —23. 4, 10, 13, 23. Acts 4. 6.—5. 17, 21, 24.—7. 1.—9. 1, 14. 2*dly*, Zacharias was choſen by lot to burn incenſe; the high prieſt did it by right of ſucceſſion, and burnt it in the Holy of Holies, into which Zacharias entered not. 3*dly*, (b) Joſephus ſaith, that Simon, ſon of Boethus, was high prieſt that year; and, (Laſtly,) Zacharias was prieſt of the courſe of Abia, whereas the high prieſt was of no courſe at all. Of the twenty four courſes appointed by David for the ſervice of the temple, when it ſhould be built, this of Abia was the eighth, 1 Chron. 24. 10. Theſe ſeveral courſes began on the ſabbath day, and continued to ſerve till the next ſabbath, 2 Kings 11. 7. 2 Chron. 23. 8. ἀπὸ Σαββάτου ἐπὶ Σαββάτῳ, from ſabbath to ſabbath. Joſeph. antiq. l. 7. c. 11. p. 248.

Ibid. [d] Of the courſe of Abia.] Moſt chronologers that I have read agree in this, that no certain computation can be made from theſe courſes touching the conception or birth of the Baptiſt. Mr Whiſton's attempt in this matter ſeems unſucceſsful on ſeveral accounts. For,

1*ſt*, Whereas he (c) begins that computation with the Rabbinical tale, that after the return of the prieſts from the captivity, they were divided again into twenty four courſes, he ought to have obſerved from the ſame tale, that the courſe of (d) Jedajah was then put before that of Jojarib, becauſe he was of the high prieſt's family; and ſo ſhould have begun thoſe courſes, not from Jojarib, but from Jedajah.

2*dly*, Whereas he ſaith, that it is highly probable that when Judas Maccabæus reſtored the daily ſacrifice, and afreſh appointed the courſes of the prieſt, he would begin thoſe courſes with the firſt family; it remains to be proved, that he did then appoint any of theſe courſes at all to ſerve, and that all the prieſts did not then ſerve together, as at the other three great feſtivals. 2. There is no reaſon why he ſhould alter the courſes appointed by Solomon in the month Tiſri; and that he did not do it is ſuppoſed by Dr (e) Lightfoot, who therefore, in his account of theſe courſes, makes the firſt of them to begin in that month. In a word, if there were made any alteration at all, St Luke cannot refer to the courſe of Abia as it is placed, 1 Chron. 24. and then, ſeeing the family of Abia was not then extant among the courſes, (there being no mention of their return out of captivity) who can tell where to place it? If he does refer to it, that courſe muſt continue in the ſame order in which it was before, and ſo was not changed by Judas Maccabæus.

3*dly*, As for his hiſtorical evidence from a Jewiſh rabbinical chronicle, it can be of no validity to them who know they were the worſt of chronologers, as the learned have obſerved, and as is evident from the chronology of David Ganz, and Vorſtius's notes upon it, and his famous chronicle, Seder Olam Rabbi, with which he is not much acquainted, though it pretends to ſome antiquity, yet, ſaith Buxtorf, Videtur ſeipſum in fine libri prodere, dum inquit, Hamar Rabbi Joſe, He betrays himſelf by adding, thus ſaith R. Joſe.

4*thly*, His corollary, from all theſe uncertainties, that the bleſſed virgin conceived in the beginning of the ſixth month from the conception of Elizabeth, is built upon a miſtake, it being plain from Luke 1. 36 that her ſixth month was completed when the virgin came to her, (which ſhe did preſently after the angel had appeared to her,) for ſhe ſtaid with her but almoſt three months, and then Elizabeth's full time was come, ver. 56, 57.

Ver. 7. ſee additions, No. 1.

Ver. 9. [d] Ἔλαχε τοῦ θυμιάσαι, His lot was to burn incenſe.] The law required that the prieſts ſhould burn incenſe morning and evening upon the altar of incenſe, placed before the veil of the Moſt Holy place, Exod. 30. 6, 7, 8 but becauſe they who thus ſerved in every courſe were many, it was neceſſary they ſhould by lot chuſe the man who was to perform that ſervice for that week; and ſo the Jews ſay they did. See Dr Lightfoot here.

Ver. 10. [f] And all the multitude of the people were praying without, τῇ ὥρᾳ τοῦ θυμιάματος, at the time of incenſe.] When the prieſt went into the ſanctuary, or within the firſt veil, to offer incenſe, notice was given by the ſound of a little bell, that it was then the time of prayer, and every one preſent then offered up his prayers to God ſilently; and though this ſilent prayer was not commanded, yet ſeems there a manifeſt alluſion to it in thoſe words of John, where, at the offering of incenſe with the prayers of the ſaints, it is ſaid, there was ſilence in heaven for half an hour, Rev.

8. 1, 2, 3. Whether that of the high prieſt Simon, mentioned Eccluſ. 50. belongs to this matter, or rather to the great day of expiation, I will not determine.

Ver. 11. [g] Ὤφθη δὲ αὐτῷ ἄγγελος Κυρίου, An angel of the Lord appeared to him.] That they had former examples of their prieſts who had ſeen viſions in the temple, ſeems reaſonable to conceive from theſe words, ver. 22. where, from his ſilence, it is ſaid, the people knew that he had ſeen a viſion: and yet, if you reject the ſtory of Simeon the juſt ſeeing an angel going into the Holy of Holies yearly, on the day of expiation, you will hardly find another inſtance; for Hyrcanus the high prieſt ſaw no viſion; only, as he was offering incenſe, (f) φάσι, ſome ſay he heard a voice declaring that his ſons had got the victory.

Ver. 12. See additions, No. 2.

Ver. 13. [h] Εἰσηκούσθη ἡ δέησίς σου, Thy prayer is heard.] Not that this good man was now praying for himſelf that he might have a child; he is ſo far from any expectation of that, that when an angel appearing to him in God's temple, and ſo unqueſtionably as a meſſenger from God ſpeaks to him of this matter, he believeth not his words: the meaning is, Thy prayer, for the delivery of thy people, for the coming of the Meſſiah, and the conſolation of Iſrael, and the remiſſion of their ſins, is ſo graciouſly heard, that from thy very loins ſhall now come the fore-runner to prepare his way, and thou wilt now quickly have occaſion to acknowledge, that God hath viſited and redeemed his people, and raiſed up an horn of ſalvation for them, ver. 68, 69.

Ver. 15. [i] Ἔσται γὰρ μέγας ἐνώπιον τοῦ Κυρίου, He ſhall be great in the ſight of (or before) the Lord.] Either before the Lord Chriſt, as being the prophet of the Higheſt, to go before the Lord to prepare his way, as the angel ſaith, ver. 17. and Zacharias, ver. 76. or in the ſight of God, as David found favour ἐνώπιον Θεοῦ, in the ſight of God, Acts 7. 46. It follows, and he ſhall neither drink wine nor ſtrong drink. This being the deſcription of a Nazarite, Numb. 6. 3. Judg. 13. 4. the words, from the womb, may refer to the ſame thing, as it is ſaid of Samſon, the child ſhall be a Nazarite to God from the womb, Judg. 13. 5.—16. 17. ſee note on ver. 28. or if they refer to his being filled with the Holy Ghoſt, they muſt be interpreted, as Dr Hammond paraphraſes them, the power of the Holy Ghoſt ſhall be diſcerned to be upon him very early. So Job 31. 18. I have guided the widow from my mother's womb. Pſal. 58. 3. The wicked are eſtranged from the womb; as ſoon as they are born they go about and tell lies. Iſa. 48. 8. Thou waſt called a tranſgreſſor from the womb. This expoſition I prefer to that of Grotius, that he is ſaid to be filled with the Holy Ghoſt from the womb, becauſe he being in the womb was part of his mother, who was filled with the Holy Ghoſt.

Ver. 17. [k] Ἐν πνεύματι καὶ δυνάμει Ἠλίου, In the ſpirit and power of Elijah.] Not in his power of working miracles, for John did no miracles, John 10. 41. but in his power of turning the people to the Lord, 1 Kings 18. 37. So the angel expounds it in the following words cited from Mal. 4. 6. To turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt, and ſo to make ready a people prepared for the Lord; that is, he ſhall turn the hearts of the fathers לב to the children, as that propoſition ſignifies, Joſh. 2. 8. 1 Sam. 22. 11. by cauſing them to lay aſide their diſcords, and unite, of what ſect ſoever they were, in a general profeſſion of repentance, and a free confeſſion of their ſins; and ſo the ſon of Syrach ſaith, he is appointed, ἐπιστρέψαι καρδίαν πατρὸς πρὸς υἱὸν, to turn the heart of the father to the ſon, chap. 48. 10. or elſe he ſhall turn the hearts of the fathers, al, with the children, as al ſignifies, Exod. 12. 8, 9.—35. 22. calling them all to a general confeſſion of, and repentance for their ſins, and ſo turning the diſobedient to the wiſdom revealed to them by Chriſt, the juſt One, as he emphatically is ſtiled, Acts 3. 14. And this the baptiſt did, by preaching to all ſorts, young and old, converſion and repentance, and uniting them all in one baptiſm of repentance, for the remiſſion of ſins, Matth. 3. 5, 6. Mark 1. 5. He was ſent to bear witneſs of Chriſt, that all men might believe on him, John 1. 7. and this he alſo did ſo effectually, that many finding that all that John ſaid of him was true, believed on him, John 10. 41, 42. Joſephus informs us that he was a good man, who inſtructed the Jews by the exerciſe of virtue, καὶ τῇ πρὸς ἀλλήλους δικαιοσύνῃ καὶ πρὸς Θεὸν ἐυσεβείᾳ, and by piety towards God, and righteouſneſs, or juſtice towards one another, to come to his baptiſm; and that hereupon there was great concourſe made to him, the people being much delighted with his doctrine. Antiq. l. 18. c. 7. p. 626. F. G.

Ver. 22. [l] Καὶ διέμενε κωφὸς, And remained ſpeechleſs.] It ſeemeth that he was both dumb and deaf, for we read that he was ζωπῶν καὶ μὴ δυνάμενον λαλῆσαι, not able to ſpeak, and dumb, ver. 20. and that he was not able to hear, is evident, becauſe they nodded, and made ſigns to him, and he to them, ver. 22, 62. and therefore it was only by a ſign that he asked for a writing table, ver. 63. And this was the reſult of his infidelity, in that he believed not an angel appearing to him, in a place where where evil angels durſt not come, in the name of the Lord; and telling him his prayer was heard; which evil angels could not do; and of things which tended to the glory of God, the completion of his promiſes, and the welfare of mankind, which they would not do.

Ver. 24. [m] Καὶ περιεκρύβεν ἑαυτὴν, And ſhe hid herſelf five months;] partly from devotion, to bleſs God for a mercy ſo ſingular and unexpected, and partly from reſpect to the child, leſt ſhe ſhould be any way defiled, and ſo derive uncleanneſs upon the Nazarite in her womb.

Ver. 27. [n] Πρὸς παρθένον (μεμνηστευμένην ἀνδρὶ ᾧ ὄνομα Ἰωσὴφ) ἐξ οἴκου Δαβὶδ, καὶ τὸ ὄνομα τῆ παρθένου Μαριάμ] Which words I would render thus, to a virgin of the houſe of David, eſpouſed to a man whoſe name was Joſeph, and the virgin's name was Mary. For, 1. Of this Συμπλοκὴ, or placing of words not in due order of conſtruction, I have given many inſtances, note on Mark 9. 13. and I think there is an inſtance of it here, ver. 15. He ſhall neither drink wine nor ſtrong drink from his mother's womb, and he ſhall be filled with the Holy Ghoſt. And this conſtruction I prefer, as being moſt ſuitable to thoſe words of the angel, The Lord God ſhall give him the throne of his father David: the virgin therefore muſt be of the houſe of David: for ſeeing the angel had plainly told her, ſhe ſhould not have this ſon by the knowledge of a man, it was not Joſeph's but Mary's being of the houſe of David, which made David his father. See alſo ver. 69. where this horn of ſalvation is ſaid to be raiſed up in the houſe of his ſervant David: now thus he was raiſed up in the houſe of David, not by Joſeph's eſpouſal, but by his birth of the virgin; for from her alſo was it that Chriſt was ἐκ καρποῦ τῆς ὀσφύος αὐτοῦ τὸ κατὰ σάρκα, of the fruit of the loins of David according to the fleſh, Acts 2. 30. ἀπὸ τοῦ σπέρματος, of the ſeed of David, chap. 13. 23. Rom. 1. 3. 2 Tim. 2. 8. Such reaſon had the evangeliſt here to ſay, rather that Mary than Joſeph was of the houſe of David.

Ver. 28. [o] Κεχαριτωμένη, Thou who art highly favoured,] or who haſt found mercy or favour with God, as it is expounded, ver. 30. it anſwers to the Hebrew חסר, which ſignifies χάρις, and ἔλεος mercy and favour. So Pſal. 18. 26. עם חסיד מחסד μετὰ κεχαριτωμένου χαριῇ, with the merciful thou wilt ſhew thyſelf merciful, or to him that ſhews favour to others thou wilt ſhew favour. And Eph. 1. 6. to the praiſe of his glorious grace, ἐν ᾗ ἐχαρίτωσεν ἡμᾶς, through which he hath dealt graciouſly with us, or made us favourites by the Beloved, or in Chriſt Jeſus. Thus χαριτώσας, he that doth kind and grateful offices, is in Suidas τὰ κεχαριτωμένα ἐρμηνεύων, he that doth kind things, and χαριέστα in Phavorinus is κεχαριτωμένα. And the ſon of Syrach ſaith, a word, i. e. a kind word is better than a gift, but both come ἀπὸ ἀνδρὸς κεχαριτωμένου, from a kind man, or one that ſhews favour, Eccluſ. 18. 17. It follows, εὐλογημένη σὺ ἐν γυναιξὶν, bleſſed art thou among women. So it is ſaid of Jael, εὐλογηθείη ἐν γυναιξὶν, bleſſed be Jael among women, Judg. 5. 24. of Ruth, chap. 3. 10. εὐλογημένη σὺ, bleſſed art thou of the Lord, my daughter. And ſo David ſpeaks to Abigail, 1 Sam. 25. 33. So alſo, the Lord is with thee, is ſaid to Gideon, Judg. 6. 12. And the words, ver. 30. εὗρες χάριν παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ, thou haſt found favour with God, are alſo ſaid of Noah, Gen. 6. 8. of Joſeph, Gen. 39. 4. of David, Acts 7. 46. So that here is nothing ſaid of the bleſſed virgin in this ſalutation, which was not before ſaid of others.

Ver. 33. [p] And he ſhall reign over the houſe of Jacob, εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, καὶ τῆς βασιλείας αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἔσται τέλος, for ever, and of his kingdom there ſhall be no end;] i. e. whilſt the houſe and ſeed of Jacob or the world laſts, his kingdom being never to give place to any other kingdom, as the four monarchies did, Dan. 7. 14. but yet when death, the laſt enemy of his church, ſhall be diſſolved, he ſhall give up this mediatory kingdom to the Father. See note on 1 Cor. 15. 28.

Ver. 34. [q] Πῶς ἔσται τοῦτο; How ſhall this be, ſeeing I know not a man?] She ſo enquires after the manner, as not to doubt of the fact; but ſhe ſays not ſhe was under a vow not to know a man. For, 1*ſt*, Virginity amongſt the Jews was not matter of praiſe, but reproach, Pſal. 78. 63. inſomuch that Grotius, with all his learning, could bring no inſtance of any women who were παρθένοι διὰ ἁγνείαν, or kept their virginity, but from a teſtimony of (d) Philo concerning ſome old women among the Eſſenes, who were known enemies to matrimony. See the note on Coloſſ. 2. 21. And, 2*dly*, Marriage is numbered by them among the precepts of the law, Targum on Gen. 1. 28. which they only were exempted from who devoted themſelves wholly to the ſtudy of the law. And, 3*dly*, If ſhe made this vow before her eſpouſals, why ſhould ſhe marry? if after, it was void, as being not made with the conſent of her husband.

Ver. 35. See additions, No. 3.

Ver. 36. [r] Elizabeth thy couſin, Συγγενὶς σου.] Though Elizabeth was of the tribe of Aaron, ver. 5. it follows not that Mary was ſo; for a woman might marry into another tribe, provided ſhe were not an heireſs that carried the paternal inheritance along with her, care being taken only againſt that by the law, Numb. 36. 8, 9. Ver.

(d) De vita contemp. p. 695.

Ver. 39. [s] Mary went εἰς τὴν ὀρεινὴν—εἰς πόλιν, Into a city of Juda;] i. e. to Hebron, which was ſituated in the hill country, Joſh. 11. 21. and was given to the poſterity of Aaron for an inheritance, Joſh. 21. 10, 11. it was alſo the city where David was anointed king over Judah, 2 Sam. 2. 4.

Ver. 42. [t] Καὶ εὐλογημένον ὁ καρπὸς τῆς κοιλίας σου, And bleſſed be the fruit of thy womb.] Theſe words ſhew that Chriſt had not his body from heaven, but from the womb of the virgin, and ſo was truly the ſeed of David, according to the fleſh, Rom. 9. 5. See Matth. 1. 20. Gal. 4. 6. and the note on 1 Cor. 15. 47.

Ver. 43. [u] The mother of my Lord.] She calls him, ſaith Woltzogenius, her Lord, as David had done, Pſal. 110. 1. and in his note on Matth. 22. 45. he ſaith, he was ſo ſtiled by him, becauſe, by virtue of his exaltation to the right hand of power, or of God, he was made Lord of angels, and of all men. Now he who is Lord over all men and angels, muſt have divine power and wiſdom to rule and govern them, and ſo partake of the Divine Nature. Hence of him, whoſe name is King of kings, and Lord of lords, Rev. 19. 16. St John doth alſo ſay, his name is ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ, the Word of God, ver. 13. and in the beginning of his goſpel, that this Word was God.

Ver. 44. [w] Ἐσκίρτησεν ἐν ἀγαλλιάσει τὸ βρέφος, The child leapt in my womb,] by reaſon of the joy which tranſported me, ſaith Dr Hammond: for it was when Elizabeth heard the ſalutation of Mary, that the babe leaped in her womb, ver. 41. nor is any infant in the womb capable of any joy, as having no apprehenſions of good to be enjoyed, or evil to be avoided; and ſo he cannot be capable of that joy which reſults only from theſe apprehenſions. If you object, that the angel had foretold that this child ſhould be filled with the Holy Ghoſt from his mother's womb, ver. 15. and, upon that account, he might rejoice whilſt he was in it, ſee the anſwer, note on ver. 15.

Ver. 45. [x] And bleſſed is ſhe that believed, for ὅτι that there ſhall be a performance of theſe things.] As the Hebrew כִּי ſignifies not only for, but that; as Job 3. 12. כִּי אֵינֵק that I might ſuck; and Pſal. 11. 3. the wicked bend their bow, &c. כִּי that the foundations may be deſtroyed; (ſee Nold. p. 406.) ſo doth the Greek ὅτι.

Ver. 48. [y] Ὅτι ἐπέβλεψεν ἐπὶ ταπείνωσιν τῆς δούλης αὐτοῦ, For he hath regarded (or compaſſionately looked upon) the low eſtate of his handmaid] The word here is not ταπεινοφροσύνη, the humble-mindedneſs, but ταπείνωσις, the mean, low, or afflicted ſtate of the virgin, which appeared in her offering for her purification, Luke 2. 24. So the word conſtantly ſignifies, both in the Old and the New Teſtament. So ſpeaks Leah, Gen. 29. 32. The Lord ſaw τὴν ταπείνωσιν, my affliction, and hath given me a child. So Jacob, Gen. 31. 42. The Lord ſaw my affliction. So Deut. 26. 7. 1 Sam. 9. 16. 2 Kings 14. 26. Neh. 9. 9. Pſal. 9. 13.—24. 18.—30. 7.—119. 153. Lam. 1. 9. Acts 8. 33.

Ver. 49. [z] For he that is mighty hath done to me μεγαλεῖα, great things;] i. e. He hath wrought a great miracle upon me; ſo μεγαλεῖα, and τὰ μεγάλα often ſignify the miracles God wrought in Egypt, and in the wilderneſs, Deut. 10. 21.—11. 7.—34. 12. Pſal. 17. 19. Eccluſ. 17. 8.—36. 8.—43. 15.

Ver. 51. [aa] Ἐποίησε κράτος ἐν βραχίονι αὐτοῦ, He hath ſhewed ſtrength with his arm.] Here Grotius notes, that God's great power is repreſented by his finger, his greater by his hand, his greateſt by his arm. The production of lice was by the finger of God, Exod. 8. 19. his other miracles in Egypt were wrought by his hand, Exod. 3. 20. the deſtruction of Pharaoh and his hoſt in the Red Sea, by his arm, Exod. [illegible].26. The following words ſeem to be taken from the ſong of Hannah, 1 Sam. 2. 4, 5, 6. and need no farther explication than that which they have received in the paraphraſe.

Ver. 54. [bb] Ἀντιλάβετο, He hath holpen his ſervant Iſrael, &c.] The word ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι ſignifies to hold by the hand, to ſuſtain from falling, or to lift up when fallen, and ſo to afford aid or help, Jer. 31 32. Zach. 14. 13. this he hath done, ſaith the virgin, in remembrance of his mercy; for then God is ſaid ſignally to remember his people, when, after a long oppreſſion, in which he ſeemed to have forgotten them, he works a mighty ſalvation for them. So Pſal. 136. ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει ἡμῶν ἐμνήσθη, the Lord remembered us in our affliction, ver. 23. and delivered us out of the hand of the enemy; and he did this alſo in purſuance of his promiſe made to our fore-fathers, to ſend the Meſſiah to be an everlaſting bleſſing to all that believed in him, and ſo became the ſeed of Abraham by faith.

Ver. 59. [cc] Ἐν τῇ ὀγδόῃ ἦλθον περιτεμεῖν τὸ παιδίον, On the eighth day they came to circumciſe the child.] Not before that day, becauſe the mother was unclean ſeven days, Lev. 12. 1, 2. and ſo was the child by touching her, and therefore he was not then fit to be admitted into covenant: moreover, till that time he was weak, and could not well endure the pain of circumciſion. See the note on Philip. 3. 5. Note alſo, that the law appointed no certain place in which circumciſion was to be done, nor any certain perſon to perform it; and therefore it was done ſometimes by women, Exod. 4. 25. and here in the houſe of Elizabeth, as appears by her preſence at it, ver. 60. The Jews did did it sometimes in their schools, not out of necessity, but to have more witnesses of the fact. Then also they gave the name to the infant; because when God instituted circumcision, he changed the names of Abraham and Sarah.

Ver. 60. [dd] He shall be called John.] This she might learn from her husband, giving her in writing a relation of what the angel said to him, ver. 13. Now, God is gracious, which is the import of that name, is a name very fit for him, who was to be the first preacher of the kingdom of grace, and who was to point out him, from whose fulness we receive grace for grace, John 1. 16.

Ver. 66. [ee] Καὶ χεὶρ Κυρίου ἦν μετ' αὐτοῦ, And the hand of the Lord was with him.] Here by the hand of the Lord we are not to understand the spirit of prophecy, for this is still described by the hand of the Lord being ἐπ' αὐτὸν, upon the prophet, Ezek. 1. 3.—3. 22.—37. 1.----40. 1. but the care, providence, and assistance of God, as Psal. 80. 17.

Ver. 67. [ff] Καὶ Ζαχαρίας ἐπλήσθη πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ προεφήτευσε, And his father Zachary was filled with the holy Ghost, and prophesied.] Notwithstanding all that the Critics here say, I know but two significations of the word prophesying, especially when it is said to be done by one filled with the holy Ghost, as here, and two senses in which any one in scripture is called a prophet. And,

1*st*, According to the grammatical import of the word, a prophet is ὁ προφάσκων τὸ μέλλον, one who foretells, that something future and contingent in respect of us shall certainly fall out. So Phavorinus, Προφήτης ἐστὶν ὁ δι' ἐντεύξεως πνευματικῆς τὰ μέλλοντα δηλῶν, A prophet is one who declares things future, by the assistance of the Spirit: thus when Ezechiel had prophesied of the desolation of Jerusalem by the sword, and by wild beasts, When this, saith he, comes to pass, ye shall know that a prophet hath been among you, Ezek. 33. 27, 33. And in the time of their captivity, they thus complain, We see not our signs, there is no prophet more, not one that can tell us how long these calamities shall last, or when they will have an end, Psal. 74. 9. And in this sense Zacharias here propheſies, foretelling what should be done by his son, and by the Messiah hereafter.

2*dly*, A prophet in the scripture language is a revealer of the will of God. So Phavorinus, Προφήτης ἐστιν ἄνθρωπος θεῖος πνευματοφόρος, A prophet is a divine man, endued with an afflatus of the holy Spirit. In this sense is Abraham stiled a prophet, by reason of the many divine revelations made to him, Gen. 20. 7. and by him left unto posterity, chap. 18. 19. and John the Baptist is here stiled a prophet, ver. 76. because he received his commission and doctrine from heaven, John 1. 6. Matth. 21. 25. though we read of no predictions made by either of them. And by such a prophet it was absolutely necessary that he would receive his doctrine by revelation from God; for as the things of man knoweth no man, but the spirit of man that is in him, so the things of God knoweth no man but the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 2. 11. so that he who reveals his will must be ἄνθρωπος ὁ πνευματοφόρος, a man inspired by the Spirit; for, saith St Peter, no prophecy is of private motion or incitation, but holy men of old spake as they were moved by the holy Ghost, 2 Peter 1. 20, 21. Hence are they stiled so often the messengers of the Lord, the prophets who had spoken in the name of the Lord, 2 Chron. 36. 16. Hag. 1. 13. Mal. 2. 7. 1 Pet. 1. 10. 2 Pet. 3. 2. Their prophecies are called the word and burden of the Lord; and their stile runs, Thus saith the Lord. Hence, Lastly, this is still the character of the false prophets, that they run when God had not sent them, and prophesied when God had not spoken to them. Nor have these words any other sense in scripture, nor were they ever used otherways by the ancient Jews: this sense the word plainly bears, when it is said, Exod. 7. 1. I have made thee a God to Pharaoh, and Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet; i. e. the revealer of what thou, the God of Pharaoh, shalt say to him. Nor does it ever signify to expound or interpret scripture, otherways than by a divine afflatus, or gift of prophecy. See the note on 1 Cor. 14. 6. It also signifies a divine afflatus, enabling a man to compose hymns, or psalms of praise, but still as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. See the same note. In the example of Saul, it signifies to rave in prophesying, i. e. to be, as the Septuagint hath it, Hos. 9. 7. ὁ ἐξεστηκὼς a prophet in ecstasy and madness, but still by the afflatus of an evil spirit, according to that distinction of prophecy Phavorinus gives us, that it is either πνευματικὴ ἢ καὶ διαβολική, by the afflatus of the good or evil spirit; as in this instance the evil spirit came upon Saul, and he prophesied in his house. See the opinion of the Jews, note on 2 Pet. 1. 21. And, lastly, When the body of Elisha is said, by the son of Syrach, to prophesy, by raising the dead men, Eccles. 48. 14. he intended not to say it wrought a miracle, but only that it foretold a thing to come, viz. the fall of the Syrians, who, saith Elisha there, shall be smitten three times, and the raising up of God's oppressed people, or the reviving of them; and so is to be reduced to the first acceptation of the word.

Ver. 68. [gg] Ἐπεσκέψατο, καὶ ἐποίησε λύτρωσιν τῷ λαῷ αὐτοῦ. He hath visited in mercy.] So Ruth 1. 6. Psal. 79. 15 ---105. 4. so as to do them good, as he visited Sarah, Gen. 21. 1. and Hannah, 1 Sam.

1 Sam. 2. 21. and his people oppreſſed by the Egyptians, Gen. 50. 24, 25. Exod. 3. 16. when the people rejoiced, ὅτι ἐπεσκέψατο, that God hath viſited the children of Iſrael, chap. 4. 31.---13. 19. as he did then, by granting them the deliverance they deſired, and here, by granting the Meſſiah they ſo earneſtly expected, who was to ſave his people from their ſin, and ſo to work redemption for them.

Ver. 69. [hh] Κέρας σωτηρίας.] Either a ſtrong or mighty ſalvation; the metaphor being taken from beaſts, whoſe ſtrength is in their horns, as Jer. 48. 25. Lam. 2. 3, 17. or a royal ſalvation, the horn ſignifying royal power, Pſal. 132. 17. Dan. 7. 7, 8. Zach. 1. 18. this relating to the ſetting up the kingdom of David by the Meſſiah, who was to reign over the houſe of Jacob, ver. 33, 73. ſo that 'tis eminently κέρας τ῀ χριστοῦ αὐτοῦ, the horn of his Chriſt, 1 Sam. 2. 10.

Ver. 70. [ii] Τῶν ἀπ' αἰῶνος προφητῶν, Which have been ſince the world began.] From the beginning of ages, the promiſe being made to Adam, Gen. 3. 15. that the ſeed of the woman ſhould bruiſe the ſerpent's head. So Jeruſalem hath been a rebellious city, min Jomath holmah ἀφ' ἡμερῶν αἰῶνος, i. e. from times of old, Ezra 4. 15, 19. and ἡμέραι ἀρχαῖαι, the days of old, and ἔτη αἰώνια are the ſame, Pſal. 77. 5. See the note on Tit. 1. 2.

Ver. 73. [kk] To perform the oath, &c.] This oath was made to Abraham, Gen. 22. 16. 17. Now, that being an immutable thing, Heb. 6. 17. it could neither be hindred nor retarded by the ſins of the Jews, as they ſay the coming of their Meſſiah was; and the words following, δοῦναι ἡμῖν, that he would give us this horn of ſalvation, or this ſeed in which all the families of the earth ſhould be bleſſed, are the ſubject of that oath, Gen. 22. 18. And therefore theſe words are rather to be joined to this verſe, as in the Greek, than to be added to the beginning of the next, as it is in our tranſlation.

Ver. 74. [ll] Ἀφόβως λατρεύειν αὐτῷ, To ſerve him without fear.] That ἀφόβως here is to be joined to λατρεύειν, to ſerve, is evident, as Mr Le Cl. notes, from the harſhneſs of the other expreſſion, to be delivered without fear, and from the nature of the Chriſtian conſtitution, which delivers us from the ſpirit of bondage unto fear, under which the Jews were held, Rom. 8. 15. from the fear of death, the laſt enemy, and of Satan, who had the power of death, Heb. 2. 14, 15 God having not now given us the ſpirit of fear, 2 Tim. 1. 7. but that of love which caſts out fear, 1 John 4. 18. But then, when Mr Le Cl. adds, That, at this time, the Syrians, Egyptians, and other Heathen nations bordering on Judea, were troubleſome to the Jews; nor were they without fear of the Romans themſelves, ſo that they could not exerciſe their religion ἀφόβως without fear; and that Zacharias ſpeaks of the Meſſiah, as of one that was about to reſcue the Jews from theſe dangers, in agreement with the common opinion; nor did the ſpirit of prophecy undeceive him as to this matter; this is one of thoſe bold ſtrokes, which if that learned man could abſtain from, he would give leſs offence to Chriſtians, and leſs advantage to the Antiſcripturiſts: for, if one filled with the holy Ghoſt, and propheſying by an afflatus from him, may propheſy deceit, and promiſe to his fellow Jews, that a temporal kingdom ſhould be erected by the Meſſiah, which their common opinion made them to expect; though this opinion was not only falſe, but wholly oppoſite to the nature of Chriſt's kingdom, and that which chiefly hindred the Jews from receiving Chriſt as their Meſſiah; why might not others, though filled with the Holy Ghoſt, ſpeak other things, according to the common, though falſe opinion of the Jews, and the ſpirit of prophecy not undeceive them? And if ſo, where is our certainty of the rule of faith? But ſurely, if Chriſt's kingdom be ſpiritual, his ſubjects muſt be ſo, and their enemies ſpiritual, ſin, death, and Satan; from all which we ſhall obtain a full deliverance by ſerving God in righteouſneſs and holineſs before him, all the days of our life.

Ver. 76. [mm] Ὁ Προφήτης ὑψίστου, The Prophet of the Higheſt.] The God of Iſrael ſeems to have been ſtill owned by thoſe Heathens who had any knowledge of him, as a God above all gods. By Cyrus he is ſtiled, by way of emphaſis, ὁ Θεός, the God, Ezra 1. 3. by Rahab the harlot, the God of heaven above, and in the earth beneath, Joſh. 2. 11. by Cyrus, 2 Chron. 36. 33. Ezra 1. 2. by Darius, Ezra 6. 9, 10. by Artaxerxes, Ezra 7. 21, 23. by Nebuchodonozor, Dan. 4. 37. by Hiram, the God that made heaven and earth, 2 Chron. 2. 12. And as in ſcripture he is exalted above all others, by the name of אל עליון the Moſt High God, Gen. 14. 18. ſo alſo is he ſtiled by Cyrus, Eſd. 2. 3. by Nebuchodonozor, Dan. 4. 34. by Darius, Eſd. 6. 31. by Artaxerxes, Eſd 8. 19, 21. by the emperor Auguſtus, Joſephus Antiq. l. 16. c. 10. p. 571. by Tiberius, Philo legat. ad Caium. p. 785. E. by Totnes and Sepharboſnai, Θεὸς ὁ μέγας, the great God, Ezra 5. 8. by Artaxerxes, the higheſt, the greateſt, and the living God, Eſth. 16. 16.

Ver. 78. [nn] Ἀνατολὴ ἐξ ὕψους, The day-ſpring from on high hath viſited us.] He who is here ſtiled the day-ſpring from on high, or riſing ſun, is by Zachary called, chap. 3. 8. Ἀνατολὴ, the riſing-ſun, my ſervant; and chap. 6. 12. the man whoſe name is Ἀνατολὴ, the riſing-ſun: and by Malachi, 4. 2. the the ſun of righteouſneſs, as being to ariſe upon the Jew and Gentile, and ſpread his bright beams on thoſe who ſat in darkneſs, and in the ſhadow of death, Iſaiah 9. 2. Whence by old Simeon he is ſaid to be a light to lighten the Gentiles, Luke 2. 32. and by the Baptiſt, to be a light ſhining in darkneſs, John 1. 5.

An addition. It is evident to any one who inſpects the Greek, that this hymn is deficient as to the full ſenſe of it, from ver. 71. to ver. 75. and that ποιῆσαι ἔλεος μετὰ τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, ver. 72. which we tranſlate to perform the mercy promiſed to, ſhould rather be tranſlated to perform the mercy (covenanted) with our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; according to the words of the bleſſed virgin, He hath holpen his ſervant Iſrael in remembrance of his mercy (covenanted) to Abraham, and to his ſeed for ever. It being therefore very uſual, both in the Old and New Teſtament, to ſupply what is defective from the preceding words; I look upon the whole following hymn, to ver. 76. as a deſcant upon thoſe words in the beginning, to wit, ἐπεσκέψατο, καὶ ἐποίησε λύτρωσιν, he hath viſited and redeemed his people: and therefore fill up the ſenſe of it thus, ἐποίησε λύτρωσιν, he hath performed redemption to them, viz. ver. 71. σωτηρίαν, ſalvation from our enemies, and from the hands of all that hate us. Ἐπεσκέψατο, ver. 72. ποιῆσαι ἔλεος, He hath viſited us, to perform the mercy covenanted with our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant, καὶ μνησθῆναι, ver. 73. τὸν ὅρκον, and to remember the oath which he ſware to our father Abraham, τοῦ δοῦναι ἡμῖν, to give us the heirs of the promiſe, Heb. 6. 17. this horn of ſalvation, ver. 69. this redeemer, this deliverer out of Zion, ſtiled, ὁ ῥυόμενος, to enable us ῥυσθέντας, thus delivered from the hands of our enemies, to ſerve him without fear, &c.

CHAP. II.

1. AND it came to paſs in thoſe days, that there went out a decree from Cæſar Auguſtus, that [a] all the world ſhould be taxed; (i. e. ſhould have their names, and conditions of life, ſet down in court rolls, according to their families:)

2. And this taxing was [b] firſt made (before that made,) when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.

3. And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

4. And Joſeph alſo [c] went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth to Judea, to [d] the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, becauſe he was of the houſe and lineage of David;

5. To be taxed with [e] Mary his eſpouſed wife, being great with child.

6. And ſo it was that while they were there, the days were accompliſhed that ſhe ſhould be delivered;

7. And ſhe brought forth her firſt born ſon, [ee] and wrapped him in ſwaddling-clothes, and laid him in a manger, becauſe there was no room for them in the inn.

8. And there were in the ſame country [f] ſhepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night;

9. And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, (Gr. ſtood by them,) and the [g] glory of the Lord ſhone round about them, and they were ſore afraid.

10. And the angel ſaid to them, Fear not; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which ſhall be (ſo) to all people.

11. For to you is born this day, in (Bethlehem,) the city of David, a Saviour which is Chriſt the Lord.

12. And this ſhall be a ſign to you (of the truth of my words, that going thither,) ye ſhall find the babe wrapped in ſwaddling-clothes, lying in a manger.

13. And ſuddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly hoſt, praiſing God, and ſaying,

14. [h] Glory (be) to God, (who dwelleth) in the higheſt (heavens,) and (or, for by this Saviour is procured) on earth peace, (and God's) good will towards men.

15. And it came to paſs, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the ſhepherds ſaid one to another, Let us now go even to Bethlehem, and ſee this thing which is come to paſs, which the Lord hath made known to us:

16. And they came with haſte (thither,) and found Mary and Joſeph (there,) and the babe lying in a manger.

17. And when they had ſeen it, they made known abroad the ſaying which was told them (by the angel) concerning this child.

18. And all they that heard it, wondered at thoſe things which were told them by the ſhepherds.

19. But Mary kept all theſe things, and pondered them in her heart.

20. And the ſhepherds returned, glorifying and praiſing God for all the things they had heard

(from the angel,) and ſeen, as it was told them (by him.)

21. And when eight days were [i] accompliſhed, (i. e. when the eighth day was come,) for the circumciſing the child, his name was called Jeſus, which was ſo named of (or the name impoſed on him by) the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

22. And when the days of her [k] purification, according to the law of Moſes, were accompliſhed, they brought him to Jeruſalem to preſent him to the Lord:

23. As it is written in the law of the Lord, [l] Every male that openeth the womb, ſhall be called holy to the Lord, (i. e. ſhall be conſecrated to God, and ſo made holy:)

24. And to offer a ſacrifice (for the woman at her purification,) according to that which is ſaid in the law of the Lord, (that he who is not able to bring a lamb, ſhould bring) a [m] pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons.

25. And behold, there was a man in Jeruſalem, whoſe name was Simeon, and the ſame man was juſt (towards men,) and devout (towards God, and he was) [n] waiting for the conſolation of Iſrael; and [o] the holy Ghoſt was upon him.

26. And it was revealed to him by the holy Ghoſt, that he ſhould not ſee death before he had ſeen the Lords Chriſt.

27. And he came by (motion of) the Spirit into the temple; and when the parents (at the ſame time) brought in the child Jeſus, to do for him, (i. e. to pay the price of his redemption as being their firſt-born,) after the cuſtom of the law (concerning the firſt-born;)

28. Then took he him up in his arms, and bleſſed God, and ſaid,

29. Lord, now letteſt thou thy ſervant [p] depart in peace, (ſeeing it hath been with me) according to thy word:

30. For mine eyes have ſeen (the Meſſiah called) thy [q] ſalvation;

31. Which thou haſt prepared before the face of all people, (as well Gentiles as Jews, he being ſent as)

32. [r] A light to lighten the Gentiles, and (to be) the glory of thy people Iſrael.

33. And Joſeph and his mother marvelled at theſe things which were ſpoken of him.

34. And Simeon bleſſed them, and ſaid to Mary his mother, Behold, this child is ſet for [s] the fall (of many through infidelity,) and (for the) riſing again (or up) of many in Iſrael, (through faith in him;) and for a ſign that ſhall be ſpoken againſt (by the ſcribes and Phariſees, and rulers of the people, who ſhall blaſpheme his perſon, contradict his doctrine, and ſet him up as their mark to ſhoot at.)

35. Yea, a ſword, (that of martyrdom,) ſhall pierce through thy own ſoul alſo; (and this contradiction of him, God in his wiſdom ſhall permit,) that the thoughts of many hearts, (i. e. the inward temper and diſpoſitions of many,) may be revealed.

36. And there was (alſo) one [t] Anna a propheteſs, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aſer, (and) ſhe was of a great age, and had lived with an husband ſeven years from her virginity:

37. And ſhe was a widow of about fourſcore and four years (old,) which departed not from the temple, but ſerved God with faſtings and prayers night and day, (at evening and morning ſervice.)

38. And ſhe coming at that inſtant (that the child was there,) gave thanks likewiſe to the Lord, and [u] ſpake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jeruſalem, (as the perſon from whom it was to be expected.)

39. And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, (and had fled into Egypt for the ſafety of the child: after the death of Herod) they returned into Galilee to their own city Nazareth.

40. And the child grew and waxed ſtrong in ſpirit, (being) filled with wiſdom, and the grace of God was upon him, (i. e. the favour of God was with him.)

41. Now his parents went to Jeruſalem every year at the feaſt of the paſſover.

42. And when he was twelve years old, they went up (with him) to Jeruſalem, after the cuſtom of the feaſt.

43. And when they had fulfilled the (ſeven) days (of the feaſt,) as they returned, the child Jeſus tarried behind in Jeruſalem, and Joſeph and his mother knew not of it.

44. But they ſuppoſing him to have been in the company, (they) went a days journey, and (then) they ſought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance:

45. And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jeruſalem, ſeeking him.

46. And it came to paſs, that [w] after three days, (the third day) they found him in the temple, ſitting in the midſt of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them queſtions.
